

HARVARD UNIVERSITY
GRADUATE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION
BAKER LIBRARY

CANCELLED
FROM
BAKER LIBRARY

CANCELLED
FROM
BAKER LIBRARY

TRANSFERRED TO HARVARD COLLEGE LIBRARY

BAKER LIBRARY
HARVARD UNIVERSITY

VOL. XXXIV
NO. 1

ANNIVERSARY NUMBER

COMFORT

The Key to Happiness and Success in over a Million and a Quarter Homes

Published at Augusta Maine

NOVEMBER
1921

See Story "By Proxy" on Page 3

Copyright 1921 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Incorporated.

Table of Contents on Page 8.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

COMFORT EDITORIAL

THOUGHTS THAT BREATHE AND WORDS THAT BURN

Some of the Many Blessings Our People Have to Be Thankful for in This Favored Land

NOTWITHSTANDING my expectation that the Thanksgiving proclamation soon to be issued by President Harding will be far more illuminating and inspiring than the thoughts here expressed, I cannot refrain, at the present writing, from calling attention to some of the notable blessings for which the people of this favored land of ours should be devoutly grateful to Divine Providence. Although conditions here are far from ideal they have already begun to mend and will improve rapidly provided we cast out greed and graft, cease from industrial, social and political strife, and work together in a spirit of mutual helpfulness and confidence. Our worst troubles are of our own making and are somewhat exaggerated by the pessimistic mental attitude that has become prevalent; even at that they are small in comparison with the ills that are oppressing a large part of the world and darkening the future prospects of Europe and Asia.

We have to be thankful that our country is at peace with all the rest of the world; that because of having avoided foreign entanglements by keeping out of the League of Nations we have retained the natural benefit of our geographical remoteness from the wars that are still devastating large sections of the old world, and so have been able to reduce our army to a minimum peace footing and cut down military expenses in proportion; that despite frost in some localities and drought in others the country as a whole has reaped an abundant harvest of the staple crops to feed our people and leave a goodly surplus for export; that during the past year we have not suffered pestilence or other nation-wide affliction; that in the vast and varied natural resources with which our land is endowed we have a secure foundation for unbounded prosperity if we will attend to business and conduct ourselves aright.

This all-important if needs to be emphasized and repeated until the public becomes impressed with the fact that the general disregard of this if in the near past is the root of our present troubles both moral and material; those of the former class being alarmingly manifest in the rising wave of vice and crime due to lowered standards of morality and integrity, while those of the latter category include commercial and industrial depression resulting in a disquieting extent of unemployment of labor. The common way of accounting for these embarrassments is to lay them all to the war, which is an easy but unfair way of dodging our individual and collective responsibility. The undesirable conditions prevalent in this country are partly, but by no means wholly, the direct and necessary consequences of the war. The fact is that the majority of our people, with the Government leading off and setting the pace, jazzed a merry dance of unprecedented extravagance, graft, profiteering, high prices and high wages through the war and as long afterwards as they could keep it up; and now that the jig is over we are paying the proverbial fiddler for our riot of fun and folly.

Most people, including many big business men who should have known better, acted as if they thought the war-time financial and industrial bubble, because it put in circulation a great volume of inflated currency and sent prices and wages chasing each other skyward, was wealth-creating prosperity and could sustain its flight at dizzy heights indefinitely. On the contrary it really meant a tremendous waste of resources coupled with a reckless piling up of public and private debts that involved an inevitable day of bitter reckoning not far off. The large additional amount of money that was put in circulation consisted of Federal Reserve notes which represented an increase, not of wealth, but of debt, for they were issued through the Federal Reserve Bank to the local banks in rediscount of loans made by the latter to individuals or corporations on Liberty Bonds or other satisfactory security.

To explain what this rediscount means let me illustrate. When the Government was selling Liberty Bonds anyone who had ten dollars to pay down could buy a hundred dollar Liberty Bond at a local bank by paying in the ten dollars and giving his note for ninety dollars and depositing the bond as security. The bank that did the business had to pay the Government the full hundred dollars for the bond; but if the bank needed the money in its business it could send the note and the bond to the nearest branch of the Federal Reserve Bank and get a loan in the form of Federal Reserve notes. With a thousand dollars to pay down one could have bought ten thousand worth of Liberty Bonds by giving his note for nine thousand, and so on up to any amount, and his note could have been rediscounted in the same manner by the Federal Reserve Bank, resulting in so much more newly made, debt money being put into circulation. This device served a useful purpose, for by means of it the Government sold hundreds of millions worth of bonds that could not otherwise have been disposed of, and got quick money for them, needed for war purposes; but the money obtained in this way consisted largely of new Federal Reserve notes made for, and issued and put in circulation by, the rediscount process, as above described. The local banks did not get these Federal Reserve rediscount loans free; they had to pay the going rate of interest determined by the Federal Reserve Board, which usually was a little lower than the rate paid to the local banks by their customers on the original loans, although often the local banks made no profit on rediscount transactions. The point to be observed is that Federal Reserve notes (ranging from five dollars up) although designed to pass for money as they do, are not dollars; as you will see by reading one, it is the Government's promise to pay a specified number (according to the denomination of the note) of real dollars in gold; every one of them is a Government note, an evidence of Government indebtedness to the amount of its face. In other words the Government issued its evidences of debt in the form of Federal Reserve notes to pass as money, and indirectly, through the instrumentality of the Federal Reserve Bank, loaned them as money and accepted them as money in payment for Liberty Bonds, themselves evidences of Government indebtedness in another form. This verifies the previous assertion that the large additional amount of money put in circulation in the form of Federal Reserve notes represented an increase, not of wealth, but of debt.

But the issue of Federal Reserve notes was not restricted to providing the wherewithal to buy Liberty Bonds and pay Government war expenses. Munition factories, shoe factories, textile mills and other necessary industries required additional funds for working capital or to expand their plants to meet the demand for increase of production called for by the exigencies of war, and much of this extra money was provided through bank loans rediscounted by the Federal Reserve Bank, which, of course, involved still further inflation of the currency by large issues of Federal Reserve notes for the purpose; this money represented debt, and unfortunately in too many instances debt imprudently incurred and funds unwisely expended. In this the Government was the greatest offender, wasting millions upon millions if not billions through stupendous mismanagement, inefficiency and graft under its cost-plus war contracts and in its construction undertakings of which its ventures in house-building, shipbuilding, aeroplane manufacture and camp construction are monumental scandals equaled only by its gigantic fiasco in operating the Government-owned merchant marine, to say nothing of the mess it made of running the railroads.

The Government was the largest factor in the market for materials and labor, and as there was hardly a pretense of giving the Government an honest equivalent in either, the demoralization which began with Government contracts and Government works soon extended to every line of business; profiteering became general, prices and wages began to climb in a competitive race, and labor, under the spell of the enticing example displayed in Government employment, declined in efficiency to a point estimated by competent authority to have been sixty-six per cent. of normal at the close of the war. In other words it was taking three men to do the work that two men should have done and formerly did do. In most employments this particular element of increased cost of labor has since been eliminated or considerably reduced, but the railroads are still suffering intolerably from labor inefficiency through working hours and conditions, imposed by the Government, which require the employment of an unnecessarily large number of railroad hands. We are all taxed in the form of high freight rates to pay this unnecessarily high cost of railroad labor.

Money that came easy through profiteering or high wages went easy and kept the merry-go-round of rising prices and wages going for a while. But a large portion of the people were neither profiteering nor earning big war wages, and the high prices that had reduced the purchasing value of the dollar to forty-seven cents were burdensome beyond endurance to them. So a year ago last spring they suddenly stopped buying and initiated the nation-wide movement known as the "consumers' strike" for lower prices. This punctured the gas-bag of fictitious war-time prosperity, and its collapse was painfully sudden and complete. It had to come and the regret is that it did not come sooner, before the gas-bag got so big and so high up. When the people stopped or largely curtailed buying the retailers and wholesalers cancelled their factory orders for new goods, and this closed many factories and put others on half time, which, of course, threw many laborers out of employment. There was need of general reduction of prices and of costs of production with a corresponding readjustment of wages and liquidation of debts in order to restore normal conditions and start up the country's business anew on a sound basis. Deflation had to be gone through with, high-cost goods had to be sold at a sacrifice and high-cost raw material had to be manufactured at a loss. Many large commercial and manufacturing concerns have lost during the liquidation of the past year as much or more than their entire profits during the war.

It has been a drastic but effective remedy, for reports from all quarters show improved conditions and indicate that business has turned the corner and is unmistakably on the upward trend. The Federal Reserve Board reports a marked improvement in the credit situation resulting from a strong liquidation of debts. There is a better wholesale and retail demand for goods, and this in turn is starting the factories going, especially in the shoe and textile lines; the cotton market has greatly strengthened and there is a good export demand for our surplus grain. Secretary of Labor Davis gives facts and figures to show that the unemployment situation, though serious, is not so bad as "exaggerated" newspaper statements and editorial comments make it appear, and confidently predicts that it will soon be relieved by the general improvement in business which has already begun. The present administration is faithfully redeeming its pledge to cut out extravagance and reduce the unnecessarily high cost of Government; President Harding has introduced various economies and is arranging, with the consent of Congress, to sell the Government-owned merchant ships and close the Government's most scandalously rotten and costly business venture. So let us be thankful that without incurring any dire calamity we have passed the crisis in readjusting business and Government from their demoralized war status to a normal peace condition, and that a new era of prosperity is knocking at our door. The threatened railroad labor strike, the fly that would spoil the precious ointment of returning prosperity, will not be tolerated by the long-suffering public.

COMFORT'S EDITOR.

COMFORT, PUBLISHED MONTHLY BY W. H. GANNETT, PUB., INC., AT AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Subscription price in United States and United States Possessions 50c a year; Canadian subscriptions 65c a year, foreign countries $1.00 a year. No premiums or prizes will be given on Canadian or foreign subscriptions. Please send your renewal just as soon as your subscription expires. We can not send you even one copy of COMFORT, after expiration, until your subscription is Renewed. If you do not get your magazine by the 25th of the month write us and we will send you another copy free. Please notify us immediately in case you move, so that we can change your address and see that you do not miss a single copy. Remember that we must have your former address, as well as your new address to make the change. Be sure to send both. We do not supply back numbers.

Entered at the post office at Augusta, Maine as second-class mail matter. Copyright, 1921 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

BY PROXY A Thanksgiving Story

By Ernest L. Thurston

See front cover illustration.

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub.,-Inc.

"THIS is my daughter Nancy's," said the farmer's wife, returning with a dainty, old-fashioned dress. "Do slip off that soaked riding habit and put this on while I dry your things. Please do," forestalling objections. "You have Nan's coloring and height. I'll pretend for the moment that you are she," —her voice thinned—it will be a joy to do for you."

"I'll pretend also," said Janet Markham quickly. "It will be dear to be mothered. My own was taken away before I really knew her."

Slipping on the dress, she dropped gratefully into a roomy armchair before the living-room fireplace. A sense of comfort stole over her as the older woman touched a match to the ready-laid material and a quick-mounting blaze radiated its warmth. The raging wind and chill October rain which, cornering her unexpectedly on the open highway, had sent her wind-blown, breathless, drenched from its sudden onslaught, to this farmhouse shelter, now seemed to retire into the distance.

"Is Nancy far away?" she asked the sweet-faced woman after a moment.

"One year married—and across the continent."

"Oh, I'm sorry. And no children here with you?"

"All away—another married daughter, and two sons, one married."

"Tell me about Nancy and the others."

To the accompaniment of the crackling logs, the mother told the familiar story of a scattering American family, but with vivid personal touches that etched the individuals clearly. The sun was shining low through the windows as she said:

"——And finally there is Robert. He is an engineering expert."

"Where does he live?"—Janet looked up, the other noting interest, and a little more in her eyes—"I met a Robert Keene last summer, a Chicago railway man. A splendid fellow. Could he be your son?"

"No, dear, Robert lives in Kansas City, though he travels much. Strange, he is a real home boy, yet he is unmarried. Of all, he will miss most the old Thanksgiving here."

"Do you mean," Janet looked around the bright, low-studded room, "none will be here for Thanksgiving? Why, this place is made for reunions."

The gray-haired woman started to reply, but choked and turned silently to the window. Impulsively Janet followed and put an arm about her. Then, suddenly, the girl's eyes danced. Ideas developed full-fledged in her keen mind.

"Look, M-Mother," with a little smile. Why not a thanksgiving reunion by proxy? Of course it couldn't be the same to you, but I, and some of my friends I'm sure, would love to do it. Let me choose them to represent your missing ones. We will fill the vacant chairs and see to the dinner—it would have to be late because our homes have reunions, too. Do! Do!! Do!!!"

The woman hesitated, studying the eager face. Then suddenly her eyes sparkled and she spoke with a decisive air,

"I'll do it, dear child, if you really wish it. I've dreaded unspeakably the thought of an empty house that night. But who ever heard of anyone but the mother attending to the Thanksgiving dinner? Leave that to me; just bring your dear selves."

Enthusiastically they drew plans until Janet was forced to leave, and Mrs. Keene summoned her husband to bring her mount. Then the girl talked so brightly with him at the gate, that later his wife remarked, reprovingly but with twinkling eyes,

"John, that was a very sprightly conversation for a man of your age to have with so attractive a young girl."

"Sure," he chuckled. "Who wouldn't enjoy it! She's sweet, but there's a lot of her live-wire father in her, too. Markham, the banker, you know."

"Not the great banker!"

"Surest thing you know."

"Well, my lands! And I—shucks—what's the odds? We're just what we are inside. She's a dear girl, but I wonder if it was only impulse. Will she carry it out?"

"Ralph Markham's daughter will do what she undertakes, or she's not of the old stock."

In this he was right. Janet did not delay, although Thanksgiving was weeks distant. She told her father that night, for few confidences were kept from him.

"You keep your regular Thanksgiving meal with me, young lady," he laughed. "Then, if you are good for two doses, go ahead. John Keene banks with me—a good man and a fine farmer. I understand his children have done well. The youngest boy is a brilliant engineer."

"Do you know him? I met a Robert Keene at the seashore last June."

"Only by reputation. Probably not the same. He's too much in demand to spare time for that. But, go to it, girlie. Your mother would like it." He gave her a quick hug.

So the girl took her chum, Helen Gates, into her confidence. Helen agreed to "proxy" Mary Keene, while Janet took Nancy. Then from among their acquaintance they chose Parker Collins to proxy the married son, John, Jr., and Porter Kent to represent Robert. To study personalities, they borrowed photographs of the daughters, but Mrs. Keene said she had only childhood pictures of her sons.

Janet's enthusiasm fired the spirit of her friends. Each wrote the member of the family assigned for proxying, explaining the plan and asking for a letter of authorization to act and for a word of greeting. Suggestions were sought.

Responses were prompt, enthusiastic and sincere. Nancy's grateful, homesick letter from California touched Janet's heart. At, the end she wrote:

"I know from mother, as well as by reading between your lines, what a dear you are. I feel as if you were my own sister. I know you will be a real me to mother, that night. So I am sending by mail my dress and pin that mother loves best, for you to wear at the reunion."

And Mary, writing to Helen said:

"Two things more. Mother always wished me to make her fruit cake. I shall send it before long.

"And the other. I've no voice, but just before dinner mother loved to have me go to the piano and sing the old Thanksgiving hymn I enclose. Can you do that?"

The listeners smiled, for Helen was a singer.

"Then, later, we all gather around and sing the old familiar songs and hymns. And, by the way, father likes to lead that singing. Ask him."

Parker Collins, in his turn, read from John Jr.'s letter from Minnesota:

"Great work, old man! There's no holdback with my proxy. I shall send a real part of my own Thanksgiving,—John 3d. He travels with old friends coming to your city for their reunion. It may shock you to find yourself unexpectedly father of an eight-year-old. You got yourself into it so make the most of it. God bless you!

"And, say, when mother met me at the door on these occasions I always said, 'Well, Mother, here's John.' Then I'd pick her up and carry her back to the living-room. It's up to you."

Finally Porter Kent contributed a bit from Robert's letter:

"For years," he went on to say, "I've provided the turkey, wild if possible. It will be along, as usual, with fixings besides.

"Furthermore, I'm supposed to be the curly-haired joker of these occasions, so if you're sober as an owl"—straight-haired, serious Porter colored at the shout that went up—"why get busy and develop a new nature by Thanksgiving time or I'll haunt you forever after."

Janet slipped out to the farmhouse early Thanksgiving morning and helped decorate the living-room, with cornstalks and pumpkins, vivid, late, red oak leaves, and great chrysanthemums sent by the daughters. Then, after helping with other preparations, she hastened back to her home reunion. Here, in her own room, she found awaiting her a little box containing exquisite forget-me-nots. In the box was a card marked "Brother Robert."

Again, she was first to arrive in the evening, dainty, a somewhat old-fashioned figure in delicate lavender. She threw her arms around the older woman, whose eyes sparkled mistily as she hugged the little figure.

"N-Nancy! That dress and pin! Even the way you do your hair, you little witch! There's been method in the correspondence my Nancy writes she has had with you. I——"

A loud knocking interrupted and called her to the door. The hall light shown on a tall figure when she opened it. It hesitated only an instant. Then its arms went around her and she felt a kiss square on her lips.

"Well, Mother, here's John," rang in her ears, and she found herself lifted and borne quickly to the great armchair.

After a moment, proxy John jumped up and opened the hall door, crying,

"By Jove! I almost forgot. Come on, you kid."

There followed the clatter of small feet in the hallway. A boyish figure flashed by the fire and plumped itself into Mother Keene's lap. She stared amazed.

"Why you are! Are you real? It is; it is Johnny himself." She drew him tight——"Oh, you dear, dear people!"

By now the two older people were entering into the spirit of the evening. Their color brightened and their eyes sparkled. They greeted "Mary" and "Robert"—the latter somewhat shy—as if they were their own. The little stiffness remaining was fast wearing off when Robert shattered it utterly, stepping into the firelight and sticking his head down.

"Mother,"—he colored high—"you never let so many minutes pass without pulling my hair."

Mother Keene laughed, hesitated, then putting a hand into the wavy mass, gave it a stiff yank. "You know," she spoke half apologetically, "Robert's hair is tempting and he's such a tease. I never could resist."

Three young people burst into shout on shout of laughter, while young Kent grew brilliant red under his wavy black locks. Janet recovered first.

"Oh, Mother, Mother!"—she giggled again—"this retiring Robert's hair never had wave or curl. Nothing could be straighter. And now see what he's done. Oh, could I but have seen the transformation in process! Porter, Porter,"—she put out her hand cordially—"you're a true sport! A r-eal sport!"

Soon the dinner call came and all trooped to the table, laden in old-time Thanksgiving style. But as the others seated themselves, Helen stopped at the piano and sang softly, in her exquisite voice, the old Thanksgiving hymn. After that they were indeed one big family.

The meal proceeded with many interludes. Helen and Parker read letters from the absentees they represented. Porter did his best to keep the fun going. Then the telephone rang and Janet called Mrs. Keene to take the receiver. There was an instant of surprised silence as she listened. Then——

"Nancy! Nancy, dearest, it's your voice. I know it, I——" and the others tried not to "listen in" as mother and then father talked across the continent.

"It's Dad's part," whispered Janet.

Other letters were read and other phone calls came from the children and from close friends. Responding to the last call, Janet heard a voice that seemed familiar,

"Nancy Keene, please."

"Yes, no. She isn't; she lives——" She hesitated.

"Yes, sister Nancy lives in California, but another sister Nancy is at home," the voice teased. "She's on the wire now. How are you, sister?"

"Why, Mr. Keene! I half suspected, and yet you live west——"

"Brother Robert, not Mr. Keene. I can just picture you there, Nancy. But, not to keep Mother waiting, I'll phone you later."

"Robert, Mother," Janet passed the receiver. "And, strange to say, I do know him." But Mother Keene only gave her a little hug as she took the instrument.

All helped in serving the dinner which was now moving to an end. A moment came when Mrs. Keene and Janet were both out of the room, and Porter Kent had slipped out, too. But his place was vacant only a moment. Mrs. Keene, coming back, touched him lovingly on the hair as she passed his seat. He glanced up, smiling straight into her eyes. She stopped as if stunned, staring, unbelieving. The young man rose and caught her up, chuckling,

"It's a strange little mother who doesn't know her own son."

"Robert, Robert, but it's good to have you! But I don't understand. You were—you just telephoned——"

"From the first house down the road. Finding I could make it, I arranged with my proxy for a late arrival. Hello, sister Nan," he caught her hand as she stood amazed, "you're solid gold." His look said more, but he turned at once to greet the others, including proxy Robert who now reappeared with a "Thanks be! He can do the joking now."

"But you can never be as serious again," laughed Helen.

"Nor wish to be," he rejoined.

Dinner ended, "Mary" put her arm through Father Keene's.

"Dad! It's time for the old tunes, isn't it? You lead and I'll play."

Surrounding the piano, they sang the old familiar songs. But, after a few moments, the real Robert drew Janet out of the circle and over to the great settee in the fireplace corner.

"But, how Kansas City?" asked the girl after a while. "I thought you were in Chicago."

"I could not have made myself clear. I was there temporarily on expert work. I was called East to the shore for a professional conference. When the floods came West, and I was needed, I left on a half-hour's notice. But I wrote you."

"I never received it."

"That I know, also. You left before it arrived and it was carelessly forwarded. Then it began the slow trail back to me for I was moving. It caught up with me the day I learned from Mother of the identity of a young lady who was planning a lovely time for her. Finding I could get here, I decided to wait—hard work, I can tell you. I was here three days ago for an hour with your father,"—he laughed at her surprise—"I wonder if you will mind if I settle in your city. I'm tired of constant motion. I am to be an officer of a construction company he is organizing. I——"

Helen's clear voice broke in between tunes.

"Why, where are Robert and Nancy? Here, you deserters, come back. No? Then we gather round the fire, too."

Mother Keene laughed softly.

"Father, that is the last touch needed. Do you remember how, when the youngsters were growing up, couples were always courting on the old settee? It's a real, wonderful, old-time Thanksgiving, you dear young people have given me."

Janet smiled, looking mischievously at the man beside her.

"Oh, this is just a brother and sister act, Mother. Robert insists, even on the phone, that I am Sister Nancy."

Robert looked down into the warm, starry-eyed face.

"Sister, nothing!" he said softly.

What Hast Thou in Thine House?

By Frances L. Garside

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of the sons of the prophets unto Elisha, saying, Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did fear Jehovah: and the creditor is come to take unto him my two children to be bondmen.

And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me; what hast thou in the house?

* * * * * * *

Mrs. Elva Schappell has been guarding lives for many months at a crossing of the Lackawanna Railroad in East Orange, N. J., earning seventy-five dollars a month for a job that begins at 7 A. M. and ends at 3.

She had lived with railroad folks all her life; she had to have work that would give her leisure to sew for herself and to do the work of her home. She was reliable; she knew the importance of having one's mind on one's work; she knew, because it had been told to her by the experiences of others all her life, how vital this attention to duty was. She had it "in her house."

She likes the work; she is one of the most reliable "watchmen" the Lackawanna has on the entire system.

When the husband of Susannah Bell, of New York City, died, she had in her arms to comfort her a large Persian cat, and that she found comfort in it no one doubts who has sobbed out one's sorrows on the back of a cat or a dog. Their name is legion.

The luxury of grief was one Mrs. Bell could not afford, for she hadn't more than a few dollars to her name. But she had the cat, and he was of fine breed. He became her inspiration. This was less than ten years ago, and now "Susannah Bell, Kittens" adorns a sign hanging up in New York City, and under it is the information that the pleasant little woman within "house-breaks, conditions and breeds dogs, cats and monkeys," carrying such a large stock of fine pedigreed animals that the income tax collector does not pass her by.

Mrs. Bessie Frey, of New York City, had the knack in her fingers of making attractive toys for children, and unusual little ornaments for the home. She had used this talent in making the most unique and original gifts for her friends. When the day came when she had to earn money—as it often comes to many unexpectedly—she utilized this talent; she made unique little toys for the kiddies and odd little novelties for their elders, and sold the first from her own home. Now, still making, still planning, she has a Gift Shop on Fifth Avenue that leads in novelties; one might almost say, from the nmber of "originals" one sees there, that all other gift shops follow.

Cora Minerva Lowe, of a little town in Ohio, made her own face cream. With a skin and complexion that were the envy of her friends, she made up gift "batches" for them. Then, one day, her creams and face lotions appeared on the market. She had not gone out seeking ways and means away from home when her hour came; she had put into practical use that which she had in her house.

Three children should be an inspiration to any one. They were to Helen Speer. She had made their toys; she had decorated a playroom for them that was the delight of the neighborhood. If she could please the kiddies in her family, in her block, she could—since God made kiddies the same all the world over—please the children everywhere. She began by decorating a playroom in a New York hotel. It was the first. Now she travels from place to place decorating playrooms and nurseries; making playrooms of roof tops; turning attics and barn lofts into toyland for children. She is making their dreams come true from coast to coast, not without pecuniary profit to herself, for one of her recent orders entailed the expenditure of over two thousand dollars for the decorating of just one room for just one child.

Miss Aletta Crump had her name. She didn't think it was specially pretty, or attractive, but it proved to be a fairy wand. She used it in a sign over a little tea room: "The Crumperie."

"Oh, we want some crumpets," her patrons began demanding. "This is the only place we know where they serve crumpets."

"But I don't serve crumpets; I gave that name to my tea room because my name is Crump."

Such disappointed faces! And there was one after another of them in the first few weeks, so many Miss Crump was compelled to serve crumpets with tea and coffee. And it is these crumpets that have put Miss Crump of the Crumperie in a position to open a string of Crumperies. She had "in her house" a name; and, it proved a magic one.

Mabel J. Gray, of Tonopah, Nev., grew up with the mines. She is now the only woman president of a mining company. She wears man's clothes when on a prospecting or mining trip; she thinks not of herself, but only of her job. She did not know when she felt greater interest as a child in a rock by the wayside than in one set in gold on a dressing table, that this would some day prove to be the oil she would pour into vessels.

Antoinette Vonasek is the only licensed woman engineer in the state of New York. She had always been mechanically inclined, and when appointed matron of a public school the work did not appeal to her because there were no broken pipes to mend, nor tools to handle in the job. The assistant to the fireman quit; she asked for the job, and the need was so great she was given it. She later made application for a license to handle boilers, taking charge of two high-pressure boilers in a large office building.

She is not a "clock watcher." In her present position as janitress-engineer in a public school, she works all hours of the day and when the weather is extremely cold she stays on the job all night.

"I like it," she said; "I had to earn my living. I think women make the mistake of taking up work they don't like because that which attracts them is in a field in which women have never trod. It is a question of ability, I think, not precedence."

It is a question of what one has in "the house".

Alice Foote MacDougal is the only woman coffee importer in the United States. She knew the business through her husband; when the time came for her to meet the daily demands of a family of three she utilized her knowledge by becoming a coffee importer on a most modest scale. Fourteen years ago she had just thirty-eight dollars and her knowledge of the importing of coffee; now she is doing a business of five thousand or more a month.

Elsie Shaver, of a little town in Arkansas, dabbled in paint, and somehow, no matter what she started out to draw, it wound up in being a funny looking doll. Her Little Shaver dolls are now being hugged in the crooks of dimpled arms from one end of the country to the other, and Miss Shaver has only just begun.

Rose E. Boyd is an expert employment counselor. It didn't just happen; she had to find an outlet for the knowledge she gained while in the employ of the Panama Exposition. She dealt with strange folk from strange lands, and when the hour came for starting out for herself, what more natural than to use this knowledge? It was her oil, and "of vessels she borrowed not a few," making her name a familiar one wherever a large mercantile concern wishes to establish a representative in a foreign land.

For the last six years the second highest record in the individual sales made by traveling representatives of a large milling concern of Kansas City have been made by a woman.

Her name is Emma Brennan, and she built up her clientele on her smile, and happy way of being interested. No order was too small to receive her attention; she formed a personal acquaintance with every miller, baker and grocer; a spirit of friendliness brought her the success that is putting her among the best-known traveling "salesmen" of the Middle West. It was what she had in her house.

Annie May Bryan, of Kansas City, found a piece of yellowish green felt in her possessions. Her fingers were skilled, and somehow, almost before she knew it, she had made that felt into a green turtle bean-bag. This was the first of thousands of "Bryan animal bean-bags." Her little studio has become a humming toyshop, and thousands of her animal bean-bags are being thrown into the air with shrieks of laughter all the way from California to Maine. Because no one else had made animal bean-bags she might have become a stenographer, a most highly-approved vocation for girls. But she was original. And she was not afraid. Are you?

Miss Marie Dahm, of New York City, had a love for the exact, the minute, the detail. Where would such a tendency place her, do you think? This is what it did: She has one of the most important positions in the Identification Bureau of the Navy, and over her desk there have passed the finger prints of more than 600,000 men. Though only twenty-two years of age, she possesses the ability to recognize the different points of identification as no man possesses it.

She might have used this love for detail in embroidering—and getting nowhere—had she been afraid.

The surf brings up high palmetto logs on the beach in a little town in South Carolina. They are swept almost to the door of the home of Mrs. James Townsend. Surely that meant they were for her.

There is a wonderful white pith in these logs; Mrs. Townsend began collecting it and making it into delicious pickles. Her ability to make enough to supply the orders from hotels, grocery stores and yacht clubs in the South depends solely upon the in-coming tide, which, so far, has been good to her.

Nellie M. Scott was at one time stenographer to the president of the Bantam Ball Bearing Company of Bantam, Conn. She realized that she must earn more money; she could not do the work of her present job and do work outside, too; there was only one thing to do, and that was to study the work that lay at hand; to become familiar with the things she wrote about for her employer. She is now at the head of the firm.

When a man of genius dies, his dreams die with him. This is the general result, and the world is poorer. When Augustus St. Gaudens died, his brother Louis completed many of his wonderful statues and reliefs. Louis died five years later. His wife picked up his tools. They were at her hand; she must do something. She finished his last task recently, giving to our country the heroic figure, "Painting".

"It was hard work," she said, "too hard, but I had to do it. None saw his dream as I saw it; its character, its spirit. It took two years and much money. I did rough work, not the mere finishing. I have worked hard, but it is done, and I am proud of it."

Florence Krag Reynolds, of California, had to have a large sum of money to pay for an operation for her son who had been on crutches fifteen years. She had sold quaint little baskets containing Driftwood Powder that made colored flames leap up like sprites in the fireplace. But she must earn more than they could bring her. Then she had a vision!

A set of blue enamel shelves with a small-paned casement window above a settle, and fluttering blue curtains with tall pink hollyhocks stenciled on. On the shelves in shining rows were little squat jars of jams, jams, jams. The name: The Martha Jane Pantry Shelf.

She had the vision; she was not afraid. This was two yearsa go. Now she has an interest in a plant in the Santa Clara valley where thousands of jars of jam can be put out in a day. And almost every city in the United States boasts of one establishment (there cannot be more) where there is a blue-and-white Martha Jane's Pantry Shelf.

She knew how to make jams; the knowledge of jams was what she had in her house.

Olive Earl worked in a gift shop. One night she had an idea. The next day she bought a Turkish towel for ten cents in a ten-cent store and cut out a sheep. This she stuffed, and now her stuffed animals are cut out by a corporation, and this one little sheep is the bell-wether of a flock of sheep that is advancing wherever there are children to be made happy, and that means all over the world. "I love children," she says: "I thought only of what might please them."

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10.)

Stella Rosevelt

by Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

"In other words, she intends to make a servant - a slave of me."

"Goodness gracious! are you Stella Gladstone?"

"Well what was it? I should like to know."

Copyright, 1883, 1902 and 1903 by Street & Smith.
Renewal granted to Mrs. Georgie Sheldown Downs, for 28 years from March 20, 1911.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A terrible storm at sea and from a steamer running between Liverpool and New York only five escape seasickness. Among them is Stella Rosevelt Gladstone, an orphan and on her way to some distant relatives in New York. She is befriended by an elderly man, Jacob Rosevelt, who is startled when he learns her mother called her "Star," her grandmother giving her the name. A fire breaks out and she saves valuable papers. The boats are rapidly filled. Stella refuses to go unless room is made for Mr. Rosevelt, who the next day suffers from an ill turn and is carefully nursed by Stella. The sixth day they are rescued. Mr. Rosevelt is told of the care Stella gave him during his illness and while thanking her a young man approaches and Mr. Rosevelt introduces Archibald Sherbrooke, whose home is in Derbyshire where Star's father preached. Star's shawl becomes loosened and not finding the pin, Mr. Sherbrooke draws one, an exquisitely carved stone, from his necktie, and Stella pins the shawl and then tells the story of the wreck and her endeavor to save Mr. Rosevelt's life. As they near New York, Mr. Sherbrooke regrets he must soon bid her good by and assures her some of her relatives will meet her.

CHAPTER IV.

MRS. RICHARDS.

IT was very late when the stately ship rolled slowly up to her pier, too late for the customs officers to visit her that night.

But early the next morning the hurry and bustle began, and there was the usual rush to claim baggage and get away as soon as possible from the place where they had spent so many monotonous days.

Star had no baggage to claim, and, not knowing what else to do, she sat still in the saloon and waited, watching the departing people with mingled feelings of curiosity and sadness.

Mr. Rosevelt had told her not to be anxious about her own fate, for he should see that she was kindly cared for, and if her friends did not come for her, he would provide for her until they could advertise her arrival in the papers. It was unfortunate, he said, that she lost their address, since it would be liable to cause something of a delay in reaching her destination. So, while he went to arrange some little matter with the captain, she sat and watched the hurrying crowd.

Archibald Sherbrooke came to seek her there, and found her alone.

"I'm off!" he said, with animation. "I've got through with the customs, and have come to wish you good by. Mr. Rosevelt says he is going to take care of you. I hope everything will come out right for you, Miss Star, and that you'll find a pleasant home with your friends. I'm very sorry that you've lost their address, for I'd call and see you before I go back to England if I knew where to find you. I trust, however, that we shall meet again; and—will you please always consider me your friend?"

He placed a card in her hand as he spoke, and she saw that his address was written upon it.

"Thank you," she said, with a rising flush. "I'll shall never forget you, for you have been very kind to me. But wait—I nearly forgot to give you your pin," she concluded, suddenly remembering that she still had it, and she took the beautiful cameo head from her shawl and held it out to him.

"Please keep it as a souvenir," he said, gently, adding: "And I wish you had something to give me in exchange."

"I've lost everything, you know. I could give you naught but a 'tress of my yellow hair,'" Star said, with a light laugh, and lifting the heavy braid which lay over her shoulder with a look of mock dismay.

"Oh, would you?" he asked, eagerly, and taking her literally at her word.

"It would be but a poor return for this lovely cameo," she answered, flushing beneath his eager glance.

"No, indeed, it would not," he returned, earnestly. "May I have a lock of its shining gold, please, Miss Star?" and his fingers touched the massive braid almost tenderly.

"I have nothing with which to cut it off, and—I'm afraid it would be very foolish," she said, with drooping eyes, but a quickly beating heart.

For answer, he drew a tiny pair of scissors from one of the pockets of his vest, and held them out to her with a smile.

She took them hesitatingly, her delicate face crimsoning to the light locks which lay upon her forehead; then, with a hand that was not quite steady, she clipped a silken tress from among the curling ends below the blue ribbon with which the braid was tied, and laid it, with the scissors, in his extended hand.

"Thank you; I shall always keep it," he said, with glowing eyes, as he put it carefully between the leaves of a small notebook which he took from another pocket.

Then he took her hand in a warm, strong clasp, and, with a reluctantly spoken farewell, a lingering, wistful look into her lovely blue eyes, he went away.

As he disappeared through one doorway of the saloon, the figure of a woman, clad in plain, dark robes, entered by the other, and threw a quick, searchingg lance around the place.

"I'm in search of a girl named Stella Gladstone," she said, in sharp, incisive tones, as her eyes fell upon our lone star.

The young girl took a step forward, her earnest glance fastened upon that plain, yet not unkind, face.

"I am Stella Gladstone," she said simply.

The woman looked at her keenly for a moment, and her homely countenance softened into something like pity as she noticed her delicate beauty. Then she said bluntly:

"Well, Miss, if I was ever thankful to set eyes on anybody, I am on you, or I'm much mistaken. I've lain awake o' nights thinking of you, ever since we heard that the vessel in which you sailed was lost at sea. Two days ago another vessel came in, bringing in some of those who had been wrecked. We got the news in the paper the night before they landed, and madam—Mrs. Richards my mistress—sent me posthaste next morning to see if you were among them. Of course, you weren't, and last night news came that more had been rescued, and would land at this pier this morning, so I was posted off again to find you if possible. Well," she continued, heaving a deep sigh of relief, "I've got you at last! Of course you ain't overstocked with baggage?" she concluded, with a grim smile.

"No, I have nothing; everything was lost." Star replied, while her large, earnest eyes studied her companion's face.

"More's the pity for you, then, or I'm much mistaken," the woman said, with a peculiar compression of her thin lips

Then she added, with more of animation than she had yet displayed:

"But, bless me! I suppose you'd like to know who I am, and won't be much surprised when I tell you my name is Blunt; my name is like my nature, and I'm madam's—Mrs. Richard's housekeeper. A pretty time of it I have, too. But come, it's time we were off."

"If you please," Star said timidly, "might I just wait a few minutes to say good by to a gentleman who has been very kind to me?"

"Lor', child! it'll be no use; you'll never find him, and almost everybody has gone already. Madam will be having one of her 'tantrums if I am not back shortly as there's company to dinner today, and it's nearly ten o'clock now," Mrs. Blunt returned, a trifle indifferently.

She turned as she spoke and led the way from the place, and Star was forced to follow her, striving hard to repress the sobs that were struggling in her bosom over her disappointment; and when, half an hour later, Mr. Rosevelt came to seek her, he was as much disturbed to find her gone as she had been to go.

He made inquiries regarding her, and was told that some one had come for her and taken her away, but no one knew whither she had gone.

This relieved his mind somewhat as to her safety, but did not lessen his disappointment at thus losing sight of her and not knowing where to seek for her; but he was forced to go his way and bear it as he could.

Mrs. Blunt and her sad-hearted charge walked quickly from the steamer, and having no baggage, she immediately called a carriage, and hurrying Star into it, gave her order to be driven to a Brooklyn ferry.

Crossing the river, they took another carriage, and a half hour's drive brought them to a stately dwelling in a fashionable portion of the city.

"There, child!" Mrs. Blunt ejaculated, as the carriage stopped; "we're home, and I'm glad of it, though you're rather delicate looking for what I imagine is before you."

Star looked surprised at this speech, and would have liked to ask what it meant, but the woman gave her no opportunity, paying for and dismissing the carriage in her quick, energetic way, and then led her around to a side door and entered the mansion.

Beckoning Star to follow her, she passed through a lofty hall and up a wide, thickly carpeted staircase, where on every hand there were evidences of wealth and luxury.

Rapping upon a door at the front end of the upper hall, a voice bade her enter, and the woman opened it and passed in, and Star following, saw a handsome woman of perhaps forty years, dressed with great elegance and taste, sitting in a low rocker by a window.

She turned an inquiring glance upon Mrs. Blunt as she advanced. She could not see Star, as she was directly behind her and hidden by her tall figure.

"Well, madam, I've found her at last, and here she is," she said, in a satisfied tone, and stepped one side to present the young girl.

Madam heaved a sigh—it might have been of relief, it might have been the reverse; no one could have told which from the expression of her face—as she bent a critical glance upon the young stranger who had come to find a home in her house.

She arose, came forward, and studied the fair, downcast face; for Star, after the first glance, knew she would receive no tender welcome from that cold, proud woman, and her heart sank like a dead weight in her bosom.

Something like a frown gathered on the woman's brow as she marked her exceeding loveliness.

"Well, Stella, you have had a hard voyage," she began, in smooth, cruel tones, which made Star shrink from her and shiver slightly, they were so distant and devoid of feeling. "I am glad, however," she went on, "that you are safe, and I hope, now that you are here and I am to give you a home, you will do your best to please me. You look very much like your mother as I remember her, although I trust your face will not prove as great a misfortune to you as hers did to her."

This last statement was made with some severity. Evidently Mrs. Richards was not pleased to find the new arrival so beautiful in face and figure.

"Mamma unfortunate! How?" Star asked, surprise loosening her tongue..

"Is it possible that you do not know how she disgraced herself and family?" madam demanded, sternly, as if in some way Star was to blame for said disgrace. "Have you never been told how a poor clergyman once preached in the church where your mother attended worship, fell in love with her pretty face, and finally persuaded her to marry him, to the utter disregard of her whole family, who were highly respectable people?"

Star's cheeks glowed hotly beneath this tirade, and her blue eyes flamed at this slur upon her idolized parents.

"I do not consider mamma's marriage anything of a 'misfortune' or a 'disgrace,'" she answered, with something of hauteur, and speaking very distinctly. "She was very happy all her life, and papa was a splendid man—a superior man."

Mrs. Richards smiled in a lofty kind of way, as she returned:

"It is very natural, I suppose, that you should be your father's champion; nevertheless he was not, socially, your mother's equal, and she degraded herself in the eyes of all her family by marrying a penniless preacher, and a dissenter, too."

Star's lips parted again, as if about to utter an indignant protest to this statement; but, with a wave of her white hand, Mrs. Richards coolly dismissed the subject and turned to Mrs. Blunt.

"I suppose everything belonging to her was lost," she said.

"Yes, madam; the poor child has nothing in the world save what she has on," that woman answered, with a compassionate glance at Star.

"That is awkward; but you can take her to the sewing-room and tell Miss Baker to measure her for a couple of dresses; tell her to make them from that piece of print that I purchased yesterday. Can you sew, Stella?" she asked, turning again to the young girl, whom she had not even invited to be seated.

"Yes'm; mamma taught me to sew when I was quite young, and I have attended to my own wardrobe, with the aid of a seamstress, ever since she died."

"That is well. You can then assist Miss Baker about your dresses, and when they are completed I will arrange about your other duties. You can go now. Mrs. Blunt will show you the way to your room, where you can lay aside your shawl and hat and then go to the sewing-room."

Star gave the woman a stare of blank astonishment.

She had been most delicately and tenderly reared; her education had been carefully superintended by her father, and the constant companionship of her refined and intellectual mother had made her a little lady in every sense of the word, and now this woman—this cousin to her mother—this human being, whom she knew her mother once saved from a dreadful death—had received her, after her long and perilous voyage, her suffering and hardships, in this unfeeling, indifferent way.

She had not even taken her hand at greeting; she had looked her over and inspected her with a critical stare, as if she were some beast of burden that she was buying to toil for her. She had not offered her the commonest hospitalities of her house, or given her one kind word or look.

Star took a step forward, her slight form drawn proudly erect, the hot, indignant blood surging over neck, face and brow, and was about to demand the meaning of this strange treatment, when Mrs. Richards, seeing her intentions, said, haughtily, and in a tone not to be mistaken:

"I told you that you could go, Stella. Did you understand me?"

With a heaving bosom and flashing eyes, Star bowed with a sort of stately grace, turned and followed Mrs. Blunt from the room with the step of a queen; but when the door was shut behind them, she stopped and confronted that good though eccentric woman, with an aspect which, to say the least, astonished her.

CHAPTER V.

BITTER DISAPPOINTMENT.

"What does this mean?" she demanded, passionately. "Why am I received in this strange, this heartless manner, by my mother's cousin? Why does she presume to cast aspersions upon my father and mother, and talk about print dresses, and assigning me duties as if I were a mere servant?"

Mrs. Blunt's breath was fairly taken away by these swift, indignant sentences and questions, and she could only gaze at the young girl in speechless surprise for a few moments.

Star was wondrously beautiful then, in spite of her soiled and disordered attire, with her flashing eyes, her blazing cheeks, her delicate, dilating nostrils, her scornful, curling lips and proudly poised head.

"What does it mean, I say?" repeated Star, impatient at the woman's silence.

Mrs. Blunt found her tongue at last.

"Mercy on us, child!" she ejaculated, her astonishment extending to her tones. "You've a temper of your own, or I'm much mistaken; and you'll need it, too, if you're going to live in this house."

Then she added, more thoughtfully:

"I'm afraid, miss, you've come over here with a wrong impression—I really am."

"What do you mean?" Star asked. "How have I come with a wrong impression?"

"What did you expect when you started to come to America to live with Mrs. Richards?" the housekeeper asked, evading her questions by putting another.

"I expected that my mother's cousin, who papa said, was very wealthy, and able to take care of me, and had promised him to do so, would give me a place in her home as a member of her family, and give me an opportunity to perfect my education, so that I might be able, by and by, to take care of myself. This was what my father understood her promise to me to mean—this was what I expected. But from the reception she has given me—cold and heartless—and as I would not have received the meanest beggar who came to my door—from disrespectful and insulting remarks about my parents, and what she said about my 'duties', I am afraid that my position here will not be a pleasant one."

Mrs. Blunt's homely face was full of pity as she listened to what Star said.

"Poor child," she began, "you have expected entirely too much, and perhaps it would be a mercy to tell you at once how mistaken you are if you think you are going to find a pleasant home and a chance to get much of an education here. When madam got your father's letter and knew that you were soon to be an orphan, she said at once that it was 'just the thing', and you would do nicely to supply the place of Maggie Flynn, the chamber and errand girl, and who was not exactly trustworthy. She said the English peasants always made good servants, and as you were young and would be wholly dependent on her, she could train you according to her own notions. And, to make a long story short, you are to make beds and do chamber work generally, wait upon madam and run of errands."

And the housekeeper heaved a sigh of relief that the difficult explanation was over. And difficult it was, with those glittering, sapphire eyes fixed so intently upon her, and that beautiful face gleaming with scorn and indignation.

"In other words, she intends to make a servant—a slave of me," she said, with quiet sarcasm, but uplifted head.

"Ye-es—if you must put it so, miss," Mrs. Blunt admitted, reluctantly.

"What wages am I to expect?" and the clear young voice rang with intense scorn.

"Wages?"

"Yes, wages. What did she pay Maggie Flynn?" Star demanded, with a bitter smile.

"Six dollars a month; but—I don't think madam has thought about wages for you. She is to give you a home for what you can do; and besides what I have told you, you are to wait upon Miss Josephine, who is not sparing of her commands, either."

"Who is Miss Josephine, pray?"

"The young lady of the house—Mrs. Richards' daughter."

"How old is she?"

"Just turned eighteen."

"Two years my senior," murmured Star, reflectively. "Well, Mrs. Blunt," she added, after a moment or two, and looking up with a clearer face, "show me to my room, please, and let me have a good bath, for I need refreshing sadly. If only I might have some clean underclothing to put on," she added, wistfully.

"You shall," the woman quickly returned. "I suppose madam never thought of it, and it is a shame. There, wait here," she added, as she threw open the door of a small room on the front of the house in the third story, "and I will bring you a change of Miss Josephine's. They will be a trifle too large, but never mind so that you're comfortable."

She sped away, and as Star removed her hat and shawl she looked about her.

The room was very scantily furnished, but it was clean, and as there was only a single bed in it, she knew she was to have it to herself—a point which she congratulated herself upon, as it would have been very obnoxious to her to room with one of the servants.

Mrs. Blunt soon returned, bringing clean, fresh garments, and Star thought she had never realized before how great luxury cleanliness was.

"You can go to the bathroom at the end of the hall," she said, laying them over Star's arm.

Star felt very grateful to the kind-hearted creature, and made the most of her opportunity.

When Mrs. Blunt returned at the end of an hour, her plain face relaxed into a smile, though Star had thought that smiles were at a discount with her as a general thing.

"Well, you do look nice, or I'm much mistaken; and those hands—they're much too fine and nice, in my opinion, for drudgery;" and the woman glanced admiringly at those small members, of which, to be truthful, Star was a little proud.

"Well, I am ready to go to Miss Baker," she said, with a little sigh. "It is evident that I shall not be in a condition to do any kind of work, or drudgery, as you call it, until I am properly clad."

"She's true blue, and it's an abomination to make a servant of her," muttered the housekeeepr, as she led the way to the sewing-room.

Miss Baker was in the midst of fitting a party dress for Miss Josephine, a rather fine-looking girl, with black eyes and hair, a brilliant color, and a full, graceful figure.

Mrs. Blunt introduced Star, and then gave Mrs. Richards' orders about the "two print dresses."

"Goodness gracious! are you Stella Gladstone?" ejaculated the pet and pride of the Richards' mansion, with a stare of surprise.

Star bowed a cold assent to this rude salutation, and then walked quietly across the room and seated herself by a window.

Miss Baker, however, had nodded and smiled kindly at her, and she felt sure that she should like the weary-looking seamstress.

"Well, I guess mamma will be glad you have come," Josephine pursued; "she has been nearly plagued to death with that Maggie Flynn—you're to take her place, you know, as chambermaid and errand girl."

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 12.)

This Department is conducted solely for the use of COMFORT sisters, whereby they may give expression to their ideas relative to the home and home surroundings, and to all matters pertaining to themselves and families; as well as opening a way for personal correspondence between each other.

Our object is to extend a helping hand to COMFORT subscribers; to become coworkers with all who seek friendship, encouragement, sympathy or assistance through the interchange of ideas.

Any abuse of this privilege, such as inviting correspondence for the purpose of offering an article for sale, or undertaking to charge a sum of money for ideas, recipes or information mentioned in any letter appearing in this department, if reported, will result in the offender being denied the use of these columns.

Do not ask us to publish letters requesting money contributions or donations of any sort. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate, it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

Please write only on one side of the paper, and recipes on a separate sheet.

Always give your correct and full name and address, very plainly written; otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Address MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON, CARE COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

TRAVEL letters have been rare of late, so rare that it seemed the whole COMFORT family had given up traveling altogether. Owing to financial and other reasons, mostly financial, the majority of us are unable to visit the wonderful places we read about and have to content ourselves with descriptions from someone more fortunate. Because of this, the stay-at-homes will like the following letter from Mrs. Marsh of California. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh are travelers of note and interesting people in general, so their future letters will be worth anticipating.—Ed.

A Hike Up Mount Tamalpais, Calif.

By Mrs. J. C. Marsh

The visitor to San Francisco, or any of the cities skirting the Bay of San Francisco, is at once attracted by the highest peak in all the sky line, and there, 2,500 feet in the air, in a little notch of the mountain, is the Mecca for every visitor to these parts. This is the Tamalpais Inn, and 108 feet, higher up, is the summit, which has to be hiked to reach.

It is commonly known as the "Mountain that guards the Golden Gate." It is 19 miles from San Francisco.

The mountain got its name from the Tamal Indians who once roamed over its forests and through its chasms—Tamal being Indian and pais, mountain. It is pronounced TAM-AL-PA-IS with the accent on the "PA."

The trail starts from a point where the train leaves you to choose whether you will hike it or take the mountain train.

As it has been my good fortune to do both, more than once, I can speak from experience. For some 500 feet upward from Mill Valley, the starting point, it is fairly easy and one thinks they have a soft snap, but wait. Then the trail is taken upward through Chaparral.

Visitors call it a "mountain of magic," and when in its glory, words fail to express the feeling as you see the wild lilac (ceanothus), or at another season, the native toyon berries a glowing mass of scarlet loveliness, while every crevice holds its share of choice wild ferns or flowers.

Let us look for a moment at the iron dragon squirming its way up, backward, to the summit. It is jokingly remarked that "Lot's wife turned to rubber, then to salt," while travelers on the crookedest railway in the world do not have to twist their necks or take any such chances. The railway does all the twisting and turning, being built on the principle that "one good turn deserves another."

REGULATION HIKING COSTUME OF MRS. MARSH.

"It is a long road that knows no turning," and we claim that this road, being all turns, is the sum total of shortness. The train backs up the mountain with the engine in the rear, yet it is not a cog railroad. There are 281 curves in eight and one-fifth miles and the maximum curve is 90 degrees. The maximum grade is seven per cent., while the longest piece of straight track is 413 feet. The train ascends 2,500 feet of the total height of 2,608 feet, and goes north, south, east and west in its ascension.

This mountain, at the port of the setting sun, has been made the playground of a million people. The mighty Redwoods—sequoa—(semper virens) that you look down upon as you ascend, are the largest of their species. They range from 100 to 340 feet high and their trunks 18 feet in diameter, with bark often one foot thick.

They are the oldest living things. Even young ones are two or three thousand years old, and many are seen growing out of the ruins of others, which may have been saplings two or three thousand years ago.

The madrones, live oaks, laurels, manzanita (medicine plant, planted by the pioneer Spaniards from Spain), the wild hollyhocks and onions, and last but not the least, that beautiful plant that is seen at every turn, Old Man, or California Sweet Smelling Southernwood.

One of the largest trees at the foot of the mountain is 54 feet in circumference, and is said to have been a sturdy sapling when Solomon built the Temple at Jerusalem.

John Muir, after whom the beautiful woods at base of Tamalpais is named, and who lived there, first directed attention to these trees, and Joaquin Miller, Mark Twain and Robert Louis Stevenson have all added their eulogy to both mountain and woods.

We have seen plenty of wild life as we hike over its trails, deer, skunks, raccoon and other small animals, while lizards are in every nook, and some of the most beautiful birds. Eagles and hawks are frequently seen.

A guide is provided on the train who certainly is possessed of a fund of humor, for when we came into view of San Quintin Prison, far down the dizzy heights, he pointed it out as "Uncle Sam's Health Resort; nothing to pay. It is easy to get into it, but some have taken 40 years to get out of it."

The $75,000.00 residence of the owner of the railway was also pointed out, and, said the guide, "If I had that amount of money I wouldn't place it on a rock."

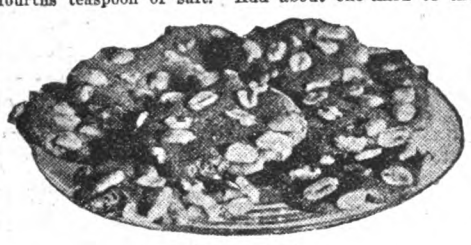
(CONTINUED ON PAGE 16.)

Comfort Sisters' Recipes

THE fact that cooking is regarded as an art, and a fine and worthy one, makes it proper for poetry to be mixed with recipes. Those able to have the regular old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner, with turkey 'n' everything, will have less need, perhaps, of the poem printed below than the rest of us who have to content ourselves with simpler (and much less expensive) fare but with not as good grace as we should when we take more worth-while things into consideration.—Ed.

There is no hearth so bleak and bare
But Heaven hath sent some blessings there;
No table e'er so sparsely spread
But that a grace should there be said;

No life but knows some moment blest
Of sweet contentment and of rest;
No heart so cold but Heaven above
Hath touched it with the warmth of love.



So count your blessings, one by one,
At early morn and set of sun,
And, like an incense, to the skies
Your prayers of thankfulness shall rise.

Look for the love that Heaven sends,
The good that every soul intends;
Thus you will learn the only way
To keep a true Thanksgiving Day.

—Arthur Lewis Tubbs.

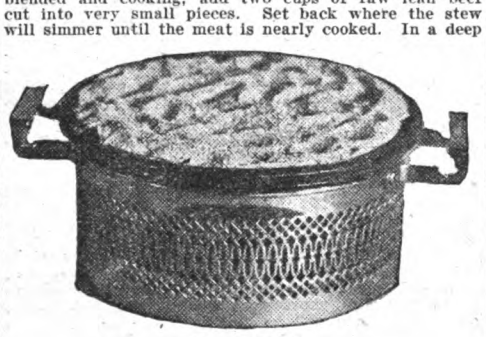
MOCK TURKEY.—Buy a fresh shoulder of pork, with bone removed. Wash well and dry. Make a stuffing of three cups of bread-crumbs, one teaspoon of salt, two teaspoons poultry seasoning, one teaspoon sage, one chopped onion, one tablespoon bacon fat with enough hot milk to make it of proper consistency. Stuff as you would a turkey, and tie. Put in pan, sprinkle well with flour and add one pint and a half of water. Baste often.

PEANUT COOKIES.—Cream together one cup of sugar and one-half cup of shortening, add one well-beaten egg. Sift together two cups of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon of soda, and three-fourths teaspoon of salt. Add about one-third of the flour to the butter mixture, and then add one tablespoon of milk, and so on until all the flour is used and just enough milk to make the dough the right consistency to drop by teaspoonfuls onto a greased baking dish. Lastly add one cup of roasted peanuts from which the brown skins have been rubbed. The peanuts may be crushed or used in halves.

PEANUT COOKIES.

ROAST PIG.—Requested. The pig should be three weeks old, well cleaned, and stuffed with a dressing of this proportion: Two large onions, four times the quantity of bread-crumbs, three tablespoons of chopped sage, two ounces of butter, half a saltspoon of pepper, one saltspoon of salt, and one egg. Or it may be filled with a veal force-meat stuffing if preferred; or it may be stuffed with hot mashed potatoes. Sew it together with a strong thread, trussing its fore legs forward and its hind legs backward. Rub the pig with flour, pepper and salt. Roast it at first with a very slow fire, as it should be thoroughly done; the oven should not be too hot at first. Baste it very often. When done (in about three hours) place a lemon in the mouth, having put something in at first to keep it open. Serve it with apple sauce.

STEWED POTATOES.—One pint of cold boiled potatoes cut in bits; one cup of milk, butter the size of an egg, a heaping teaspoon of flour. Melt the butter in a saucepan, add the flour, and cook a moment; then add the milk, an even teaspoon of salt, and a saltspoon of white pepper. When it boils, add the potatoes. Boil a minute and serve.



STUFFED POTATOES.—Take medium-sized, newly-baked potatoes and cutting off one end of each, remove the contents. Mash the potato with butter, salt and pepper to season. Fill the potato shells heaping with the mixture and return to the oven to brown.

SCALLOPED RICE.—Boil one-half cup of rice till tender. Place the rice in a buttered pudding dish, and pour over it a white sauce, made with a cup and a half of hot milk, one tablespoon of butter, and one tablespoon of flour, cooked till it is perfectly smooth. Season highly with pepper, salt and mustard. Mix two-thirds of a cup of cracker-crumbs with one-fourth of a cup of melted butter, and sprinkle over the top. Bake till the crumbs are brown.

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP.—In a saucepan melt three tablespoons butter and to it add three and one-half tablespoons flour; stir to a smooth paste, then add two cups canned tomatoes, gradually blending with the flour mixture; now add one-fourth teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt ond a slice of onion. Return to the fire and cook five minutes; strain and cool. When cold add one and one-half cups cold milk, heat and serve.

POTATO SOUP.—Two tablespoons bacon fat, two tablespoons flour, two slices onion, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon celery salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, sprinkling paprika, one teaspoon chopped parsley, three cups milk, three potatoes rubbed through strainer. Cook first eight ingredients together in double boiler. To these add milk and potato mixed together, and stir until all boils.

TOMALE PIE.—Put five tablespoons of beef fat into a saucepan, add two medium-sized carrots sliced thin, one sliced onion, one-half of a green pepper, a small piece of bay leaf, a sprig of parsley, and a sprinkling of thyme. Cook until carrots and onion are slightly browned, stirring constantly. Gradually add five tablespoons of flour, taking care it does not burn. When well browned, slowly add one and one-fourth cup of water, one can of tomatoes from which the water has been drained, five whole peppercorns, a pinch of chili powder, paprika, salt and pepper to taste. When well blended and cooking, add two cups of raw lean beef cut into very small pieces. Set back where the stew will simmer until the meat is nearly cooked. In a deep pudding dish put a layer of quite stiff corn-meal mush, add the cooked stew, and cover with another layer of mush. Bake thirty minutes in a hot oven. Being a Mexican dish, it is highly seasoned, but it is also delicious with less spice.

TOMALE PIE.

CREAMED SALMON.—Make a cream soup of two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of flour and one cup of milk. Into this put the contents of a can of salmon, free from bones, skin and fat; heat thoroughly, season with salt and pepper, add two eggs beaten. Stir constantly till eggs are cooked and serve at once.—MRS. HATFIELD, Manchester, N. H.

ORANGE SALAD.—Cut six oranges in thin slices. Cover with dressing made by mixing one-quarter cup olive oil with one tablespoon each of lemon juice and vinegar, a little salt and paprika. Serve on lettuce.

Flavory Flakes

Without a fancy price

That's the reason for specifying Quaker Oats, and making sure you get it.

These are quality flakes, fragrant and flavory, without any mixture of others.

These are just the cream of the oats.

They have won supreme place the world over, and have held it for decades.

Millions of oat lovers send over seas to get them.

Even in the British Isles—the home of Scotch oats—Quaker is the leading brand.

The oat dish is the greatest food you serve.

Make it delightful to the children who need it most.

You will get this grade if you ask for Quaker, and without any fancy price.

Quaker Oats

The Queen Grains Only

This brand is flaked from queen grains only—just the rich, plump, flavory oats. We get but ten pounds from a bushel.

This selection and our process give this delicious flavor.

Be sure you always get it.

60 Dishes for 30 Cents

Packed in sealed round packages with removable cover

Love will find the way

"June, what are you saying?"

Through the maze of dancers they circled down the room.

"She is finishing with him the waltz which she began with me."

by Wenona Gilman

Copyright, 1898, by George Monroe.
Serial Rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Junius Beckwith, a Westpointer, Anne Gordon, wealthy, Marian Reade, companion, friend and protegee of Anne Gordon, occupy a box at the Metropolitan Opera House. The curtain falls and Beckwith admits that "Lucia di Lammermore" has a depressing influence upon him and he cannot think of insanity without repulsion, no matter what the cause may be, and a marriage with either tainted, should be made a crime punishable by law. The next morning is Marian's birthday and deciding to go home, Anne Gordon, with a premonition that she ought to stay, exacts a promise, if any trouble comes, Marian will let her know first. Marian walks away and turning the corner meets June Beckwith and they go to the park. Remembering it is her birthday, he offers his love as a gift and asks her to be his wife. Happy in her love for June, Marian reaches home. Janet Reade, her grandmother, tells her that her mother is not dead but the inmate of a madhouse. What can she say to June? Hearing a voice, she answers to her father's call. He gives her a curious Venetian ring for a birthday gift, and questioning him where he got it he evades the answer and queries what Anne Gordon gives her. Showing the watch, her father berates Marian's friend. She might have given one thousand dollars, which he needs and will have. Marian, under the horror of all she hears, forgets all her grandmother told her, even forgets June Beckwith. Later in the night, remembering her promise to Anne Gordon, she goes to her home. A light flashed from a window opposite shows a rope hung from Anne Gordon's window and in the window her father's face. Reaching home, Marian meets her father, tells him where he has been, and for no honest purpose, and demands that he return all he has stolen. He refuses, and only after her earnest pleading does he ask what she will do for him. Little dreaming the price she must pay, she asks for nothing but to serve him and she seals the promise upon her mother's Bible. Left alone, Paul Reade decides to keep one ring. Marian writes June she does not love him and that her soul is withered as much as the flower she encloses. Her father assures her he has obtained a position in the brokerage business and rented a house down town. June is stunned upon receiving Marian's letter and welcomes his friend, Fred Underwood, who tells him Paul Reade is a most unscrupulous gambler and the house he has rented is a decoy for gamblers, that Marian is not as innocent as she appears. June cannot believe it, and Underwood will prove it to him if he cares to go.

CHAPTER IX.

ANNE GORDON HEARS THE TRUTH.

ALL day long the decorators and caterers had been busy in the new house into which Paul Reade had moved with his mother and beautiful daughter.

It was really a beautiful place, not representing so great an outlay of money as it did artistic taste and careful blending of coloring. Paul Reade was giving an entertainment, to open it, under the very modest name of "house-warming"; but no swell social event was ever more carefully considered and arranged.

The florist had contributed his best work, and the flowers that banked the mantels and decorated the rooms were such as a many-times millionaire might have been proud to display. The restaurateur had assured his patron of his best viands, and the table, already arranged in the great hall, gave assurance that his word would be kept.

"It is exquisite," said Marian, as she gazed dreamily over the scene. "In all my life I have never seen a ballroom that surpassed it. But who is paying for it? Where has my father obtained this money? Oh, heavens! If I could but trust him. If I could but be sure that it is all honestly obtained, there might be some comfort in seeing him so happy, but I cannot—I cannot!"

A little groan escaped her there in the heart of a scene that might have thrilled another girl to the very soul. Her father was standing not far away and heard the sound. An expression of annoyance crossed his countenance, but it had vanished by the time he had reached her side.

"Isn't it beautiful?" he asked. "Is there a suggestion that you can make that would improve anything?"

"It is all perfect," she answered wearily.

"That is it. It is perfect. When the house is lighted tonight it will seem that the lamp of Aladdin is indeed shining upon us. But there is nothing in it all half so pretty as my girl will be. Has the costume come home yet?"

"Yes. But, oh, father——"

"Now, my dear, don't preach, but tell me; is it pretty? Does it fit?"

"It is exquisite; but, father, where did you get it?" she cried out desperately. "I may be wrong, but I can't help it. It all—frightens me!"

"It need not. I tell you that I have made a mint of money in stocks. Just at the moment when I had despaired, the rise came. It went like the cry of the college boys—'Sis! Boom! Rah!' I may lose all tomorrow that I have made, but we will enjoy it while we can, Marian. You deserve it, my girl. You have been very good and very patient with the old dad."

He turned away and left her standing there among the flowers. His little exhibition of emotion was not without effect, for she looked after him with something like a tear in her eye.

"Perhaps I am wrong," she said, with a sob that she could not quite conquer. "Perhaps I am wrong, and it may be all as he says. Because he has erred once is no reason why he should never be honest. I am wicked and unforgiving. I will trust him. Oh, I—I wish he had not given this thing. I don't know the people whom he has invited. He says that they are always willing enough to attend an entertainment of any kind where they are assured of good food and better wine. Heaven knows, there will be enough of it here tonight."

"Oh, how I wish that I could escape it all. But that is hopeless. And at least I shall have Anne Gordon to help me. Thank Heaven for that. It is time that I was dressing. I hope that Anne will be here soon. It seems a terrible thing that she should come here in the jewels that my father stole. But it was she herself who proposed it, and I could not decline. Dear Anne, how good she has always been to me!"

She turned away from a contemplation of the brilliant flowers, the weakness and sickness of her heart but too apparent in the lagging step, and went up-stairs.

Almost at the same moment that she did so, a servant handed Anne Gordon June Beckwith's card. It was the first time he had called upon her since the night of the opera, and without taking time to rearrange her toilet, she ran downstairs.

"I am glad to see you!" she exclaimed cordially. "You have absolutely deserted me of late!"

"I have been out of town upon some important business," he answered, his pale face flushing a trifle.

"And working yourself to death!" she cried, looking him over critically. "Why, you look as if you had had a spell of illness. I hope it is nothing serious?"

"Not at all. I have been a little troubled with insomnia. It sounds like the disease of a nervous girl, does it not? But it is all over now. It is good to see you again. Let me see! I have been gone nearly two weeks."

"You have not been in New York all that time?"

"No."

"Then you have not heard the news?"

"What news?"

"Why, about Marian Reade."

His heart seemed to close with a sudden snap. He pressed his hand upon it, and an ashen pallor grew about his lips, but he forced it back, and in a tone that sounded more natural than he would have believed possible, he asked:

"What is it?"

"Oh, something lovely. I am surprised that you you have not heard. Why, her father has made almost a fortune in stocks."

"In what?"

"Stocks."

"What stocks?"

"I don't know. I did not ask her. The fact is, I don't believe she knew or she would have mentioned it, and I never thought of it."

"The market has been singularly steady of late."

He said the words almost without being conscious of having spoken them, but there was no suspicion in Anne Gordon.

"Oh, but it's quite true!" she exclaimed, with genuine pleasure. "He has made the money. He has rented a beautiful house, and is giving what he calls a 'house-warming' tonight, but in reality it is a very gorgeous ball. Did not Marian send you cards?"

"No," he answered curiously. "Did she send them to you?"

"Oh, no; not formally, you know. We are too intimate for that. She did not come for some time, and one day, in desperation, I ran up to Harlem. I found them in great confusion, moving. Marian was just going down to the new house, and I went with her. I have been there several times watching how things were progressing, and—well, I half-believe I invited myself to that affair tonight. I am going to help Marian receive."

"You are going to—what?"

"Help her receive. It is very singular that she has not asked you. She always seemed to like you."

"And she is happy in this new life of hers?"

He asked the question so strangely that it seemed to set her thinking. She looked beyond him, out into the gloaming, and answered:

"I don't know. It rather puzzles me. She flits about like a bird, directing the arrangement of this and that; she laughs and sings, and declares that it is all too beautiful to last; but—I don't exactly understand it, June. It impresses me as the hysterical cry of a half-breaking heart; and you know that is so unlike Marian."

"It is unlike her," he answered, with a little sneer; "very unlike her. It is my belief that she has no heart to break."

"June, what are you saying?"

"The truth. She is not honest; she is not sincere. You have promised her that you will go to this affair that she is giving tonight. Anne, you have neither father nor brother to guide you. You and your mother are alone in the world; and while you have relatives that have stronger claims upon your obedience than I—I, who am your friend, should be committing an error did I not forbid your going to that house tonight; not tonight alone, but ever again."

"June, you must be mad!"

She had risen suddenly, and was looking down upon him, startled, indignant. He rose and looked into her eyes with determination.

"It is true," he cried. "I forbid your going there."

"But she is my friend—my sister. I like and respect you, I even value the interest in me which your words prove, but you must give me some reason."

"I cannot."

"Then you must not expect me to obey. Your words require an explanation, June. It is neither manly nor just that you should refuse it. As a friend you have forbidden me to enter the house of an older friend. I think I have a right to demand your reasons."

His eyes fell and a quick flush suffused his cheeks, but he lifted them almost desperately at last, and cried out hurriedly and huskily:

"So be it, then! Do you know why Marian Reade did not ask you to be present tonight? Do you know why the expression of a desire to be there had to come from you? Listen, and I will tell you, though it hurts me bad enough to speak the horrible truth. It is because Marian Reade uttered a falsehood to you when she told you that her father had obtained his money through a rise in stocks. He obtained it of Dick Gresham, a bookmaker, a gambler!"

"June!"

"Do you think I would repeat this to you if I did not know that I am speaking the truth? He made Paul Reade an offer long ago that if he would secure the consent of his pretty daughter to go into the house to entertain the people, he would advance all the funds for the enterprise that might be required."

"And she——"

"Has consented."

"Mercy! you don't mean that——"

"Marian Reade is a decoy for gamblers of the worst and lowest class? I do! It is pitiably, cruelly true. If you should go there tonight, you would see no one present but gamblers."

"I cannot believe it. There must be some mistake."

"I tell you there is none!" Beckwith answered bitterly. "Dick Gresham told me the story himself. The ball tonight is to introduce Marian to gamblers and those who can be of future benefit to her father. I would not hesitate to go there tonight, without an invitation. There is no doubt of the truth of it all, Anne. It is cruelly, hideously true."

Tears arose in her eyes, and her lip quivered. She was striving heroically to control herself, and he saw it. He put out his hand and pressed hers passionately. There seemed a bond of sympathy between them. He almost loved her at that moment because she suffered.

CHAPTER X.

PAUL READE'S NEW HOME.

There was a clash of music, the glitter of electric lights seen through brilliant-hued flowers, and the sound of laughter in the rooms of the house that Paul Reade called his home.

It was not the low, musical laughter of women who govern the world by their beauty and grace of manner; it was not the gentle, soothing tones of the woman who reaches the heart of man through the reason that guides his soul, but the sound was like the wild revelry of the bacchantes in infernal glee over the destruction of a life. It was a hoarse laughter, a laughter that seemed as if it were struggling through a heavy mist of champagne.

And Marian Reade, in her exquisite gown of palest shimmering green, looked on with a feeling of startled bewilderment. Even while she was surrounded with those women in their gay costumes, she felt herself somehow to be apart from them. They were not her friends; they were not, and never could be, a part of her life.

It was all so strange and mysterious to her, this scene with which she was encompassed. There was nothing in the conversation of those present to which the most innocent might not have listened; there was nothing in their dress that she had not seen in the ballrooms of the friends to whom Anne Gordon had presented her; and yet there was that about these people that separated them from those others as far as the earth and heaven are separated.

And in the midst of that strange gathering, well-gowned and handsome as they undeniably were, Marian Reade stood, lifting her exquisite head like the pure lily that is stifled as it endeavors to breathe the hot air of the charnel-house. The atmosphere about her seemed fetid with the odors of death—the death of virtue, the death of chastity, the death of life and the soul.

There was one in attendance—a tall, blond man, who leaned upon the mantel-shelf, apart from the rest, and looked at her. There was a curious expression in his eyes—the expression of a man who is fascinated by the fatal peril that he watches, powerless to avert. It was June Beckwith's friend, Fred Underwood.

He stood there, silently regarding it all, watching the faces of the men who approached her, turning half-way sometimes in sickened disgust as he caught the expression of some world-weary, blase reprobate whose eyes had lighted with almost gluttonous pleasure as they fell upon her singularly beautiful countenance. And there beside her was Paul Reade, like the deadly upas that sheltered her from the scorching heat of the sun, one not less fatal than the other.

When he could conquer his repugnance, he went up to Paul Reade and asked to be presented to his daughter. The request was granted, and offering the girl his arm, Underwood led her to a remote part of the room.

"You look tired," he said gently, feeling a curious interest in the girl which he could not conquer. "If it were not too absurd, I should say that you look—frightened!"

She glanced at him in a nervous, startled sort of way, and then laughed.

"No," she said, with an affectation of lightness that she was far from feeling; "I am not tired and I am not frightened. Why should I be? It is beautiful enough, is it not?"

"Then you are quite happy?"

He asked the question in a dull, strained voice; but she did not look at him. She was striving with all her might to conceal her terror, and answered hysterically:

"Happy? Of course I am! Who would not be who had such a sudden change in their lives as I? Perhaps I look a little out of place because I am not acquainted with these people, but I shall be by and by. Oh, I shall be one of them before they are aware of it!"

A cynical smile crossed his mouth.

"And I suppose that represents perfection to you?" he exclaimed.

She glanced away from him. There was something in his tone that curiously impressed her. She was striving to close her ears to it all, as she had striven to close her senses to her surroundings. She wanted to escape him; but as her eyes sought the door in an endeavor to do so, she shrunk back toward him, her face grew pale as death, and a little frozen cry that scarcely reached the atmosphere escaped her.

Underwood followed the direction of her eye.

It was June Beckwith who was entering the door.

He was in his regulation evening-suit; there was a huge chrysanthemum in his lapel. His face was flushed to an unusual degree, and upon his lips there rested a smile that Underwood had never seen there before. It was a wild, cynical, hysterical smile, that deepened as he caught sight of his friend and his companion.

He came straight toward them, and Marian, standing there rigid as iron, was forced to give him her hand as he extended his own.

CHAPTER XI.

THE UNBIDDEN GUEST.

Fred Underwood looked from June Beckwith to Marian Reade, and from Marian Reade back again.

The expression of his friend's face startled him. He could not quite make up his mind why June had come there, and he did not know what the look portended. There was a feeling in the man's heart for Marian which he could not analyze.

He believed that she knew perfectly well the character of the men and women who surrounded her; he believed that she knew why she had been introduced to such society, and he believed that she had consented to the life of shame that was about to engulf her, and yet there was a certain sympathy for her in his soul that he could not overcome.

She seemed so little a part of that gathering; there was something so different in the very atmosphere that she breathed; and then there was that in her face that he could not translate.

He sighed a little and leaned against the window-casing, watching those two, glad that he had come, in order that he might be near June to save him from any rash act that he might commit.

"I did not expect to see you here," June exclaimed to him.

"Nor I you."

"I was not bidden to the feast," answered Beckwith, almost insolently; "I am but the bearer of a message to Miss Reade."

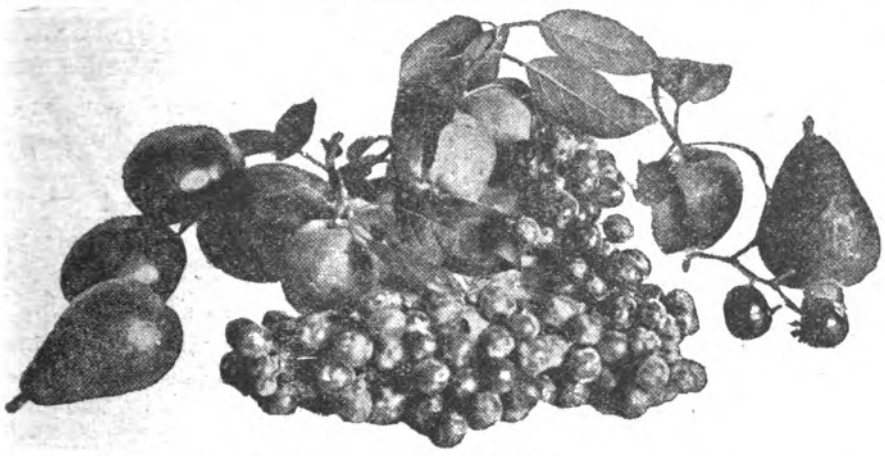
"Indeed!" stammered the girl. "From whom?"

"Miss Gordon. She bade me tell you that she could not be with you tonight, a misfortune which she deeply regretted, and that she desired you to come to call on her tomorrow for luncheon."

Marian seemed to breathe more freely. It seemed to her that a great weight had been lifted from her heart, now that she knew Anne Gordon would not be there to mingle with the throng. She could not have explained the feeling, and yet it was perfectly apparent to Underwood's watchful eye. It but convinced him the more that she knew the class with whom she was associated. But he was aroused from his reflections by hearing June Beckwith say:

"And now that I have played my part as messenger-boy, surely you are not going to send me away without my seeing a little of the feast? The orchestra is playing a divine waltz. Won't you allow me a turn, Miss Reade, even though I am a self-invited guest?"

He laughed a trifle loudly at his own words, and Marian colored painfully. Underwood saw and interposed.



"She is tired, June," he exclaimed. "I brought her over here in this deserted corner to give her a little rest. Let her alone, you selfish wretch!"

"Tired? How is that possible? Women never tire when they are adding new laurels to their crowns. There is something of the savage in the best woman that ever was created. She is never so happy as when she dangles a new scalp at her belt. Come, Miss Reade; I am sure you will not refuse me one waltz?"

He held out his arms to her; there was a mocking smile upon his lips; his eyes glittered with a curious light that she had never seen in them before; but still it was June—June, the man she loved; June, the man who was all the world to her.

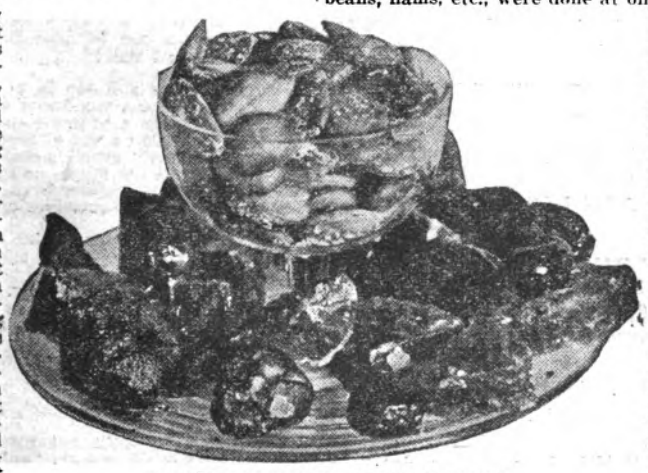
She shut her eyes very closely for just a moment. Her head was spinning around as if she were under the influence of champagne. She had seen his arms extended to her, and the temptation was too strong to be resisted.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)

THE FIRST NEW ENGLAND HARVEST THANKSGIVING

By Violet Marsh

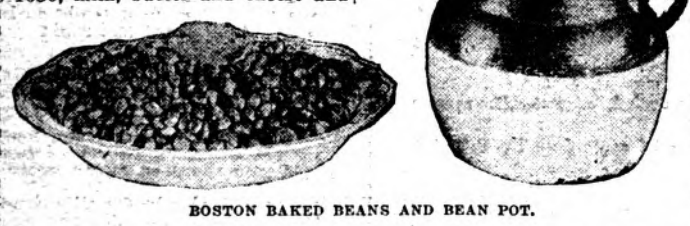
Pilgrim Methods in Modern Cookery



IN many an old New England home there still stands the massive chimney with its great hearth over which swung the long iron crane which in turn supported varying lengths of adjusted pot hooks and trammels from which were suspended kettles and other cooking utensils. It was around these great glowing fireplaces that all the homeliness and comfort of an early New England home centered. On either side were settles and chimney seats. One great general room of all works was the usual manner of building before the days of pantries and closets, and so in the hearth corners were displayed the Dutch oven for baking "rye'n' Injun bread, the iron bake-kettle standing on three short legs with its tight-fitting hollow cover for holding hot coals. The spider for frying, and the gridiron for broiling, were in daily use. Like the bake-kettle, the gridiron stood on legs and was set over the coals. It was oblong and the upper surface of the crossbars was concave to catch the drippings from the meat that they might be saved. As it broiled, the meat or fish was turned. The skillet and trivet also belong to early cookery. The skillet is deep and nearly straight sided while the trivet is nearly the same in shape but stands on three legs; both have a long handle. These were often used together when a hot water jacket was desired after the fashion of a double boiler. The use of charcoal or coke for broiling in our cooking ranges is the nearest approach we have to the open-hearth broilers, which for texture and flavor has never been equaled.

FRIED CORN-MEAL MUSH.

Roasted meats, such as wild turkeys and venison, were suspended from a stout cord over a bed of coals, deep and hot enough to last through the entire roasting. The cord was twisted and retwisted by a simple contrivance, so that during the roasting as it slowly untwisted, all parts of the meat were uniformly cooked. A kettle was suspended to catch the drippings from the frequent bastings of fat and hot water which each time grew richer.



The first New England harvest Thanksgiving was celebrated in Plymouth in 1621, and covered a period of several days which were spent in feasting and various forms of recreation. Deer, wild turkeys and waterfowl were found in plenty. "Though there were but fifty-five English to eat the Pilgrim Thanksgiving feast, there were partakers in plenty; and the ninety sociable Indian visitors did not come empty-handed, but joined fraternally in provision for the feast and probably also in the games."

CANDIED FRUITS AND SALTED ALMONDS.

In the small colony were only four women, "who, with the help of one servant and a few young girls, had to prepare and cook food for three days for one hundred and twenty hungry men, ninety-one of them being Indians with an unbounded capacity for gluttonous gorging unsurpassed by any other race. Doubtless the deer, and possibly the great turkeys, were roasted in the open air. The picture of that Thanksgiving, the blockhouse with its few cannon, the Pilgrim men in buff breeches, red waistcoats, and green or sad-colored mandillions; the great company of Indians, gay in holiday paint and feathers and furs; the few sad, overworked, homesick women, in worn and simple gowns, with plain coifs and kerchiefs, and the pathetic handful of little children, forms a keen contrast to the prosperous, cheerful Thanksgiving of a century later."

As early as 1630, milk, butter and cheese and such garden staples as beans, corn, pumpkins, squash, turnips, parsnips peas and onions were available in abundance.

BOSTON BAKED BEANS AND BEAN POT.

The Indians early taught the Pilgrims to make use of the pumpkins, which at times proved a great blessing until the corn and cattle increased. The Indians cut and dried the pumpkins on strings for winter use, as it is still done in New England farm communities. Pumpkin bread was generally eaten, and to this day is by no means an uncommon dish. It took the Pilgrims considerable time to adapt themselves to so extensive a use of pumpkins, but in time they were much liked and appreciated, particularly the "Sause," for which a two-centuries-old recipe is given as follows: "The Housewives' manner is to slice them when ripe and cut them into Dice, and so fill a pot with them of two or three Gallons and stew them upon a gentle fire a whole day. And as they sink they fill again with fresh Pompions [old name for pumpkin] not putting any liquor to them, and when it is stir'd enough it will look like bak'd Apples. This Dish putting Butter to it and a little Vinegar with some Spice as Ginger which makes it tart like an Apple, and so serve it up to be eaten with fish or flesh."

In Indian corn (also called "Guinny wheat") the early colonists found their most unfailing food supply. Its abundance and adaptability did much to save them from starvation. The Indians taught them how to plant and fertilize, and how to harvest, grind and cook the corn in many acceptable ways. The Indian pudding was boiled in a bag, a way of cooking that is still in common use. Indian meal mush was given the name of hasty-pudding which has always been retained. Roasting ears of green corn were a part of Indian feasts, but I find no mention of or significance attached to the "red ear." The hoe-cakes and ash-cakes were made by the squaws long before Pilgrim days. When we consider how commonly corn is popped and sold on street corners, and how familiar it is to every boy and girl, it is interesting to note the description of an early settler, who says: "When corn is parched it turns entirely inside out, and is white and floury within."

Due to the fact that nothing could be wasted, and often through lack of cooking and serving dishes, boiling a variety of foods together became a feature of Pilgrim cookery, from which, no doubt, have been handed down the New England boiled dinner, our rich stews and other one-dish meals. Corn and beans cooked with fowl and called succotash, as well as the art of baking beans in ashes, were dishes which the Indians taught the Pilgrims how to prepare.

How many of the essential principles of Pilgrim cookery have been handed down through generations of New England families, and thus spread throughout the whole nation, is of especial interest as the day on which we celebrate Thanksgiving approaches. Of later date is the brick oven where the week's baking of bread, pies, beans, hams, etc., were done at one time. It took many hours to heat the oven and "baking day" was no small event. In many old New England homes these brick ovens are still brought into use on special occasions, especially for Thanksgiving. The expression "apple-pie order" is said to be associated with these famous New England baking days. The story follows that a certain Puritan dame made it a practice to bake on Saturdays two or three dozen pies, which were to last the family throughout the week. She would place them on her pantry shelves, labeling each according to the day of the week on which it was to be eaten. Her pantry was then in "apple-pie order."

Preserving and candying fruits amounted to a profession among the Colonial women.

Candied Fruits

Where a confection is desired following a rich meal, it is safer to serve candied fruits. They are easily prepared, attractive and delicious. Use canned fruits from your own shelves, taking care to use only firm pieces, otherwise the confection will not retain its shape, and will become mushy in the syrup. No flavoring is necessary as the fruit itself provides this. Pineapple, cherries, peaches, quince and pears are "sure" fruits to candy and quite the most satisfactory.

CHERRIES.—Drain the fruit and carefully wipe each cherry. Measure the juice and to each cup add two cups of granulated sugar. Boil to a thick syrup without stirring after the sugar is dissolved, watching it carefully. Add the cherries, slowly simmer about twelve minutes, remove from the fire and set away for twenty-four hours. Carefully drain off the syrup, boil for five minutes and pour it over the cherries. Repeat this process twice again, allowing the cherries each time to stand twenty-four hours. The syrup is next boiled until a little dropped in water will become brittle. Remove from fire at once, drop in the cherries and set the kettle into a pan of hot water. When the cherries appear well soaked and coated with the syrup, carefully remove them to a board covered with paraffin paper and dry. Many string cherries on a thread and hang them to dry.

CANDIED PEACHES.—Select even halves and cut them in two or three parts. Wipe. Peaches are are not cooked in the syrup. To each cup of peach juice add two cups of granulated sugar, and cooked until it "threads" very freely from the spoon. Set into a pan of hot water and hold to the boiling point. Carefully place the peaches in the syrup and let stand one hour. Remove, placing on a wire sieve, and dry in a gentle heat either suspended over the stove or in the mouth of the oven. If necessary, boil the syrup again and dip peaches, which should have a dry candied surface.

CANDIED PEARS AND QUINCE.—Follow directions for candied peaches.

CANDIED PINEAPPLE.—Drain sliced pineapple and dry. To each cup of juice add one cup of sugar and boil until it "feathers." Drop in the pineapple which has been cut into eighths, and when the syrup has slightly cooled take out each piece with a hat pin and place on a wire sieve to dry.

CANDIED CARROTS.—Select small tender carrots. Pare and cut into rather thin slices lengthways. Barely cover with water, and to each cup add one cup of brown sugar, a pinch of cinnamon, a dash of cayenne pepper, a little grated lemon rind and juice. Cover, and when the whole is cooking and the sugar dissolved, remove the cover and cook until the liquid is nearly evaporated. Baste frequently. Carefully remove carrot to serving dish and pour over the candied syrup.

Old-Time Dishes

BOSTON BAKED BEANS.—While baking beans the water must never get below the surface of the beans, for if this occurs even once, the quality of the finished dish will not be quite up to the standard. If baked beans are liked with a small amount of juice, cook the last addition of water slowly down. Soak beans in cold water over night and parboil early the next morning until blowing on a spoonful will cause the skins to slightly crack. Drain. In the bottom of a small stone crock, or earthen beanpot, put two tablespoons of molasses and two of sugar, one level teaspoon of salt, and one-fourth pound of clean salt pork to each quart of unsoaked beans, then add the beans, which should not fill the pot more than three-fourths full. Cover with boiling water, adding more as it disappears, and slowly bake from ten to twelve hours. A teaspoon of mustard and a small whole onion, or a cup of strained tomato, are flavors liked by many.

VEGETABLE SOUP.—Four carrots, four onions, two turnips, one bunch of celery and two white potatoes cut into fine pieces. Add boiling water until it is two inches above the top of vegetables. When cooked soft, season with salt, pepper, a pinch of mace and two cups of strained tomato. Melt four tablespoons of butter in a saucepan and rub in four even tablespoons of dry flour, and when smooth and bubbling add a pint of the soup stock. Cook for five minutes and add to soup. Just before serving beat in half a cup of cream.

PUMPKIN PIE.—Cut the pumpkin into small pieces after it is pared and the center taken out. Put into a deep kettle with enough water to prevent burning until the pumpkin juices start. Stir frequently and cook over a low fire, as it catches easily after softening. The long slow cooking develops a rich flavor, and it is much better to cook the pumpkin nearly dry before putting it into pies than to add flour to thicken. To each cup of hot stewed pumpkin add one even tablespoon of butter, half a teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of molasses, half a teaspoon each of ginger and cinnamon, a little nutmeg and the grated rind of half a lemon. Beat well. Beat two eggs slightly with four tablespoons of sugar, add one cup of boiling hot milk, and stir well into the pumpkin mixture. Pour into deep pie plate lined with pastry. Bake in a moderate oven one hour or longer.

PUMPKIN OMELET.—One cup of pumpkin stewed the same as for pie filling, one teaspoon of molasses, three teaspoons of sugar, a pinch each of cinnamon, and nutmeg, pepper and salt, two well-beaten eggs and one-half cup of milk all beaten together. Spread the mixture in a hot greased iron frying pan, and as soon as the mixture is lightly set on the bottom, set the pan in the oven and bake. Generously butter the top, fold once and serve. Delicious as a vegetable, or as a supper dish topped with whipped cream, or served with cheese.

FRIED CORN-MEAL MUSH.—When the salted water is boiling hard, stir in bolted corn meal previously wet with cold water as this prevents lumping. Do not make too stiff. Cook forty minutes and pour into greased round tins. Small coffee cans are useful for this purpose. The next morning slice and fry brown in a little chicken fat. Serve with syrup.

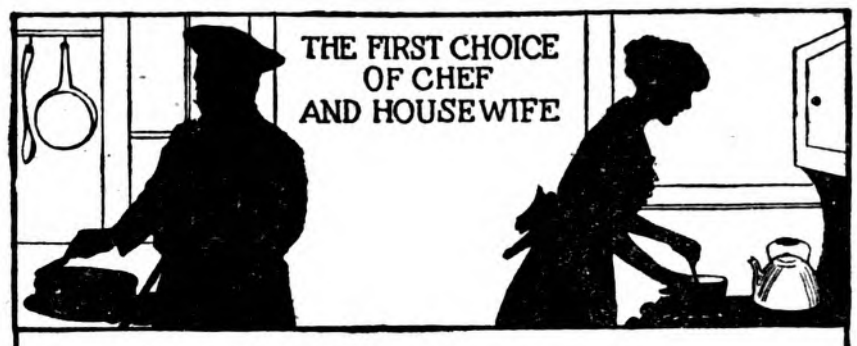
CORN-MEAL AND PUMPKIN DODGERS.—One and one-half cup of hot pumpkin that has been cooked dry and mashed fine. Add one and one-half cup of corn meal and allow to steam ten minutes, stirring frequently. Add three tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of brown sugar and one level teaspoon of salt. Mix thoroughly. The mixture should be just soft enough to take up by spoonfuls and pat into flat cakes in the hand. Bake in a hot oven twenty minutes.

Holiday Dainties

THANKSGIVING CAKE.—One cup of brown sugar creamed with one cup of butter until very fluffy. Add four eggs well beaten, two cups of good molasses, one cup of milk, one tablespoon of ginger, one-fourth teaspoon of cloves, one tablespoon of cinnamon and one teaspoon of grated nutmeg, and beat thoroughly together. Gradually add five cups of sifted flour, and then add two level teaspoons of soda dissolved in one tablespoon of water. Beat the mixture until smooth and fine grained. Have ready one cup each of clean raisins and currants, adding them to the dough after they are lightly floured. Put an inch layer of the dough into the baking pan, then add a layer of thinly-sliced citron, then more dough and citron until used. Bake one hour or more in a moderate oven. When done the cake will be well shrunken from sides of pan.

SALTED ALMONDS.—Pour boiling water over one pound of shelled almonds, and rub off the brown skins as soon as the water cools sufficiently to handle. Dry with a cloth. In a frying pan heat about five tablespoons of olive oil, and put in enough nuts to cover the bottom of the pan. Stir constantly until the nuts have slightly browned, then remove to brown paper and sprinkle with salt. Continue until the nuts are done. This amount of oil should brown all the almonds. Another way is to put the nuts and oil into a large biscuit tin, stir them until thoroughly coated, and bake brown in a hot oven, stirring frequently.

CRANBERRY CONSERVE.—Three pints of cranberries, three whole tart apples sliced thin, juice and pulp of one quince previously cooked in water to cover, or one glass of quince jelly, cooked with water enough to start the juices. When the apple is soft, put the fruit through a sieve. Add the grated rind and juice of two oranges and one lemon, two cups of washed seedless raisins, and three and one-half cups of sugar, or three cups if quince jelly is used. Simmer until thick. Delicious with fowl.



CRANBERRY JELLY.—Put three pints of cranberries through the food chopper, add three cups of granulated sugar, closely cover and cook ten minutes. Pour into a heated glass dish and set away to jelly.

MINCE-MEAT.—Two cups of fresh beef tongue or heart, measured after it is boiled and chopped, one and one-half cup of chopped beef suet, six cups of chopped apples that are tart and juicy, one and one-half cup of molasses, three and one-half cups of sugar, one cup of washed currants, one pound of seeded raisins, the grated rind and juice of one orange and two lemons, one-third cup of cider vinegar, one-half glass of currant or other rich jelly, one and one-half cup of sweet cider, one teaspoon of ground cloves, two teaspoons of nutmeg, three teaspoons of cinnamon, and the liquor added in which the meat was cooked after being boiled down to one cup. Stir and cook very slowly until the apple is done.

SPICED GRAPE JELLY.—Four quarts of stemmed grapes, one pint of vinegar, one rounded tablespoon of whole cloves and about four inches of stick cinnamon cooked until the grapes are soft. Strain through a jelly bag and boil hard twenty minutes. Add three pounds of sugar, boil five minutes and pour into hot glasses.

BAKED RICE AND GIBLETS.—Cook the giblets until well done and remove from liquor. Thicken the liquor with flour and butter rubbed together, and season with salt and pepper. Chop the giblets. Combine in the proportion of one cup of chopped giblets, two cups of cooked rice that has been seasoned, and two cups of gravy. Add finely-chopped celery, or green pepper if desired. Pour into a baking dish and cook in a hot oven twenty to thirty minutes.

BEET RELISH.—Chop one quart each of boiled beets and raw cabbage, add one cup of sugar, one-half cup of prepared horseradish, one-fourth teaspoon of cayenne pepper and cold vinegar to cover.

The Best Results are Obtained by Using

Baker's Chocolate

(Blue Wrapper, Yellow Label)

In making Cakes, Pies, Pudding, Frosting, Ice Cream, Sauces, Fudges, Hot and Cold Drinks

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

For more than 140 years this chocolate has been the standard for purity, delicacy of flavor, and uniform quality.

IT IS THOROUGHLY RELIABLE

57 Highest Awards in Europe and America

The trade-mark "La Belle Chocolatiere" on every genuine package

WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.

Established 1780

DORCHESTER MASSACHUSETTS

Booklet of Choice Recipes sent free on approval

Cubby Bear at a Mother-Goose Party

By Lena B. Ellingwood

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

INVITATIONS had gone far and wide for a party at Mamma Bruin's house—a party which was to have been a big surprise! Even Blue Bittern from the distant swamp had been asked (though he sent regrets), Flicker Yellowhammer from the dead maple tree in the meadow, and Policeman Bob Catt and Mrs. Catt from the West Forest.

For two days no one had been allowed to enter Mamma Bruin's house. It was understood that a visitor was there, but no one knew whom. Cubby Bear was out after wild flowers the day before the party, but would only smile and say nothing when questioned by his friends.

Mr. Wise Owl was a little vexed at this, for he had thought Cubby would answer any question of his.

"It is not polite just to grin when you are asked a civil question, Cubby Bear," said Wise Owl. "I taught you better manners than that at my school."

"Excuse me," said Cubby, "I do not mean to be rude, but the party would be no surprise to you all if I told about it now."

Curious Billy Bluejay went to Mamma Bruin's house, and rapped at the door.

Mamma Bruin opened the door just enough to look out, but did not invite Billy in.

"If you please, I would like to see how your chimney is made inside," he said. "Mine does not draw well, and I know you always have a good fire when it is cold."

"After the party, I shall be glad to let you examine it," said Mamma Bruin—and closed the door!

"So I didn't get in, after all!" said Billy to his friends, who were waiting around the corner. "And they even have the blinds closed."

"Oh, well," Redtop Woodpecker told him, "we have only to wait until nine o'clock tomorrow morning. I am glad the party is not to be in the afternoon, and if they were to have it in the evening, I really could not wait!"

By half-past eight next morning, the guests began to gather in Mamma Bruin's dooryard, but no one rapped at the door until the sunshine reached the nine o'clock mark on the alder tree.

Then Mamma Bruin opened the door, and greeted them with a smiling face. She wore her best white apron and a scarlet bow in her hair, and in one hand she carried a beautiful white goose-feather fan.

"A gift from my visitor," she explained, when Minnie Mink spoke of the fan. "Now come in, all of you, and be introduced."

The shutters were open wide, the house shone with cleanliness, and the air was sweet with wild flowers.

On the kitchen window-sill was a wide, clean board, covered with delicious-looking tarts, which had been set there to cool.

"Um—ah!" murmured Billy Bluejay. "I'd like to take a peck at one of those tarts right now!"

Then Grandma Bear, Cubby and the visitor appeared, coming out of Grandma's little room.

Mamma Bruin gracefully managed the introductions.

"My friend, Madam Goose," she said, "better known to the world as Mother Goose, a poetess famed far and wide."

Madam Goose stood, stately and smiling, looking at the little woods people through a pair of immense glasses.

"I'm charmed, I'm sure, to meet you all!
I hope you'll have a pleasant call,"

she said.

"Everyone has come but Policeman and Mrs. Bob Catt," said Cubby.

After they were all seated, Grandma Bear said: "Madam Goose has been kind enough to promise us rhymes for our party—a real Mother Goose party it is to be. Now, whom shall the first rhyme be about?"

"Cubby Bear!" said little Chirpy Chipmunk.

"Keep quiet while she thinks about it," whispered Grandma.

Mother Goose pressed her yellow claw upon her white brow for a moment, then said:

"Skippity, flippity, Cubby Bear!
In his caperings who can share?
Here he goes prancing,
And there he goes dancing;
Skippity, flippity, floppity, flare!"

Much to his surprise, Cubby Bear found himself capering about the room, gracefully skipping, bowing and gliding.

Wild applause followed.

"Could I have the next one?" asked Billy Bluejay.

Mother Goose was ready for him on the instant, and turned her bright eyes upon him as she said:

MADAM GOOSE, STATELY AND SMILING, LOOKED AT THE LITTLE WOODS PEOPLE THROUGH A PAIR OF IMMENSE GLASSES.

"Billy Bluejay, saucy fellow,
Flew up to the moon so yellow.
'Let me dwell in the moonlight mellow,'

To the moon-man said the jay.
But the moon-man deftly took him
By the top-knot, gaily shook him,
Shaked him roughly, snick-snack-snook him,
And his answer was: 'Nay, nay'!"

They all laughed at Billy, who blushed under his feathers, and whispered to Cubby, as he straightened his black cap-strap: "I've wanted to fly up to the moon, but I sha'n't try to, now!"

"Oh, but you couldn't, anyway!" Cubby answered. "It is far, far away! Too far for even Edric Eagle to reach."

"I like these Bunny Babies, so sweet, and white, and clean!" said Mother Goose, and picking up the smallest one, she crooned:

"By-lo, by-lo, Baby Bunny,
Pinky, perky ears so funny,
Little nosie all a-wriggle,
And your happy little giggle!
Steer for pleasant sleepy land,
Moor your boat upon its strand.
By-lo, by-lo, Baby Bun,
May your dreams be full of fun."

"Why, see!" exclaimed Cubby Bear wonderingly. "The Baby Bunny really went to sleepy-land while she sang to him!"

"How beautiful!" said Bunny Rabbit. "I wish I could remember that to sing to them."

"I will teach it to you," promised Mother Goose kindly. "Who would like the next rhyme?"

"I!" said Mr. Wise Owl, and stood before the goose, solemnly bowing, one claw on his heart.

"Owlie, Owlie, fly by night,
For 'tis then your eyes are bright!
Sleepy, stupid through the day,
Little use have you for play.
Owlie, Owlie, fly by night,
Put the scampering mice to flight."

Mr. Wise Owl bowed again, but his "Thank you," was in rather a sulky tone.

"I am not used to being called stupid," he confided to Wollie Woodchuck. "It is well known that owls have more brains than geese!"

"Tut, tut!" said Mother Goose, whose ears seemed wonderfully sharp, and she tapped Wise Owl's shoulder playfully. "Be cheery, and all will be well. Ill-humor is out of place at a Mother Goose party."

"Miss Tillie Turtle, she sat on a stump.
Of nice maple sugar she had a big lump.
But Woodpecker Redtop came swooping around;
He snatched at her sugar—it fell to the ground."

"Oh, that is like Miss Muffett!" cried Chirpy Chipmunk. "There was one about Jack and Jill, too. Will you please say that for us, Madam Goose?"

The white feathers of the stately fowl rumpled uneasily.

"I never wrote that Jack and Jill thing," she said. "I don't know how it ever got mixed up with my jingles. I hope I'd know better than to rhyme 'water' with 'after.' Why, here's Wollie Woodchuck! I hadn't noticed him before!

"Hark, hark! the dog does bark,
For Wollie has gone to the farm.
He'd like a nice turnip, or carrot, or two,
But never would do any harm."

"That old dog—I don't like him!" said Wollie.

"Oh, have you really been to the farm?" asked Mother Goose brightly.

"Bettie Badger bought some berries,
Berries Bettie bought.
Now if Bettie Badger bought some berries,
Bought some apples, nuts or cherries,
Did she eat them? Did she sell them?
Did she peel, or husk, or shell them?
Prithee, Bettie, prithee tell us
What it was you bought?"

"Here is Slimy Snail," said Cubby. "Do you think you could make a rhyme about him, Madam Goose?"

"I can make rhymes about anything—anything at all," said Mother Goose cheerfully.

"As quick as a rabbit,
As slow as a snail,
As sweet as a lark,
Or as queer as a quail.

"Now for your friend here:

"There was a crooked, curly snail,
He crawled a crooked mile;
But to travel such a distance
Took a weary, weary while.
And when the mile was ended,
He didn't like the place,
So turned and traveled back again
At just the same, slow pace."

"Have you made a rhyme about Mamma Bruin yet?" asked Bettie Badger.

"No, I haven't," replied Madam Goose.

"Good Mamma Bruin made some tarts
All on a summer's day;
But Foxy Reynard took those tarts,
And with them ran away."

They all laughed at that, but not one in that happy company saw a sly face peering in at them through the kitchen window. Certainly no one knew the thought in Foxy's mind. It was this: "If she wants me to take them, and says I took them, why, I will!"

"There was a Robin in our town,
And he was wondrous wise.
He flew into a bramble-bush
And caught a lot of flies.
And when the bramble flies were gone,
With all his might and main
He flew into another bush
Aud caught some flies again."

"I thought I heard the rumble of wheels!" said Tillie Turtle. "Can anyone be taking your babies' cart away, Bunny Rabbit?"

Bunny hurried to the window.

"Come, come, all of you!" he shouted. "The tarts are in the cart, and Foxy is running away with them!"

Everybody rushed out-of-doors.

"Follow him!"

"Catch him!"

But Foxy had a good start, and led them a merry chase.

"Dear, dear!" He'll get away with them!" chattered Chirpy Chipmunk, "and they looked so good!"

"Oh, look, look!" cried Busy Beaver. "Way past Foxy Reynard, coming around the hill! Policeman Bob Catt, and Mrs. Catt, coming to the party."

"Policeman Bob Catt!" called Billy Bluejay shrilly. "Catch Foxy Reynard! He is running off with Mamma Bruin's tarts!"

With the crowd behind him, and the Bob Catts before, Foxy saw that his only way of escape was to leave what he had stolen. So he dropped the handle of the little cart, and disappeared in the bushes—a fast-flying yellow streak.

"Shall I follow him?" called Bob Catt.

"No, let him go," answered Cubby Bear. "We only want the cart and the tarts."

Mr. and Mrs. Catt returned with the others to the party.

The tarts were delicious, and had not been hurt at all by their ride.

Madam Goose made rhymes for everyone, and the party ended happily.

When the guests were ready to leave, Mother Goose stepped forward and said:

"We've had a merry party,
And we'll give a parting cheer
To Mamma Bruin, Grandma Bear,
And little Cubby, here."

The cheering was hearty and long.

Then old Grandma Bear rose from her chair, and said in a chanting, sing-song voice:

"A vote of thanks we all extend
To our distinguished guest and friend.
'Tis Mother Goose whose rhyme and jest
Have made our party a success."

A tiny pebble will change the course of a great stream, and there are little things in our youth that have profound effects upon our manhood.

The best fortifications are a passionate energy for freedom and a flaming hate of oppression. Without these other defences are of little avail.

Not so much by taking thought does mankind advance as by trusting to the guidance of Nature who knows better than any sage how to obtain her ends.

CONTENTS

	Page
Editorial	2
By Proxy	3
What Hast Thou in Thine House?	3
Stella Rosevelt (continued)	4
Comfort Sisters' Corner and Recipes	5
Love Will Find the Way (continued)	6
The First New England Harvest Thanksgiving	7
Gubby Bear at a Mother-Goose Party	8
Comfort's League of Cousins	9
Thrill-Infusers (concluded)	10
The Pretty Girls' Club	11
The Painted Kid	14
Signs of Good Luck	14
Mother and Baby	16
Some New Charades for Thanksgiving	18
The Thanksgiving Raffle	19
Attractive Ways of Using Blanket Stitch	20
Worth-While Designs in Filet Crochet	21
Beads—Ancient and Modern	22
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps	23
A Practical Use of Early Ideas for Holiday Gifts	24
The Modern Farmer	25
Poultry Farming for Women	26
The Quest of Otter Pelts	27
Manners and Looks	29
Veterinary Information	30
Information Bureau	31
Four Wheel Chairs in October	32
Family Doctor	33
The Berry Family	33
Talks with Girls	35
Home Lawyer	37
The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities	39

All Subscriptions Cut Off At Expiration

All subscriptions will be cut short off on date of expiration, unless the subscriptions are renewed and paid for. Not even one copy will be sent, after expiration, until the subscription is renewed. If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 397, it means that this is the last copy of COMFORT you will receive, until you renew your subscription. DO IT TODAY.

DECEMBER COMFORT

Our fine Christmas number will issue early to bring holiday cheer and helpful hints for Christmas preparations. The following are some of the Special Features for December

"The Lady of the Rainbow House" A Christmas romance of uncommon tenderness with a very virile Santa Claus and a real Christmas Fairy.

"Our Neighbor's Boy" An inspiring story of Christ's boyhood founded on legendary accounts of miraculous powers he displayed as a child.

"Paper Chains for the Christmas Tree" Tells how effective decorations for the Christmas tree are easily made with paper and scissors.

"Holiday Confections" How to make delicious candies and other dainties so much in request for Christmas.

"Christmas Toasts" Appropriate sentiments prettily expressed to accompany a Christmas gift, or serve as happy greetings.

"The Christmas Key" A gripping story that contains a keen analysis of a pathetic failing of modern life.

"Cubby Bear as Santa Claus" Cubby Bear risks his life to save his friends and they parade him through the forests as Santa Claus.

If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 397 it means that your subscription expires with this present issue and that you will not receive December COMFORT unless you renew your subscription at once—we can not send you a single copy, after expiration, until you have renewed. Don't miss December COMFORT.

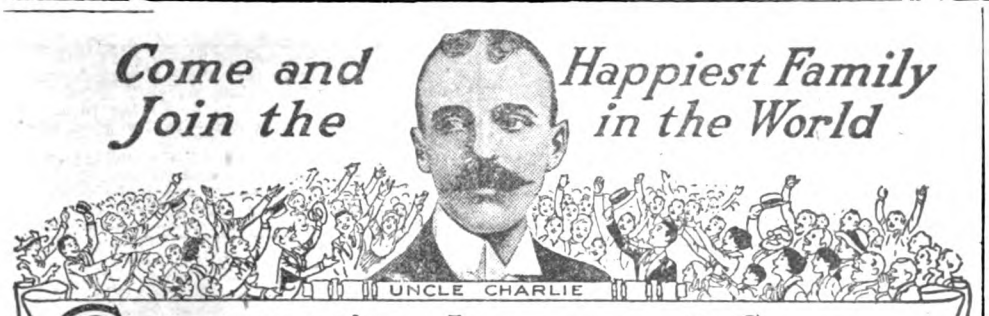
Save money by renewing and extending your subscription two or three years. Use coupon below and do it today.

Please send bills or silver carefully wrapped in paper and securely sealed, or post-office money order. If obliged to send postage-stamps, send two-cent stamps.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: 50 cents a year, $1.00 for three years, 75 cents for a TWO-YEAR renewal, in U. S. and Cuba. (In Canada 65 cents a year.)

SUBSCRIPTION COUPON FOR RENEWAL OR EXTENSION

Publisher of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.



I enclose ..... cents for renewal and extension of my subscription ..... full years from date of expiration.

Date..... Name.....

Post Office..... Street and No......

R. F. D. No...... Box No...... State.....

November, 1921.

LEAGUE RULES: To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged. To be kind to dumb animals. To love our country and protect its flag.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE LISHA

COMFORT for one year and admittance to the League of Cousins for only 55 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome. ADDRESS all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. See Instructions at the close of this Department.

HOP up onto my lap and we'll talk a while before I turn to the letters that Billy had allowed to slip through his teeth this month and the others that I have managed to hide from the searching glance of his be-spectacled eyes. It has been easier to fool Billy on the letter question during the last few weeks, for he has lately taken up the study of the Einstein theory. He has been reading heavily at this and has kept his library card filled with strangely-titled books dealing with such subjects as "The Consubstantiality of Spatiality" and "Three Periods of Psychogenetic Development." His conversation has become difficult and peculiar as a result of his researches in "relativity," and from among his bran muffins at breakfast arise strange phrases about "hyperspace" and the "illusions of phenomena."

"Uncle Lisha," he said enthusiastically this morning, "science is wonderful. It is opening up new worlds for us daily." And Bill gesticulated broadly with his left foreleg, so that he almost hurled his cup of hot cocoa across the room.

"Billy," I answered, "the first thing you know your brain will crack with your effort to grasp this theory of Professor Einstein, and all you will have accomplished will be to prove how purely relative is the space beneath your domelike brow. You know very well that I have not this deep admiration for science which you have lately developed and with which you flavor our breakfast hour. Granted that science aids our material achievements in many ways, yet underlying this aspect of its work is the fact that we live in a world where human relationships, feelings and emotions are all of primary importance in man's continual pursuit of happiness. It is just these things that science always leaves untouched, unless to harm, and cannot change in any helpful way—and yet they mean much more to us than any theories of "extra spatiality." I flung in this last word just so that Billy might see I could handle his scientific jargon a bit myself if it became necessary. He was plainly irritated and in his haste to reply gulped down half a muffin so hurriedly that he almost choked.

"It is ridiculous, Uncle," he said, in muffin-muffled tones, "for you to assume this attitude of failing to regard the triumphs of science as the loftiest achievements of the human mind. Applied science has made our world clean and healthful and given us countless conveniences and benefits."

"Well, Billy," I said soothingly, "I'll be kind and not draw too strikingly to your attention the fact that science was of great aid in the "countless conveniences and benefits" of the great war's destruction from which we are now struggling to recover. But my main quarrel with your science is this: In man's pursuit of happiness, joy and peace are, despite their intangibility, of greater value than bridges, tunnels, skyscrapers, aircraft, submarines and poison gas. The things we need most, the triumphs most to be sought, can only be products of the Kingdom of God within us and can never arise from an Empire of Science painfully built up in our too-complex and unstable civilization. For whatever may be the discoveries, the material "conveniences and benefits" which science may bring, these things must always rest in man's hands to be turned by him to such uses and ends as his standard of human relationship permits. His happiness can never rise higher than his heart. If the gifts of science which he uses be bombs and poison gas, why your "clean and healthful" world, Billy, once constructed by the aid of science, must only fall again at the hands of its very builders. The thing to do, then, is to turn our time and effort toward the study of that which may at last form man's happiness into some more enduring fabric than the history of the world tells us we have yet been able to weave. In the end it all comes back to the teaching that 'a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth.' Science gives us things, many of them; but the essential life of man, his relationship to God and his fellows, is left untouched and unaided. Yet all material possessions, all pride of life, are useless save only as they serve the glory of the greater possession and joy of human friendship and love."

"But, Uncle Lisha," said Bily, who had already assumed his unconvinced expression, which is chiefly indicated by his left eyebrow being raised so that it tickles the inside of his ear, "I don't believe the world's level of happiness has ever been higher than at present, and it is certain that science has done much toward bringing us to this level by aiding the comfort and convenience of our daily life." Here Billy stretched himself luxuriously in his uptilted chair and caressed his lame leg argumentatively.

"Very well, Billy," I replied, "if you think the world has been such a happy and comfortable place for the past five or six years, you can go right ahead thinking so; but your opinion will not be confirmed, I fear, from the other side of the big pond. Certainly our daily papers give strange pictures in their headlines concerning the level of happiness—or even the stability—of the present civilization in Europe. As for our own country, I am willing and glad to admit that, even with our industrial problems and unemployment difficulties, we shall have much to be truly thankful for as we gather about for our annual day of Thanksgiving. But we owe our country's level of happiness and success to natural causes and not to scientific achievement. Certainly Europe has proven unequal to the accomplishing of tasks brought upon her by the death-struggle which had its rise in a science-founded, material-minded civilization. Her tasks and fearful problems are yet far-off from our own lucky land; we need contemplate them only to add to our sympathy and help, thought for avoidance of any like cataclysms in the future, either here or across the Atlantic. And we must turn from a study of science to a study of humanity. Why, Billy, how is your theory of a 'hyperspace' going to be of use to a starving Russian peasant who is only able to fill his stomach space with bread made from roots and soup from grass? Winter is coming upon twenty million starving people.

"Billy, the world's history of the past seven years leaves horrors such as these upon our hands and hearts. These are problems of life, and not of space and non-Euclidian mathematics. Don't you think it well that your scientific mind give some thought to these things before you sit comfortably down, a few weeks from now, to the big turkey you had me order yesterday from Tom McFadden's farmer cousin out on Long Island? What we need in the world today, Billy, is less science and more good-will; fewer professors and more brothers."

Billy only grunted and raised his eyebrow the higher as I got up from the table. But I believe it's safe to guess that from now on there will not be so many books about the house dealing with the "Problem of the Fourth Dimension" and "Properties of Analytic Space." Billy's heart is really in the right place, but he gets strange enthusiasms.

And now for the letters:

NEWTON, TEXAS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

I have been promising to write to you ever since you became my uncle. I am a small man, just six months old. I am sending you one of my pictures. My Daddy made a pen for me like the one that was described in COMFORT. I can stand up and walk all around the edge if I hold to the top rail. My name is one that I am going to be proud of when I grow up: it is Charles Noel Douglas Perego. I am not afraid of Billy for I know he would only smother me with kisses and choke me with a big piece of candy. My Daddy's name is Ben Perego and his League number is 946. My Mamma and Daddy were married on the first day of February, 1920. Mamma can speak the Spanish language as well as English. Her brother was killed in France. My Daddy doesn't know any language but English and don't know this very well. He is trying to help me write this letter, so if there are mistakes, pass them by and don't blame anybody. I hope my picture will be good enough to print in COMFORT so all the cousins can see "Little Uncle Charlie"—which is what Daddy calls me sometimes. Who is going to write me a letter? I will close with a pen full of love for Uncle Lisha, Billy and all the cousins.

Your small nephew,
CHARLES NOEL DOUGLAS PEREGO.

I wish your picture might have been clearer, for reproduction in COMFORT, "Little Uncle Charlie," but I am having it printed here, imperfect though it is, so that the Family may all have a peek at our Founder's first baby namesake. I have given your photograph a whole page in Billy's album, and there your eyes can look out at me as bright and dark as those of my old friend. Billy pasted your picture in place most proudly and carefully. "This kid's father has shown some real sense," he said, "and the lucky boy will be glad some day when he finds out just what his first three handles stand for. Why, think of it, Uncle; Mrs. Webster was telling me yesterday of a couple on the next street who have named their baby 'Charles Fairbanks Pickford Smith'! I'll say that Baby Perego has got this movie kid beaten right from the start, Uncle." And you may be sure I agreed with Billy. You must thank your dad, Little Charlie, for sending me your picture and for helping you to write such a good letter. I'm sure no other six-months'-old cousin could be such a penman at so early an age. You are going to carry a pledge through the coming years, my little lad, to be as wise and kind as the man whose name you bear, and I can wish for you no better future than a life that will bring to you the wealth of love and friends which were Uncle Charlie's.

COUSIN CHARLES NOEL DOUGLAS PEREGO.

CHAPEL HILL, R. R. 3, NORTH CAROLINA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I am just wondering if Billy the Goat is going to let my letter be printed or not? I live on a farm and, as everybody knows who has ever lived there, one can always find something to do if one wants to do it. We raise tobacco and it certainly calls for a lot of work, but I don't mind working in it the least bit. I have been the only girl here in the family for about eight years—since the time when my sister married. I have had a chance to do everything in the house there is to be done, and lots of things in the field which I am proud of. The girl I pity is the one that marries and doesn't know how to cook bread even, much less the other duties of housekeeping. I think that all parents should see that their girls learn how to do all sorts of domestic jobs while they are growing up, even though they may never have these things to perform after they are settled down. Of course there are lots of girls who think they will never have any sewing, cooking, washing or ironing to do, but sometimes they get fooled. I have studied home economics in school for two years, and have certainly got much help from the course. I think if it were possible every girl ought to take up the study of domestic science, but all that many girls think about is dressing up and going with boys and in the end they do not have as much real happiness as a girl who has to work hard for a living. I think that there is a time for work and a time for play and we should teach ourselves to enjoy both. I find that I get far more pleasure from labor many times, than I do from playing.

I liked Ruth's letter and I also agree with Augustus Trick in all that he said in his last letter. I was not able to see his first letter as I was away in school at the time. But if there was ever any person who got a good "bawling out" I think he is that one from what I have read in some of the other letters. But, as the old saying is, "the truth is what hurts." But I am glad to say some girls are not like others in going to extremes, and again some boys are just about as bad as girls. I think that if God had wanted us to be beautiful he would have made us that way, and not caused us to want to buy expensive toilet articles.

I certainly do enjoy reading COMFORT and I enjoy best of all reading the cousins' letters. I am fond of reading good books and read all that I can get.

It is time for school to start again and I don't mind, for I enjoy going. If I didn't want to go real bad, I certainly wouldn't go, for my father is dead and I don't have anyone to make me go. I have been attending a good high school in town for three years and I tell you it is very different from a one-room school. I shall be in the tenth grade this year and certainly hope it will be so that I can go on until I finish and maybe go to college.

I shall leave my age for you all to guess and if you are as good guessers as the people who see me, you will guess me four or six years younger than I really am. I should enjoy getting mail from any of the cousins who think they would like to write to me. With best wishes to all,

Sincerely your niece, LUCY JEANETTE WHITFIELD.

Gosh, Lucy, you certainly know all about farming when you say "one can always find something to do." When I used to farm it, the only way I could avoid finding too many things that wanted doing was to go around all day with a black patch over one eye. I figured that by doing this I cut my work just in half. I used to tell the neighbors I had run against a door in the dark—keeping dark the fact that I didn't want to run against too many farm jobs! If you are raising tobacco on your farm, Lucy Jeanette, I wonder if you are raising any of the kind which the advertisements on the billboards nowadays blazon as tasting "like a juicy apple." Now I like apples and I don't like tobacco, so I'm interested in finding out what sort of a combination they have made of the two, and just how the thing is done. Maybe they have succeeded in crossing a Virginia stogie with an Albermarle pippin. We already have tobacco which is said to be "toasted," and so perhaps if we toasted some of these apple-flavored smoke-leaves we could get a baked tobacco apple to go with our tobacco toast at breakfast time. But unless I hear more from you about this apple tobacco, I am going to stick to my Northern Spies and leave these advertised tobacco-foods on the billboards.

Lucy, I believe there are many girls who, just as you say, are fooled by failing to learn how to cook, sew, wash and iron. But the one who at last is worse fooled is poor hubby. He generally ends up by having to live on dyspepsia pills and perhaps some of this tobacco toast. When a girl heads a home she should know how to run it and care for it properly. The high schools are doing a lot of good with their courses in domestic science, but a mighty good kindergarten course in housekeeping can be given right in a kitchen classroom long before high school days. And it will count just as well even if the mother who is teacher has no certificate to entitle her to preside over home lessons. A girl who can bake good bread is a rare animal today. Our big factory bakeries flourish and their advertisements implore that less and less baking be done in the home. When Billy and I were vacationing this summer, the little mountain town where we rested had a well-known brand of bread brought by express to the village stores in hundreds of loaves each day. This bread came a distance of a hundred and fifty miles and the demand exceeded the supply. One enterprising woman in the town had built up a good business in selling her home-made bread and rolls to her non-baking and unskilled neighbors. I think this situation is typical and that a "baking day" now fails to exist in many homes. And so I'm glad to know that you are a real homemaking cousin, Lucy, and Billy is with me in this. He says that his motto is: A bun in the oven is worth two on the ears.

ROTAN, TEXAS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Here I am at last! A girl of fifteen who does not care to become either a movie actress or a detective. Neither does my ambition soar as high as that of a telephone girl, although I will admit it must be interesting to listen to all the news. But I have one failing—a failing that so many girls of my age have—and that is I believe in boys. Isn't that awful? But really I just believe in them three months of the year. As I cannot let such things interfere with my education, I just begin believing in them the first of June and lose faith in them about the first of September. They surely are handy sometimes.

I live on a six hundred and forty acre farm south

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 37.)

You Will See

Prettier teeth—safer teeth—in a week

We will send for the asking a new-method tooth paste. Modern authorities advise it. Leading dentists everywhere now urge its daily use.

To millions of people it has brought whiter, safer, cleaner teeth. It will bring them to you and yours. See and feel the delightful results and judge what they mean to you.

Removes the film

It removes the film—that viscous film you feel. No old method ever did that effectively.

Film clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays. It dims the teeth and leads to attacks on them. It is the cause of most tooth troubles. Those troubles have been constantly increasing, because old methods failed to combat film effectively.

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of internal troubles.

Ways to combat it

Dental science has now found two effective film combatants. Able authorities have amply proved them. Now dentists the world over are urging their adoption.

These methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—a tooth paste which meets every modern requirement. And a ten-day test is now supplied to everyone who asks.

These effects will delight you

Pepsodent removes the film. Then it leaves teeth highly polished, so film less easily adheres.

It also multiplies the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva—the factor which digests starch deposits that cling. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva—the factor which neutralizes acids.

Every application brings these five effects. The film is combated, Nature's forces are multiplied. The benefits are quickly apparent.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Compare the new way with the old, then decide for yourself which is best. Cut out the coupon now. This is too important to forget.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific film combatant, whose every application brings five desired effects. Approved by highest authorities, and now advised by leading dentists everywhere. All druggists supply the large tubes.

674

10-Day Tube Free

THE PEPSODENT COMPANY,
Dept. 149, 1104 S. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Mail 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

.....

.....

Only one tube to a family.

Your Clothing Problem Solved

The most charming of New York's Winter Coats, Furs and Dresses are in the new Larkin Catalog. You can easily make them yours without extra expense just through Larkin Factory-to-Family Dealing.

New Larkin Catalog FREE

Beautifully illustrates and describes 900 Larkin Products and 1900 valuable Premiums given with them. Wearing Apparel, Jewelry, Silverware, Rugs, Furniture and Toys are among its many timely Christmas suggestions. New lower prices fill this Book from cover to cover with money-saving offers.

Mail coupon to nearest address TODAY.

Larkin Co. Inc. Buffalo, N.Y. Chicago, Ill. Peoria, Ill.

Please send your new Fall Catalog No. 76.

Name .....

Address .....

G. P. 445 .....

Free to Writers!

A WONDERFUL BOOK—read about it! Tells how easily Stories and Plays are conceived, written, perfected, sold. How many who don't DREAM they can write, suddenly find it out. How the Scenario Kings and the Story Queens live and work. How bright men and women, without any special experience, learn to their own amazement that their simplest Ideas may furnish brilliant plots for Plays and Stories. How one's own Imagination may provide an endless gold-mine of Ideas that bring Happy Success and Handsome Cash Royalties. How new writers get their names into print. How to tell if you ARE a writer. How to develop your "story fancy," weave clever word-pictures and unique, thrilling, realistic plots. How your friends may be your worst judges. How to avoid discouragement and the pitfalls of Failure. How to win! This surprising book is absolutely free. No charge. No obligation. Your copy is waiting for you. Write for it now. Just address AUTHORS' PRESS, Dept. 354 AUBURN, NEW YORK

PHONOGRAPH USERS

Stop That Scratchy Sound—Get 100% Better Music—The Universal tone modifier will eliminate that annoying, harsh, scratchy sound, producing soft clear music. Satisfaction Guaranteed A simple adjustment of the modifier will change the music to loud or soft. No need of using different tone needles. Can be attached to any machine except Edison. Send only $1.00 and we will mail at once a Universal Tone Modifier, postage prepaid. Money Refunded If Not Satisfactory. Pat. May 11, 1920. UNIVERSAL PHONOGRAPH ATTACHMENT COMPANY 1644 S. Karlov Ave., Dept. 105, Chicago, Ill.

Makes Any Stove a Gas Stove

Cheaper than Coal—Fits Any Stove—Gives More Heat

The UNI-HETE—Marvelous money-saving invention—turns cooking and heating stoves into gas stoves. Does away with coal or wood. Makes its own gas from common kerosene oil. Absolutely safe. A boon for housewives.

AGENTS! $10 TO $15 DAILY!

Every home a prospect. Simply show it and sell it. Write quick for sample and free territory. Special introductory prices now.

ACORN BRASS MFG. CO., 1381 Acorn Bldg., Chicago, Illinois

Music Lessons UNDER MASTER TEACHERS At Home — Complete Conservatory Course by Mail

Wonderful home study music lessons under great American and European teachers. Endorsed by Paderewski, Master teachers guide and coach you. Lessons a marvel of simplicity and completeness.

Any Instrument Write naming course you are interested in: Piano, Harmony, Voice, Public School Music, Violin, Cornet, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo or Reed Organ—and we will send FREE CATALOG. SEND for it NOW!

University Extension Conservatory, 381 Siegel-Myers Bldg., Chicago

High School Course in 2 Years

You can complete this simplified High School Course at home inside of two years. Meets all requirements for entrance to college and the leading professions. This and thirty-six other practical courses are described in our Free Bulletin. Send for it TODAY.

AMERICAN SCHOOL
Dept. H 817 Drexel Ave. & 58th St. CHICAGO

REMNANTS SILK, VELVET, GINGHAM, ETC.

WONDERFUL BARGAIN IN 4-POUND BUNDLES

of beautiful Silk Remnants for fancy work, quilts, portieres, pillows, etc. Send 10 cents for a big package of lovely silk, including free quilt designs and catalog describing our 4-pound silk, velvet, gingham, and other remnant bargain bundles; also instructions how to earn money at home by sewing.

AGENTS WANTED To sell our Remnant Bargain bundles.

UNION S. WORKS, 207 Factory St., BOONVILLE, N. Y.

3 Piece Toilet Set Free for selling only 8 boxes of our famous ROSEBUD at 25c a box; a home necessity. EASY TO SELL. WE TRUST YOU. Big catalogue sent with goods. Order today.

Write to this firm.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Dept. A, Woodsboro, Md.

SILK REMNANTS, LARGEST Packages yet offered. Square of Stamped Satin free with every package. MFRS. AGENCY, X, Portland, Maine 20c

Thrill-Infusers

By Grace Downey Tinkham

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

PART II.

PRESENTLY the dim outline of a house loomed in front of us; a strong odor of pine needles met my nostrils; near-by the gurgling of a stream. Still everything remained strange. The man back of us gave a low whistle, and suddenly the house became illuminated, sharply silhouetted against a background of pine. It was a large square house with porch extending clear across the front and one side. Vines clung thickly to the pillars and railing. A small Japanese woman met us at the door and ushered us into a comfortable living-room, careful the while to keep one hand on the revolver swinging at her belt.

"Some nifty kidnappers' retreat, eh, Swithins?" said Garry in an undertone to me as we stared about the room at the general appearance of summer-home hospitality pervading the place.

The little Jap woman left us and disappeared kitchen-ward, reappearing, presently, with hot chicken sandwiches and coffee. I never knew anything to taste so good. Mrs. Harcourt declared quite boldly that she was half starved; and it certainly did my old heart good to see Garry put away that food! For the time I forgot everything else.

When we had finished, the husky showed us up the stairs to rooms. Mrs. Harcourt would occupy the bedchamber at the front on the east. Garry and I one at the back and clear across the width of the house on the south corner. Garry looked fierce at that, but tried to keep cool and persuade the fellow to let us have a sleeping place somewhere on the east side. This he refused and a half hour they spent wrangling back and forth. At last our kidnapper flew to pieces, as I feared he would, grabbed me by the back of the collar, stuck his gun in Garry's side, and pushed us toward our rooms, kicked open the door, gave us a shove, banged it shut and turned the key on the outside! Garry went white with rage! He strode around the room like a crazy man!

"This is a hell of a mess!" he panted. "Swithins, we'll not stand for this! That girl could scream her lungs out and we would never hear her!"

"I don't believe anything like that will happen," I said, trying to quiet him. "That fellow is after a wage increase for the Prindle Factory workmen."

"He'd do anything—that bird!" Garry threw at me savagely. He stood for a second thinking, then he went to the window, raised the sash and leaned out.

"Her room faces the front," said he. "We can climb along the roof of the porch to her window."

"There is no roof, Garry," I whispered, looking out. "Just rough beams, and a good two foot or more apart."

"We can make it, anyway," he answered. "We'll take the mattress from the bed and a couple of blankets and get somewhere near her window."

We pulled the mattress and blankets from the bed, shoved them out carefully on the beams, and noiselessly slipped out ourselves. Our progress was slow and painful. I wondered about Garry's leg, dragging it over the sharp edges of the beams; but when I asked him he shut me off impatiently with: "Never mind about me, Swithins. Just attend to getting this darned mattress where we want it." It was no easy matter to drag that bungly thing between us and keep it and ourselves from slipping through to the cement floor of the porch below.

At last we made it, and Garry tapped lightly on the window. No reply. He called softly, then raised the sash an inch or so and called again. Still no response. Garry shot up the window and leaped into the room. The girl was not there. I saw the boy's face whiten. He limped to the door, opened it cautiously, and peered out into the hall. Presently there came the sound of steps on the stairs, then the girl appeared—the man close behind her. Garry closed the door without a sound, stepped back against the wall, pulling me with him. I could hear them talking, but was unable to make out anything. She opened the door and stepped in. Whether the man intended to follow or not there was no time to find out, for suddenly Garry sprang and landed on him. The fellow staggered back against the banister. Garry grabbed him by the shirt-front and jerked him into the room. Then, like a piston-rod the boy's fists shot out in hideous regularity and precision. The fellow recovered, somewhat, and lunged in. "You're a hell of a sick guy!" he roared. His heavy arms churned about, landing occasionally, but seemed to me to work more on the defensive than otherwise. I put the fellow down for a coward. Then they gripped. He got Garry down. I knew the boy's strength would be no match for his, I realized that the effectiveness of Garry's blows had been only the science back of them. Over and over on the floor they struggled, a pummeling mass of arms and legs. Above the curses and groans I heard Mrs. Harcourt cry: "They will kill each other, Swithins! Pull Garry off!"

I saw her grab the big fellow by the hair, and I tugged at Garry's shoulders.

"Get him by the hair!" she shouted at me. Into the boy's thick hair I sunk my hands and pulled. They relaxed, let go, and staggered to their feet. The kidnapper's mask was gone, his right eye swollen shut, and blood streamed from his nose. For just an instant I got a flash of his face before he covered it with the towel the girl handed him, as he stumbled from the room.

"You damn fool!" Garry was yelling at me. "Why didn't you let me alone, I'd have finished him in about a minute." Then he went deathly white and swayed.

"He's going to faint!" cried Mrs. Harcourt. Garry gritted his teeth to fight it off as I steadied him to the bed. He dropped down heavily, unconscious. The girl rushed cold water and towels from the bath, and I bathed his face and hands.

"Swithins, are you sure he is all right? Are you sure?" she kept asking, her naturally rosy face as white as the boy's. "Oh, I'm sorry," she went on, "I never dreamed anything like this would happen." Then again, anxiously: "Is he never coming out of it, Swithins?"

"He will be all right, ma'am," I assured her. "He will come out presently. The boy has been pretty sick, and the strain of all this——"

"Yes, Swithins, I know," she interrupted. "Poor Garry."

She asked to bathe his face while I bandaged with strips of towel his right hand which was badly bruised and skinned.

After a while he opened his eyes and sat up startled.

"Joyce!" he called.

"I'm all right, Garry," she assured him, slipping her strong young arms about his shoulders. His brown head rested against her cheek for an instant, and his eyes closed. "Garry, don't—for pity sake, don't faint again!" she cried fearfully. But this was not what the boy was thinking of. He got to his feet unsteadily.

"What time is it?" he asked.

I looked at my watch. "Two o'clock," I told him.

"You must get some sleep," he said, turning to the girl, "but not meeting her eyes. Then he seemed to pull himself together. In a cheerful voice he went on:

"Swithins and I chose the sleeping-porch for ours. We will be right outside here where we can hear you if you need us."

She followed us to the window and looked out.

"Garry, you're not going to try to sleep here!" she exclaimed.

"We certainly are," he replied, climbing through "Blankets and mattress—everything deluxe!" he grinned.

We stretched out and I drew the blankets over us. The night air was cold and sharp. Almost at once Garry fell asleep. Somewhere in the house I thought I heard a voice telephoning, and sometime later the swishing of tires on the cement drive wakened me.

The sun had climbed high in the heavens before either of us awoke. I roused Garry, and he called to Mrs. Harcourt. As soon as she answered, we let ourselves down by aid of the blankets to the porch below, and entered the house by way of the kitchen. There was no sign of breakfast or the little Jap woman. Evidently the husky individual intended being indisposed for the day. We walked through the rooms, tramping heavily, but without bringing our captors to protest. No evidence of them below, so we climbed the stairs. Room after room we entered, banging noisily about, and calling. Again we searched the first floor, then the basment and grounds—no sign of them! Even to their clothing had disappeared, it was as though the whole affair had been a dream, and they had never been there.

"Well, Swithins, our birds have flown," said Garry at last. "Surely hard to believe, isn't it?"

"That punishment last night cured him, sonny," I chuckled. Garry laughed and started up the stairs to tell Mrs. Harcourt the good news. From near the top he called to me:

"Get Dr. Patterson on the line, Swithins. Tell him we are all right, and give him a location as near as you can—the time it took to come from town, the speed we made, the 'phone number prefix—perhaps he can figure it out. Have him send for us, and say, Swithins, tell him to jazz it up a little, that wild man may be back here any minute with reinforcements."

I got the Doctor on the line almost at once. He thought he knew about where we were, and would start Mack out for us right away. Apparently he had been greatly worried, he and Mack had been scouring the city for us, he said.

Soon after that I placed breakfast on the table, and seated Mrs. Harcourt and the boy.

"I'm mighty glad for your sake that we can get away now," I heard him say. "Your husband——"

"My husband!" she exclaimed.

"Yes. Of course I know you are—you are m—married," Garry stammered.

"I am not married!" she declared evenly.

I heard the boy's chair scrape back from the table as he got to his feet. Astounded myself, I moved opposite the dining-room door. Garry stood swaying a little.

"Why—why didn't you tell me?" he asked.

"Those first few days at the park," she began, "you didn't seem curious to know who I was."

"I never thought of your name," he broke in, "I just thought of you!"

"And the night we were kidnapped," she continued, "you and Swithins seemed to think my name was Harcourt. At first I was puzzled, then it occurred to me that you were taking me for my sister, only had gotten the names slightly changed—Harcourt and Marcourt do sound alike. Also it came to me that if this adventure of ours should get into print, an unknown Mrs. Harcourt would look better there than Miss Joyce Allison. So I decided to let the mistake go until we were free and tell you then."

She stopped, and I moved back. I hadn't been so happy and grateful in years! I could hear the boy take a step or two nearer.

"Then you're not married! You're sure you have no husband?" Garry said chokingly. "Won't you please let me——"

"Let you find one for me?" she interrupted gently. "Garry, will you?"

* * * * * * *

One afternoon, a week later, Dr. Patterson and Miss Joyce dropped in. The doctor was on his way down the street to see a patient, and Miss Joyce had come this far with him. Jerry Prindle had carried Garry off to town earlier in the day, but I expected him back any minute. I made tea and the two sat in the living-room chatting over their cups and laughing a great deal.

"Under different conditions," the voice of Miss Joyce reached me gaily. "I should love to visit that summer home of yours again, Doctor—some time when armed people are not so much in evidence."

"You and Garry may honeymoon there," the Doctor said with a chuckle.

Miss Joyce went on:

"Doctor, you missed your calling. You should have been theatrical, instead of medical."

"A successful physician has to be a little of both," replied he. "At times a small dose of illusionment will do more for a patient than any amount of drugs or reasoning."

"Well, everything worked wonderfully," said the young lady, "from the moment Mack called up and said he was about to start out with Garry, and coached me where to be when he turned into DeWitt Ave.—Bobs and his friend were there when I arrived, and we had some fun planning the kidnapping—until the fight! That I didn't count on—and neither did poor Bobs!"

The Doctor threw back his grey head and roared.

"He certainly came back to me with one peach of an eye," said he. "Thought sure he would quit his job!"

"That Prindle story?" asked Miss Joyce, laughing.

"Bobs' idea," answered the Doctor. "Said he when he picked you up in front of their residence the whole thing came to him."

"Even Mrs. Patterson's little Jap maid looked and acted the real desperado," said she. "But tell me something, Doctor," she suddenly asked, "Swithins knew that Garry thought I was married, why didn't he tell you?"

"I'd like to ask Swithins that myself," said he.

Hearing him call, I stepped into the room.

"I'll tell you, sir," I began in explanation. "I, too, believed the young lady married. It never occurred to me that there could have been a mistake made. In such a case I thought you would not approve of Garry's interest in her, or the encouragement of it. So, in telling you of the young lady I feigned ignorance of the name. Honor had gone from me, sir, I would have done anything for the boy—she meant life to him!"

As I turned to leave the room I heard Miss Joyce ask: "Swithins was not in on the kidnapping plan, then?"

"No," replied the Doctor, "I decided not to tell him. There were cooks enough then to spoil the broth; and the old fellow had looked so sick at heart for weeks that I made up my mind to do some thrill-infusing upon him, too. However, he did get wise the night of the fight when Bobs' mask was torn off. Garry had never seen Bobs, but Swithins had and he recognized him. Bobs surmised it and decided to fade while the fading was good."

The young lady's clear, happy laugh resounded through the room. Just then I heard Jerry's machine stop, and drive away. Then Garry's step in the hall.

"And remember, my dear," the Doctor was saying with a chuckle, "take this tip from a wise old bird—'No secrets from husbands.'"

Garry stepped into the room.

"What is this I hear about 'No secrets from husbands?'" he asked, taking Miss Joyce' hands in his and drawing her to him.

"Oh, just a simple motto for the guidance and protection of prospective wives," laughed the Doctor. "I'm giving it to Joyce for future use. 'No secrets from husbands'—pretty good advice, eh, Garry?"

"Great!" agreed Garry with a twinkle in his eye. "But just as a tip to the medical profession, and for their future guidance and—protection, how would 'No flim-flam for patients,' be?"

$3.50 -A- Month

The World's Greatest 19-Jewel

Adjusted To Positions, Temperature, Isochronism. Guaranteed to run within 20 seconds a week. Complete in 16 size, thin model, 20-year Gold filled case, at bedrock factory price.

Sent on Approval

We send this watch anywhere on 30-day approval; if not all we say, merely return it at our expense.

FREE CATALOG—write for it today. Get posted on this new 19-Jewel Illinois and our lower prices before you buy—and from our catalog you can select Diamonds and other Jewelry on easy terms.

HARRIS-GOAR CO.
Dept. 193, Kansas City, Mo.

WRITE AT ONCE This Book Free!

"Showers of Gold" points the way to financial independence and tells a story of vital interest to every ambitious man or woman.

Write for your copy today

Hercules Hosiery Mills, Dept. C
Tenth St., & Columbia Ave., Phila., Penna.

What Hast Thou in Thine House

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3.)

This is her only explanation of a success that was less than two years in the making.

* * * * * * *

And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house? And she said, Thy handmaid hath not anything in the house, save a pot of oil.

Then he said, Go, borrow the vessels abroad of all thy neighbors, even empty vessels; borrow not a few. And thou shalt go in and shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and pour out into all these vessels; and thou shalt set aside that which is full.

* * * * * * *

She obeyed the prophet; she sold the oil; she paid the debt.

Do you borrow vessels when your hour comes? Or do you borrow trouble?

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912, OF COMFORT, PUBLISHED MONTHLY AT AUGUSTA, MAINE, FOR OCTOBER 1, 1921.

State of Maine, ... } ss.
County of Kennebec, ... }

Before me, a Notary Public, in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared William H. Gannett, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the Business Manager of the COMFORT and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are:

Publisher, W. H. Gannett, Publisher (inc.), Post-office address, 20 Willow St., Augusta, Maine.

Editor, A. M. Goddard, Post-office address, Augusta, Maine.

Managing Editor, William H. Gannett, Post-office address, Augusta, Maine.

Business Managers, W. H. Gannett, Bus. Mgr., Guy P. Gannett, Assist. Bus. Mgr., Post-office address, Augusta, Maine.

2. That the owners are: (Give names and addresses of individual owners, or if a corporation, give its name and the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of the total amount of stock.) Owner: W. H. Gannett Publisher (incorporated), 20 Willow St., Augusta, Maine.—Stockholders:—W. H. Gannett, Augusta, Maine; Guy P. Gannett, Augusta, Maine.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: (If there are none, so state.) No outstanding bonds, mortgages or other securities.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona-fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

WILLIAM H. GANNETT,
Business Manager.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 20th day of September, 1921.

(NOTARIAL SEAL) HOWARD E. WEBBER,
Notary Public

(My commission expires July 17, 1925.)

The Pretty Girls' Club

Conducted by Katherine Booth

A Fig for Your Complexion!

NOW comes the season of the year when there are few fresh vegetables, when one is apt to be cautious about opening the windows, when outdoor exercise is more limited than in summer, and as a result the body is lazy about throwing off its impurities.

With all this to consider, we need to take prompt measures to see that measures are substituted that will keep the blood pure and the circulation active, so that we may not confront in our mirrors a crop of budding pimples, disfiguring blackheads sprinkling our noses, and cold sores blossoming forth at the slightest encouragement.

To begin with, avoid a too concentrated diet in winter—which means don't eat salt meats, heavy vegetables like turnip and cabbage, and many griddlecakes, hot biscuits, etc. That sounds as if I meant you never to eat salt meat, which is an exaggeration; I merely do not want you to eat the offending foods above too often, in too great quantities, or to the exclusion of other foods. Your stomach needs stimulating, and kind treatment; and that means that you should give it food which will provide the necessary body-building elements without over-work on its part.

You must have fruit, winter or summer; and there are oranges, grapefruit, apples, prunes, which can be had, and all of which will help to keep your blood pure, and stimulate elimination. Begin the day with a couple of glasses of water, not at breakfast but half an hour before breakfast. Then at the morning meal eat some fruit first of all—an orange, a grapefruit or half a one, or a dish of prunes soaked over night, then stewed slowly until swollen and very soft. They should be cooked without sugar as they are sweetened enough. An apple can take the place of the mentioned fruits, either raw or baked; but if you can have some other fruit for breakfast I should prefer that you save the baked apple for lunch or the raw apple for bedtime. In fact, you may eat as many apples as you like during the day, for they are excellent blood purifiers.

TREATING A COLD SORE.

If elimination is sluggish, do not resort to cathartics except in emergencies, but substitute food remedies. Eat a fig or two at night, after lunch, after dinner. Have bran muffins or bran bread, instead of white bread; or sprinkle bran in your morning cereal—about half and half—and eat with cream and sugar. Pineapple is an excellent fruit, if it is obtainable where you live, for its juice is almost a duplicate of the gastric juice in the stomach, and it will digest food placed with it in a jar, so you can see what a desirable aid it is to a sluggish digestion. Of course, fresh pineapple is better than the canned, as is true of all other fruits.

If cold sores appear, touch them with a bit of cotton wrapped around an orange-wood stick and dipped in alcohol or camphor. If very puffy, they can be opened with a fine needle (first dipped in boiling water to sterilize it) and patted with a bit of cotton. If, however, any of the fluid from the blister touches the other skin you will shortly have another cold sore, so be careful!

Practice an abdominal exercise night and morning for five or ten minutes in bed. Lying flat on the back, arms at side, raise right leg at right angle with the body without bending the knee, then lower very, very slowly, again without bending the knee, until it is flat on the bed. This strains the abdominal muscles and induces what is called peristaltic action—action of the bowels. Practice with the left leg, then with both together. You may not be able to raise the leg more than half or three-quarters of the way to the right-angle position, but keep on striving, and in time your hip joints and leg muscles will limber up. The more effort about this exercise, the better for the eliminative effect; so be careful not to let the leg drop quickly to a flat position; lower it as slowly as you possibly can.

And don't forget that you must have fresh air in winter as well as in summer; have your windows open at night; you can jump up and close them when you wake in the morning, crawling back between the covers till the room warms up a little; and see that the other rooms get a good airing out for a few minutes each day, so that the air is completely changed. And, of course, get outdoors! You can always take a brisk walk, all bundled up, to speed your circulation, and give your lungs good fresh air to breathe.

This is good advice in advance, for a word in time is worth nineteen hundred after one has started on the wrong road.

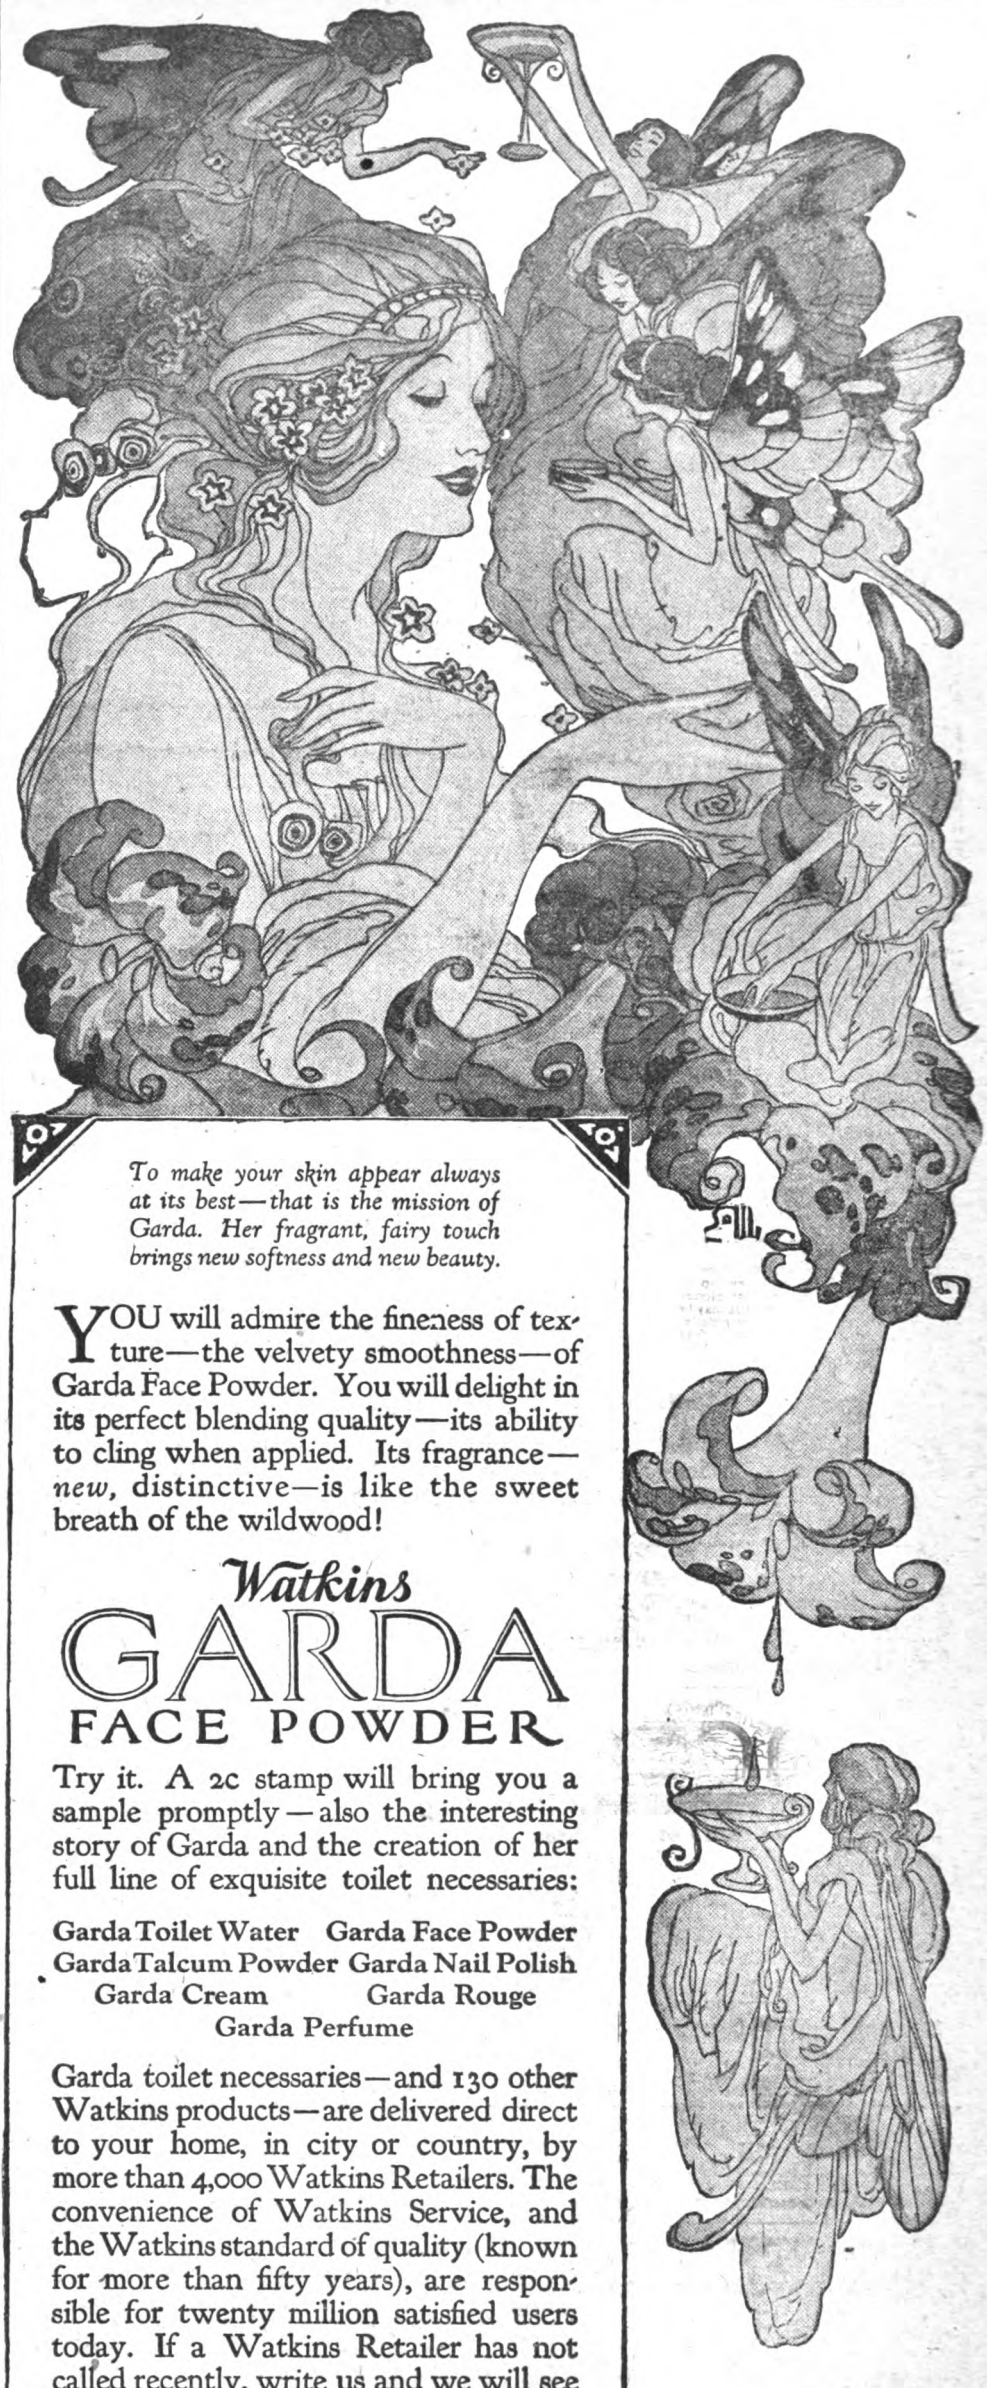
Answers to Questions

E. M.—Perhaps you use too strong a soap on your hair. I suggest that, in order to get rid of the dandruff you oil your scalp before your next shampoo. At night, use a medicine dropper, and filling it with olive oil run it along the part of the hair. You should part the hair, first, from nape of neck to forehead. After running the dropper along one part, part again about an inch away, still from nape to forehead, and oil in the same way, continuing until the entire scalp has been gone over. Do the head up in a towel or rubber bathing cap, before going to bed. In the morning shampoo with a shampoo liquid made by shaving half a cake of white soap into a quart of hot water and boiling until soap is all dissolved. Wet hair and scalp by dipping into warm water, then pour the shampoo liquid—a small portion of it—on the scalp and massage thoroughly with the flat of the fingers, rubbing the scalp. Pour on a little more, and rub, then rinse either with bath spray or by pouring on water from a pitcher—the water should be very warm. Pour on more shampoo liquid, and this time rub and massage every inch of the scalp; the liquid should produce a very heavy lather. After a good shampooing in this way, rinse off the lather, and apply one more installment of the shampoo liquid, going over entire scalp again. For a final rinse, use very warm or hot water and rinse over and over and over, until there is not a particle of soap left in the hair. If you have a bathtub, fill it and dip the head in sideways, floating the hair; then dip the other side of the head, then the top, then the back; do this thoroughly and you will find the hair well rinsed. After the shampooing, dry the hair in the sun if possible. Be very careful never to put the hair up until it is "bone dry" and warm to the touch. In winter you may have to do the first drying near a stove or radiator; but when it is thoroughly dry, then sun it a little by the window, shaking and airing. Do not use a sharp comb nor a stiff brush on your hair—as either will scratch the scalp and cause dandruff; and of course never use a fine-tooth comb. You should, however, brush the hair nightly, gently but firmly for many strokes—say, fifty at the least. And do not go to bed with the hair done up—this, too, will cause dandruff. Let it down, brush it after shaking and airing, then go to bed with it braided loosely but not tied, or hanging altogether free. You must keep the scalp well aired if you are to overcome dandruff. Your brushes must be kept scrupulously clean, as it does no good to get rid of dandruff, then use a brush which has been utilized to brush a dandruffy scalp. Clean your brushes thoroughly before you take your shampoo; then dip them daily in hot water to which ammonia has been added; dry standing on their side on the window sill in the sun. Never use a damp brush. Your comb should be cleaned by braiding fine string, many strands, at one end, then letting the strings hang free for seven or eight inches, and braiding the other ends. Leave a loop of string on one end of this strip, and hang on a doorknob; hold the other end in your hand and pass the comb back and forth along the loose strings; this will clean your comb. There is a comb cleaner of this type on the market which you can buy. A shampoo which is often recommended for oily dandruffy scalp is as follows:

Shampoo for Oily Scalp

Green soap (ask your druggist for this), two ounces; Eau de Cologne, two ounces.

"Green soap" is really not green but a sort of dirty yellow. You should mix and shake the two ingredients until thoroughly mingled; then let them stand for 24 hours, shaking occasionally. Finally strain. To use for a shampoo, first wet the head as before directed, then pour on a little of the mixture and rub. It is always best to rinse the head well after a first rubbing and massaging with the shampoo mixture, that the worst soil may come away. Then resume the shampooing, pouring on a further supply of the shampoo mixture. After the hair has been thoroughly shampooed and rinsed in many warm waters, so that you are sure it is perfectly free from soap, then vigorously dash on cold water at the last to close the oil glands. Have it as cold as you can stand it, starting first with cool water then gradually making it colder. This is quite a strong shampoo and is only for scalps afflicted with heavy dandruff which does not yield to ordinary measures, and which are too oily, as well.



EDNA.—Your circulation is sluggish and that is the cause of the red hands, or the blue hands in winter. You are below weight and have an insufficient supply of blood, so probably it does not circulate very freely and you are easily chilled. The first thing you should do is to build up your body; eat good sensible foods and plenty of them, especially fat-building foods. For breakfast, a large bowl of cereal with cream and sugar—as much as you can eat—some buttered toast, some fruit—an orange, half a grapefruit, a dish of stewed prunes, etc., but not bananas—and a soft-boiled egg. This is a good breakfast for every day in the year; you can vary the cereal and the fruit. It would be better for you to have a glass of milk for breakfast than a cup of coffee; I should cut out coffee and tea if I were you and really wanted to get over this condition of poor circulation. Drink lots of water, two glasses when you get up, a little at a time, and at intervals during the day so that you have eight to ten glasses in the twenty-four hours. If you work, perhaps you have to eat a cold lunch; if so, although this isn't very good for a stomach which is not manufacturing enough good red blood, make the best of it. But always have some juicy fruit to eat with it, and always drink water half an hour beforehand. If you need something hot to drink at any meal, let it be hot water, but do not drink while you have food in your mouth; in fact, drink as little as possible at meals, but make up between meals. Chew your food until it is liquid before swallowing; this makes blood. For your night meal, be careful again of your food; don't eat fried food, because it is more work for your stomach to digest; but eat plenty of cold white bread and butter, boiled or baked potato, boiled rice, macaroni, bacon, baked apples, stewed prunes, custard, blanc mange, fresh fruits, canned fruits but not rich preserves. Broiled or roasted meats are good for you, that is, beef, lamb, mutton, chicken, duck, fish; but pork and veal are hard to digest, and salt meats like ham and salt pork and dried beef are not so nutritious. Take a body bath daily, before going to bed. Use warm water, very warm, and wash yourself briskly, standing on a folded bath towel, if you have no bathtub, then rinse with a wet cloth and rub dry with a bath towel, rubbing the skin until it is red and glowing. This teaches the skin to do its work, and starts the blood circulating. Take deep-breathing exercises in the morning when you rise, throwing back the shoulders, elevating the chest and breathing in through the nose slowly until the lungs are full. Hold while you count five, then exhale slowly, counting ten, if possible. Don't hold long enough to become dizzy. Be sure you are breathing in perfectly fresh air when you are doing this, which means that some outdoor air should be in the room. You can practice deep breathing as you walk. At your size you should not wear corsets, as they will only obstruct your circulation and you do not need them. Fashionable women are delighted when they can do without a corset, which of course can only be when they are very slender as you are. Women who weigh more need a well-fitting corset to have a good figure. So be sure you do not wear one, and that none of your clothes are tight, especially sleeves, collars, garters, waistbands. Do not wear round garters, but side garters, those that are attached to a belt. All these directions are given you to prevent anything interfering with your circulation. You do not get enough outdoor exercise, but this can't be helped, I suppose, since your work and your school take so much of your time; but if you could get in a good brisk walk, with your lungs filled with fresh air, every day, it would help. Blood in order to circulate must have air, the skin must be stimulated with regular daily body-bathing and rubbing, the diet must be well chosen, there must be sufficient liquid supplied to the body daily, and the lungs must be exercised. Look after all these points. And keep the ankles very warm always.

A FIG FOR YOUR COMPLEXION.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 17.)

To make your skin appear always at its best—that is the mission of Garda. Her fragrant, fairy touch brings new softness and new beauty.

YOU will admire the fineness of texture—the velvety smoothness—of Garda Face Powder. You will delight in its perfect blending quality—its ability to cling when applied. Its fragrance—new, distinctive—is like the sweet breath of the wildwood!

Watkins
GARDA
FACE POWDER

Try it. A 2c stamp will bring you a sample promptly—also the interesting story of Garda and the creation of her full line of exquisite toilet necessaries:

Garda Toilet Water Garda Face Powder
Garda Talcum Powder Garda Nail Polish
Garda Cream Garda Rouge
Garda Perfume

Garda toilet necessaries—and 130 other Watkins products—are delivered direct to your home, in city or country, by more than 4,000 Watkins Retailers. The convenience of Watkins Service, and the Watkins standard of quality (known for more than fifty years), are responsible for twenty million satisfied users today. If a Watkins Retailer has not called recently, write us and we will see that you are supplied.

How to Get a Sample

Send 2c stamp and receive a liberal supply of Garda Face Powder, perfumed with dainty new Garda odor. Test and compare it. Learn for yourself its many distinctive features. We will also send our attractive booklet about Garda, the mysterious Spirit of Health and Beauty.

THE J. R. WATKINS CO.
Dept. 148, Winona, Minn.

Established 1868 Watkins The Original

Ruth Taft

our beauty expert, gladly will answer your questions on beauty problems. Write to her care of The J. R. Watkins Company.

Men and Women

Desirable territories, city and country, await responsible men and women. Experience of more than 4000 Watkins Retailers shows opportunity for you. Write for complete selling plan.

Only $1.00 Down

Keep the New Edison Amberola—Edison's great phonograph with the diamond stylus—and your choice of records, for only $1.00. Pay balance at rate of only a few cents a day. Hear it in your own home before you decide. Only $1.00 down. Write today for our New Edison Book and pictures, free.

F. K. BABSON, Edison Phonograph Dist. 19th & Marshall Blvd. Dept. 3708, Chicago
Canadian Offices 62 Olbert St., Winnipeg, Man.

Films Developed and Printed 25¢ Per Roll
Any Size

Send 25c per roll of six which we will develop, print and return same day received 3 cents rebated on all blank, imperfect or non-printable films. Highest grade professional workmanship guaranteed. Perfect system insures against any possible loss of films.

8 x 10 Enlargement Free

Enclose any favorite old negative with your order and we will make you a handsome 8 x 10 enlargement free, if you send us name and address of another Kodaker.

20% Saved on All Photo Supplies

Your first 25c order brings coupons and membership privilege in our co-operative buying service, giving you 20% cash saving on cameras, films and all standard photo supplies. Money back guarantee.

Mail Order Film Service Box 373-A Milwaukee, Wis.

NEW WAY TO GET A PIANO

Save 25 to 50 per cent by buying DIRECT FROM FACTORY. We pay freight. 38 styles to select from. 40 year guarantee on the famous WING Piano or Player. 53-year-old reputation for high quality and fair dealing. Send for names of owners near you.

The Book of Complete Information About Pianos--FREE

Play a Wing Piano or Player in your OWN home on 4 weeks FREE Trial. Send for valuable NEW BOOK of Complete Information about Pianos-FREE. Learn how to judge quality, tone, finish of any piano. See why the WING stands every quality test. Easy terms. No deposit. Write today for Book. The N. Y. World says, "Everyone should have this Book."

4 Weeks Trial

WING & SON (Est. 1868) Dept. 311. 9th Avenue & 13th Street New York

Tire Agents Wanted

An auto owner in each locality to use and introduce Mellinger Extra-Ply and Cord Tires. Make big money part or full time. No capital or experience needed. Sample Sections Furnished. GUARANTEED 8,000 & 10,000 Miles (No Seconds). Hand made. Finest materials. Shipped prepaid on approval.

FREE TIRES FOR YOUR CAR to one user in each locality. Be first to write quick for special Agents Offer and Low Wholesale Prices.

MONEY For You in TIRES

MELLINGER TIRE & RUBBER CO. 923 North Oak St., Kansas City, Mo. Write for Free Book.

Standard Underwoods

5-Year Guarantee

$3.00 DOWN

Yes, this genuine Standard Visible Writing Underwood newly rebuilt at much less than factory price, yours for $3.00 down and then easy monthly payments.

10 Days FREE Trial

Try it for 10 days at our risk. Money back guarantee. Send now for free book. Big bargain offer.

TYPEWRITER EMPORIUM SHIPMAN-WARD MFG. CO. 1018 Shipman Building Chicago, Illinois

FREE DIAMOND RING OFFER

Just to advertise our famous Hawaiian im. diamonds—the greatest discovery the world has ever known. We will send absolutely free this 14k gold f. ring, set with a 1-2k Hawaiian im. diamond—in beautiful ring box postage paid. Pay postmaster $1.48 C.O.D. charges to cover postage, boxing, advertising, handling, etc. If you can tell it from a real diamond return and money refunded. Only 10,000 given away. Send no money. Answer quick. Send size of finger.

KRAUTH & REED, Dept. 130 MASONIC TEMPLE CHICAGO

Big Money

Made by agents selling our wonderful Facial Soap, Perfumes, Toilet Articles, Spices, Extracts, etc. Free cake of soap & agents terms mailed to any address.

Lacassian Co., Dept. 402, St. Louis, Mo.

MUSIC TAUGHT In Your Home FREE

Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, Etc. Beginner or advanced players. One lesson weekly. Illustrations make everything plain. Only expense about 2c per day to cover cost of postage and music used. Write for FREE booklet which explains everything in full.

AMERICAN SCHOOL OF MUSIC, 15 Lakeside Building, CHICAGO

Big Band Catalog sent free

Whatever you need—from a drumstick to the highest priced cornets in the world. Used by the Army and Navy. Send for big catalog, liberally illustrated, fully descriptive. Mention what instrument interests you. Free trial. Easy payments. Sold by leading music stores everywhere.

LYON & HEALY 68-75 JACKSON BLVD., CHICAGO

Stella Rosevelt

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4.)

Star did not reply, and Miss Baker shot an indignant glance at the rude girl.

The young stranger's heart was swelling within her until it was nearly ready to burst with insulted pride and bitter disappointment. She had never dreamed that such a reception as this awaited her.

"She had pictured to herself, many times, being drawn into the arms of a pleasant, gentle-voiced woman, who had loved her mother, and who would love her for that mother's sake, if not for her own. She had thought to twine her arms about her neck, and, laying her head upon a sympathizing bosom, tell her of her dear parents, what their hopes and plans had been for her, and what her own desires for the future were, and expected to receive only kind and encouraging words in return.

She had been ambitious to become a cultivated woman and scholar, and to follow out her father's plans for her education, and come up to his standard, which was a high one.

But instead she found she was to be degraded to the level of a common servant, all her prospects destroyed, all her hopes crushed, and she felt as if she could not bear it.

"I will not submit to it. I will not give up my hopes. I will not be a servant," she kept saying over and over to herself, while she sat there and waited for Miss Baker to attend to her needs, and felt rather than saw Josephine's impertinent inspection of her personal appearance.

"You've got a wonderful head of hair," that young lady at length observed, as she approached her after being released from the seamstress' hands. "I think I never saw such a heavy braid before; and I believe it will just match Nellie Colton's; she is papa's niece. I'll tell mamma to have a barber come and cut it off. Of course you can't afford the time now to take care of it, and it would make such a splendid band for Nell."

Star regarded her in blank astonishment. The effrontery of this young lady was simply overpowering.

"Indeed!" she at last quietly replied. "If Miss Colton is in need of a band of hair, she will doubtless find it at almost any hair store in the city. I intend to keep mine."

Miss Richards colored angrily, for Star's great blue eyes met hers fearlessly, and her tone betrayed an independence which did not promise well for any tyranny which she might expect to exercise over her in the future.

"You will do exactly as mamma desires, miss," she cried, and then turned and left the room.

Star's face was also very red, and she swallowed an angry sob as she turned to Miss Baker.

"I am ready to sew," was all that she could say.

She longed to get some work into her hands, hoping thus to distract her thoughts from self and her bitter disappointment.

All day long she stitched and sewed, working quietly, yet rapidly, and by night one dress was nearly completed.

"You sew very nicely," Miss Baker said, as she examined her work late in the afternoon, "and this print will make you a neat dress. I wish Mrs. Richards would allow me to trim it, but she told me to make it plain. She is in a hurry about the other work."

Star said nothing to this, but after the seamstress had gone home, she cut and pieced together some dainty ruffles from some scraps that had been thrown aside; and all the long evening, while the family were downstairs entertaining visitors and making merry, she was sewing and finishing off the print dress, that she might have something fresh and clean for the morning.

She had not been allowed to eat with the family during the day. She had not seen Mrs. Richards, and did not even know of how many members the household consisted. It was evident that she was to be ignored, except as her services were required, that she was to be made a drudge, and her proud young spirit resented it with all the strength of her nature.

"I will never live so; I am above it. I am capable of better things, and I will not consent to become a nonentity," her heart kept saying, over and over again.

But she was wholly dependent upon these people; her father had consigned her to their care. She had no money, save a letter of credit for a hundred pounds, the sum total realized from the sale of all the dear objects which she had been accustomed to see in her home since her infancy, and this she had been advised by the lawyer whom Mr. Gladstone had chosen to settle his affairs, to consign to the care of Mr. Richards. But she had concluded since morning to say nothing about it to any one.

She had no other friends; if she had possessed them she would have flown to them at once. She was a forlorn stranger among strangers, and she could see no way at present out of the difficulties surrounding her.

The second morning after her advent at the Richards' mansion, as she was descending to her breakfast, she suddenly encountered a portly but good-natured looking gentleman on the stairs.

She glanced up at him, and was about to pass on with a slight though graceful salutation; when he stopped short and regarded her with surprise.

"Hello! who are you?" he asked, brusquely, yet not unkindly.

Star colored a lovely pink, as she replied, modestly:

"I am Star—or, I should say, Stella Gladstone."

"Stella—Star Gladstone!" he exclaimed, in surprise. Then he added, with an appreciative glance at her golden head with its dainty forelocks, her great, star-like eyes, and red lips:

"That sounds well—very appropriate, too, I should say. When did you arrive? We have been very anxious on your account."

Star's scarlet lips slightly curled.

It appeared that he had not been notified of her arrival—Mrs. Richards had not considered it necessary to speak of the welfare of one whom she intended to make her servant.

"I arrived the day before yesterday—Tuesday,' she said somewhat coldly, in reply to his question.

"Ah! I was in Chicago that day—reached home last night. You've had a pretty hard time, little girl, haven't you?"

"Yes, sir," Star returned, wondering if he had any idea how hard, while the tears rushed unbidden to her eyes at his kind tone. "I never expected to see land again," she added, trying hard to suppress a sob, as she thought she would almost rather have died than come among such cold-hearted people as her mother's cousin's family appeared to be.

"Well, well, you are safe now, thank Heaven, and you must try to be as happy as possible with us," Mr. Richards said, still more kindly as he remarked her agitation.

Star lifted her great eyes to his with a look of surprise. Could it be possible that he did not know the position she was destined to occupy in his household.

It certainly appeared so, for he was looking down upon her with admiration and even something of affection.

"Thank you, sir; you are very kind," she said, with a sigh, as she turned sadly away and left him.

CHAPTER VI.

STELLA'S APPEAL.

Star went down to the housekeeper's room after her encounter with Mrs. Richards, and ate her breakfast in a very thoughtful mood.

After finishing her coffee she arose and proceeded slowly upstairs to the sewing-room, intending to finish her other dress that morning.

There was a look of resolution on her young face; her eyes gleamed with a new purpose.

"I will do it," she murmured, as she stood thoughtfully outside the door a moment, one small hand resting upon the knob. "I may as well make a bold stroke for myself at once, or I shall sink into nothingness. I must have an education; I cannot—I will not grow up ignorant, and have poor papa's kind care in the past all go for nothing."

She turned the handle of the door and passed into the room.

She found Mrs. Richards standing in the middle of the floor, holding up the unfinished dress in both hands, and inspecting it with no pleasant expression of countenance.

She glanced at the young girl as she entered, and as her keen eyes ran over her dainty figure in its new and tasteful garment, her face grew dark.

Star bade her a courteous "good morning," but she did not even deign to notice the salutation.

"Who trimmed these dresses?" she demanded, sharply.

"I did," Star answered.

"Who told you to do it?"

"No one, marm; but I like things made pretty, and as there were plenty of pieces which could not be used in any other way, I made them up into ruffles."

Star spoke very quietly, but a bright red spot burned on either cheek.

"You like 'things pretty,' do you? And that is the way you calculate to spend your time in this house, I suppose?" Mrs. Richards retorted, sarcastically.

She received no reply, and continued:

"The pieces you have cut up into senseless ruffles I intended you should make into patchwork for the servants' beds during your odd moments."

Star glanced at the numerous "senseless ruffles" which encircled the indignant matron's ample figure, and thought there might be such a thing as a distinction without a difference.

"I've half a mind to make you sit right down and rip off every one," Mrs. Richards proceeded, still chafing over the matter, and flushing as she noticed Star's glance and half read her thought. "The idea of a chambermaid with ruffles and furbelows! And I do believe that seamstress has made your dress so tight that you cannot breathe," she concluded, pouncing upon the poor girl to make an examination of the offensive robe, for the slight, graceful figure before her was not at all pleasing to her.

"No, marm, my dress is not tight; it only fits me nicely;" and Star's slender fingers laid over quite a plait, thus showing that there was plenty of room for inflating her lungs to their utmost capacity.

"Then you are laced," persisted madam.

"Laced?" repeated Star, who did not quite understand the obnoxious term.

"Yes; your corsets are too tight."

"Oh! I never wear corsets; mamma did not approve of them."

Mrs. Richards bit her lips and colored with vexation. She was not showing to advantage in this controversy. It was clear that Star's perfect form was the work of nature's own hand, and she would be obliged to put up with it unless she tied her up in a sack to hide its comely outlines.

"Well," she said, throwing aside the dress she had been examining, "I want you to come with me now; I am going to assign you your regular work. For one thing, you are to make all the beds in the house, except those in the servants' rooms; then you are to keep Josephine's and mine in order, wait upon us generally, and sew when there is nothing else to be done."

Star stood looking down at the carpet in a thoughtful way while her would-be task mistress reeled off these instructions; then she raised her eyes, which looked almost black instead of their usual beautiful blue, and fixed them full upon the woman's face.

"Did you understand," she began, "when papa wrote to you, asking you to assume the guardianship of his only child and superintend her future education, that he had any idea that I should come into your family as a servant? I am sixteen years old, and although I have been taught to do many things in my home, and to do them well, I have never done any hard work. I have spent most of my time in study, and papa left written instructions with me regarding my future course in that direction. I am very fond of music; I can paint and draw quite well, I am told, for one of my age, and papa wished me to keep on with these accomplishments, so far as I was able and attend faithfully to the other branches of my education. I tell you this that you may understand something of the disappointment I have experienced, since my arrival in this country, to find that I was expected to fill the place of a common servant. Do you think my father intended you to make me such?"

Mrs. Richards regarded the girl in astonishment; while her face grew crimson with shame and anger. She knew very well that Albert Gladstone had never dreamed that she would degrade his child in any such way. But Albert Gladstone was dead, and could not interpose to prevent it. She was obliged to curtail just now in some way, and when she found she must have this girl in her family, she had decided to dispense with the expense of one servant and impose the duties on Star.

"I don't know what your father intended, or what you expect," she returned, in cold, precise tones. "I know that he wrote me you would soon be an orphan; that you had hardly a friend in the world, and he would leave you almost a pauper. He asked me to superintend your education, so that you would be able to earn your own living by and by. I intend to do so; and as you have nothing but your own hands to depend upon in the future, I am going to begin by making you useful at once. Did you suppose you were going to drop into the lap of luxury, and be reared in idleness?" she concluded, with biting sarcasm.

"No, marm," Star returned, respectfully, yet not one whit abashed by the way Mrs. Richards had perverted the letter which her father had written. "I am willing to be useful, but I am very unwilling to be made a common drudge, with no time nor opportunity to pursue my education. You say I have nothing save my hands with which to earn my living. You are mistaken; I have brains, and I intend they shall serve that purpose."

"It seems to me that you are making a saucy tongue serve its purpose pretty early in the day," retorted Mrs. Richards, an angry red leaping into her face.

"I do not mean the least disrespect in what I have said, Mrs. Richards; but I cannot give up all the hopes and aspirations which my father has fostered all my life without making an effort to accomplish them. I am frank to confess," Star continued, coloring, while her lips quivered slightly, "that from your reply to my father's letter, I inferred that I should be received into your family as an equal, and that you would give me a mother's care and counsel during the next three or four years of my life. Papa, I know, also understood it so, and died content, feeling that I should be well and kindly provided for."

Mrs. Richards felt very uncomfortable, for she knew that every word Star uttered was truth. She knew, too, that she was doing a mean and cowardly thing in making the bright and talented girl a servant; but she must have a housemaid. If she must curtail, she must do it in this way rather than in her own or Josephine's wardrobe.

"You are very impertinent, miss, and have been reared with altogether too high notions for one in your position," she said, angrily. "You ought to be thankful for a roof to cover your head, and anything to cover your nakedness, coming here, as you did, destitute of everything. An equal in my family, indeed! Music, painting and drawing! What will Josephine say to that, I wonder? And who did you suppose was going to foot the bills? It won't do you any harm to have some of this independence taken out of you, and I'll have you understand, once for all, that you will fill Maggie Flynn's position in this house, or none."

Star bowed her proud head coldly. She saw that she was helpless for the present, and must yield to the inevitable.

"Very well," she said, calmly. I understand from Mrs. Blunt that Maggie Flynn was about my age; that she had six dollars a month besides her board, and two evenings out a week. I will consent to fill her place, for the present, upon the same conditions."

"Upon my word!" exclaimed Mrs. Richards, in a towering passion at this unexpected proposition. "I never heard anything like it in my life! You forget that you are indebted to me for the very clothes you have on at this moment."

Star could hardly repress a smile at this calculating outbreak.

"You have given me the print for two dresses," she answered, with ready tact, "the cost of which, with us in England, would be four pence a yard. I have nearly made them myself, but you can deduct whatever you see fit, and I will attend to my own wardrobe in the future. If I do Maggie Flynn's work, I must have Maggie Flynn's pay and privileges," she concluded, decidedly.

"You will have nothing of the kind"—Mrs. Richards was fairly hoarse with anger. "You forget that your father has consigned you to my guardianship for the next few years, and you will do exactly as I direct you. But we have wasted time enough in this kind of talk. You are to come with me now; I will set you to work, and see if we cannot take down some of this English impudence."

Star followed the woman as she was bidden, without a word, but there was, nevertheless, a determined gleam in her glorious eyes; her form was as erect and proud, her step as firm as if she felt herself in every respect the equal of the woman who appeared bound to oppress her.

All day long she was kept steadily at work; not a moment was she allowed to rest, except while she was eating. She made beds, swept and dusted rooms, and ran upon errands, until every bone in her slight body ached with weariness and her small feet were nearly blistered.

Her delicate hands had never performed such menial duties before, nor had her gentle heart ever throbbed with such revengeful, rebellious feelings.

It was eight o'clock before her hard mistress released her from her labors, and told her to go directly to bed, so as to be up early in the morning and sweep off the front steps before people should begin to pass.

She went to her room as directed, but instead of retiring, she took from a drawer of her bureau one of the packages which she had rescued from her stateroom on that burning vessel, and, weary as she was, she again descended two flights of stairs, and approaching the library door, tapped gently upon it.

A deep, manly voice bade her come in, and she entered with a firm and decided tread.

Mr. Richards was sitting at his desk, engaged in answering some business letters.

She had timed her visit to him, for she had watched and seen him go into the library after tea was over.

He looked up as she closed the door behind her, and his face relaxed into a kind smile as he saw who it was.

"Do I interrupt you, sir?" Star asked, modestly, but without advancing beyond the threshold.

"Not at all, Miss Star. Come here and sit down; I am just through," he answered, heartily.

She went and stood before him. She did not wish to sit down; she could say what she intended to tell him better standing, she thought.

"You spoke so kindly to me this morning," she began, "that I have ventured to come to you for a little advice this evening."

"Spoke kindly to you! Why on earth shouldn't I speak kindly to you?" he asked, in surprise.

Star tried to smile, but she felt more like dropping her face upon her hands and sobbing aloud.

She controlled herself with an effort, however, and putting some of her papers upon the table beside him, said:

"I have brought you some papers which papa gave me just before—just before he died"—a sob would come in spite of her then. "One is a copy of a letter which he wrote to Mrs. Richards," she went on, "and there is also her reply. Will you kindly read them, and tell me just what you understand by them?"

"Certainly, if you wish," he replied, looking a trifle surprised at her request.

He motioned her again to a seat, then opened the letters and read them both through.

"I understand," he said, when he had finished them, "from your father's letter that, believing he was soon to die, he wished to provide a home for you. He states that he has no friends or relatives in England with whom he would be willing to trust you; that he has next to nothing to leave you, and begs my wife, as the nearest of kin, to assume the care of you and your education until you are able to do something for yourself, trusting to Providence to reward her for her kindness to the orphan. He mentions that he feels assured she will do this, since she once entertained such tender feelings for his wife for the signal service which she once rendered her."

"Do you know what that service was?" Star asked, in a low tone.

"No; I asked Ellen when I read the letter which she received, but she seemed to have forgotten to what he referred. Perhaps you know, though?" Mr. Richards concluded, inquiringly.

Star colored vividly.

"Yes, sir," she returned, with compressed lips.

"Well, what was it? I should like to know."

"My mother was a Miss Chudleigh before her marriage, as you doubtless know, and she lived near Hallowell Park, in Devonshire, where Mrs. Richards was once visiting, and it was during that visit that she saved her from drowning."

"Whew! Your mother saved my wife from drowning, eh?" cried Mr. Richards, in astonishment, and coloring as he remembered his wife's indifference upon the topic when he had questioned her about it.

"Yes, sir. Now, will you please read Mrs. Richards' reply to my father's letter, and tell me how you interpret it?"

Star did not care to dwell upon the subject of her obligation, since Mrs. Richards had seen fit to pass it by so lightly.

"I interpret it just as it reads," he said, after glancing over it; "that she would be very happy to grant your father's request, do her utmost to make a good and useful woman of you, and follow out his wishes regarding your future education as nearly as she could."

"Yes, sir, that is the way papa understood it; that is the way I understand it," Star said, rising and standing erect before him with a gravity that made him wonder what was coming next.

"My father," she continued, "as you know, was a clergyman with a very limited income, and he conducted my education himself until he became too weak to do so, therefore I am pretty well advanced for one of my years. I have read seven books in Virgil, have read two years in French, and am nearly through trigonometry, and have read a good deal in history. I was studying harmony in music when papa died, besides doing a little in painting and drawing. I do not tell you this," Star interposed, with a sad smile, "to boast of what I have done, but that you may understand what my feelings are when I tell you why I came here tonight. Papa wished me to keep on with my Latin, reading Horace and Tacitus, with French, music and history—in fact, he left a written program for me to follow out as nearly as I was able. I am ambitious myself—I am hungry for knowledge. I want a thorough education, and as I must in the future earn my

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 24.)

The Girl Who Was Left Out

The Story of a Girl and a Boy—and How a "Moonbeam" Frock Brought Them Together

By Marjorie Ames

"YOU ought to see the girl who rooms next to me. She's a nice little thing, but her clothes are simply frightful! She hasn't one pretty thing to wear."

It was Estelle Adams—I recognized her voice. And she was talking to the smartly dressed young woman who had come to the college to take a special course. I drew back before they saw me—back into the comforting darkness of my room where no one could see my crimson cheeks. But after all, wasn't it true? I didn't have to overhear that cruel remark to realize that my clothes were not "right" according to the standards of these city folks.

You see, I had been at college a month, but it had only taken me a few days to see that all the dresses I had brought from home were hopelessly "home made" looking and out of style. They had seemed so pretty too when Mother packed them fondly in my trunk! I remember how proud I was as I watched her pack—the dressmaker in town had made my clothes and I felt that I would be truly well-dressed at college.

"I drew back into my room before they saw me"

But somehow, my clothes lacked that certain smartness, that certain distinction that the other girls' clothes seemed to have. It made me awkward, self-conscious. Perhaps that is why they never invited me to their chummy little fudge parties, their gay "pillow fights," their secret candy "pulls." I was always alone, out of it all—and I just hated to think of having Dick see that I was unpopular.

Dick was, well, one of my best friends and he was coming to visit me for the first college dance. Oh, if he only wouldn't come I told myself miserably as I watched the other girls gaily prepare for the event. They all had beautiful dresses and blouses such as I had never owned. How could I, with my unbecoming clothes, hope to be "one of them?"

A Miserable Evening

Dick came. I was happy for a few glorious minutes, but when we entered the ballroom I felt unhappy and self-conscious again. How beautifully all the girls seemed to be dressed! How well their clothes became them! I was a wall-flower that evening—and only a girl knows how that can hurt. I wanted to run wildly from the room, to hide, to cry. But Dick was so loyal and kind; he insisted upon dancing with me, even though I refused him so coldly. You see, I just felt that he was comparing my unattractive clothes with the beautiful gowns the other girls were wearing.

When Dick left, I knew that he was offended and rather disappointed in me. I could tell by the way he marched stiffly away from me that morning, instead of lingering as he used to—back home—to tell me how pretty I looked. Oh, how could anyone look pretty in a hateful old blue dress that hadn't even a bead to brighten it up!

I was unpopular at college, Dick was drifting away from me—everything seemed to be against me. What could I do? No use appealing to Mother or Dad—they wouldn't understand. They thought my clothes were beautiful. But I'd show them what beautiful clothes were, I'd—why I'd make them! I'd make pretty clothes myself, right here in my college room.

But then I realized with a pang how foolish I was. I had never learned to sew, I could never make fashionable dresses like the girls wore. If only there were some way I could learn quickly, without sacrificing too much time from my studies, how to make real attractive clothes. If only there were some rapid way I could learn how to make smart clothes, attractive clothes, becoming clothes.

I Find a Way to Have Pretty Clothes

I remembered seeing somewhere an announcement of a course in dressmaking, and I began to search for it. But I was bitterly disappointed when I found it. Nothing but another "course in dressmaking"—meant, no doubt, for the woman who already knew a little about sewing. Not a modern, up-to-the minute, quick-to-learn kind of course that I was hoping for. Mechanically I glanced through the magazine—and on the very last page I found exactly what I was looking for! It seemed almost as though it had been placed there for just me.

Breathlessly I read through the announcement of this new-way course in clothes-making. Eagerly I read about the remarkable new method of sewing that made it possible to plait and tuck and ruffle with almost lightning rapidity. With a thrill of happy excitement I read how beautiful dresses could now at last be made by women who never sewed before—how anyone could now learn how to make perfect-fitting, fashionable, smart things to wear right at home.

No one knew what the mysterious package was that arrived soon after. Only I knew that it was the first two books of the course that was going to open up a new world to me.

What a Few Months Brought

Then there were many busy days for me. As soon as I finished my class lessons I hurried away to do my home work. Then when all my college requirements were out of the way, I turned eagerly to my study of clothes-making. I got permission to use the sewing-room and one of the sewing-machines, but I didn't tell anyone what I was going to do. How rapidly I was progressing! This was modern dressmaking, I told myself proudly. This was the twentieth-century way of doing things. No waste of time; no hard, tedious work. Everything progressed quickly, easily, step by step to perfect clothes-making. I was positively elated!

"They never invited me to their secret candy 'pulls.'"

With the first book of the course, I received free sufficient material to make a dainty collar-and-cuff set. The course told me how to make this set with no trouble whatever. I'll never forget the first time I wore the pretty collar and cuffs on my dull-blue dress. Even Estelle stopped to admire it. Then in the second lesson I made an apron, then a chemise, then an adorable little house-dress, and finally a prettier afternoon frock than even the dressmaker back home had made for me. And all from material furnished with the course, mind you! Those pretty clothes, the nicest things I had to wear, didn't cost me a cent!

"Is it made of moonbeams?" he gasped

The Dress of Romance

Dick came to the graduation dance. I don't think he would have come if I hadn't sent him a special invitation—and I know I certainly wouldn't have invited him if I didn't feel so sure of myself, so proud, so confident. You see I had spent two whole evenings making the most gorgeous dance frock you ever saw—and well you know what a difference a pretty dress can make!

I wish you could have seen Dick's expression when he saw me. He actually caught his breath, and I'll confess I frankly enjoyed his bewilderment.

"Is it made of moonbeams?" he gasped. It was white net, filmy and delicate, over a lustrous foundation of satin. And there was a tiny cluster of silver flowers at the waist.

That evening I went to sleep with a new song of triumph singing in my heart. For Dick had asked me the Question that every girl, whether she admits it or not, longs to hear. Of course, my "moonbeam" frock was hopelessly crushed—but what difference did it make when I could make a new one whenever I wanted it.

I guess you want me to finish up my story—but it does sound so much like a "movie" plot! Dick and I are married now, and he has done so well that I can buy all the pretty clothes I want. But somehow, whenever I want a special gown for a very special occasion, I just sit right down and make it myself. Creating a new design is always so fascinating, and I enjoy making clothes the new, modern, quick way. I don't think I ever got as much satisfaction out of anything as I do out of making pretty clothes for myself. I know every girl and woman must feel the same way.

The New-Way Course in Clothes-Making

The School of Modern Dress is all that its name implies. It is an institution founded for the purpose of teaching the simplest, most practical, most up-to-date methods of clothes-making to the woman in the home—the woman who has no time or money to waste. Expert dressmakers and designers have finally, after much experiment, research and practical tests, reduced all the important principles of dressmaking to their simplest possible form and arranged them in easy-to-follow steps. Through this simplified method even the woman who never sewed before can quickly learn how to make pretty clothes at home.

Please bear in mind that this new-way course is entirely different, entirely advanced above all other methods of clothes-making. It is the only dressmaking course of its kind in the world. It teaches you how to ruffle, shirr, tuck, plait and bind the wonderful new, quick way. It teaches you the quickest, easiest and most satisfactory methods of cutting, fitting and finishing fashionable clothes. It teaches you the new rapid way of accomplishing in one hour what formerly took a whole evening!

And, in addition, with this course you are supplied absolutely without cost with all the materials and trimmings necessary to make a collar-and-cuff set, an apron, a chemise, a house dress and an afternoon dress! You will receive also, if you do not delay, a free dress form which makes your course even more simple, and a sewing basket containing convenient sewing equipment. Write at once for more information! You cannot afford to delay one single minute.

Mail Coupon for Valuable Information

It costs you nothing to find out all about the School of Modern Dress. It costs you nothing to find out about the important little secrets of line and color, of harmony and silhouette, that actually make clothes look smart and fashionable. It costs you nothing to find out what the rapid new sewing methods are that banish forever all the time-waste and monotony of old-fashioned sewing. Simply mail the coupon, and complete information will be sent to you at once.

Remember there's no obligation. We want to send you this free information so that you can see for yourself what this wonderful course in new-way clothes-making will mean to you. Clip the coupon NOW, fill it in and get it into the mail box at once. Address the School of Modern Dress, Dept. 711-K, 821 Jefferson St., Buffalo, New York.

School of Modern Dress,
Dept. 711-K, 821 Jefferson St.,
Buffalo, New York.

You may send me, without obligation on my part, information regarding the new-way course in home clothes-making.

Name .....

Address .....

City..... State.....

Comfort 11-21

Dont Send 1 Penny

Manchurian FOX SCARF

Delivery FREE

$4.45

Silk Lined

Just send your name and address and I will send this fur scarf to you. You don't pay one penny until the fur is delivered at your door by the postman This is a wonderful opportunity of getting a $9.00 scarf for $4.45. Our price is amazingly low. Compare it with others and see for yourself.

A Fashion Necessity

Every stylish woman is wearing a fur scarf with her coat, suit, dress or waist. It is appropriate for every occasion. This scarf is made of Manchurian fox, which has long, soft, silky hair. This is not the genuine American fox, but will wear much better than the genuine. Scarf is a large animal shape with head at one end and tail and paws at the other. Lined throughout with all-silk lining. Also has silk ruffle around neck. Very large and graceful. Colors: Black, Lucille brown or taupe gray.

SEND NOW just your name and address—no money. When the fur scarf arrives pay the postman $4.45 for it. We have paid the delivery charges. Wear the scarf. If you don't find it all you expected, return it and we will cheerfully refund your money at once. This is our risk—not yours Be sure to give color. Order by No. 17.

Walter Field Co. Dept. B4077 Chicago

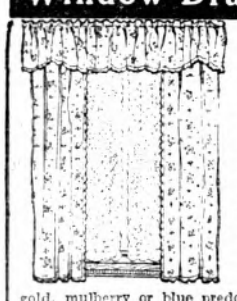
Reduced Prices

and THREE YEARS TO PAY for this beautiful

MEISTER PIANO



Eight exquisite styles to choose from and the one you select will be sent you on

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL—ALL FREIGHT PREPAID

A guaranteed saving of $100 to $150.

If you like the piano we will sell it to you on small monthly payments to suit your convenience as low as $8.00 per month. No cash deposit asked. No interest on payments. No extras of any kind. Stool free with piano. Write today for our catalog, illustrated in the natural colors of the wood. It's free. If you are interested in player-pianos send for free catalog. We have a fine selection. Rothschild & Co., Dept. 11-G Chicago

Beautiful Cretonne Window Draperies $2.95

Never before has such a bargain been offered in high-grade window draperies. Dress up your home for the winter with these handsome cretonne sets. More durable than lace curtains; do not soil so easily. Most city homes have them. Regular $4.50 value. Sets consist of two side pieces 2¼ yards long, and shaped valance, finished with heavy, looped edging, well made—ready to hang. Patterns and colors suitable for any room; harmonizing color combinations with rose, gold, mulberry or blue predominating, in either floral or bird patterns. Sent postpaid anywhere in U. S.

SEND NO MONEY! Merely tell us which of the four color combinations you prefer and draperies will be mailed to you at once. When they come, pay postman $2.95—no trouble, no bother. If not thoroughly satisfied, your money will be returned immediately.

GET OUR BARGAIN BULLETIN showing other wonderful values in draperies, curtains and interior decorative articles. Greatest values ever shown. FREE—with order or upon request. Write for it today.

SCOTT-WIMPEY CO. Box 431 CHICAGO, ILL.

5 Magazines —Good— $1

Woman's World,	(Monthly)	Our Price
Good Stories,	(Monthly)
American Woman,	(Monthly)	$1.00
Mother's Magazine,	(Monthly)
The Farm Journal,	(Monthly)	ALL FIVE FOR 1 YEAR

ORDER BY CLUB NUMBER 12

A Dollar Bill will do—We take the risk

Send all orders to

Whitlock & Summerhays

25 North Dearborn Street, CHICAGO

BOYS GIRLS EARN $1.00 AN HOUR MEN WOMEN

Send for 25 ten cent packages

WE TRUST YOU CHRISTMAS CARDS, TAGS & SEALS When sold, send us $1.50, keep $1.00, and order more SEND NO MONEY

ORLEANS PARCEL POST CO., Bx 3926, ORLEANS, VT.

The Painted Kid

By Grace Downey Tinkham

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"LORD A'mighty! See what that cat's brought in now!"

I looked up when Luke spoke,—he and I were sitting on the little stoop of our bunkhouse after dinner—and saw John Neeley, our boss, coming toward us with a kid about twenty. The funniest looking kid I ever looked at—not funny, either, naturally. But, say! A woman can get by with that so far as I'm concerned—but a man! Luke and I sat gaping like two fools.

"Sam, Luke," said John, "meet Billy Travers. The Reverend Ernest Strong sent him down from Chicago to his brother Herman to work in the harvest, but Herman says they have plenty help now, so he turned him over to us. Guess we can use him, can't we?"

"Sure," said I. We stood up and shook hands with the kid.

"I'll put him in your care, Sam," continued John. "You can make room for him in your bunkhouse." Then he turned to the boy. "Sam is foreman here," said he, "you'll take orders from him."

"Yes, sir," the kid answered respectfully. And in spite of his dolled-up face I liked the straight look of his blue eye, and the square cut of his jaw.

John returned to the house, and I told the kid to sit down and tell us what he could do.

"Just learn as far as farming is concerned," said he. "But I'll sure try hard, sir."

"You don't need to 'sir' me," I informed. "Call me Sam, like the rest of the boys."

Then I began to size the kid up. He wore one of those little skin-tight suits, like the casing on a sausage, only a darn sight flimsier. It looked as if it might have hysterics any minute and fly to pieces if the kid made a hasty move. The cuffs and collar of his noisy striped shirt were soiled, and his shoes worn as if they could testify to many a good mile in their young life. He stood leaning against the side of the house, staring out over the fields of yellow grain at the sunset with hungry, sunken eyes. I looked at the kid's body. The frame appeared big enough and strong enough, but, gosh, that kid was thin! It seemed as if he hadn't met up with square grub in months.

"Say, kid, when did you eat last?" I burst out. His lids dropped, and the muscles of his jaw tightened.

"Yesterday. I—I had a chance later, but—but didn't want anything," he stammered.

"Do you suppose everything's eaten up?" I asked Luke. "I ought to get something under this kid's belt."

"Margaret will scare up something," said Luke. "Lucy—or whatever that new hired girl's name is—I saw hiking for the village an hour ago; but don't worry, Margaret sure will see that you get something. Nothing runs hungry or sick in these parts when she's around."

That sure was true. John's Margaret couldn't be surpassed for kindness of heart, or looks, or brains, either, if you were to search the entire universe and the heavens besides. I know, for I helped John raise her from a little tike of two, when her mother died, to the blooming, lovely girl of eighteen. John and I had lived together for years, and were more like brothers than boss of a five-hundred acre farm, and foreman.

"Well, come along, kid," said I. "We'll forage."

"I'd like to wash up, first," he replied. "I—I haven't washed since yesterday—I know I look fierce!"

I showed him where to get water and towels, and a few minutes later you wouldn't have known him. All the dirt and red paint was cleaned from his face, and his light, curly hair slicked back as neat as a whistle. He looked mighty white with that rouge off, with those black eyebrows and eyelashes appearing longer and blacker against that white skin. But, say, that kid was easy to look at!

I took him to the house, and into the kitchen, then went in search of Margaret. She came a-running, and I introduced her to the kid. Quicker than it takes to say Jack Robinson that little girl had coffee made, and a big plate of ham and eggs before the kid. Maybe he didn't put them away! At first he sat kind of nervous and trembly, following with his eyes every move our girl made, and with a look in his face as if he was seeing a real live angel for the first time in his young life. Then the physical of him got the upper hand and he went to it. I took a cup of coffee to keep him company, and Margaret busied around, talking, the red lips of her a-smiling and the black eyes snapping.

"You're from Chicago, aren't you, Billy?" asked she, calling the kid by his first name as she did the other boys, although she could see with half an eye that he was no regular farm hand. "Mr. Strong told Dad."

"Yes, ma'am," he answered, shifting in his chair, a little restless.

"Once, a long time ago, I was in Chicago," she went on. "Do you remember, Sam? The time you and Dad took me with you on a business trip. And just as we were coming down the elevated stairs at State and VanBuren, we saw a boy being arrested and rushed into the patrol. How rough the policemen were with him when he fought back! How scared I was, and how I cried! I was just a kiddie then, but it left an impression. He was a thief, they said."

The kid choked over his coffee, went pretty white, and got to his feet.

"Thank you," he said to Margaret as he turned to the door, groping. She didn't seem to notice anything wrong, she was used to queer specimens coming to the farm. I followed the kid out, having all I could do to keep from bursting out: "What the dickens is the matter with you?" There sure was something.

I thought it over after I got stretched out that night. The kid had been in trouble, but the thing hadn't got him, he wasn't hard-boiled. I looked at him as he lay on his cot, the clear moonlight pouring in on him. Deep circles showed black under his eyes, and his cheek bones stood up altogether too prominent. "You've been sick, kid," said I to myself. "Also, you've been in some scrape. But why in thunder do you come to a he'man's farm looking for work all painted up like a ballet toe-twirler?" Doggone if I could figure that out, so I turned over and went to sleep, intending to mind my own housekeeping and let others mind theirs.

The next morning I rustled a pair of overalls for him and a straw hat, and put him in the field pitching the load. Help was a problem that summer. It went against me to have to set the kid to such hard graft right away, but there was nothing else to do, and the crop had to be harvested. When he came in at noon, sweat running in streams down his face, I asked him how things were coming.

"Fine! Fine!" said he.

"Not too swift for you, is it?"

"For me? I should say not."

"You'll do, kid," I thought to myself, "you'll do! You've got grit—if you do paint!"

Heavy clouds hung low in the east all afternoon, and I had to rush the men, like a regular old Simon Legree, to get the grain that was down into the barns. At five o'clock she started coming. Thunder rumbling and crashing. Lightning cutting and slashing through the black clouds, looking for all the world like the feather-stitching on a crazy quilt. Then she opened up and down she came. "Go to it!" yelled Luke, shaking his fist at the locoed elements. "The last load's in—so let her come!"

That was the middle of August, and two weeks more of slaving work ahead. If you know what a real grain farm is in harvest, you know ours. The summer sun beating down like a bunch of fire, sweating, swearing, tired, hungry men; grain dust, grain bristles, the humming of the binder, the singing of the threshing machine; the stench of horse sweat and man sweat, and a smell of cooking from the farm kitchen mingled in.

At the end of the third week we had the crop in and threshed. Most of the help had left and gone to the city. The kid asked to stay on, so I talked it over with John, and we decided to keep him, putting him doing odd jobs about the place, mending fences, tending the stock, and picking early apples. We didn't really need the kid, but I had a feeling that I wanted to keep him. The farm had certainly done him good.

"Oh, I'm 'jake' now!" he'd say if I asked him how he was feeling. After the first week he had picked up wonderful, the fresh air and hearty grub had turned the trick, had built him up and filled him out. He was easy enough to look at before—after he cleaned off that doggone paint—that got me! Evidently he didn't use it as a regular thing. But when he got shaved up of a Sunday, curly hair slicked back, spick-and-span shirt on, soft collar open at the throat—say, have you ever noticed that some men's throats are sure as pretty as a woman's? That kid was a looker, I'll tell the world!

One Sunday morning the kid and I sat on the side porch reading. John and Herman had gone to the station to meet the Rev. Ernest Strong, his son Glen, and a friend. We were to have them to dinner that night, and Margaret was helping Lucy prepare things. She sat down the porch a-ways whipping dressing for the salad. The kid sure wasn't doing much reading, for he kept rattling his paper all the time, and I knew for every rattle his eyes wandered in the direction of our girl. Say, anything that girl of ours wanted she sure could have! But, when somebody wanted her—well, that was different! John and I had to about know the "who's who and why" of the aspirant. Not that the kid had made any advances, he knew how to keep his place. But gosh a'mighty, those eyes of his could talk, in spite of all the repressing of self he tried to do!

As we sat there, Margaret suddenly said: "Billy, come here, I want to talk to you."

The kid got to his feet like a shot.

"Mr. Strong told Dad that you used to do an act in one of the Chicago cafes."

The kid nodded.

"Next week," she went on, "I am going to give a party for Glen Strong and his friend, and I wanted something a little different from the usual country entertainment. Would you——"

"Do my act for you? I'd do any——" He stopped short, and Margaret cried impulsively: "Billy, you're a dear!" which sent the kid to the seventh heaven, blushing crimson.

"I'll get my makeup and do my act for you, if you like," offered he.

Our girl was delighted, and the kid disappeared in the direction of the bunkhouse. Soon he returned. Gosh, he nearly brought me to my feet, bowing and scraping! I thought it was some swell Chicago dame come with the Rev. Ernest, who had broken away from the bunch and hoofed it out by herself. There he was, all dolled up in female jimcracks, blond wig, powder and paint!

"Oh, a female impersonation act!" cried Margaret.

The kid went through his stunt. And maybe he couldn't sing and maybe he couldn't shake a wicked foot!

Then came the night of the party. Glen Strong had brought a young fellow by the name of Colman with him from Chicago. Margaret had invited all her bunch in, male and female. The kid, according to plans, appeared after the rest had arrived all decked out like a regular vamp, and Margaret introduced him as Miss something-or-other. Some of them fell for him right. It sure was humorous. Later on he gave his act, and it went fine.

Then came the refreshments. Luke and I were on the east side of the porch dishing up the ice cream. Glen's friend, Colman, stood to one side puffing a cigarette. He hadn't mixed in with the bunch much—felt himself too highbrow, I suppose. But he had been camping on our Margaret's trail, persistent. I didn't stomach that so easy—that young bird wouldn't look you in the eye. Pretty soon the kid stepped out, extracted a match from somewhere in his paraphernalia, and lit up. Colman instantly stepped up to him.

"I've been waiting to get a word with you!" he jerked out. "What are you doing here—you thief!"

"None of your damn business!"

"I'll make it my business!"

"I'm not afraid of anything you can do," the kid gritted.

"You thief!" sneered Colman.

The kid drew back sharply, then straightened. I saw his fists double at his sides. Like a shot out of a gun he landed on the face of the other. The Chicago guest crashed back into the railing, saved himself, and sprang at the kid. The kid stood doubled, ready for him. They clinched, Colman pummeling the kid in the ribs. The kid shook him off and landed a blow, Colman came back at him. He got the kid down. They seemed pretty well matched as to weight and strength. Over and over on the floor they struggled, cursing, groaning, hammering at each other. The kid wrenched himself free and sprang to his feet. Colman, some winded, staggered to his. With a short, quick jab he caught the kid on the cheek-bone, laying it open. The kid wobbled, went down on one knee, got to his feet, swung hard and landed square on the point of the other's jaw. Colman dropped with a thud. The kid had put him to sleep!

All the bunch had gathered by that time, and stood crowding around, open mouthed and staring. I pulled the kid from the gang and pushed him toward the bunkhouse. The female finery hung on him in ribbons; his arms and legs showed scratched and bleeding through the lace and silk. The blond wig was gone, tramped into a dirty mess of a hank of hair. Someone lifted Colman and carried him into the house, where Luke and I worked over him. The party had sense enough to take themselves off. The kid sure knew where to hit a man to lay him cold! I thought that Chicago bird would never come to!

"How did this thing start?" the Rev. Ernest asked me, taking me to one side. And I told him the insulting remark I had heard the Colman boy make.

"I want to see Billy," said he. "And I would like you and Mr. Neeley to come with me."

So, John and the Rev. Ernest and I went to the bunkhouse. The kid had torn off what remained of his female outfit, and stood in trousers and shirt flinging things into a battered old suitcase, looking white and tight-jawed. He never turned when he heard us, but kept right on throwing things in.

The Rev. Ernest went to him and said: "Billy, I think now is the time to explain a few things to Mr. Neeley and Sam, don't you?"

The Rev. Ernest had a way with him. He was a little man physically, but somehow you felt the bigness of his soul. The kid looked up. He was white as chalk.

"Yes, sir, I'll tell them," he said. "Guy Colman called me a—a thief," he began, in a voice that was none too steady. "That's why I struck him. I'm not a thief—although I stole once—just once—if taking what belonged to me could be called that!" He stopped a minute, his young body strained and tense as if it hurt all over. "In a little town in the southern part of Illinois I used to live with an old uncle," he went on. "While I served overseas he died, and when I got back I sold everything, and with the few hundred dollars from the household goods and other things went to Chicago to find work. The war had cut off my education, so I was not so well equipped to land anything. For a year I worked at different odd jobs, changing when I thought I could better myself, and getting along all right for I had my small capital to fall back on. The next year was harder, my money was gone. One day I thought of using a female impersonation act I had done in army entertainments. Finally I landed with the Colman Cafe, they used entertainers. Six months everything went fine, then the flu grabbed me. I lay in the hospital a month, and when I got out there was no money and no job.

The last pay envelope I had received before I was sick figured up five dollars short. That happened occasionally with the Colman help—Guy had charge of that end of it—and the old man was always queer about squaring such things. So, as soon as I was able, I went to see him. He told me to come the next evening prepared to give my act.

I had just got from my clothes into my make-up, when he sent word that he was trying out someone else that night, and that there would be nothing doing. My pockets were empty. I hung around until late, hoping he would settle with me, or give me a job. Then one of the waiters came and said if I wanted to see the old man I'd better be about it, for it was time for him to blow. I tore into my own clothes, and rushed to his office—didn't stop to take the paint off my face. He was not in the room. A drawer in his deck stood open, and in it my eye became glued to a crinkled bill, some loose change, and a five-dollar gold piece. He owed me five. I reached in and took it, intending to tell him. As I turned I faced Guy Colman. He had never been strong for me, he knew that I suspected that he had slipped through the fingers of the draft board.

Like a flash he pounced on me, called the patrol, and had me rushed off to jail. Mr. Strong came across me there the next morning, and I told him everything. He knew Mr. Colman and got in touch with him at once. The charges were withdrawn. Then Mr. Strong found someone who was coming through this part of the country and he made arrangements for me to come with him. We had but a few minutes to get from the j-jail," the kid stumbled over the word, "to the street intersection where we were to meet. I didn't stop for anything—not even to clean up. That place had held me all night, it was a nightmare—I couldn't get away fast enough!"

So that was the answer to the kid's painted face! He flung a few more things into the old suitcase, then suddenly turned to John.

"I'm dead sorry about making this fuss tonight, sir," he said, looking contrite. "I'll get out of here now."

John Neeley had no flea heart about him, that organ was constructed big to fit his big body. He went to the kid and put his hand on his shoulder.

"Stay right here if you want to, son," said he. "If I hadn't considered you anything but what that young sneak called you, you would have been on your way long ago."

The kid's face lit up so grateful that it shone. The Rev. Ernest's, too, was beaming.

Just then Margaret came bursting in with a basin of water, gauze and antiseptic.

"What I expected!" blazed she, standing the things down on the table with a thump, whirling and facing us. "A nice bunch of brainless wonders! Billy with a cut cheek, his hands skinned and bruised—and not one of you with sense enough to attend to him!"

Darned if we hadn't forgotten the kid's cuts. Our girl drove the Rev. Ernest, her Dad and me from the bunkhouse as if we were so many half-witted incorrigibles. Then she turned to the kid. He stood looking at her, a thin stream of blood running down from the cut on his cheek.

I didn't wait to hear what they said—those two—for, say, some folks don't need any language! The things that kid's eyes told couldn't be expressed in any language ever invented! And maybe hers didn't flash back a wireless that sure spelled paradise to the kid. Shucks! What's the use of language, anyway, if you can talk like that!

Vapo Cresolene Est. 1879

The Vapor Treatment for Coughs and Colds

The time for Vapo-Cresolene is at the first indication of a cold or sore throat, which are so often the warnings of dangerous complications.

Simple to use; you just light the little lamp that vaporizes the Cresolene and place it near the bed at night.

The soothing antiseptic vapor is breathed all night, making breathing easy, relieving the cough and easing the sore throat and congested chest.

Cresolene is recommended for Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Influenza, Bronchitis, Coughs and Nasal Catarrh. Its germicidal qualities make it a protection when these diseases are epidemic. It gives great relief in Asthma.

Cresolene has been recommended and used for the past 42 years. The benefit derived from it is unquestionable.

Sold by druggists. Send for descriptive booklet 24 THE VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt St., New York or Leming-Miles Bldg., Montreal, Canada.

Signs of Good Luck

To see a frog is the sign of gold.

A bent or perforated coin brings good luck.

It is lucky to be born on Good Friday.

To see a white rat is a fortunate omen.

A horseshoe brings good luck to him who finds it.

It is lucky to rise from slumber on the right side.

To find pieces of old iron is considered lucky.

It is said to be lucky to rub shoulders with a hunchback.

A mole on the right foot is said to be a sign of wisdom.

To sow grain during the increase of the moon will bring good crops.

If you have two crowns on your head you will eat bread in two countries.

When a man's finger joints crack it is a sign some one is doing him a kindness.

He who eats goose at Michaelmas will not want money for the rest of the year.

To find a four-leaf clover in the fields is said to bring the finder good things.

Small spiders, especially black ones, are called money spiders, and bring good luck if not disturbed or injured.

If you catch sight of the new moon for the first time when it is on your right, especially if you see it over your right shoulder, you may expect good luck.

If you find a pin with the point toward you, pick it up, it will bring good luck, hence the saying:

"See a pin and pick it up,
All the days you'll have good luck;
See a pin and let it lie,
You'll need a pin before you die."

Love Will Find the Way

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

He was there beside her; she was forced to meet his eye, to hear the sound of his voice, to reply to the questions that he addressed to her. Why, then, should she deny herself the happiness of lying for those few brief moments within his arms? Why should she not once again feel their pressure about her? Why should she not be happy in one blissful, forgetful moment, while she closed her heart to the thought that he must despise her for her cruel, heartless letter?

And she did know it; she knew as well as if she had heard the words from his own lips that he had come there solely to hurt her, and yet she loved him so that she forgave him for it without the asking. She felt that it was infinitely better that he should despise her than that he should know the truth, and she never thought of censuring him for his lack of generosity.

She loved him; that was the explanation of it all, and she put out her hands to him, without daring to lift her eyes as he drew her to him.

Underwood uttered a little, half-bewildered exclamation. Perhaps it would not have been the word to have been heard by ears polite; but he neither thought of that, nor would have cared if he had. He only followed the couple with his eyes.

And through the maze of dancers they circled down the long room, Marian closing her eyes and striving with all her soul to fancy herself back in one of those drawing-rooms where she had been with Anne Gordon, when June Beckwith had been escort for them both. She tried to fancy that they were waltzing as they had done then, when they were so happy in their unacknowledged love, now dead to both of them forever.

But somehow she could not put the thought of that death from her. It seemed to stand between them rigid and defying, grinning with hideous mirth into her closed eyes, refusing banishment even for that little moment for which she prayed.

He was holding her even more closely than he had done in the old days. Her head was almost upon his shoulder. She felt his breath on her cheek, scorching through to the very soul. The moment was one of most exquisite anguish, and she thanked Heaven when the sound of his mocking voice ended it.

"You are the queen of all this splendor tonight, Miss Reade. Does it make you happy?" he asked, striving to keep the bitterness out of his voice, but not succeeding. "Does it make you quite content to know that you have satins and jewels and—homage laid at your feet, for you to trample upon, if you so desire? Are you pleased with the new life that is opening before you?"

She hesitated a little while before she could force herself to speak. It seemed to her that at first she was choking, that she must tell him the whole, awful truth, and cry out to him for his pity if she must refuse his love; and then the memory of all that he would suffer came back to her, and her love was great enough to make her sacrifice herself in order that she might save him suffering.

She put her hands up to her throat and half-paused in the waltz, but he forced her on. He bent himself back, still holding her closely to him, and looked into her face. The agony she was enduring was terrible, but she forced herself to answer, even though brokenly:

"Yes, I am—happy."

He laughed loudly, hoarsely.

"Allow me to congratulate you!" he exclaimed. "Surely it is only the favored of the gods who are in reality happy. And you like your new friends better than the old?"

She bowed her head, and a flush stole into her cheeks.

"Not better," she answered dully. "No new friendships that I can form would ever take the place of the old. There are those in my life—in my other life that I can never forget and never cease to—regret."

"Your other life?" he repeated.

"The old life that is dead and laid at rest forever. The old life that—— Oh, for the love of Heaven, let me go! Can't you see that this is maddening to me? Have you no pity?"

There was anguish in her voice, anguish in her expression, but it did not appeal to June Beckwith. Contact with the woman whom he loved more than he had even guessed, the woman who was hopelessly lost to him, the woman who had preferred this infamy to being his wife, had seemed to madden him. It had aroused all the brute that lies dormant in every nature, a natural result, according to the theories of Darwin and of evolution.

He dropped his arms from about her and laughed. There was a flush on his face, a quiver on his lips, a flashing, scintillant light in his eyes that half-dazzled her, but the laugh was cruel, brutal.

"Upon my word, Miss Reade," he exclaimed, his voice raised above its ordinary pitch, but somewhat drowned by the music, "you would make a most clever actress. I don't believe that Agnes Booth could have done that line better. If your father should not make a success of his new venture, it might be advisable for you to try the histrionic profession. If you should need a reference, you might tell your prospective manager to apply to me."

He had scarcely finished the sentence when Underwood's hand was placed on his arm. The watchful eye had seen June's excitement, and not knowing what the result might be, he was there to avert any scene.

"Come!" he exclaimed, in a low tone. "I want you. It is time that we were going."

"Going?" cried Beckwith. "Why, the evening has barely begun."

"But there is something that I wish you to do for me."

"Very well, since you will have it so. Miss Reade, I see one of your new friends approaching—Mr. Dick Gresham. I resign you to him, my most worthy successor."

He bowed to her with exaggerated courtesy, and allowed his friend to lead him away.

"Dick Gresham!" he exclaimed hysterically, as they entered the deserted coat-room together. "Ha! ha! I say, old man, did you ever think that I should be cut out by a gambler, and, particularly one of the Dick Gresham type? Ha! ha! ha!"

"Be quiet, June," whispered Underwood earnestly. "What is the matter with you?"

"The matter!" cried Beckwith, turning almost fiercely upon him, the hysterical smile dying from his eyes as if by magic. "What is the matter with me? Nothing; only that I think sometimes I am going crazy. I love that girl. Low as she has sunk, I would face anything to make her my wife, even now, if she would but come to me and say that she desired it so. I thought I despised her. I came here to convince myself, and the sight of her has made me mad. Oh, Fred, get me out of here! The place is stifling me. Get me out, or I feel that I shall commit some horrible crime!"

Underwood did not reply; his face was set and stern. He held an overcoat, and June Beckwith slipped his arms into it; then Underwood handed him his hat. As they were passing through the hall, June looked in at the door of the dancing-hall.

"Look!" he exclaimed dully. "The woman whom I would have made my wife is in the arms of the most notorious gambler in New York. She is finishing with him the waltz which she began with me."

Still Underwood did not speak, but clutching June's arm closely, he almost forced him out of the front door and into the street.

CHAPTER XII.

ANNE GORDON'S PLEA.

How the night finished for Marian, she could never quite recall.

It seemed to her that she was in the midst of some horrible nightmare, from which there was no hope of an awakening. As the evening progressed, and the wine began to take effect, the persons present became more indifferent to their conversation, even in her presence; and when the last guest had departed, Marian turned and faced her father, who stood there beside her, his countenance flushed with wine.

"Thank Heaven, it is over!" she gasped. "I could not have borne it a moment longer. I felt as if I were stifling. Father, who were those people?"

She asked the question desperately, and his brows contracted with anger.

"My friends," he answered curtly. "Your association with Anne Gordon has spoiled you, Marian. I wish that you had never seen the girl!"

"But father——"

"Never mind the 'buts'! You remember the promise that you made to me, I suppose. If you intend keeping it, do so without comment. You are too high and mighty to suit me, my girl. 'Those people,' as you have chosen to call them, are perfectly respectable members of society. That you never happened to meet them in the drawing-rooms of Anne Gordon's friends was the misfortune of Anne Gordon. I don't propose to have you dictate to me who my guests shall be, and I do propose that you shall treat them with the courtesy and respect that is due them in my house. You have sworn that you would obey me in all things. Very well; I command your obedience in this. And now, good night. It is very late, and you must be sleepy; I know I am."

She made no endeavor to detain him, but followed him up-stairs, leaving the servants to lock the house.

She heard him whistling a tune from an opera-bouffe as he closed his door, and a shiver passed over her.

"I wonder how it is all to end?" she asked herself wearily. "I wonder how long I can endure the misery to which he is subjecting me? Oh, it seems to me that anything would be better than this! What have I done, what have I done to deserve it all? What terrible sin have I committed, that I am to be punished beyond my powers to endure?"

She undressed herself hurriedly and went to bed. She never allowed herself, even mentally, to mention the name of June Beckwith. She was trying obstinately to forget that she had seen him; but she might as well have striven to forget that she lived.

He was there, pictured upon her mental retina with a distinctness that was almost uncanny, even while she tried the hardest to shut him out. She turned out the light, went to bed, and closed her eyes tightly, as if thereby she might banish him; but she fell asleep with the picture still before her, and mercifully forgot.

She remembered in the morning that Anne Gordon had told June to ask her to come to luncheon; and, while the sight of her old and well-loved friend had grown almost painful to her, she decided, after a little consideration, that it would be better for her to go.

"If I don't go," she reasoned, "Anne will come here; and I cannot bear for her to come beneath this roof—anything seems better than that."

She stood and looked at herself in the glass for a moment, when her hat was on, and a little, bitter exclamation passed her lips.

"There is not a streak of gray in my hair, there is not a line of care in my face," she said slowly. "My youth is growing hateful to me. I wish I were old and wrinkled and gray; it might bring me rest and peace."

She turned away wearily and left the house. The fresh air touched her hot cheek soothingly. The walk did her good, and when she rang the bell of Anne Gordon's home there was a flush on her face that made her beauty thrilling.

She was shown to Miss Gordon's boudoir, and the friend of years rose with that loyalty that was one of her sweetest characteristics, and kissed her.

"It is so good of you to come, Marian," she said, gently drawing her to a sofa, and seating herself with her arm about the young girl's waist. "I was half-afraid that you might be too much fatigued after—after last night."

She could scarcely force herself to speak the reference to that evening, and she observed that Marian's eyes were not lifted.

"I was tired—I am—tired," Marian stammered. "I have only come for a little while, and then I must go—home to rest."

"Go home?" repeated Anne curiously. "I hoped that I could persuade you to remain with me, dearest."

Marian glanced up uncomfortably.

"No," she answered, with a fleeting smile; "not this time."

There was a painful pause. Miss Gordon seemed to be considering what she should say. Her lips twitched nervously, and then, in a commonplace manner, she asked:

"Was it pleasant—your ball last evening—little one?"

"Yes—that is, no; I'm afraid I did not enjoy it particularly."

Miss Gordon waited for a moment for something more definite, but it did not come. She drew closer to Marian, and with her arm still encircling the girlish waist, she said:

"What has come between us, dear? There was a time when you came to me with all your little griefs. There was a time when you kept no secret from me—when our lives were shared each with the other. I have loved you as my own sister, Marian. Dearest, have I failed you in any way, that we are growing so strangely apart? Are you afraid to trust me with the secret that is troubling you, dear?"

Marian looked up, but her eyes met those of her friend but for a moment. She smiled, but it was so strained, so miserable that Anne Gordon almost cried out.

"I have no—secret," she answered dully.

"Don't say that!" cried Anne desperately. "Suppose I tell you that I know. Suppose I——"

But before she could complete the sentence, Marian had turned to her wildly, the terrible fear in her heart pictured upon her countenance. She thought Anne Gordon referred to the robbery that her father had committed, and her horror and shame were indescribable.

"You know!" she gasped. "You know! Oh, for the love of Heaven, no! No, not that! Anything but that!"

"Hush, dear!" cried Miss Gordon, drawing her even closer and speaking rapidly, passionately into her ear. "You must not think I love you less because—because your father is not the man that we would both have him. You must not think that a single atom of my respect has gone from you. I love you just the same, my darling, and there is nothing under heaven that I would not do to save you the shame, the humiliation of it all. Oh, Marian, I am so sorry for you!"

The exclamation contained infinite tenderness and sorrow, for Marian had thrown herself upon her knees and with a hoarse cry had buried her head in her friend's lap. It seemed to her that she could never look Anne Gordon in the face again, knowing that she knew her father to be a thief.

"Even this shame could not be spared me," she groaned. "I had hoped that you, of all the world, might never know!"

They were misunderstanding each other terribly. While Marian thought her friend referred to the robbery, Miss Gordon thought Marian referred to the fact of her father's degradation, in that he had taken his daughter into a gambling-house to live, and the girl's very anguish gave the loyal friend hope that matters were not so bad as June Beckwith had stated.

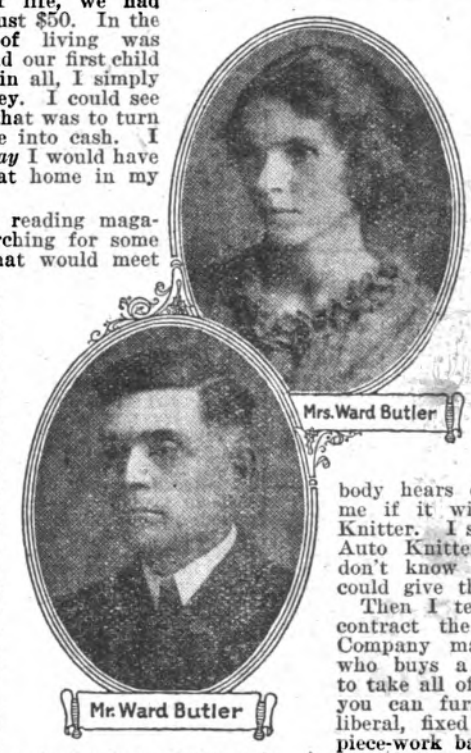
"Oh, dearest, it is much better that I should know!" she cried, lovingly laying her hand upon the bowed head—"it is much better! Marian,

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 19.)

How My Wife and I Earn Money at Home in Spare Time

Our actual experience turning spare hours into dollars. And how others—young and old, housewives and girls, can make extra money in the same way—without leaving home.

By Ward Butler



THE 29th day of March, 1916, found me with a bride to support; a great deal of confidence in my ability to support her—and just fifty dollars in cash to give us a start in life.

I started out with a sort of a hazy belief in the old saying that "two can live as cheaply as one." But it didn't take me long to get that foolish idea out of my head. You can't buy two pairs of shoes for the price of one—not by a good deal!

I worked with all my might and main. But my Saturday night pay-envelope was scarcely enough for one—and I had two to support. To make matters worse, I was often out of work—nothing coming in, and the rent and grocery bills mounting up, just the same.

At the end of the first year I sat down and took stock. By denying ourselves even the common necessities of life, we had managed to set aside just $50. In the meantime the cost of living was steadily increasing—and our first child had come to us. All in all, I simply had to have more money. I could see just one way out, and that was to turn my "after-supper" time into cash. I decided that in some way I would have to earn money right at home in my spare hours.

I began desperately reading magazines and papers, searching for some kind of home work that would meet my needs. Then finally one evening I saw an advertisement that appealed to me from the first glance. It was headed "How To Make Money In Your Own Home." The plan, I soon learned from the advertisement, was to knit socks on a hand-knitting machine. The company that furnished the machine offered to buy at a fixed price all of the standard wool socks knit on the machine and to furnish replacement yarn for each lot of socks. "Here," I said to myself, "is something that looks good to me." So that very night I wrote a letter to the Auto Knitter Hosiery Company, Buffalo, N. Y., asking them to tell me all about their proposition.

In just a few days I had an answer. The whole thing seemed mighty fair and square to me. The more I thought about it, the better I liked the idea, so I made up my mind to get a machine and make a start at the work.

When the machine arrived I began studying the Instruction Book. Everything was as clear as could be. I had only my after-supper time to devote to the work, but in just a few evenings I was complete master of the machine, and really knitting socks many times as fast as an experienced knitter could turn them out by hand.

Then came the time to put the company's offer to a practical test. One evening my wife and I gathered together all the socks I had knit, and made them up into a neat bundle. Bright and early the next morning I mailed the package to the Auto Knitter Hosiery Company. It was only a few days until we received a letter from them with a check for the socks; also a package containing yarn to replace that used in making the socks. At last I had found spare time home work that paid real money.

I began then in real earnest, putting in every possible moment at the work. I bought my machine in November, 1918. During that winter I knit over 500 pairs of socks.

For a while I continued to send my shipments to the company, and always received checks promptly. Then one day I said to myself: "These socks are such splendid values that I believe I can sell them right here in town." So I took some samples to the local stores, and although I certainly am not a salesman, I soon had enough orders to keep me busy. The socks sold themselves.

My wife one day wanted a new corset cover, and we fell to planning how we could make it on the machine. We purchased some variegated crochet cotton and knit a strip for the yoke, working in fancy stitches. We knit the shoulder straps also and sewed the yoke on a piece of Indian linen, edging the knitting with narrow lace. This proved to be a very attractive novelty. Every lady who saw it wanted one. Soon we had all of the orders we could fill. As my wife had learned to run the machine, we both worked at it, and during that summer we made and sold about 600 corset covers.

Then a few months later, just as we were beginning to pull out of the rut, I was taken sick, and confined to the house for 3 weeks. I don't know what would have happened to us without the Auto Knitter. I made money with the machine when it would have been impossible for me to go outdoors and work. When I got to run my machine a whole day I averaged two dozen pairs of socks. As I made a clear profit of 20 cents a pair selling to stores, this amounted to $4.80 per day.

During the winter of 1919-1920 my wife and I made over 1000 pairs of socks. With what we had saved up from the proceeds of our knitter, I bought some farming equipment and rented a small farm. It was the first step toward realizing a dream we had been harboring for a long time.

What we made that year from the farm and our knitter enabled us this year to buy more equipment and rent a larger farm.

I have just been figuring up, and I find that since we bought the Auto Knitter we have made more than 2500 pairs of socks, from which we realized a profit of over $400; and 1,000 corset covers, which profited us $150. Totaling it all up, our machine has made us well over $500 clear profit in 2½ years.

I shall always have a warm spot in my heart for the Auto Knitter. It was this little machine that started us on the road to independence. But for the Auto Knitter I would still be a day-laborer, struggling helplessly to make both ends meet. As it is, we are well on the road to prosperity.

Now and then somebody hears of my success and asks me if it will pay to get an Auto Knitter. I simply tell them what the Auto Knitter has done for me. I don't know of any higher praise I could give the machine.

Then I tell these folks about the contract the Auto Knitter Hosiery Company makes with every person who buys a machine—an agreement to take all of the standard wool socks you can furnish and to pay you a liberal, fixed guaranteed wage, on a piece-work basis, as well as replacing the wool used in knitting each lot of socks.

I have tried this contract out, and I know what I'm talking about when I say that it is an ideal arrangement. You can work for the company just as much—or as little—as you please—spare time or full time—or not at all—yet for every shipment of socks you send them, you get your pay check promptly. And of course you are at liberty to dispose of the output of your Auto Knitter to stores or individuals, just as I have done.

And remember this: Whether you put in a whole day at the work, or just a few spare moments now and then, you get paid—and well paid—for every minute you invest.

Mr. Butler's experience, told here in his own words, is simply one of many. Letters are continually coming in from men and women all over the country telling of similar successes in making money right at home with the Auto Knitter.

Of course you are interested. No matter where you live—on a farm, in a small town, or in the heart of a great city—you have the spare-time problem to consider. You want to turn your leisure hours into dollars. And so you would like to know all about the knitting machine that has meant so much to other people. By all means, write to the Auto Knitter Hosiery Company, Dept. 1011-R, 630-632 Genessee St., Buffalo, N. Y., and find out about the pleaasnt occupation waiting for you—Auto Knitting. Learn what other folks are doing, and the substantial amounts that even a part of your spare time may yield you.

Remember that previous experience in hand-knitting is not necessary. An inexperienced person without special talent can learn to operate the Auto Knitter, and turn out standard socks.

You will never regret writing for information about this remarkable machine. Send your name and address now, and find out all of the good things that are in store for you.

The Auto Knitter Hosiery Co., Inc.,
Dept. 1011-R, 630-632 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Send me full particulars about Making Money at Home with the Auto Knitter. I enclose 2 cents postage to cover cost of mailing, etc. It is understood that this does not obligate me in any way.

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State.....

Comfort 11-21

for Baby

SAVE MONEY ON XMAS JEWELRY

110B--BABY FORK and SPOON

Don't forget baby this Xmas. This set is in the high-grade Rogers Silver Plate; both pieces engraved with script initials. The regular retail price on this item would be $1.25 or $1.35.

110 B

Our Price $1

BABY CHARM AND CHAIN No. 103 B

Here's a cute Heart Charm, made in 10K Gold with dainty 13 inch chain. The very thing you need to make baby look "dressed up" Sells elsewhere up to $1.50. Our Price $1.00

27th ANNUAL GIFT BOOK—FREE

Has 168 pages with thousands of suggestions of fine Xmas jewelry at lowest possible prices. Write for it.

BAIRD-NORTH Co
853 BROAD ST., PROVIDENCE R.I.

Women! Corset Comfort Guaranteed!

This Corset Sent on Trial

Have better health—perfect corset comfort—an ideal figure without tight lacing by wearing the wonderful

M & K Uplift Corset

Its patented, scientifically constructed Uplift belt gently lifts and supports the abdomen in its natural position. Stops backaches, headaches, bearing down pains and tired-out feeling. Reduces stout figures—supports the slender. Thousands of women would wear no other. Doctors prescribe it. Dressmakers like it. Write for Trial Offer, illustrated description and expert confidential advice. Address

KATHERINE KELLOGG
M & K CORSET CO.
233 Kellogg Bldg., Jackson, Mich.

"Mizpah" Baby Nipples

DO NOT COLLAPSE--PREVENT MUCH COLIC

FREE TO MOTHERS AND DOCTORS!

Valve (A-B) prevents vacuum. Inside ribs prevent collapsing when child bites nipple. Rim is made so nipple cannot be pulled off bottle Guard your baby's health. Send no money! We send you a sample nipple free, postpaid, on request. Write now, to

THE WALTER F. WARE CO., Dept. A-4
Philadelphia, Pa.

WESTKO STONEWARE HOT WATER BOTTLE

The ideal hot water bottle and bed warmer. Makes comfortable nights in coldest weather. Holds heat 10 hours.

Preferred in hospitals and for aged. Splendid Xmas gift. No home should be without it. Send $2.50 to Western Stoneware Co., Monmouth, Ill., for Westko bottle, delivered parcel post prepaid anywhere in United States. In Canada $3.50.

Woman Earns $50 a Week as NURSE

"I am head nurse in a little private home hospital where I am earning $50 a week" writes Miss Lillie D. Foster of Clover, California. She learned Nursing in her spare time at home through the famous Chicago system. Hundreds of other graduates are enjoying good salaries in this congenial, respected vocation.

Anyone can learn at home. We train beginners, practical nurses, mothers and religious workers by our fascinating, home-study method. Established over 22 years. Earn while learning.

FREE Write for illustrated Catalog. We will also send 32 sample Lesson pages and details of our Trial Study Plan with Money-Back Guarantee and Free Outfit.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2811 421 So. Ashland Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

YARN 100% VIRGIN WOOL

Big skeins—big savings. Full weight. Many colors. Make beautiful sweaters, scarfs, shawls, gloves, stockings, etc., from Homewool 100% virgin wool yarns. Send today for Homewool Catalog and free sample cards.

Home-wool Catalog FREE on request

Home Woolen Mills, Est. 1876
248 Main St., Eaton Rapids, Mich.

BELLE SET

Petticoat and 2 pr. drawers cut ready to make $1. Prepaid.

IDA BELLE,
Yalesville, Ct.

RESINOL

Soothing and Healing

Clears Away Blotches

and

Promotes Skin Health

Keep a jar on hand

Through the columns of this department our Doctor's advice regarding maternity and child welfare will be given free in answer to questions by our subscribers. Address Mother and Baby Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and be sure to give your full name and address. Names will not be published.

Why Should I Make Baby Obey Me?

WE hesitated in taking up this subject for this month's talk because we know that there is such an honest difference of opinion in regard to discipline. While it is not truly a medical subject, it is most certainly an important one—one that controls the home life, the school life, and in fact a person's whole life. From the very beginning of civilization it has been found necessary to have laws, rules and regulations. Laws are simply rules of action, and they not only say what a man must or must not do to his neighbor, but also how he should treat himself to a certain extent. There never was a law made that was not found to be necessary before it was created.

One can properly exercise his own personal liberty only in so far as he does not place additional burdens on his neighbor or the State. Blackstone says: "If man were to live alone in a state of nature, unconnected with other individuals, there would be no occasion for any other than the law of God and nature." With these things in mind, parents, who are given charge of children during the habit-forming period, have a responsibility that cannot consistently be avoided. This responsibility and the way it is met decide whether we have a happy home, and in so far as our children are concerned, decides whether we have an orderly, well-conducted school.

It matters not in what way you may bring this about in your own family, neither do we assume to indicate just how this should be done. A child is just what we make it, notwithstanding the hereditary theory which, if it enters into the situation at all, simpy enlarges our duty.

We should begin just as soon as we are positive of any act that shows ill temper or malice, and oftentimes this begins very early in life.

You may treat these early exhibitions as jokes, but you will soon find they have left the joke column and are a serious proposition.

Any teacher will tell you that a well-behaved boy or girl at home is well behaved in school, and if for any reason they are allowed to go on roughshod at home, he will have his troubles at school; if not corrected here, the child is to be pitied, for the world will do the correcting later on, oftentimes with disgrace and humiliation.

Some people will tell you if you correct or punish your child for doing wrong he will hate you, and I wish to say right here, that is absolutely wrong, the greatest mistake ever made. Love or affection cannot exist without respect, and a child soon learns to respect you or not according to your actions.

In so far as you can make yourself one with him, playing his games and at least showing an interest in what interests him, as he notes your interest, your efforts to please and do the things he wishes, he will then try and do the things you wish and to please you. Our advice is not to see too much, not to pick up every little incident that may come up, but when an issue arises to meet it and handle it as any wise judge would. Always be fair in hearing his side as one of the proudest moments in a parent's life should be when a child comes to him in a manly, straightforward manner, confesses a false step and asks for forgiveness or punishment. There must be some punishment in some cases, as the law-makers soon found that laws without penalties were not respected. The most important thing you can impress on your child's mind is the fact that you are the best friend he has in the world, that if you correct him or even punish him, it is that you do this to save him punishment later on in life, by the world, without your loving interest.

I regret to say that I knew of a young man who struck his father and knocked him down when he was over eighty years old. The spirit that prompted this cowardly act was started in this young man very early in life, ignored, taken as a joke, until it got where it could not be treated on account of physical reasons.

As I look over this case, the young man is more sinned against than sinning, as he was led to believe and think that striking father was cute when he was a little boy.

These foolish parents ignorantly or thoughtlessly were breeding a spirit that would get beyond their control and prove serious.

The most valuable endowment we can give our children is good manners, and to teach them how to meet people kindly and courteously.

We can give them all the education possible, all the degrees obtainable, but unless they have good manners, they will see people far less qualified succeed where they fail on account of lack of tact and consideration for the feelings of others.

Subject next month, What Can I Do if Baby Becomes Unconscious.

Questions and Answers

COLIC.—I have a dear little girl, four months old, who cries most of the time with colic. I have not enough milk, so nurse her four times a day and give her the bottle every two hours, with Mellin's Food and cow's milk. I got some drops from the doctor, but this simply relieves for the time.

MRS. M. Z., Kimmswick, Mo.

A.—The baby would not have colic if the food agreed with her and was properly digested. Would suggest you wean her and give her cow's milk as directed in MAY COMFORT. At first I should give her milk, two ounces; water, four ounces; sugar of milk, one-half teaspoonful; lime-water, one tablespoonful; gradually increasing milk until at the sixth month, she was taking as much milk as water.

VOMITING BABY.—My three and one-half months baby boy vomits every time I feed him, and nearly every time I pick him up. Am feeding him cow's milk, half and half with sugar of milk added.

MRS. J. C. B., Bowdoin, Mont.

A.—The baby vomits up the food because his stomach is not strong enough to digest it. Would suggest adding more water and less milk, gradually increasing the milk to the half and half when he is six months old.

INDIGESTION OF PREGNANCY.—I am about two months along and am suffering from indigestion, although I keep my bowels regular. Everything I eat hurts me, and I wish to know if it is harmful to take soda.

MRS. M. A. N., Elnora, Ala.

A.—Would suggest a simple diet until stomach is better, avoiding acids and sour fruit. Soda is not harmful. You might try equal parts of vichy water and milk.

RECEIVING BLANKET.—Will you please tell me how a new baby should be wrapped that arrives in cold weather, also should small babies wear caps indoors in a warm room? MRS. R. B., Raton, N. Mex.

A.—You should have flannel receiving blanket in cold weather. No, I do not think the baby needs a cap in warm room.

BROWN SPOTS.—I saw in August COMFORT a recipe for removal of brown spots and wish to know if this will blister skin if used night and morning.

MRS. M. S., Gadsden, Ala.

A.—The preparation suggested in August COMFORT will not blister, and while it is not to be used internally, will remove these brown spots without irritation.

MOTHER'S MILK.—I am nursing my first child, a boy two months old, and while I have plenty of milk, it is like water and I am obliged to feed him condensed milk also. Is there anything I can do for my milk?

MRS. J. D., Hickman, Ky.

A.—Would suggest that you drink milk yourself and do not drink only small amount of other liquids, and eat plenty of nourishing food. If this does not improve the quality of your milk, would wean baby and put him on cow's milk as suggested in May COMFORT.

BABY'S RASH.—My three-months'-old baby has a rash of some kind, red spots with white center, and run water and make a sore. They break out fresh every morning, and baby is badly constipated.

MRS. F. C. H., Gillett, Ark.

A.—Would suspect from your description that your baby has hives from indigestion, and the baby being constipated would help to hold up this diagnosis. Would suggest that you correct the constipation, by regulating your own bowels if you are nursing baby; if bottle fed, give him one or two teaspoonfuls of milk of magnesia, also give baby a little lime-water in food to neutralize acidity.

FONTANELLES.—I have a baby five months old, and the soft spot on the front of his head has never been larger than a silver dollar, and now has closed up until it is not larger than a ten-cent piece. Will the child live if it grows hard too soon, and will this affect his talking or mental condition? (2) I have a ten-year-old girl who wets the bed nearly every night. Is there any cure for this? MRS. K. L., Keokuk, Ia.

A.—There are two fontanelles on a baby's head, anterior and posterior; the anterior closes any time, one or two years after birth; the posterior closes a few months after birth. These fontanelles are simply spaces where bones are to come together and finally meet, and the exact time this occurs does not matter and will not have any bearing upon the child's talking or mental condition. (2) Bedwetting is sometimes an obstinate symptom, but get your daughter's health in the best possible condition, removing any adenoids or bad tonsils, give her as few liquids as possible at or near bedtime. Have her get up when you go to bed yourself and you will soon establish the habit.

BABY SUCKING THUMB.—I am a young mother with baby two months old, who sucks his thumb most of the time, asleep or awake. What can I do for this? (2) How much should a baby gain per week?

MRS. H. L., Kennedy, N. Y.

A.—For a baby, two months, that sucks its thumb, you cannot do very much, only to remove thumb as you notice it putting it into its mouth; later on, you can put on bandage with some harmless preparation on it that baby will not like the taste of. (2) A baby should gain from one-half to one-fourth pound per week.

DEVELOPING BUST.—I am a young woman eighteen years old, am to be married soon and am writing for advice to develop bust as I am worried about raising children.

MISS J. M., Wisc.

A.—There are exercises said to develop bust, but I am not familiar with them, but assure you that the bust will take care of itself and you will not have any trouble along these lines.

VOMITING AND HOARSENESS.—My baby is five months old, and two months ago had a serious time with vomiting and hoarseness. Her vomiting is better, but she is still hoarse. I am nursing her, but have nervous indigestion.

MRS. G. S., Cleveland, N. C.

A.—If your health is not good you ought not to nurse baby. Would suggest putting her on cow's milk, preparing it as suggested in May COMFORT.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

When hiking up, the last quarter of a mile is the fun jaunt. You dare not look back. The rocks are loose, and often you have to lie down on them and pull yourself up on to the next. I thought I must give it up; it seemed impossible that any human being could climb it, but perseverance and determination at last made the "Devil's Tail," as it is appropriately called. What a sigh of relief one gives as they reach the path that goes around the summit.

This path is 2,592 feet above, and takes 20 minutes to hike around, and here you see rocks carved out by nature called the Gladiator—Sleeping Beauty—Face in the Rock—and caves.

Turning to the left one comes to the Tamalpais Inn, where, on cold days, a great log fire is kept burning, and over the doorway we read:

"Rest is not quitting this busy career,
Rest is the fitting of life to this sphere."

There is yet another hike to do to get to the top, and there the Marine Observatory is reached.

From the summit there are provided iron pipes, arranged like telescopes, through which you look, and each one is described on a tablet, in front. There you can see San Francisco Bay, the largest landlocked harbor in the world. The Golden Gate, through which the sun sets in a golden ball like fire, and the Farallone Islands, 30 miles out at sea, and on a very clear day, Mt. Shasta, three miles high, and 300 miles away, Mt. Hamilton, Lick Observatory and Mt. St. Helena, 56 miles to the north. Can you ask for a grander view?

The mountain has its moods; perhaps the most novel one that occurs on unfrequent days is when an ocean of fog sweeps the earth from sight, and one seems to be the only survivor on an island in the sky.

While sleeping up on top one night, I awoke in the morning and looked out and got the scare of my life as I saw the clouds rolling all around the foot of the Inn. It seemed as if the sea had risen up in the night and rolled up to our windows.

Many men, women and children, loaded with pots and pans, dressed in all kinds of hiking rigs, often to the music of every kind that can be carried up, sleep all over the summit over night, to be able, after preparing breakfast at a camp fire, to enjoy a full day on the mountain.

There are rare occasions when snow falls on the summit, and many people, who never saw snow, hike up to get a glimpse and a touch of the "white heat," as the colored man said when he first saw it.

The person who sees a sunrise or set on Tamalpais is a fortunate one, and no words will describe the glories that you see as you are held spellbound. The great orb seems to sink clear through the Golden Gate, and into the Pacific Ocean.

Sincerely yours, MRS. JAMES C. MARSH.

SOMEWHERE IN ILLINOIS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND "SISTERS OF COMFORT":

I have been interested in the letters from the COMFORT sisters for a long time and when "Sister Irish" of Litchfield, Ill., sounded a call for volunteers I couldn't resist writing. I have had considerable experience with children who are afraid of the dark, and bless their little hearts they can't help it. My own little boy, now eight years of age, had very vivid dreams of "bears" when he was smaller, so real to him that I never was able to convince him until a few months ago that bears really didn't crawl up in his bed and talk to him. Of course, after waking from one of those dreams the darkness would still, to him, be full of bears. I would always make the room light and pull his little bed close to mine, after showing him all the corners, behind chairs and under the bed so he could see there were really no bears left, they had gone back to "Bear-land" for the night, and telling him to ask Jesus to keep them away the rest of the night. I would take his hand in mine and he would almost invariably be sound asleep in a few minutes. Now he will sleep two rooms away from me and isn't at all afraid.

Another experience of similarity occurred recently with a little seven-year-old niece of my husband's which I had in charge. She and her two other sisters slept in a room adjoining mine and several times she called me, telling me she could see things in the dark. I would make a light and show her all over the room, telling her it was all gone now, to ask Jesus to keep it away, and if it should come back He wouldn't let it hurt her and to call me when she wanted to. I'd leave the light burning and she got so she would sleep soundly all night. Once or twice she had seemed unusually nervous. I sat by her side a while and talked of other things, then when I got back in my own bed would mention something we would do on the morrow. When she first came she often had those dreams and call me in the night but during the last month of their stay she wanted the light out and the window blind up so she could look outdoors and once or twice had to get up in the night and fearlessly walked through the darkened rooms alone. My theory is the dreams are caused by incorrect eating or certain foods that disagree; thus restlessness causes dreams, and dreams bring the fear. Even the smallest of children are subject to dreams. Watch the child's stomach, be patient and kind, let the child see for itself nothing is there now, whatever it was is gone.

Now a word to women who have children other than their own to care for; try to understand the child and be kind and patient as you can. Here's to the children who live with others beside their parents: Try to understand those who have you in charge, take all things into consideration and be kind and patient as you can, then most of your troubles will be gone. Nothing in this world causes so much unhappiness as impatience, unkind words and the inability to understand each other.

The first month the children were here seems like a horrid nightmare to me now, but with much prayer and the earnest effort to be kind and patient, and above all to understand, I believe I can truthfully say if I had my health and could accept the care and responsibility of a large family, every one of those children would gladly stay with me and willingly call me by the name I love so well, "Mother." It makes me very blue that I can't care for them, and I feel I almost deserve the name of FAILURE.

KNOX CITY, TEXAS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

Please let me in and don't be afraid of my face. It is the only one I have else I would have changed it before coming before such a jolly, grateful bunch.

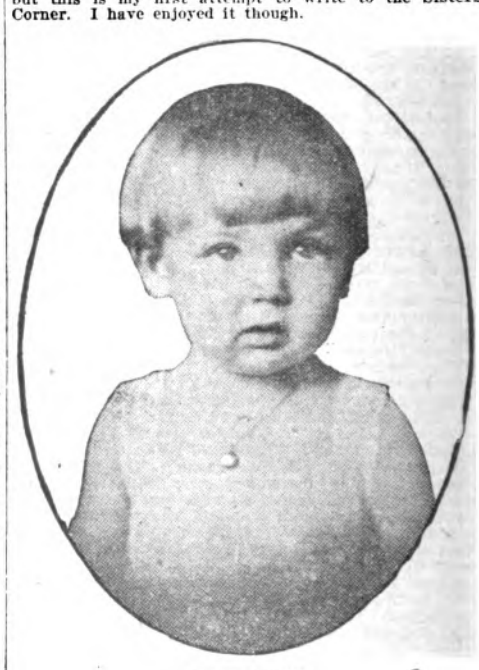
I am just a farmer's wife and would like to shake hands with all farmers' wives but not with those who neglect their work to be a farmer themselves. Hubby and I have been married six years and have a dear little boy, five years old, but I have never yet found time to leave my housework and work in the field. Too lazy? Maybe, but my husband says I am to cook and keep house for him and not be a farmer.

Sunshine, come over and sit by me. Your letter suits me exactly. Don't worry about your work but smile and try to make someone happy.

Mrs. Jacobson, Charles William is certainly a fine looker.

I would like to hear from the COMFORT sisters.

Love to all, WEST TEXAN.



West Texan.—Your remark about your face—though I'm sure it is a very nice face—reminds me of this favorite nonsense verse of mine:

"For beauty I am not a star,
There are others more handsome by far;
But my face I don't mind it,
For I am behind it,
It's the people in front that I jar."—Ed.

BATES, ARK.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I have been a subscriber to COMFORT for a long time but this is my first attempt to write to the Sisters' Corner. I have enjoyed it though.

JANIS VELMO.

I have a happy home and a good husband. We have been married five years and have a darling little girl, one and one-half years old. She weighs 27 pounds. Is large for her age and has always been healthy. Her name is Janis Velmo. I am sending her picture, and I am sure that all mothers know how happy I am with her.

I would be glad to hear from any of the COMFORT sisters and will answer the letters I receive. May I hear from you? Thank you for admitting me.

Sincerely, MRS. JAMES NEAL.

CARBONDALE, ILL.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I tried to creep into this cozy corner once before but all the chairs were full. This time I see an empty one so here I am. I've been a member quite a few years and the sisters' letters appeal more to me than anything else in our dear paper, though every page of it is good.

I enjoyed Sunny Jane's letter very much and wish she would write to me. I always enjoy the letters pertaining to children and their care as I have two boys and sometimes I think I have my hands full in trying to raise them. The oldest wants to play away from home. Cannot some sister suggest a remedy that would make him want to play in his own yard? He is a little over five years of age.

I enjoy doing all kinds of fancy work and love flowers. Would like to hear from the sisters who are interested in the above. Will answer as many letters as possible.

I am greatly in favor of a COMFORT pin and think a small sterling silver pin with COMFORT on it, would be nice. I am sure all the sisters would want one.

With my best wishes to all, MRS. C. S. JOHNSON.

Mrs. Johnson.—The sisters have discussed the problem of the neighbor's children and doubtless they can give you some suggestions in your difficulty.—Ed.

PENNSYLVANIA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

Just a man, a mere man, writing you, having in mind that the interests of men and women are often similar, if not identical. And I am prompted to do it by the spirit displayed by Mrs. Dolea, who spent nine years "accumulating" a home. When I read the story aloud to certain ladies, they all agreed that the tale was improbable; of course it "happened" thousands of miles from here, etc., etc. Now I have heard of the widow who made her first speculative profit by buying an ancient, tumble-down, four-room house, which she cleaned, as only a Pennsylvania Dutch woman can clean, inside and out, repaired and painted the fences, cut and removed the breast high weeds, put in missing panes of glass, and sold after three months' work, at a greater sum than she could have earned in five years. It does not sound improbable, does it? And I know a youth of my boyhood days who read "boys' magazines" (very much to my parents' disgust) who, after becoming of age, put his savings into a tumble-down property, fixed it up and sold it at a profit greater than his year's wages. At that time he was following a meat inspector for an expert warehouse, putting tags on the meat after the inspector passed upon them. Now he divides his time by thirds, one-third looking after his properties (he owns them by blocks), one-third traveling in foreign countries and one-third traveling "at home" in the United States. To be sure, his parents supplied his "boys' magazines" and encouraged his original ideas (most of which had their origin in the stories he read) and thus he acquired initiative, and the courage to apply his ideas in a practical manner. It does not seem improbable, does it?

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 17.)

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16.)

To be sure, if all of us had initiative and the courage to tackle things and see them through, we would soon be a nation of sharks, eating each other up. The "failures" constitute a huge proportion of the workers of the world. They are failures only in that they have not succeeded in becoming masters. But even your dreamer, your impractical person, is often full of ideas that others have used to immense advantage. Have you not yourself, time and time again, thought, dreamily, maybe, of some plans or schemes which later you found perhaps many others have put to practical use? Did I not, myself, when I first heard of a piano in a "movie" house, wonder how it would be to have an orchestra to listen to? And did I not live to see the piano grow a violin on the side, and sprout drums and increase and multiply to an automatic organ, and then to a pipe organ with an honest-to-goodness organist who drew more per week than I earned in a month? And now I can (for say 17 cents) see pictures for hours and listen at the same time to a thirty-five piece orchestra.

And have I not looked at a certain piece of ground for years and wished I could put up some concrete homes on it, and lay it out with winding paths? Oh, I have it all dreamed out. But first, an arch must be built, for a small stream runs through it. And people "with money" have passed up this site for years, because of the arch. And now behold! An ad. in the paper which reads, "Corner lot at corner of Spruce and West Streets, will be given away to anyone who will build on it." To build, the lot must be arched. After the arch, refuse will level it off. Then the owner of the corner will have started the ball rolling and the other lots will sell. Good for the fellow who gives away a lot! And good for the fellow who gets it "for nothing." And good for the town; when the first fellow builds he will draw company in no time. It does not sound improbable, does it?

My father "lives retired" on the interest of some few shares of bank stock. He spends his time loafing in a real-estate office. Day in and day out he hears real estate transactions going on about him. He tells us, of an evening, "The Y——— estate is being settled. Today the heirs put up for sale some lots scattered around the town. One of them out here, about three or four blocks away, they sold a lot to one of the heirs for $18.00, a lot 30x140 feet. Nobody bid on it so one of the heirs bid $15.00 and another bid $18.00 and got it. Today it is worth $300. Father could have bought it for $20.00. Another time he reported, "I can't get rid of that piece of woodland (my grandfather's estate) so I'll have to give it to somebody for the amount of taxes due on it." My wife said, "Well, Daddy, whenever you feel that you must part with it, let us know and we'll give you a couple of dollars over the amount of the taxes." We have never heard of it since. And it is not yet sold. It does not sound improbable, does it?

And now why do I, who am nothing but a working man, poor, and at this juncture out of work, why then do I write this to you? Writing is not my business at all! I am a music clerk when I work. Simply this is my reason. That parents would encourage the original ideas, or even the hackneyed ones—of their children. Oh, that they would encourage them to try out the good ideas they often have! Oh, that wives would encourage their husbands with kindly helpfulness instead of the all-too-frequent dampening of their spirits when the unusual opportunity knocks at the door! And oh, that more of us who look like men, could act like men, and, seizing our opportunities when we recognize them, go on courageously to the end, whether that end furnish profit or experience, or both.

Your pardon for my intrusion on your time, and my thanks for the very real comfort of COMFORT.

Sincerely yours, MUSICUS.

ELIZABETH, 520 Maple Ave., N. J.

DEAR READERS:

Everyone seems to describe themselves upon entering this corner for the first time, so I'll do likewise.

I am eighteen years old and have been married one year. Have light brown hair, brown eyes and a fair complexion.

I am much interested in fancy work of all kinds and can do nearly every kind with the exception of tatting. I make all my clothes.

How many of the sisters have been to Coney Island? I suppose there are a lot who have never been there. I was there a short time ago and what a time I had! We, my mother and aunt, went on almost everything there was there. I have always prided myself on not being frightened but I met my Waterloo that day in the shape of a weird thing called the Scrambler. I don't mean weird, the only word to describe it is devilish. There are about a dozen round cars set on a metal floor. When first started the floor revolves and the cars go around in a nice orderly procession, but they gradually go faster until not only the floor but each car is whirling around like a top. They go so fast that the crowd of people watching become a blurred mass. I began to feel funny, first I got dizzy, then sick to my stomach, then I felt that I had to hold my head. While doing this our car gave one awful bump and I landed on the floor with my head on the seat in back of me and my feet on the opposite seat. The ride lasted only a few minutes but it seemed hours to me. We are going to Coney Island again before long but I, for one, am not going in the Scrambler.

Will some of the sisters write to me?

MRS. KATHLEEN HOWELL.

Mrs. Howell.—My visit to Coney Island wasn't as exciting as yours but then, there's quite a difference in our ages. I wish I could go again and take some of the COMFORT children with me, particularly those from lonely ranches and farms. Wouldn't we have a glorious time?—Ed.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I have been reading COMFORT for a long time and like others did not write because I was afraid of the waste-basket. But after reading the letter from "A Parson's Daughter" I thought that I would write and tell her that I enjoyed her letter very much, because I, too, am a parson's daughter.

My dear sisters, everything that she said was true, and I have experienced those things in my life also, and many more, and I know that she did, too, but space would not permit her to tell it. I remember distinctly how sister and I used to go from house to house and sell seeds, postcards and start up a Larkin club or something like that to get what we wanted, because we could not afford it. We earned quite a few pieces of furniture that way and then the "Church Members" thought that we furnished our home too expensively, and I had gotten more than one subscription for COMFORT and that way earned toys and dolls and the other things I found in the dear magazine for my sisters and brothers and myself, because we, like other children, like toys, and then the members said that we had too many things. Now we are living in Detroit in a five-room house, and it is a little small even now as there are eight of us in the family, and just imagine now they say that we could live in a smaller house. Yes, that is a parson's life, my dear, and I just want to say that unless you are told it by the parson's family itself you could never think or believe what your parson and many others are going through and what they are suffering because the foolish ones talk nonsense.

My dear sister, I just want to say this: that if you do as "A Parson's Daughter" said in a recent number of COMFORT, and not pass the gossip on, you will save your pastor and his family many heartaches and worries.

If any sisters care to write to me I will be very glad to answer all that I possibly can. But before I go I will say that we have had COMFORT in our home for a long time and that sister and I have gotten quite a few subscribers for it, and, sisters, if you want some one to read a good paper or give them a nice gift, just give them COMFORT throughout the year as a birthday present, and it will not be long before they will do the same thing and give it to others.

Now I want to say, my dear friends, sisters and brothers, that a hearty handshake and a cheery word will not harm your pastor at all, and that if you have any to spare just pass them on to him. You could not give it to any one that would appreciate it more than he would. If I see this in print, I will come again.

"ANOTHER PARSON'S DAUGHTER."

SPARTA, MICH.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I have been a reader of COMFORT for years and I can remember the time when it was smaller than it is now, and yet it was always true to its name.

I belong to the teaching profession. Let me tell you, mothers, when you are tempted to criticize the teachers for not passing Mary or John, that it is not the teacher's fault they fail. In all the years that I have been teaching, whether I liked the pupil or otherwise, it was always a pleasure to see new faces in the fall. No teacher will fail a youngster, for if she disliked the child there would be all the more reason for passing him on to the next teacher. No one knows how the teacher works over "getting them through." She knows that if she fails with too many her reputation will suffer, and if she passes one on who is not quite ready, she will be criticized by the succeeding teacher. If your youngster comes home with a "hard luck story," remember your child is only human, and that it would be natural for him to smooth it over. Go right to the teacher and have a talk with her. Oftentimes it will make things easier for you and the child, too. Many of the trials of the teacher come through misunderstandings. Remember it is the teacher's place to do the best she can for every child under her care, and I believe the majority of teachers try to do their duty.

I keep house, although I am not married.

Happy Mother, I believe it depends upon the individual, who gets the more enjoyment out of life, the one who is a model housekeeper or the one who does not care so much about the way things look if she enjoys herself. There are some women so constituted that a speck of dust drives them wild. If one is like that, then I say keep on working. I say, if you are satisfied, also your husband, then let the neighbors gossip. Some people derive a heap of enjoyment out of gossiping and tending to the neighbors' business.

Dotty, don't tell the husband. It is really none of your business to mix into family affairs. If outsiders would keep hands off, families would be happier. If you want to drop the woman, do so, but don't think it is your duty to gossip. Oftentimes much harm is done by people thinking they are doing a kindness which is not so.

It is true that the "Butterflies" do not make the best kind of wives. Yet it is also true that they are picked up before the sensible ones are. If the sensible ones are wise, they will take notice of the "Butterflies" once in a while and make the fellow guess a little. Did you ever notice that a fellow is always happy when he is kept guessing by his best girl?

Just a word about myself. I am a bachelor girl, no matter how old, five feet, one and one-half inches tall, and weigh 130 pounds. I like to write letters and receive interesting ones. If any of the sisters feel like writing, their letters will be more than welcome.

Sincerely, ETHEL P. KEYES.

HIAWATHA, MICHIGAN.

DEAR MRS. W:

If your deaf ear is doorward I'll get you one of those much advertised, sure cure for deafness, instruments and then you will have to hear me in spite of yourself.

May I have a word with Irish?

Don't have anything hanging on the walls of your son's room, for when a child awakens at night, any object on the walls, no matter how familiar, takes on odd shapes and frightens him. Let him take his Cubby Bear to bed with him as it seems to comfort children in their loneliness when in a room by themselves. Don't frighten him into obeying you by threatening him with a bogie man, etc., and don't scold him when he is frightened. Speak gently and lovingly to him and it will do much more good. Last but not least, be very careful what you feed him as heavy food causes nightmare. Be more careful at supper-time as that is most important.

Are there among us, any sisters, mothers or wives of any Co. A, 47th Inf. 4th Division boys? My husband was a member of Co. A and I'd like to hear from some of you.

Best wishes, IRENE STANKOVICH. (MRS. JAMES)

LAND O' DREAMS.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

May a nineteen-year-old lassie enter your corner for a little chat? Thought I'd drop in to cool off and rest after the day's work. Funny isn't it, that though we long so much now for cold weather, we don't appreciate it when it comes—in the form of winter? Winter is dreadful if we don't prepare for it. Of course in town it doesn't make so very much difference so far as roads are concerned, nor in the country where the roads are good. But here, where I live, the roads are more often bad in the winter than good and we are "in" for weeks at a time. Winter is always a bugbear to me and all summer I plan little devices to make it more cheerful.

Did you ever notice what a difference it makes in your feelings to have clean curtains, a different cushion or a white tablecloth? Farm homes generally have a dining-room for company and a kitchen to eat in. Some don't even have dining-rooms; we don't, so I make the best of the kitchen. I always aim to have a white tablecloth on as it gives a more cheerful appearance. This wouldn't be possible if I had to buy linen but instead I bleach flour sacks in kerosene, in which some borax has been dissolved, and make tablecloths of them. It is hard to keep the kitchen curtains white in winter so I use printed goods and find they make very good curtains. They reflect cheerfulness too, if you choose a bright color, not too loud, but something bright and cheerful. Tie them back with a strip of white goods, two inches wide. I use flour sacks again for this. Every time these white "ties" are washed, starched and ironed, it is like something new to look at. I like lots of cushions, not that I care to sit on them but they brighten a room, I think. I use any color and make them of calico, in different shapes, some round, some square and some oblong. When I am very blue I bring out my red cushions with their white ruffles. I find red a very cheery color, if combined with white. I have two changes of curtains for every shelf in the kitchen and when I find myself becoming morose, down comes the old curtains and up go new ones. Did you ever try tying a red ribbon, in a jaunty bow, on a shelf curtain? You'll find your tired eyes wandering toward it very often and find yourself being unconsciously brightened by it.

TOYS FOR THE CHILDREN ON CHRISTMAS MORNING.

My life has not been a bed of roses and I used to sit and pine but now I find I can forget everything for a while in just some simple duty, as taking a pleasure in making our house a home.

I am ambitious to learn but have had very little education. Last winter I learned to play the violin, by ear, and studying anything and everything I could find. This winter I intend to take up French, by the aid of written instructions.

Long ago I adopted this poem as my motto:

"If you can't be a pine on the top of the hill—
Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub at the side of the rill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

"If you can't be a highway then just be a trail,
If you can't be the sun, be a star;
It isn't by the size that you win or you fail—
Be the best of whatever you are."

I didn't learn that in a week or a year. It came to me slowly, and I've not learned it thoroughly yet.

Sometimes I feel that I am the fifth wheel but I always remember that "nothing can last forever" and I realize the need of living only in today, and hoping and praying for a better tomorrow.

STRUGGLER.

MT. VICTORIA, MD.

MY DEAR COMFORT SISTERS AND ALL:

Here we come, two of us. Seeing the door ajar we pushed it right open and walked in. How is everybody today, including old maids and bachelors?

We have taken COMFORT between us for more than six years, and think it fine, reading it from cover to cover, the sisters' letters always first.

We have never seen any letters from Charles County. We both live in Charles between La Plata and Rock Point.

La Plata is the county seat. It has two banks, the Southern Maryland National Bank and the Charles County Bank. Two hotels, two jails and the court house. There are also beautiful schools and churches and many pretty houses.

I guess by this time you are all wondering who in the world we are. One of us is four feet five inches low, dark brown hair and grey eyes, this one is married to one of the best Johns, as some of the sisters say, and has four cute little children. The other one is five feet six inches, light brown hair and hazel eyes and has a dark complexion, and is nineteen years of age.

We are going to tell you what we did last Christmas. We decided to make gifts for the children so we got down our rag bag and also scrap bag to see what we could find. There were some pieces of gingham, calico and percale. We had patterns for a dog, sheep and pig. We made some gingham sheep, calico dogs and percale pigs, which we stuffed with old rags cut up fine. Then we made some little red hens out of red outing. We made real pretty balls for the baby to play with out of fancy socktops.

Out of old window shades we made reins for the boys with bells that came off some old ones tacked on them. Then we made bunny babies with rabbits' ears out of white outing flannel, which we named John and Jane. We made black babies out of black stocking tops, with white button eyes and sheep wool for hair dyed black. You can't think how cute they were. We also made white babies with red suits from an old red sweater. With these and the few things we bought the children had their arms full of toys Christmas morning and were as happy as if they had toys which cost lots of money. We are sending snapshot of these things which you may print in COMFORT if you think it is all right.

We will close, hoping to see this in print, with love and good wishes to Mrs. Wilkinson and all the editorial staff.

FROM THE STUFFING BLUE CHUMS.

Stuffing Blue Chums.—I can't imagine what your name means but it sounds as though it had some significance. Thanks for such a nice letter and just in time for the rest of us to get some ideas for Christmas. Accept my sincere apologies if the drawing we had made doesn't do justice to your respective good looks, but the snapshot you sent couldn't be used.—Ed.

ALBERTVILLE, R. R. 2, ALA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

I am writing again hoping you will find room for my letter in the Sisters' Corner. Since my letter appeared in August, 1920, COMFORT I have received letters from almost every state in the Union.

I think Magdalena is right in what she says about children gossiping. I forbid my pupils to tell things at home that occur at school for if I allow them to go home and tell every little thing that happens they will form a habit of telling everything they know and adding a little, too. Sometimes the patrons get the idea that I don't want them to know what is going on at school but I'm always glad for the parents to

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 18.)

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Advertisement.

The Pretty Girls' Club

Answers to Questions

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 11.)

HELEN.—The only thing to do with blackheads is to press them out with a bit of soft cloth, then touch the spot with an astringent. If they return it is because the pores are sluggish. I should massage my face nightly with a tiny bit of cold cream on my finger-tips, after the skin has been bathed until perfectly clean. Do you use much hot water on your face? That opens the pores, which soon fill up and produce blackheads. Use hot water and soap in it at night, rinsing many times; with a final rinse in warm water followed by dashing on cold water. Use tepid water in the morning, with a douche of cold water following. If you can get rain water for your face, so much the better; or you can add half a teaspoon of tincture of benzoin to a basin of water. Slap the face gently after bathing, using the flats of the fingers and going over all cheeks, forehead, chin. Anything which stirs up the blood will help, but the main thing is to get the pores clean, then close them. An astringent will do the deed, first but after that it takes cold water to make the skin firm and contract the pores.

LEMONS.—Your hair is falling out after your baby's birth because your body has had a severe drain upon its strength and will have as long as you are nursing, as I suppose you are. You need, first of all, to give the body nourishing food in more than ordinary quantities. Drink plenty of milk, eat cereals with cream and sugar, white bread and butter, potatoes, rice, roast or broiled meats, fresh fruit. I should not use lemon juice on the hair, although if you put the juice of half a lemon in the last rinsing water, it tends to make the hair slightly lighter, but while your hair is thin and falling out is no time to experiment in this way. Shampoo it regularly, rub a little oil into the scalp—but not on the hair—the night before shampooing, brush it very gently, as firm brushing may bring away more hair. Massage the scalp at night by placing the flat of the fingers each side of the head and moving the skin back and forth on the skull, going over the entire scalp in this fashion. This makes the blood circulate. But your main task is to feed your body; drink plenty of liquid and see that the bowels move once or twice a day, without cathartics. Prunes, apples, oranges, water, bran in your cereal, will take care of this. Skins differ, but it is probable, in answer to your question, that you can rub a cut lemon on your face to bleach it. However, if you look after your diet, bowels, and careful washing of the face, with the use of cold cream at night, I think your skin will clear up without the use of lemon.

RANSON.—The wrinkles around eyes, mouth and on forehead, are due, I think, to your being so much under weight. They will smooth out if you can build yourself up to one hundred and twenty or more pounds, as you should, in any case. You are way under weight, from the standpoint of health as well as appearance. Read what I have said in answer to "Edna," as to food, and make it your business to feed yourself. Get exercise. Sleep. Breathe fresh air. Avoid coffee, tea, cathartics. Use a little cold cream on your face daily, massaging it in and wiping off any surplus with a soft cloth or pad of cotton, then applying powder lightly.

LUCCA.—One hundred and fifty pounds for five feet six inches is not too great a weight, unless it is in the wrong places. That is, if the abdomen is too large, or the calves of the legs, etc., while the rest of the body is thinner, then while the weight is not too much when well distributed it is too much for that particular person. Exercise will reduce any portions of the body which are out of proportion.

GLADYS.—The only way to take off freckles is to take off the skin! If you have only a few, I should let them alone, as they will without doubt fade in time; all you need to do is to prevent more coming. Keep the skin well bathed, use half a teaspoonful of tincture of benzoin in the water with which you bathe your face. It will only be a matter of a few weeks or so when your face will bleach out. Whereas if you attempt to remove the freckles by taking off the skin, you will find the new skin sensitive and likely to freckle again. For only a few freckles it is not worth while.

Address all letters containing questions to KATHERINE BOOTH, care COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Restore Those Silver Threads

These disfiguring gray streaks which make you look a hundred years old—comb them away with Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer. Mail coupon for free trial bottle and test on single lock. This proves it.

No danger of streaking or discoloration—nothing to wash or rub off. Leaves your hair soft, fluffy, lovely to curl and dress. Restoration complete in 4 to 8 days, whether your gray hairs are many or few.

Fill out coupon carefully—enclose lock if possible. Trial bottle and application comb come by return mail. Full sized bottle at your druggist or direct from us. Don't risk ruining your hair with cheap substitutes.

Mary T. Goldman, 863 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Mary T. Goldman, 863 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Please send me your FREE trial bottle of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer with special comb. I am not obligated in any way by accepting this free offer.

The natural color of my hair is black....jet black....dark brown.....medium brown.....light brown.....

Name.....

Street.....Town.....

Co.....State.....

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

MABEL NORMAND

"I never knew a shampoo could be so delightful." Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

RUBS OUT WRINKLES

Don't let wrinkles and hideous crow feet destroy your beauty. They make you look years older than you really are. Under the magic urge of wrinkles disappear. Absorbed by the dry skin and shrunken tissues beneath, it fills hollows and replaces that aged, tired look with one of youthful freshness. You're a new woman and can see it! Send name, address and ten cents for Sample Box and Beauty Book. Agents Wanted.

PARISIAN FLESH FOOD

Mme. M. FOULAIRE, 80 Parisian Bldg., CLEVELAND, O.

TAKE BEECHAM'S PILLS FOR CONSTIPATION

DESTROY HAIR ROOTS

NU-ART permanently devitalizes superfluous hair and roots. Unlike depilatories which leave the roots to thrive. No electricity nor caustics. Harmless and painless. Large package $1.00 at your dealer or direct by mail, plain wrapper, prepaid.

A marvelous discovery, guaranteed.

Nu-Art Laboratories, 71D, South Orange, N. J.

Kill The Hair Root

My method is the only way to prevent the hair from growing again. Easy, painless, harmless. No scars. Booklet free. Write today enclosing 3 stamps. We teach beauty culture.

D. J. MAHLER, 3481-X, Mahler Park, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

GRAY HAIR RESTORED

Quickly and naturally to its original color and beauty, by a simple, harmless, inexpensive home method. Complete secret sent sealed for a 2c. stamp. Guaranteed.

R. V. Sefton Co., Pretorius Sts., Dept. 61, St. Louis, Mo.

Everything About Cuticura Soap Suggests Efficiency

Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. For samples address: Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. D, Malden, Mass.

This Offer Saves Your First Payment On the first order you place after sending this adv. to us. Tens of thousands of home-lovers have furnished their homes delightfully on this famous Larkin Better Homes Easy-Payment Plan Furnishings of the highest quality, at attractive money-saving Factory-to-Family prices. Now you can get almost anything for your home without a first cash payment. Larkin Co. agrees to pay your First Payment if you send this adv. Just check below offer most interested in. And get complete catalog giving all interesting details about

- ☐ Furnishings
- ☐ Symphonic Pianos
- ☐ Symphonic Player Pianos
- ☐ Symphonolas

(Check offer interested in)

Tear out this adv. and mail today with your full name and address. After getting our proposition, you'll be credited $3 to $20 on your purchase, the amount of the usual first cash payment. Sending this adv. today gives you this liberal offer with

1 to 4 Years To Pay

Just think of selecting for your home from our list of 1228 Furnishings or getting a Symphonic Piano or Player Piano or Symphonola which plays all phonograph Records. Truly, home-making advances a great step by this unusual offer. Be sure this adv. with your full name and address and offer checked are mailed today to

This Adv. SAVES YOU $3 to $20 Cash

Larkin Co Inc.
Desk CT-1121 Buffalo, N. Y.

Here's Your Beauty Shop

A Box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers Brings You a Wonderfully Clear and Beautiful Complexion

No need for steaming the face, no massage, no cream, nothing but pure water for bathing and Stuart's Calcium Wafers to clear the blood of impurities. You soon notice the change.

Pimples, blackheads and other such facial blemishes may be traced to an excess of impurities being eliminated through the skin and this condition calls for calcium to enable the process of elimination to be carried on more completely.

It is the Calcium in Stuart's Calcium Wafers that has given this complexion beautifier such a wonderful reputation.

These wafers are sold by all druggists in the U. S. and Canada at 60 cents a box and you will thus see how popular they must be to have such a wide demand.

10 Cents

WORTH OF COMMON ORDINARY KEROSENE

or Coal Oil will keep this lamp in operation for 30 HOURS and will produce

No Wicks to Trim
No Smoke
No Smell

300 CANDLE POWER

of the purest, whitest and best light known to science. Nothing to wear out or get out of order. Simple. Safe. Absolute satisfaction guaranteed. Send for catalog showing lamps for every purpose; also special introductory offer and agency proposition Write today.

KNIGHT LIGHT CO.
Dept. 3708 Chicago, Ill.

A REAL PHONOGRAPH Given FREE!

A marvelous invention just perfected. Beautifully finished, durable spring motor, regular mica diaphram. Plays a 10-inch record accurately with a sweet tone. Any selection of music you prefer can be played. A wonderful machine in every way. Can be used for home entertainment, school work or social gatherings, etc.

SEND NO MONEY Just your name and address—we will send you our wonderful offer. A few hours of your spare time well spent will bring you the Phonograph and a selection of 12 Records FREE. B. A. GARRISON, 308 Friend Bldg, Kansas City, Mo.

Biggest Hit of the Year

Get the latest and best proposition yet. Tailor-Made Sterling Quality Skirts—they sell on sight. High class, fully guaranteed. Every customer is a booster. Big commissions. No collecting or delivering. Men or women—full or spare time. Hundreds have found it an easy way to make a good income. You can too. No experience necessary. Sample outfit furnished. Write today. Don't put it off, for now's the time.

Fabrics Mfg. Co., 118 Second St. Dayton, Ohio

Some New Charades for Thanksgiving

By Jeanette Atwood

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

CHARADES that demand three or four scenes before the "whole" has been illustrated are not adapted for young folks, as it is rather difficult to follow through all of the scenes for young memories. But the more simple appearing charades are really quite difficult to puzzle out when produced, although to read about them they seem quite too easy. I have seen as many grown folks as children fail to solve some of the very simple charades given here, such as the words "By-laws," "Uproar," "Downtrod," and the like.

BLACKSMITH.

The following charades being easily enacted, with "properties" that are in common use or readily improvised, are especially well adapted to provide impromptu entertainment in the home for any social gathering of friends and neighbors, or may serve as an amusing pastime for the family circle Thanksgiving afternoon or evening.

VICTORY.

Two pictures, one of the late Queen Victoria with the words "Good Queen 'Vic" under it. Another picture of General Cornwallis. He was a "Tory," and the whole is not difficult to guess.

Some of the short word charades, that need but one scene, are given here. Try some of them on your guests and you will be surprised to find how difficult it is to guess them.

BOOK-MARK.

Not as easy as it seems if you can get a very small child to enter, pick a book from the table (previously placed there for the child—a catalogue or something without value) and sits on the floor. Child very busily engaged in marking up the pages, scrawling over them, with a pencil. A big blue crayon pencil would be best.

BLACKSMITH.

Some one calls off stage (next room will do for this), "Is Mr. Smith out there?" And a voice replies, "Yas'm, I'se here," then a boy blacked up and wearing a man's hat and long trousers, appears. That's all there is to it. But it is surprising to find how few can readily guess that this is "black" Smith.

ICE CREAM.

This is amusing. A child may start to drink some water from a glass, make up a face, leave room and come back with a large piece of ice, which he drops in it.

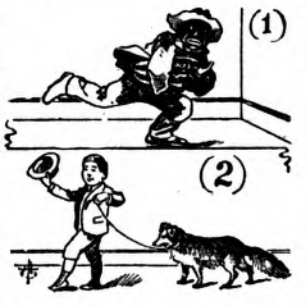
The next part a girl comes in with a kitten, a saucer and cream jar, pours some cream and makes kitten drink it.

TENNIS RAQUET.

A couple of children may stretch a little net and play tennis, gently of course, while two more children with a horn and tin pan may make a fearful racket. Everyone will guess "tennis" but be surprised when told that is not right, as the whole charade is "tennis raquet."

MUSIC.

Behind a screen have a child holding a cat. Child to "meaou" like a cat, a dozen times, then release cat and push him out from behind scene. The next part is a child on a couch with a bandage about head. The whole, of course, is "mew" "sick."



CHECKER-BOARD.

Two are playing checkers, when a third comes in, removes one checker from the board, puts it on chair or floor and with a gimlet or bit and bitstock proceeds to bore a hole in it. (Hole may be previously made in it.) This is held up. "Why, you have bored a hole right through it!" exclaimed one.

"Why did you do it?" queries the other. If they fail to guess, he may say, "I wanted another checker-board (bored)."

MELANCHOLY.

This very simple charade is not always easy to guess if properly produced. To make it all the more lively, a boy may black up and dress in old clothes, come in and steal a watermelon. If watermelons are not in season, a pumpkin may easily be painted to resemble one. The paint will readily wash off. After this some one comes through, leading a collie dog. (Melon collie.) For the "whole," if they fail to guess it, one may sit at a table, head on hand, very melancholy. Some one may ask, "What's the matter?" "I am down-hearted, I feel like the whole of this charade."

IDOLIZE.

A simple thing is to take an old idol or to make an imitation. It may be made with putty for the occasion. Be sure that it has no eyes. After it has been shown alone on a little stand, some one must come in, look at it, go out and come back with a pair of artificial eyes. Blackheaded hat pins, cut off close to the head, will serve. Jab these in the putty where the eyes should be, then walk off.

MARBLE.

It may be difficult for young people to understand that to damage anything is to mar it,—however, that word may be used to aid. A boy has a small bell. He rings it. It doesn't suit, so he takes a hammer or hatchet and proceeds to pound it and mar it. If no one guesses it, he may be asked, "Why do you mar that?" Reply, "It isn't a good bell."

SPRINGTIME.

A big old-fashioned bed or upholstery spring is best. Some one brings it in. Places it on stand. Springs it up and down with hand to show that it is a spring, then leaves it. Another comes in with a small clock and places it on top of the spring and goes away.

MAGIC.

Somewhat of a pun, but some of the best charades depend on the phonetic system. Some one calls, "Madge! Oh, Madge! Are you there? Come here, dear," and a little girl runs on. "Oh, there you are, Madge." Next a bright youngster pretends to be afflicted with hiccoughs. He goes about trying to stop it and continues to "hiccough," taking care to say only "ich! ich! ich!" For the whole, if it is not guessed, some child may perform a simple little trick in magic.

PRIMROSE.

A clever little girl who can act very primly, with many mincing mannerisms, may enter, carrying a rose. She sits middle of a couch and a boy enters and sits beside her. She moves over to other end. She acts very "prim" indeed.

UPROAR.

A child climbs up on a stepladder and roars.

UNDERSTAND.

A child sits under a small table or stand.

INTENT.

Child in a small tent.

OVERCOAT.

Place a coat beneath a chair and have a child sit on chair.

DOWN-TROD.

Child picks some "down" from bit of swansdown fur, then treads on it and stops, making it past tense, or down-trod.

BY-LAWS.

A stack of calf-bound law books on a stand and a child stands close beside them.

It is true these seem very simple. And if one at a time were performed they would be much easier to guess, but start the entire six at once, and, what between glancing from one to the other and laughing, the youngsters will have a rather difficult time of it.

Three states may be used at once, first explaining that the next scene represents three different states.

INDIANA.

An immense letter D cut from cardboard or made of sticks. A little girl comes out with name "Anna" pinned on her, and stands inside the "D."

These three relating to States, like the preceding group of five, will prove more amusing if produced at the same time.

There are many words that one simple act will describe. They are not as easy when acted as they seem to be just by reading about them.

MAINE.

Child may sit on hobby horse and continually stroke his mane.

NEW JERSEY.

Child wears a bright jersey and tells another child it is new, not using the word "jersey" but merely saying, "This is new. Yes, this is brand new," etc.

MOVING PICTURES IN THREE REELS.

Youngsters may move three wall pictures, hung low purposely, or three framed pictures from mantel to piano. Child to reel about dizzily while moving each one.

INNOCENCE.

Child brings on a large card lettered like this: "MEET ME TUESDAY NOON BY MOONLIGHT BETWEEN THURSDAY AND THE FOURTH OF JULY." The more they study it, the more will they become puzzled. "I don't see any sense to it!" some will exclaim. Tell them that's right and that they have nearly guessed it. The answer is, of course, that it is in no sense.

PARACHUTE.

This is a good charade word but rather difficult for little children. Older children will doubtless catch it and when there are smaller folks it is well to have a "whole" at the end of the charade if they cannot guess it by the scenes. This word should be managed as follows: A child picks a pear from a dish and eats it. Another child marches across stage wearing a letter "A" and a third comes in with a toy gun and shoots at a target. Then if they cannot guess it, a little child may stand in a chair with an opened umbrella and jump from the chair with it, as one would do with a parachute.

None of these charades are "deep." They are not intended for mature minds. But as a means of entertaining a party of young folks throughout an afternoon or evening, they will serve admirably. In fact, experience has taught that young folks do not care for charades that they cannot guess. A few simple ones that are easy, mixed with others, adds more pleasure to the evening.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 17.)

visit the school. If parents could only realize that gossiping is a vehicle of mischief that only serves to narrow their children, they would be more careful how they allowed them to talk. If you hear a bit of scandal do you let it die in your memory, or do you tell it to the next friend you meet as toothsome piece of news? Never believe anything bad about anybody is a very good motto. I have been teaching school for six years and sometimes we as teachers become discouraged. We are discussed over the entire community, every step we take is watched and we must be very careful. Some parents think we should do things for their children regardless of the others, they will also send us word how to instruct them. Of course, the only thing we can do is to ignore the whole business and do as we please.

I have been in school this summer and now I'm studying Shakespeare's work, also canning. I believe I'll tell you how I do my canning as it may be of help to some one. Not having a home canner, I began to look around for something to cook my fruit in so I selected two lard cans. The fruit is prepared, placed in glass jars with rubbers and caps in place (but cap not tight). I took a large white cloth, placed in bottom of lard can to serve as rack, set my glass cans into the lard can on this cloth, poured in cold water over half way up the jars, placed on stove and cooked the required length of time, then lifted my cans from the water and left them to cool for ten or fifteen minutes, after which I tightened the lids. I have canned over two hundred fifty cans this year and haven't lost a can, also the fruit has a better flavor and looks much nicer than when cooked in an open vessel.

One word to music lover, I actually heard one woman say that all girls married the first chance they got, and some little narrow-minded two-by-four men think the same thing, but they are sadly mistaken. When most girls marry they want a man, a real man, a man that has character, a man that is willing to work and make a home, a home where she can be queen. Oh, no, you're mistaken, I'm not a maiden lady (old maid), neither did I live to be an old maid before I married and I know several girls that could have married and did not. I have been married six years, have one boy, Elmo, who is three years old. I'm a farmer's wife but please print this.

Sincere wishes, ADA KIRBY.

LIMESTONE, R. R. 2, TENN.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

It has been almost three years since my other letter appeared in COMFORT so I am prompted to write again, for the same reason that I wrote before. I am seeking comfort and I made a host of good friends through my first letter, friends who sent me words of cheer and comfort when I most needed them. When we are not in actual need of anything, a gift from a friend is not so greatly appreciated, but when the shadows hang thick and dark across our pathway, then we need the gifts and cheer from friends. Some of the sisters seem to think that we should pack up our troubles and disappointments and carry them all alone. Why not then carry our joys alone? The friends who will not stick in sunshine and shade alike are not friends at all and I'm inclined to believe that the ones who advocate carrying their sorrows alone never had any real ones come into their lives. I do not like to see folks glum all the time, neither do I like to hear a lot of silly nonsense. I am not old but I know the dark side of life and if I hadn't some good friends with whom to talk and share my burdens I could never have gone this far.

In two and one-half years I have had go out of my life two children, a sweet, golden-haired girl and a curly-headed baby boy who went away on the 11th of July. Both were walking and talking but their baby hands are stilled forever. Their toys lie around undisturbed and seem to echo my loneliness. The little worn garments are scattered over the house and I cannot turn but what my vision meets some little article which bears the finger prints of the little children. Their photographs rest on the mantel and seem to look at me with big blue eyes, once so full of mirth and laughter.

Sisters, is not this a shadow that we ought to help each other bear? And you, who have never had such trials, put yourself in my place and see what you think of it, then let us know. I am more sorry for people who have sorrows than those who have bodily ailments. Why do I say this? Simply because I have had both and I could endure the latter.

Do not imagine that I sit down with folded hands and nurse my troubles. Far from that. I keep very busy trying to chase away the shadows. We live on a farm of 160 acres, down in Tennessee, and that means work. I can lots of fruits and vegetables every summer besides making butters, jams and jellies. The doctors say that the first question an East Tennessean will ask when sick is, "What am I going to eat?"

Our crops this year consisted of wheat, corn, rye, cane, tobacco, peanuts, popcorn, beans, melons, sweet and Irish potatoes.

I shall greatly appreciate any letters I may receive.

With love to all, MRS. BONNIE BOVELL.

DURANGO, COLO.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

I am a subscriber of COMFORT. I should like to say to "Irish" that her little boy of past two is merely a baby, and it is perfectly natural for babies not to like the dark, especially when they wake up and find themselves alone in bed. He is probably not wormy at all, only a normal child. My little girl of four (our only living child) has always slept with me, while not a nervously termed child, she has often wakened in the night and asked me to take her in my arms. Once she said, "Mother, isn't it funny how the ' 'fraid' goes 'way, when you put your arm around me?" So I should take that little boy of two in bed with me, if I were his mother. But maybe I am too easy with children, but I remember so vividly my own childish feelings.

What a nice thing it would be if more mothers could realize what a short time we have to keep our children. Some time ago I heard a mother of two bright children say, "I must make a pleasant home for my children for the next ten years, for that is as long as I can hope to have them with me."

I used to be a teacher before marriage. I shall send in a club of COMFORT subscribers, the best little paper going.

Some time I may write how I broke my little girl of sucking her fingers when two years of age.

Very truly yours, MRS. CALVIN MOXLEY.

TENNESSEE.

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Here comes a stranger, though I feel that I know every one of you.

I have read the letters giving advice to the woman whose neighbors' children bothered her, and want to add my experience. When we moved to town we were in a neighborhood where there were many children and my frinds told me, "You are in for it for the children will worry you to death." I only laughed and told them I didn't think so. I have one little girl so before long the other children began to come in. I would allow them to play a while but when I thought they had stayed long enough I called my little girl into the house and if they came in with her I would have them sit down and be quiet. It wouldn't be long before they would go home. The plan has worked for sixteen months and none of the mothers are offended. If I didn't want to bother with them at all I would have them sit down when they first came.

I hope this will help someone.

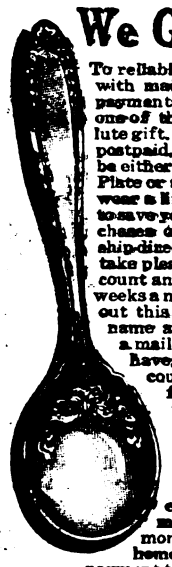
EVER CHEERFUL.

BELTON, S. C.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

I want to say just a few words about marriage, especially about the marriage of girls to boys younger than themselves. It seems to me a girl should always

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 32.)



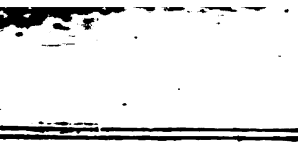
Get new $100 Oliver for only $55. We now sell direct. And we save you $45. New Oliver, our latest and finest model. Free trial. No money down. Return machine at our expense, or keep it and pay only $4 a month.

SAVE $45

Write for all particulars today. A post card will do. Send one now! No obligation.

Free Trial

The OLIVER Typewriter Company
1808 Oliver Typewriter Bldg.
Chicago, Ill.



We Give 'em Away

To reliable married women who deal with mail-order houses on monthly payments: Every one of you may have one of these sugar-shells as an absolute gift. The sugar-shell we send you, postpaid, on your simple request, will be either the Oneida Community Par Plate or solid nickel silver, which will wear a life-time. We are in a position to save you big money on all your purchases of home-furnishings, for we ship direct from the factory. We shall take pleasure in opening a charge account and shall send you every two weeks a new factory bargain offer. Cut out this advt. and mail it with your name and address, and the name of a mail-order house where you now have, or have had, a charge account, and to whom we may refer. Then we will send you the sugar-shell absolutely free, as an expression of our gratitude for the privilege of thus getting acquainted. This offer is only for women who know the convenience of easy monthly payments by mail, and who want to save money hereafter by getting their home-furnishings, on monthly-payment terms, direct from the factory.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO.,
Silverware Dept., Aurora, Illinois

MAKE YOUR wife's or mother's wash tub into a WASHING MACHINE

It's easy to wash a tub of clothes in 5 to 10 minutes—clean and without wear, with the Vac Cup Attachment, the Semi-Automatic Washing Machine. No electric or water power necessary. Vacuum and suction principle—formerly the Dodge and Zuill Syracuse "Easy." Sent on 30 days' free trial. Easy monthly payments if desired. Send postal card for how to save work. Burlingame Mfg. Co., 1113 Sunset Ave., Syracuse, N.Y.

CARDS Send 5 cents for large Sample Album of Hidden Name, Birthday, Envelope, Friendship, Letter, Love, Gr'd and all other Kinds of Cards, Post Cards and Premiums. Star Beam Catcher and list 999 Songs given Free. No trash. OHIO CARD CO., B-14 Columbus, Ohio.

Love Will Find the Way

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 15.)

you know how I love you. In the old days we used to call each other sister. Let me be your sister now, dear, in reality. You can never be happy there. Leave it all and come to me, Marian. My sister, let my home be yours!"

She paused. There was the sound of wild sobbing; but it ceased at last, and Marian struggled to her feet. She did not look at Anne Gordon, and her voice was almost inaudible as, with downcast eyes, she said:

"I can't thank you; I don't know how. It goes beyond all that."

"Then you will come?"

"I can't," she answered, in a choked voice. "That would be impossible."

"Why? Are you to sacrifice all your future because of him? Are you to ruin your whole life for the sake of a man who is not worthy to even speak your name?"

"He is—my father!"

"And because of that you are to allow him to not only spoil your life but ruin your soul? Are you going to sacrifice yourself for a creature like that? Marian, I tell you that you shall not! It is criminal! It is horrible! It is against every law of God and man!"

"Don't, Anne, I beg of you. As you love me, spare him. I know that he is unworthy, and it may be that I am wrong to remain by his side; but I have promised him that I would, and I have not the right to break my word."

"Marian, you cannot mean it. See, dear; I offer you a home here with me. I promise you that you shall never want, that you shall share with me, even as my own sister should. Marian, I am pleading with you. I cannot endure to see you putting this blight upon your own life as you are doing."

"And I tell you that I must!" panted Marian. "Oh, please say no more! I dare not desert him! He needs me. He could not live without me. If I were to desert him, only Heaven knows what would become of him. Do not ask me again, Anne. I see but too clearly the terrible situation in which I am placed, but there is nothing for me to do but abide by it. Good by, Anne. It is hard for me to say it, but I could not bear to see you again! I must go on and live my miserable life alone. You have been so good to me, dear—so good, that if I were to try to the end of my wretched life, I could never make you understand how grateful I am. But surely you know how it would hurt me, under the circumstances, to see you again. I couldn't, Anne—I couldn't. Dearly as I love you, that would be impossible. As long as I believed you did not know—as long as I thought I could keep the guilty secret from you—I could bear it; but now that you know, it would be—madness! Good by, Anne!"

She caught Miss Gordon in a wild, passionate embrace. It lasted but a moment, and before Anne could recover herself sufficiently to speak, she had gone.

A moment more and they might have understood each other, and both have been spared the whole sorrowful after-time; but that moment was denied them, and their miserable game of cross-purposes stood as they had played it, a monument of future suffering.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we will be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Thanksgiving Raffle

By Joseph F. Novak

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

THE first snowfall of the year had arrived, and while it whitened the pedestrians downtown, and frosted window-ledge, arc-light and electric sign, it made a mess under foot.

Julian Barker swung along gaily through the downfall, and when he arrived at the bank where he was employed, he breezed into the building, overcoat unbuttoned, his white silk muffler waving.

"Hurrah for Thanksgiving and the snow!" he yelled, as he went behind the cages and joined his fellow-workers. "Of course, it's slush downtown, but in the resident districts it will be the real thing."

"What are you hurrahing for? Have you anything to be thankful for?" queried Wilson, one of the bookkeepers.

"Have I?" Julian queried. "Have I? Say, I'm thankful that I didn't get fired for balling up those clearing items the other day!"

"And I'm thankful that I didn't get an earful for that awful mistake I made in the boss's letter," laughed pretty Susan Kent, one of the stenographers.

"Well," said Julian, "I propose that we give everyone a chance of being thankful and so have a raffle. Let's get together, buy a turkey and raffle it off here in the bank tonight after closing time. Whoever wins it will have material cause for thanksgiving."

"You said it, boy," said Clayton, another of the bookkeepers. "I'm on."

"Let's see, there's twenty of us, including the bank officials. Let's sell twenty chances at 50 cents a chance. That will realize ten dollars."

"Would you ask Mr. Sprague to buy a chance?" gasped pretty Susan.

"Sure, I'm not afraid. I'll begin and here's my fifty cents. I get number one," and Barker tossed a half dollar into a pin-box and wrote "No. 1" on two slips, reserving one for himself and placing the other in the box.

Susan took "No. 2" and then as the other clerks and stenographers came in he sold them a "chance" and when the bank officials came in he got them, too.

"With ten dollars we ought to get an immense turkey!" Barker exclaimed jubilantly. "Here comes Mrs. Gray; I'll get her," and he waltzed up to her.

"A chance on a turkey!" exclaimed Mrs. Gray. "Why, dear boy, what would I do with a turkey if I won it?"

"Cook it, of course," informed Julian, saucily impudent.

"How? Over a gas-jet?" queried Mrs. Gray.

Mrs. Gray had a sweet, motherly face. No one knew much about her, except that the bank president, Mr. Sprague, and her husband had been friends. It was said that she had been well off at one time, but with her husband's death, her apparent prosperity had crumbled and applying to Mr. Sprague, she had been given a position in the bank. She did not seem in place; she had too much of the home air about her. She had charge of part of the statements, and though she was scrupulously neat and accurate to a degree, she was slow. The other statement clerk was always finished away ahead of her. Once he offered to help her, but there was such distress in her eyes that he never offered again.

As Mrs. Gray spoke, a look of reminiscence came to her eyes, and Julian watching her, exclaimed:

"Gee, I'll bet you could put up a regular bear of a meal! You can cook, can't you?"

"Why, I think so," she smiled. "I was married when I was twenty and I cooked for my husband for fifteen years. It's five years since he died. I know my cooking didn't kill him for he met his death in a train wreck," and the little attempt at a joke was pitiful as the watching lad saw it called up tender memories.

"I always thought you were a dear sort of a home body. Now I want you to take a chance on this raffle anyhow. It's only fifty cents and I'm sure you'll win——"

"Surely you'll win, Mrs. Gray," laughed Susan Kent. "Julian tells everyone that."

"Of course I do. You don't suppose I'm selling blanks? Now, there's just one more, so I must tackle Blodgett," and after him he went. Blodgett was the general man of the bank and a widower of several years' standing. He had been the bank's right-hand man, in fact he was now, but with the death of his wife there had come a cessation of ambition and though he was as conscientious as ever, his energetic spirit was gone. The older employees of the bank noticed it, and they knew the reason. To the younger boys and girls he was just "Old Blodgett," though as a mater of fact he wasn't more than forty-two.

"Now, what do you want?" he asked, as he adjusted the green shade he generally wore over his eyes.

"Just to soak you fifty cents for a raffle ticket," Julian informed him calmly.

"For what?"

"Chance on a turkey. If you win it, you'll have something to be thankful for."

"Yes, I'll be thankful for it. What would I do with it if I won it?" growled Blodgett humorously, as he slid over the coin.

"Well, since you're not anxious to win it, you won't," said Julian, grabbing the money and "beating it."

Everyone liked Blodgett, for being of even temper, he was always pleasant and though everyone went to him for orders and advice, he was never officious.

With the money collected, Julian pocketed it, and then got down to business for the daily grind was beginning. The clerks and stenographers scattered to their respective places and desks and soon the institution was like a hive.

At noontime, Julian plunged out into the snow-swept streets, and after having his fifty-three cents worth of lunch at a local cafeteria, he went to do his shopping.

Turkeys seemed to be reasonably priced, and as he thought it over, it seemed unwise to spend all the money for the fowl.

"Why not do the thing right? Why not use about half the money for a turkey and the rest for a thanksgiving dinner? Why not, indeed? No reason at all," Julian reasoned and decided, and off he started.

He secured a basket, then made a center rush at the counter where a mob of women were clamoring to be waited upon.

"Oh, girls," he pleaded, "I've got to get a turkey for my poor widowed mother who does washing. I'm in a hurry. Gangway, please."

His irresistible good-humor won him a place at the counter and a few flirtatious winks at the saleslgirl secured her services. He quickly made his selection.

"Good by, girls," he laughed. "I love you all," and he waved so infectiously that several fearfully determined faces relaxed into smiles, though one woman murmured something about him being a "nut."

He went on with his purchases.

"How much of cranberries do you need to make sauce?" he naively inquired of a motherly-looking old lady, who informed him. "How many people could be served with that plum-pudding?" he asked of another, and so on, his boyish good-humor a passport to being quickly waited upon.

Thus he went about the great department store until he had spent all his money, securing sweet potatoes, mincemeat, plum-pudding, nuts, candies, in fact everything that he ever remembered eating at a Thanksgiving dinner, and loaded down with his burden, he started back for the bank.

Mr. Sprague looked at him over his glasses as he passed in.

"Beggars, peddlers and canvassers not allowed," he said, and then gave a wink.

Julian deposited his burden under his desk, allowing no one to see the result of his shopping until the bank closed for the day. Then there was a mild uproar as all the clerks laughingly demanded an immediate decision or their money refunded.

Whereupon, Julian displayed his wares.

"Great heaven! There's enough for a mob!" exclaimed Susan.

"It would feed one of us for weeks," laughed another of the girls.

Julian mounted a stool.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "we are now about to participate in the drawing of this wonderful raffle. Many of you suppose you have nothing to be thankful for. Well, let me show you differently. If Mrs. Gray doesn't win it, she can be thankful that she didn't for she wouldn't have any place to cook it! If Blodgett doesn't win it, he should be thankful because he has no one to cook it for him. The rest of us should be thankful that we had the pleasure of hoping we would win, and whoever wins it will be thankful for that, and we who don't win it should be thankful we don't have to lug the darn thing home!"

Applause and wet sponges greeted this oration.

Entirely unmindful, Julian calmly wiped a trickle of water from behind his ear, and proceeded:

"Gentlemen and ladies, the drawing will take place."

Susan was blindfolded, drew a number and—the dinner went to Blodgett!

"Great Scott! What shall I do with it? I can't cook it!" exclaimed Blodgett.

"Chance is very brainless," complained Julian. "You win it and can't cook it, and I suppose if you hadn't won it, Mrs. Gray would, and she would have no place to cook it. It's very annoying."

"Well, Mrs. Gray can cook the dinner in my kitchen if she wishes," Blodgett said laughingly, though there was a tone of longing in his voice. Was he thinking of the times in years past, when he had watched the only woman bustling about that kitchen, so long vacant?

"There's your chance, Mrs. Gray!" exclaimed Julian. "Will you do it?"

"Yes, if the whole office force joins us in the banquet," laughed Mrs. Gray.

"Invite the whole crew, Blodgett!" sang out one of the clerks.

"Sure, all come!" exclaimed Blodgett, heartily. "How many will?"

Julian and Susan agreed, as did several others, so that there would be a dozen at the table.

"I'll call for you, Susan, and then we'll get Mrs. Gray and the three of us go to Blodgett's home."

And though it was thus agreed, immediately a dark plot was launched.

The office force dispersed to their respective street cars and "L" stations, but Blodgett asked of Mrs. Gray permission to walk with her to the street car, "and tell me if there is anything else you will need for cooking that dinner."

Early next morning, Julian called for Susan. Susan looked a regular bud in her pretty winter clothes and quite in holiday spirit. The sky was lowering, but that only made the thought of assisting with the Thanksgiving dinner more cozy and agreeable.

"Gee, you look nice, Susy," Julian said. "You know, I'd like to have you go to a show with me sometime."

(But this isn't Julian and Susy's romance.)

They called for Mrs. Gray and found her looking more sweet and motherly than ever. She was only forty and by no means elderly looking but to eyes of eighteen and nineteen (the ages of Susan and Julian) she was an old lady.

They reached Blodgett's home in due time, and then after sitting in the parlor for a bit (which Blodgett kept scrupulously neat "as if he were awaiting the coming of his bride" Susan afterward romantically said) they all went to the kitchen.

"Oh, Mrs. Gray, you be the mother, and Blodgett'll be the father and we're your kids," suggested Julian.

"Well, I don't mind playing at housekeeping, for it was my delight in times gone by," said Mrs. Gray cheerfully.

She put on a coverall apron, rolled up her sleeves and started in to work with Julian as assistant cook, Susan a very enticing slavey and Blodgett a faithful ally. He brought any dish or utensil desired.

Julian noted the almost magical way in which Mrs. Gray's slim white hands got the dinner under way, and noted, too, that it was not lost on Blodgett. A queer sort of feeling rose in the boy's breast; he pitied Blodgett as he looked about the beautiful house, so austerely clean and neat—the work of a man-housekeeper. He pitied Mrs. Gray, who didn't seem at all the woman whom he had so many times watched as she pored over her statements under the electric light in the bank. She seemed to belong in the kitchen. That was his thought and he meant no disrespect—she was so essentially a home woman. She should have had the house—and Blodgett should have lived in the boarding-house.

So ran his thoughts.

"I think I'll make a fine mince pie," Mrs. Gray announced, and with the rapidity of one who loves the work, she set about it.

There was a ring at the 'phone, and one of the clerks begged to be excused from attending the dinner.

Other calls came. Those clerks! The wretches! Not one intended to come!

"Well, I suppose there's no use in setting the table for people who won't come," complained Susan. "But it will be better than having a bunch!"

"Yes," said Julian, trying not to be aware of the look that passed between Mrs. Gray and Blodgett. "Only, you've made three pies, and one will be enough. But," artfully, "Blodgett may have the others to eat tomorrow."

There was a little restraint after the last refusal, but it soon passed. Then Blodgett and Susan went to the dining-room, where the man got out the linen and silver. No one knew that he felt as if he were opening a grave, and yet, he could not feel that he was committing a desecration. For many years he had lived alone, and life was lonely. He wanted to remain true to his wife, and yet there was a feeling that perhaps she knew, and perhaps she did not care if he opened their home as he was doing to one at least who was as lonely and alone as himself.

"You must have loved your wife very much to give her all these lovely things," said Susan softly, as Blodgett seemed lost in memories.

"Yes, Margaret enjoyed having pretty things, and she was so good and worthy of everything I did for her," he replied.

A call came from Julian from the kitchen and thereafter there was much circulating between kitchen and dining-room; Susan fixing up the table to the prettiest of her ability, while in the kitchen Julian washed dish after dish and pan after pan without protest except when was stumped as to how to wash a pot blackened by gas.

At length everything was ready. There was the turkey in all his glory, there were the delicious mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes and potato chips; there was—well, it was all there.

The four sat to it, and soon were making fine headway. Mrs. Gray partook heartily of her efforts, for "it is so long since I ate anything that I cooked," she apologized for her hearty appetite. Blodgett felt that he had not had such a meal since—since—somehow he couldn't say "since" Margaret died"—because this enjoyment of his home again seemed unloyal to her. And yet, if she knew——

Julian and Susan didn't mince, for they were scarcely more than girl and boy, anyhow, and they went to it with boy and girl appetite.

After dinner they cleared away the feast, and while Mrs. Gray washed the dishes, they all wiped them, and then as the snow had again commenced to fall, they canceled the plan they had made to go to a movie.

Blodgett opened the piano and Susan, who could bang a little, played many popular songs, then they put the phonograph into commission and after that wearied, they played "five hundred." So interested did they become that they didn't notice the lapse of time until Julian, glancing at his watch, noted that it was nearly seven.

"Mercy! We must go!" exclaimed Mrs. Gray.

"No, let's not. Let's make it a perfect day. Let's have a supper from the left-overs from dinner!" exclaimed Julian.

"Well, if Mrs. Gray is willing, I am," said Blodgett, smiling broadly.

The plan was adopted and after supper and the clearing away, they went back to the parlor again. Blodgett brought out several albums of

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 38.)

Real Brand New U. S. Army Compasses For Every Boy In America

The U. S. Army offers the boys of America a chance to own a regular Army compass. These compasses are brand new, have never been used, and were made in Switzerland. They are fitted with a luminous arrow making it just as easy to tell the direction in the dark as in daylight.

You can have your choice of two kinds. The first kind is a heavy, bronze compass, two inches in diameter, with a strong cover to protect the glass. It has a floating metal dial which tells the exact direction and is fitted with a nice brass ring so that you can carry it on your belt. This kind sells for one dollar. The other kind is a "watch compass" with an open, bronze case and has a floating metal dial and a luminous arrow. It is an inch and a half in diameter and can be worn on your watch chain or fob. This kind sells for fifty cents.

These compasses are exactly the same as those carried by the American soldiers in the World War. Because they are correct and well made they saved many of our men from being lost and were a great help in the night raids on No Man's Land.

They cost the Government from four to five times as much as the sales price but the Government wants every boy to have one and to know how to use it. Every boys' club should order a compass for every member and the price is so low that every boy can afford one.

Just make out a money order for the right amount and address your letter to

DEPARTMENT "C" ENGINEER SUPPLY OFFICER
INTERMEDIATE RESERVE DEPOT
COLUMBUS, OHIO.

TELL TOMORROW'S Weather

White's Weather Prophet forecasts the weather 8 to 24 hours in advance. Not a toy but a scientifically constructed instrument working automatically. Handsome, reliable and everlasting.

An Ideal Present

Made doubly interesting by the little figures of Hansel and Gretel and the Witch, who come in and out to tell you what the weather will be. Size 6¾x7½; fully guaranteed. Postpaid to any address in U. S. or Canada on receipt of $1.25

Agents Wanted
DAVID WHITE, Dept. 60, 419 E. Water St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Dress Designing Lessons FREE

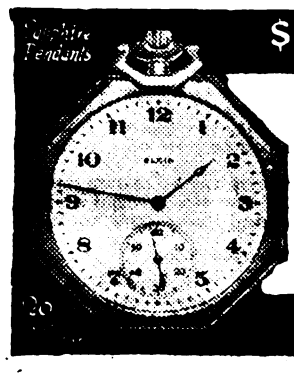
Women—Girls—15 or over, can easily learn Dress and Costume Designing during their spare moments IN TEN WEEKS

Dress and Costume Designers Frequently Earn $45 to $100 a Week

Many Start Parlors in Their Own Homes

Every woman who now does plain sewing should take up Designing.

Hundreds Learn Millinery By Mail.



Cut and Mail to FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. S 646, Rochester, N. Y.

Send me AT ONCE, free sample lessons from the Home Study Course here checked.

☐ Dress Designing ☐ Millinery

Name .....

Address .....

Solitaire Pendants

$2 Puts This ELGIN WATCH In Your Hands

The biggest watch offer ever made—NO RED TAPE—NO WAITING. Simply send $2 and receive the watch. Full seven-jeweled Elgin, in stylish octagon case, guaranteed 20 years. 12 size, thin model.

30 Days' Free Trial

You carry the watch for 30 days—you take no chances. If not satisfactory, your deposit is returned to you. You do not risk a penny.

$2.00 A MONTH

Send only $2 and the watch comes to you charges paid. Pay the balance $2 a month for 10 months. Price only $22.

FREE Catalog Illustrates and describes over 2,000 items in diamonds, watches and jewelry. Send for it. Dept. 396.

ROYAL DIAMOND & WATCH CO
35 Maiden Lane - New York

Attractive Ways of Using Blanket Stitch

Suggestions for Christmas Gifts

AS it is none too early to be thinking of the gift problem, as is our usual custom, our pages are devoted this month to various useful and attractive articles, which can be made with simple stitches.

These hand-made articles are really delightfully pretty when finished if one is careful in selecting and combining their colors.

The collars, creeping rug and bib are as attractive as necessary. The tatting boudoir cap is simple and beautiful. Any housewife always welcomes extra doilies now that they are so generally used, and market bags are as much in vogue as during the "cash and carry" war days. Sofa pillows are always needed and the two suggestions here are especially good.

Blanket-Stitch Embroidery

A touch of hand work is always an addition to any article however small, and dainty effects can be secured by those who are not sufficiently skilled to do fine work or who lack perhaps the time or eyesight.

BLANKET STITCH EMBROIDERY.

One way of accomplishing considerable with ease and rapidity is to employ the old-fashioned blanket stitch. Any simple outline pattern, either bird, beast or blossom, may be worked completely in this way, or combined with simple outline stitch as shown in illustration of tulip.

Any flower, the same being repeated across the end of huck or bath towels, is very effective worked out in two or three colors in blanket stitch.

Little aprons, bibs and bonnets may also be made extremely fascinating and individual.

There are also many other ways in which blanket stitch can be effectively employed.

Unbleached covers, scarfs and sofa pillows crossed with bands of bright cretonne, with all edges turned in and held in place with long and short blanket stitches, are as strikingly pretty as they are durable.

While fine stitches always have their place, at present the main idea is to secure as pretty and elaborate effects as possible, with the least work and in the shortest time.

It is really remarkable how much can be accomplished in this way.

Besides articles for use in one's bedroom or living-room, house dresses and children's dresses, aprons and hats can also be artistically trimmed with just a few bits of bright pieces prettily arranged.

The pockets of dresses trimmed with circles of color similar to the decoration here shown on the basket, and perhaps a few leaf-like shaped pieces of green is one idea recently seen.

An apron which any little girl would like to wear, has two pockets on the front, crossed off in diamonds which are outlined in black or brown, and above these on the garment small pieces are arranged as leaves and blossoms. Similar trimming can be used to border the bottom, neck and sleeves of little dresses which can be ornamented very easily and quickly.

Novel Shopping Basket

This home-made affair suggests another way in which blanket stitch can be employed effectively.

The basket proper was made by sewing straw which formerly had been a summer hat. The straw braid was ripped from the wire frame, cleaned, softened with warm water and then sewed round and round in the shape shown.

The first strip forming the bottom measured nine inches, turn and sew around, fulling the braid on a little to give the width.

The decoration consists of circles of silk and velvet, overlapped as shown and stitched in place with black wool. As the prevailing shade of the pieces were green, wool tassels of a leaf green were added.

SHOPPING BASKET.

Ten Fresh Ideas

Each one useful, simple and attractive. Busy home workers with an eye open for Christmas, 1921 or intervening birthdays or "showers" should get interested and try them out.

The material, tiny scraps to be found among one's things, a paper pattern from which to work and all these designs can be fashioned from the following descriptions.

Lingerie Holder

A holder for lingerie ribbon is an ever useful and acceptable gift. For this fold up three inches of a piece of pretty ribbon measuring 9 by 12 inches, and overseam the sides. Make pockets by dividing this portion into three parts and feather-stitch between. Edge the case with a small silk cord. To the center sew a ribbon stitched down to form two divisions under which one may slip a pair of small scissors and a bodkin. In the pockets place running ribbons wound on cards cut to fit.

CREEPING RUG FOR LITTLE CHILDREN.

Safety-Pins

A holder for the ever necessary safety-pins is fashioned from two pieces of white linen, each six by four inches. Between these place two or three pinked leaves of cream-colored baby flannel.

CHILD'S FEEDING BIB.

Finish the edge of the linen covers with a buttonholed scallop. Tie all together at the top by running a ribbon through worked eyelets. An embroidered initial or monogram will make this little article personal and attractive. Fill with different sized safety-pins.

Spool Holder

Cut 10 circles of cardboard, or rather five pairs in graduated sizes and cover them on both sides with silk. Tiny scraps of any colors will work in nicely.

Make a hole through each circle, tie a knot six inches from the end of a No. 3 ribbon run through one of the largest circles, then through a spool of silk or cotton, repeat, working on a circle of each size with a spool between. Leave piece of ribbon twelve inches long from the top circle. Thread the other circles and spools from the bottom up in the same way. Tie the ribbons from the bottom together in a small bow, closely enough to keep the spools together side by side. Tie the top ribbons also for hanging.

Needle-Case

This is a unique little needle-case in the form of a tiny parasol. For this one will need a fine bone crochet hook, a six-inch circle of pretty silk, narrow lace to edge and a bit of flannel. Cut the two circles, pinking the flannel one. Fit this inside, making an eyelet hole in the center of the two. Fold and mark eight points around the edge of the silk covering, at each of these make a loop of silk, buttonholed over. Run needles into the flannel from these points toward the center and also in the divisions between.

Through the loops on the edge run a narrow ribbon which will draw the parasol into form and tie in a bow around the crochet hook.

Powder Pad

This tiny powder pad is for one's bag. Make the inner bag of net or cheese-cloth two inches square. Fill and slip this into a chamois covering made of two circles measuring an inch and one-half in diameter.

Punch holes with a large darning needle in the upper or top chamois, overcast the edges together with embroidery silk.

To accompany this, cover the back of a small mirror with chamois, overcast a No. 2 ribbon, to the edge, slip the mirror in, gather the opposite edge of the ribbon and draw up closely to keep the mirror in place.

Finish with a tiny bow and from this sew one end of the ribbon to the pad. Slip both in a silk or chamois envelope made to fit and finished with a snap.

Cover for Paper Powder Book

This cover of silk or brocade is made the same as any book cover and can be easily refilled when necessary.

Bedroom Slippers

For these one will need one pair soles, two and two-thirds yards of five-inch ribbon, flowered is preferable, one-half yard of narrow white elastic, three yards of white lace and two yards of narrow ribbon. Halve the wide ribbon and full onto each sole, allowing more ribbon around the toes than the heels, make a running around the opposite edge for the elastic and finish with a frill of lace and rosette of narrow ribbon in front.

Scrap Bag

This bag for the side of a sewing machine is made of common linen dish toweling and is serviceable for this purpose.

Make a nine-inch bag and seam up the sides. Crochet over a cord with linen or ecru cotton, when a yard or so is covered, sew a half inch to the top of the bag beginning at the seam. now make a loop over a wooden embroidery ring, coming out over the cord which is sewed in place. Cross this and sew down another inch, make a second loop, repeat working around the bag in this way.

Use the same cord for hanging. This little article is designed to catch thread and clippings when sewing, and is most convenient if hung to the iron work of a machine, under the table.

Work Box

This box, made of two other boxes, may be of any size, but the smaller should just fit in larger diamond-wise.

For the lid use four diamond-shaped pieces large enough to cover the corners. Fill the center with a fat cushion tied in with ribbons.

Cover the whole box inside and out with any pretty flowered material—cretonne, chintz or dimity.

Manicure Case

For the foundation one can use a box such as the sealed packages of crackers come in. Open this out flat and cover both sides with any suitable material. Slip the ends back into place and then make the box secure by binding the edge and the lid with narrow ribbon. Strips of ribbon should be fastened to the sides of the box and also on the inside of the lid for holding the emery boards, scissors, file and orange-wood sticks. Room will also be found for the polishing paste and powder, buffer and in fact all articles required for manicuring at home. If the box is neatly and attractively made it is pretty enough to adorn the dressing table of the most fastidious girl.

Child's Feeding Bib

The little feeding bib is of unbleached cotton, worked entirely in blue. Across the bottom is an extra piece which forms a useful pocket in case of accidents.

The little ducks would doubtless prove amusing to any animated small child.

Sofa Pillow Cov...

A good exampe of blanket stitch decoration is shown in the effective pillow. This cover is of plain natural tone crash, the cretonne roses being appliqued in place with heavy black mercerized cotton floss.

Child's Creeping Rug

A creeping rug is a great convenience which would surely be appreciated by any young mother.

A baby old enough to sit alone will be attracted by the bright colors used in working the border of animals.

The one here illustrated had for a foundation an old blanket doubled four times. The top was covered with white cotton flannel, the bottom and nine inch-border of medium blue. Blanket stitch this on the inner edge as shown with dark blue or black. For the animals use various colors. Small shoe buttons, securely sewn in place, answer for excellent eyes, and this feature alone will often amuse baby for hours.

A fascinating set for a small child's room may be made of unbleached cloth; for the crib quilt outline a circle of small children or a group of bunnies, kittens or chickens. These should be placed in the center of the quilt rather than as a border.

For an older child's room make a bedspread, finishing the edge with a blanket-stitched border the same as shown on the creeping rug.

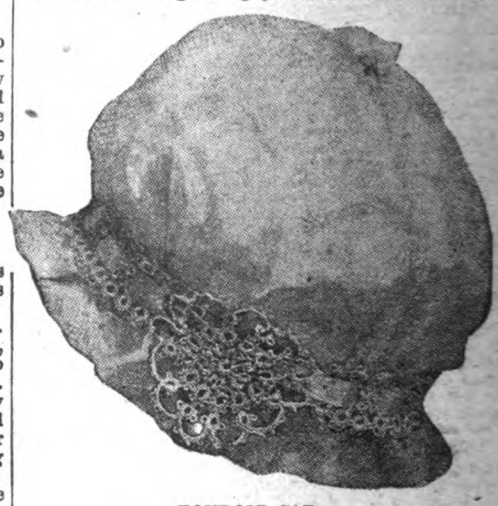
Across the foot and the top inside of the hems run a border of blossoms or butterflies. Scarfs for bureau and little chairs and other articles in the room may be worked out to match.

The Ever Useful Boudoir Cap

Our model is of rose pink, and one of the daintiest caps imaginable.

The cap itself is of four thicknesses of pink maline, or, if preferred, one could substitute white wash net dyeing it to the proper shade to match the tatted band.

For this pink crochet cotton No. 30 was used.



A band of tatting crosses the front and back of the cap and on each side are rosettes like motifs, which are shown in detail below.

For the Rosettes

Begin with a center ring of 12 long picots with 1 d s between, close. Knot thread and cut. Ring 6 d s, join to long p, 6 d s, close, leave one-eighth inch thread, make ring 3 d s, 1 p, 1 d s, 3 p, 1 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, close, make 12 of each of these rings, joining the smaller to the center ring, surround each wheel with rings and chains as follows: Ring 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, join to center p of large ring 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, close. Chains: 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s.

Beading Band

Small ring 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, leave one-eighth inch thread, 1 large ring, 3 d s, 1 p, 2 d s, 3 p, 2 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, 1 small ring joined to first small ring. Large ring, join to side p, small ring, leave free. Large ring joined to second large ring, 1 small ring, large ring, joined to last large ring, small ring joined to last small ring. Repeat.

BOUDOIR CAP.

For the other side of beading work the same. Join two small rings to small rings, making a group of four rings. Join free small rings together.

Run ribbon under the group of four small rings.

The rosette may be used in numberless ways.

Of fine tatting cotton camisole yokes of the joined rosettes are very handsome. Square or pointed yokes for nightgowns may also be fashioned.

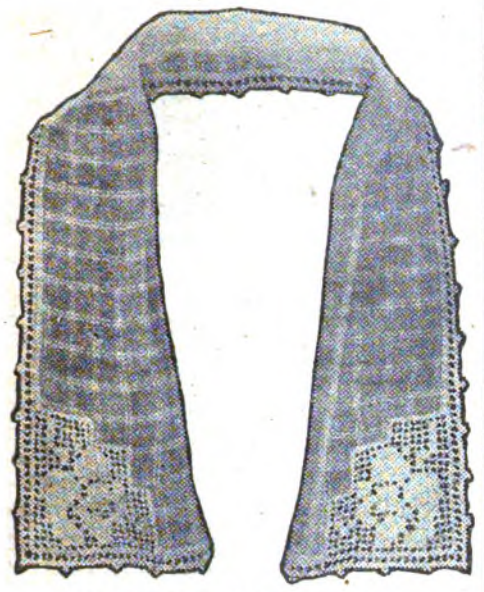
Tatted Napkin Rings

The motif used on the tatted cap can also be employed in many other ways which will readily suggest themselves.

For a small article which the shuttle worker can turn out very quickly, nothing is likely to prove of more use than a napkin ring, for so often the necessity arises for an extra one. Or such rings may be used by the whole family if tied with ribbons of different colors or marked

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 22.)

SOFA PILLOW COVER IN APPLIQUE.



Worth-While Designs in Filet Crochet

Dainty Designs for Neckwear

THERE is almost an endless variety of neckwear as dainty collars are used so much on dresses, blouses and sweaters.

At present the finest of organdy is the vogue, made up with either plain hemstitched hems, lace edges or worked with flower designs in bright colors.

Certainly there could be nothing more dainty than the organdy cross-bar, combined with filet for an all-white collar.

ORGANDY AND FILET COLLAR.

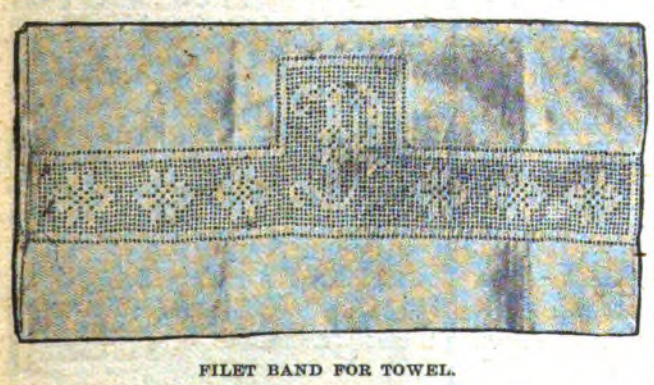
The motifs in the corners, shown in detail below are made of No. 100, mercerized crochet cotton.

Begin with ch 60 sts, turn.
1st row—18 sps, ch 5, turn.
2nd row—9 sps, 2 blks, 7 sps, ch 5, turn.
3rd row—5 sps, 5 blks, 3 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
4th row—5 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 8 blks, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.
5th row—1 sp, 9 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 5 sps, ch 5, turn.
6th row—8 sps, 4 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
7th row—1 sp, 2 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 4 sps, ch 5, turn.
8th row—5 sps, 4 blks, 2 sps, 4 blks, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.
9th row—2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 1 sp, 4 blks, 4 sps, turn, slip st over 3 sps, ch 5.
10th row—4 blks over 4 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 1 sp, 4 blks, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
11th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 4 blks, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
12th row—2 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, ch 5, turn.
13th row—4 sps, 6 blks, 5 sps, ch 5, turn.
14th row—5 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 5 sps, ch 5, turn.
15th row—4 sps, 1 blk, 10 blks, turn, slip st over 6 sps, ch 5.
16th row—5 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.
17th row—4 blks, 1 sp, 4 blks, ch 5, turn.
18th row—9 sps.

Now crochet all around the two straight sides of the motif, working 3 s c in each sp and 7 s c in each corner sp.

Tab Collar in Filet

These fashionable collars are justly popular because they fit any shaped neck and are suitable for many occasions.



Medium fine cotton, No 40 or 50, works up very prettily or even coarse cotton can be used with good effect, especially for wear on a woolen slip-on. The coarser the collar the deeper the tabs will be.

TAB COLLAR IN FILET.

Ch 63, turn.
1st row—18 sps, ch 5, turn.
2nd row—18 sps, ch 3, 1 d c in same st with last d c, ch 9, turn.
3rd row—1 d c in top of last d c, 19 more sps, ch 5, turn.
4th row—12 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, ch 3, 1 d c in same st with last d c as in 2nd row, ch 9, turn.

FILET BAND FOR TOWEL.

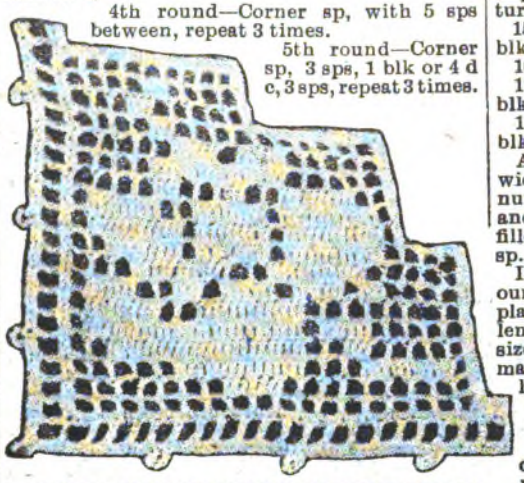
5th row—1 d c in top of last d c, 5 sps, 1 blk over blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 12 sps, ch 5, turn.
6th row—12 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, ch 3, 1 d c in last d c, ch 9, turn.
7th row—One is now on center row of first point, 1 d c on top of last d c, 4 sps, 7 blks, 12 sps, ch 5, turn.
8th row—15 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 d c on first d c in last row, thus making a slanting line, ch 6, turn.
9th row—1 d c on 3rd d c in last row, 2 more sps, 1 blk over blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 15 sps, ch 5, turn.
10th row—12 sps, 4 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 d c on first d c in last row, ch 6, turn.
11th row—1 d c on first d c in blk, 19 more sps, ch 5, turn.
12th row—18 sps, 1 d c in first d c in last row, ch 6, turn.
13th row—18 sps, ch 5, turn.
14th row—3 sps, ch 51, turn.
15th row—15 sps on ch, 3 sps over sps, repeat pattern, making as many tabs as are necessary.

Finish by working 3 s c in each sp, 3 s c in corner sp, ch 3 for picot, 3 s c, 3 s c under each double on the ends of rows on the points, and 3 s c, 1 p, 3 s c under each ch 6, 4 s c, 1 p, 4 s c under ch at center of each point.

ANNIE BURCHFIELD.

New Filet Sofa Pillow

Materials—coarse mercerized crochet cotton, either white or colored and bone hook of a suitable size.



The work is begun in the center with a ch. 7, join in ring.

1st round—Ch 3, 16 d c in ring, join.

2nd round—Ch 9, 1 d c on first d c, ch 2, 1 d c on fourth d c, ch 6, 1 d c on fifth d c, ch 2, 1 d c on eighth d c, ch 6, 1 d c on ninth d c, ch 2, 1 d c on twelfth d c, ch 6, 1 d c on thirteenth d c, ch 2, 1 slip st under first ch 9.

3rd round—Ch 5, 1 d c under same or the first ch in last round. * ch 4 or 5 according to how one works. 1 d c under same ch, ch 2, 1 d c on d c, ch 2, 1 d c on d c, ch 2, 1 d c under ch 6, repeat from * 3 times, sl st to first ch 5. This gives one 3 sps on each of the 4 sides, with chains at corners. These should have stitches enough to make the work perfectly square.

Manner of working corner is always the same so hereafter directions for pattern of one side only will be given as this is repeated for each side.

DETAIL OF ROSE CORNER IN FILET COLLAR.

4th round—Corner sp, with 5 sps between, repeat 3 times.

5th round—Corner sp, 3 sps, 1 blk or 4 d c, 3 sps, repeat 3 times.

6th round. Corner sp, 3 sps, 3 blks (10 d c), 3 sps, repeat 3 times.

7th round—Corner sp, 3 sps, 5 blks, 3 sps, repeat 3 times.

8th round—Corner sp, 5 sps, 3 blks, 5 sps, repeat 3 times.

9th round—Corner sp, 3 sps, 1 blk, 9 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, repeat 3 times.

10th round—Corner sp, 3 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, repeat 3 times.

11th round—Corner sp, 1 sp, 1 blk 1 sp, 5 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 5 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, repeat 3 times.

12th round—Corner sp, 2 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, repeat 3 times.

13th round—Corner sp, 3 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 2 blks, 3 sps, repeat 3 times.

14th round—Corner sp, 4 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, repeat 3 times.

15th round—Corner sp, 6 sps, 5 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 5 blks, 6 sps, repeat 3 times.

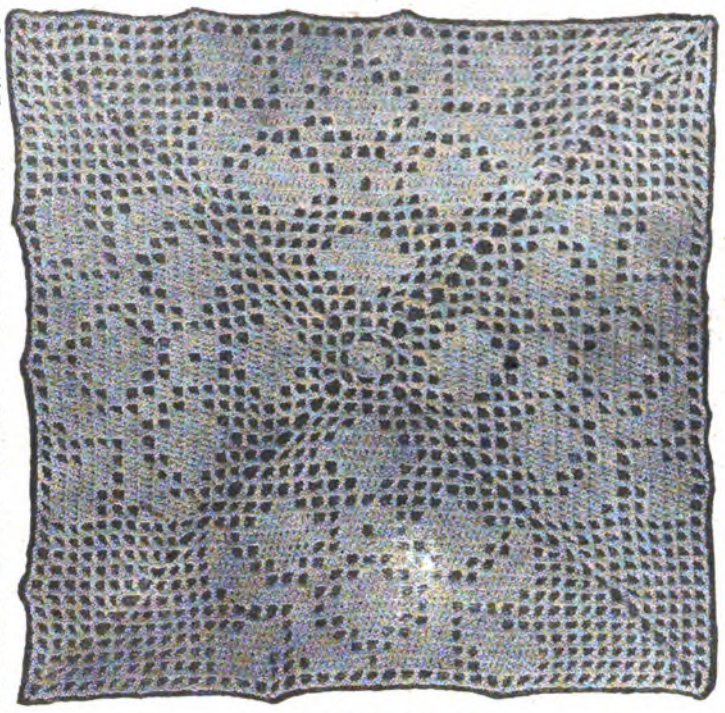
16th round—Corner sp, 11 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 5 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 11 sps, repeat 3 times.

17th round—Corner sp, 9 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 9 sps, repeat 3 times.

18th round—Corner sps, 9 sp, 4 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 4 blks, 9 sps, repeat 3 times.

19th round—Corner sp, 9 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 9 sps, repeat 3 times.

20th round—Corner sp, 10 blks, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 10 blks, repeat 3 times.



21st round—Corner sp, 41 sps on each side. This completes pattern as illustrated but more rounds all of spaces may be added to increase the size of the work. If considerable of an increase is needed, the last 3 rows worked as a checker-board of blocks and spaces makes a very pretty and easy to-make finish.

For the back use either white heavy satin or a mercerized white sateen.

Filet Band for Towel

Of either No. 30 or 40 mercerized crochet cotton, with No. 12 steel hook, ch 63 sts.

1st row—19 sts, ch 5, turn.
2nd row—1 sp, 17 blks, ch 5, turn.
3rd row—1 sp, 1 blk, 15 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
4th and 5th row—Same as 3rd row.
6th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
7th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 6 sps, 3 blks, 6 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
8th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 5 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

SOFA PILLOW IN FILET.

9th row—Same as 8th row.
10th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
11th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
12th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
13th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
14th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
15th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 5 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
16th row—Same as 15th row.
17th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 6 sps, 3 blks, 6 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.
18th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

After one completes a design, measure the width of the towel to be trimmed, then the number of designs needed can be decided upon and the amount of space necessary and each filled with rows of 1 sp, 1 blk, 15 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp.

If one desires to use an initial as shown in our illustration, this must be centered and planned for and a chain made of sufficient length to give the added spaces which the size of the initial requires. This is a simple matter however and can be planned for with a little forethought.

A Lacy Set of Doilies

This design for a set of table doilies is a carefully planned combination of colors which gives a pleasing result.

A good piece of cretonne which is worthy of the filet edge will prove both durable and serviceable.

The centerpiece and the plate doilies have a two-inch edge, but a simpler design is sufficient for the smaller ones.

Before cutting the material, iron it smooth if necessary. Pin down to a carpet, arranging it perfectly straight and true. Draw circles the size desired. Cut apart, in squares, leaving as much cloth beyond circles as possible.

With fine thread and a small stitch, sew around each circle twice, then trim to shape. If stitching has drawn edges in at all cut the stitches in a couple of places.

Single crochet into each, working just beyond machine stitching. For small doilies.

2nd round.—Ch 4, 1 d c, ch 1, 1 d c, repeat around, working 1 d c in each st. Count space in this row, which must be a multiple of 8 sts to make pattern come right. Join each round with sl st.

3rd round.—Ch 5, 1 d c on d c, 2 d c in 2nd sp of 2nd round, 1 d c on next d c, ch 2, 1 d c, ch 2, 1 d c, ch 2, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, repeat around. Finish with 2 sps, join to 1st sp, ch 3.

4th round.—2 d c in sp, 1 d c on d c, ch 2, sk 1 sp, 1 blk, ch 2, sk 1 sp, 1 blk, repeat around. Finish with ch 2, join to 1st blk, ch 5.

5th round.—1 d c on last d c of blk, ch 2, 1 d c, ch 2, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, repeat. Finish with 3 d c, join to ch 5, ch 5.

6th round.—1 d c, ch 3, 1 d c, repeat, making this row all spaces of which one should have 100. Join last ch 3 to 1st ch.

7th round.—3 sl sts over 1 sp, ch 4, 1 d c on next d c, ch 7, 1 d c in top of last d c, or just at point of double and beginning of ch 7, this ch makes a space in center of points. Now 1 d c on 3rd d c in 6th round. Ch 4, sl st over 4th and 5th sps counting from sl st, sp beginning this round. Ch 4, 1 d c, ch 7, 1 d c, as explained before, 1 d c, in next d c in last round, ch 4, sl st over next 2 sps. Repeat around and break thread.

To finish, as illustrated, edge with pink, blue, yellow or any shade which harmonizes best with the center.

Colored Edge

S c over sl sts, 2 s c under ch 4, picot of ch 3, 2 s c, 2 s c under ch 7, 1 p, 2 s c, 1 p, 2 s c, 2 s c, 1 p, 2 s c under next ch 4 s c over 2 sl st sps. Repeat around.

Wide Filet Edging

For pattern on centerpiece and large doilies after 1 round of singles into the edge. Ch 5.

1st round.—All sps, the number must be a multiple of 7.

2nd round.—Ch 5, 1 d c, ch 2, 1 d c, ch 2, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk. Repeat. Finish with 3 sps, join to 1st ch 5, ch 5.

3rd round.—2 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 3 blks. Repeat. Finish with 2 sps, join, ch 5, ch 5.

4th round.—1 blk over 2nd sp in last round, 3 d c on 3 d c, ch 2, 3 d c, 1 blk over sp, 2 sps, 2 blks, ch 2, 2 blks, 2 sps. Repeat. Finish with ch 2, join, ch 3.

5th round.—2 blks, ch 2, 1 blk over sp, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 2. Repeat from beginning of round. Finish with ch 2, join, ch 3.

6th round.—3 d c on d c, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 2, 2 blks, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 2, 2 blks, repeat. Finish with 3 d c, join, ch 5.

7th round.—2 sps, 2 blks, ch 2, 2 blks, 2 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 2 sps. Repeat. Finish with 2 blks, join, ch 5.

8th round.—3 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 3 blks. Repeat. Finish with ch 2, join, ch 5.

9th round.—4 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk. Repeat. Finish with 2 sps, join, ch 5.

10th round.—All sps.

11th round.—Same as 7th round in directions for edging above for small doilies.

Colored Edge

S c over sl sts, 2 s c, ch 3, 2 s c under ch 4, 2 s c, 1 p, 2 s c, 1 p, 2 s c under ch 7, 2 s c, 1 p, 2 s c under ch 4, sl st over 2 sps, repeat.

Victory Wreath Filet Square

This motif may be used in numerous ways as inserts. These may be placed either in the corners or along the ends. For scarfs, tray-cloths and chair backs this design is particularly good. Made of suitable size cotton it can also be used in the corners of handkerchiefs, napkins and curtains to good advantage.

Of No. 30 mercerized crochet cotton a very handsome sofa pillow cover results from combining with equal size squares of linen. Of carpet warp the pattern can be used for one entire side of a sofa pillow. If not just the right size, enlarge by adding a few rows of spaces to each side.

VICTORY WREATH.

One square of fine cotton also makes a pretty cover if placed over a small silk cushion.

Directions for Filet Square

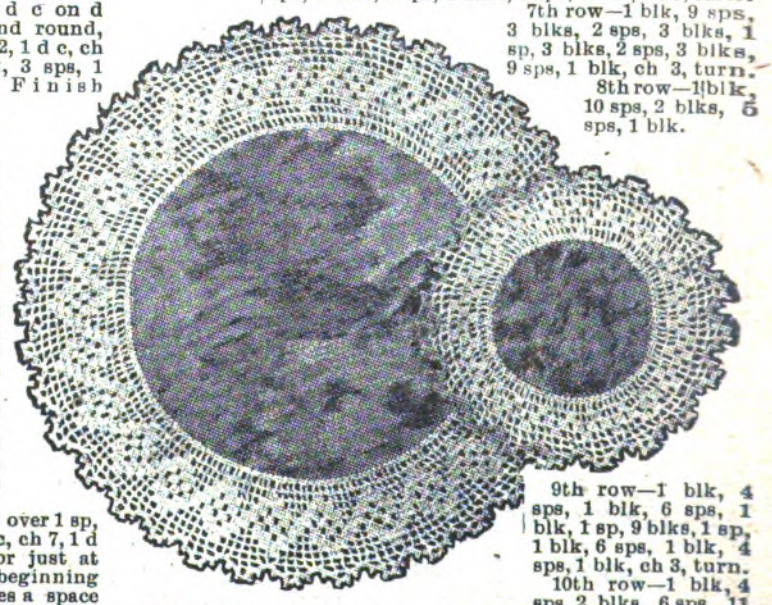
Ch 115 sts, turn.

1st row—1 d c in 4th st from hook, 1 d c in each following st or 112 doubles in all, ch 3, turn.

2nd row—3 d c, ch 2, skip 2 d c, 1 d c on next, repeat, making 35 sps. 4 d c on last four doubles, ch 3, turn.

3rd row—Same as last row.

4th row—1 blk (3 d c), 13 sps, 1 blk (4 d c), 7 sps, 1 blk, 13 sps, 1 blk (4 d c), ch 3, turn.



Each row is begun in this way, the ch 3 to turn answering for 1 d c.

5th row—1 blk, 13 sps, 2 blks, 5 sps, 2 blks, 13 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

6th row—1 blk, 8 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 8 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

7th row—1 blk, 9 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 9 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

8th row—1 blk, 10 sps, 2 blks, 6 sps, 1 blk.

FILET AND CRETONNE DOILY SET.

9th row—1 blk, 4 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 9 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

10th row—1 blk, 4 sps, 2 blks, 6 sps, 11 blks, 6 sps, 2 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

11th row—1 blk, 4 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 2 blks, 4 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 2 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

12th row—1 blk, 5 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 22.)

Beads—Ancient and Modern

The Home-Loom Worker Rivals All Others in Beautiful and Intricate Designs

By Ella Gordon

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub. Inc.

BEAD NECKLACE.

SINCE beads have been so extensively featured in much of our fashionable wearing apparel of today, let us briefly review how very old is the use of these pretty ornaments It is even claimed by some of our bead connoisseurs that literature had its first expression in beads. Glass beads are supposed to have been manufactured by the Phœnicians more than 3,000 years before Christ. Beads have been found on Egyptian mummies and in the graves of the ancient Greeks and Romans.

In the very primitive ages, Patagonia grass was wound around the neck to commemorate some event, and knots were tied in the grass thus used to multiply the memorials; then stones, and later shells were hung from the grass as pendants and on these appeared the first writing in the form of lines and marks by which to recall some further incident, or to communicate with another tribe.

The Seminole Indian princess wearing yards of brightly colored strung beads is a frequent if not daily sight tc those who tour Southern Florida. Circling well below the neckline, where they are several strings deep, they extend high under the ears. The casual observer wonders how so great a weight can be endured about the neck, in this semi-tropical region where the "paleface" studies the art of dressing with all the freedom possible. But anyone familiar with Seminole customs will tell you that each string of beads has been added as symbolic of tribal prestige, and that they are never taken from the neck, except in case of emergency, such as sickness, and then only for a few hours and by permission of the Seminole chief.

Beads have played an important part in religious rites and ceremonies among savage races since the most remote antiquity. In Asia for many centuries they have been employed by the Hindoos and Arabs in connection with the recital of their prayers but in civilized Europe the first use of beads in religious services appeared at a much later date among the Dominicans, having been introduced, as it is claimed, by the crusaders returning from the Orient. Their use as a religious life in connection with prayer has universal prevalence among Roman Catholics under the sanction of their church, and a string of beads arranged in the prescribed order for this purpose is called a rosary. The word rosary is derived from rose, and means a chaplet of roses; each bead representing a prayer, and in their entirety signifying a garland of spiritual roses. Though rosaries may vary somewhat in form, that in general use consists of fifty-five beads; fifty of them being small beads, called "Ave Marias' for prayers of that name, are arranged in five "decades," each of ten beads; the other five are larger beads called "Pater Nosters" for prayers so named. Rosaries are blessed by the Pope or by some authorized ecclesiastic. The beads serve as counters during the recitation of the prescribed prayers. The beads may be of various materials, and some rosaries are very costly and beautiful.

And thus it would seem that from the beginning, beads have come down to the present, influenced by environment, climate and peoples. From Port Said comes the wonderful lapis lazuli, jade from China, cloisonne from Japan, odd and striking shapes from Thibet, wooden beads from Syria, good luck beads from Egypt. The Persian pieces can be told because they have the lotus flower on them in one form or another. Most of the old English beads were of jet produced by the Whitby mines in England.

The manufacture of glass beads was introduced into modern Europe by the Italians, and in the neighborhood of Venice there is still an important branch of the industry. On the island of Murano alone, several thousand workmen are employed in this manufacture.

BEADED BLOUSE.

The present use of beads as dictated by fashion is fascinating and interesting. The work done on bags, medallions, purses and slippers is not unlike the fine bead work of our North American Indians, with which we are all more or less familiar. Modern invention has kept apace with fashion in giving us the bead loom on which to do bead work. The art of making necklaces, fob chains, girdles, dress trimmings and many other pieces, in as simple or intricate a design as desired, is easily acquired through the easily understood directions for choice of beads, colors and working of patterns, which come as a part of the loom outfit.

The prettily beaded over-blouse made of georgette crepe is a leader in usefulness to wear with a dark suit or sport skirt. The design is in garnet seed beads, and just now very popular.

Strings of beads to match the color of waist or dress are strikingly becoming. White beads, or the clear glass ones in the light shades catch the evening lights and sparkle attractively. Cut jet is always handsome, and makes a stunning contrast when worn with white or light colors. One of the bead chain novelties is made with a few inches of chain alternating with beads. Here is an opportunity to bring into use any old watch chains, or those formerly used for fans, lockets or glasses. Make a double tie into the end link with buttonhole twist well waxed. In white or light-colored beads, use white twist, but in the darker shades the twist should match the beads. After tying into the link, thread the two strands of twist into a short needle that will pass through the beads, and string on the desired number. In order to tie the strung beads into the next section of links, in a way that is secure, and at the same time conceals the knot, the following directions must be patiently followed: Starting with the beads ready to be fastened into the link of chain, make a double tie the same as at the other end, but do not draw it closely. Now turn the needle and pass it back through the last three beads, bringing the needle through by separating the third and fourth beads on the loose twist. Now drop the needle, press the beads closely together, carefully draw the double knot between the last bead and link, draw the ends of twist straight, separate them and make a tight tie between the third and fourth bead, cutting off the ends, but not too closely at first, as it is liable to untie. The same method is used to tie the string of beads into a fastener.

JEWEL BOX FOR DRESSING TABLE.

Very popular are the slipper and pump buckles. Make a foundation of heavy buckram, leaving the lower edge a little longer than the design, and at the same time narrower. This forms a "tongue," to which the edge of shoe is tacked. The design is usually in black, tan or cut steel beads; either the tiny round or long type. Hat ornaments are made upon buckram the same as buckles.

One bracelet about three-fourths of an inch wide is a pretty novelty. It is made on the bead loom, and extends around the wrist to within one inch. In cutting the warp from loom, leave ample length to sew into a ribbon which is the same width as bracelet. The ribbon should be of a good quality as it ties the bracelet around the wrist and finishes in a double bow-knot.

BEADED BAG.

The jewelry box here pictured is very simple to make, being of clear glass and put together with passe-partout binding. First bind each part and let it stand over night, then place the sections together and hold them by covering flat with the binding. Make a true miter at the corners to give the box a neat appearance. Put the cover in place and cover the back edge with binding, which forms a hinge. Let stand over night before lifting the cover. Unless two widths of binding can be obtained, it is well to trim that which is used for first covering the edges, so to make sure the putting-together strips will cover. For decoration, there is opportunity for the one with original ideas. Those who paint glass can follow some pretty wall-paper design. Flowers cut from the paper itself, or from flowered cottons, or cut-out embroidery are other means of decoration. Still another is to completely cover with Japanese embroidery, but where a part of the glass remains uncovered, the effect is rather the best.

The string of beads with tassel, as illustrated, gives an idea of attractively arranging several sizes of beads. The chain itself is strung on as many strands of waxed twist as there are individual strings of beads in the tassel. The chain terminates by passing all the twist through one large bead. Each of these strands of twist is then strung with beads, the last one being of the smallest used, and next to that the larger size. Carry the twist over the small end bead, and with the needle, back through to the second large bead, as described above. This arrangement makes one of the most attractive novelties seen.

BEADED BLOUSE.—Dark blue georgette with Indian red seed beading is the combination used in this smart and useful blouse. If the exact pattern for this particular blouse cannot be obtained, use your well-fitting shirt-waist pattern with the following changes and additions: The side fronts and back are plain in this model. If desired, add fullness to shallow back and front yokes, but it should be as scant as possible. Cut the side fronts straight from edge of neck at the shoulder seam to the lower edge of blouse, which when finished and held in at the waist should measure seven inches below the waistline. The finished hem is one and a half inches deep. The tuxedo collar is cut on the straight of the material and is finished with a three-fourths of an inch hem. In cutting, make it wide enough to turn back well over the collar seam. Five inches wide when finished turns back to a pretty width. The front is cut and finished separately and sewed to the right side of waist. The left side is the waist opening, which fastens with snaps. It is cut square at the top and wide enough to give slight fullness. Turn an inch hem and finish with gathers and a narrow velvet ribbon which holds the top in to the desired width and finishes with a bow which is tacked in place. Finish the front with a hem to match blouse.

The sleeve is one-piece and belled. This is accomplished by a slight outward extension of the seam from the elbow to bottom. Finish with a hem to match bottom of blouse. The girdle is made narrow and double. Twice around the waist and tied at the side makes a becoming finish.

The simple bead decoration will not be difficult for the amateur. Over the line of sewing which fastens the hems of sleeves, collar and bottom of blouse, except the front, sew a straight line of tiny round beads, leaving very little space between. Back of this mark a line of double curves as illustrated. By making two straight parallel lines of white basting, the first one-fourth of an inch from the line of beading, and the second one-half inch back, the remainder of the design can be done by the eye, as the basting will keep the line of curves regular.

BEADED BAG.—An all-over beaded design for the "dressy" bag shares in popularity with the solid beading. The one herein pictured was selected because of its rich simplicity and the simple process by which the home worker may accomplish the design. There are several ways of shaping the foundation. The easiest to decorate is to cut two pieces of material, on which the decorating is to be done, in the shape of a letter U, allowing added length at the top which should turn under at least with a two-inch finished hem, besides the run for ribbon or cord. These are next lined, unless the materal is heavy enough to bead well. First mark off the two sides of bag in diamond shapes, extending them to the run at top, and nearly to the seam line of the bag, so that when the bag is sewed together there will be no break in the design. These lines which form the diamond shapes are outlined in tiny beads. That part of the design contained in the upper part of the diamond is a triangle made of three long beads, one on each side, with a small bead in each of the three corners. At the top edge of hem there are two rows of small beads. Neatly line the bag and use ribbon strings. To make the tassel, follow previous directions for stringing beads.

Tatted Napkin Rings

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 20.)

in some way so as to be easily distinguished. Ecru mercerized thread or different colors may be used. This should be of heavy quality The motif here shown may be used or make a ring of 7 d s, 1 p, 7 d s, close. Ch 7, d s, 1 p, 7 d s, 1 ring, joining to p of last ring; another ring like first. Repeat until you have 7 groups of rings, or until the strip is long enough for the ring.

Having completed this, make a ch, a ring, joining to the same picot with last 2 rings, * a ch and again a ring, joining to same p, thus making 4 rings in a group; make a ring, joining to picot with next 2 rings and repeat from * ending after completing last group with a ch joined at the base of first ring. Fasten the ends with ribbon and tie through.

Victory Wreath Filet Square

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 21.)

sp, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk 1 sp, 3 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk.

13th row—1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

14th row—1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

15th row—1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, 8 sps, 3 blks, 8 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

16th row—1 blk, 5 sps, 5 blks, 4 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 4 sps, 5 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

17th row—1 blk, 4 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

18th row—1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

19th row—1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn

20th row—1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 4 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 4 sps, 2 blks 1 sp, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

21st row—1 blk, 4 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 3 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

22nd row—1 blk, 3 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

23rd row—1 blk, 3 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 10 sps, 1 blk, 10 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

24th row—1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 4 blks, 5 sps, 3 blks, 5 sps, 4 blks, 3 sps. 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

25th row—1 blk, 6 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 6 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

26th row—1 blk, 4 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 17 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn

27th row—1 blk, 4 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 9 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp.

28th row—1 blk, 9 sps, 4 blks, 9 sps, 4 blks, 9 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

29th row—1 blk, 9 sps, 3 blks, 11 sps, 3 blks, 9 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

30th row—1 blk, 8 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 9 sps, ch 3, turn.

31st row—1 blk, 13 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, 13 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

32nd row—1 blk, 14 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 1 blk, 14 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

Next 2 rows all sps, followed by 1 row of doubles.

33rd row—1 blk, 35 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

34th row—Same as last row.

35th row—Same as first row.

To enlarge after last row of blocks, ch 7, 1 d c in top of last double, ch 2, 1 d c between rows, ch 2, 1 d c, between next 2 rows, repeat, at corners ch 5 and 1 d c in same st with last d c. Continue to work as many rounds as desired working the corners always in the same manner.

Billions Tied in Socks and Mattress

The combined "Lisle Thread National Bank," "The Old Socks Bank" and the "Feather-Bed-Mattress Bank" now hold more than $3,000,000,000 of the country's cash.

This is the estimate of William H. Hutt, acting governor of the Philadelphia Federal Reserve Bank, made of the loose cash being carried around in pockets and stowed away in various places. He was addressing an organization of business men.

Even a small proportion of this three billions invested in Liberty Bonds would bring them back to par, he pointed out, or if the money was deposited in savings banks it would inject new life into industry.

SEND NO MONEY
Pay Postman $4.95 on Arrival
POST PAID
Gold Filled Watch Bracelet
STEM WIND & SET

Wonderful Christmas Offer

Send for this rich looking gold filled Combination Watch-Bracelet today. You will find it to be a $10.00 value. Has adjusted 7-jeweled movement, the case being gold-filled and warranted to wear 10 years. It is a stem-wind and stem-set model and it looks like a very expensive watch. The picture shows you what a handsome model it is and the gold dial adds to its attractiveness. The bracelet is flexible and will fit any wrist, so you need not hesitate to order on account of size. It is sent direct to you, as pictured, in a velvet and silk-lined box Each watch is examined before leaving the factory and you will find them perfect time-pieces.

Don't Hesitate! Our Money-Back Guarantee Protects You

So positive are we that you will be delighted with your watch that we ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEE to refund your money if you are not satisfied after examination; therefore, do not hesitate to order. Send no money. Just rush your name and address. Your watch will be sent by return prepaid mail and delivered right to your door by the postman. Pay the postman our advertised price of $4.95 on arrival and remember, if you are not entirely pleased after examination, return your watch and we will refund your money, every cent of it.

Send for big Free Catalogue of other jewelry bargains.

EMPIRE CITY MFG. CO., Dept. 211, 138 5th Ave., NEW YORK

This Beautiful Sleeping Doll FREE

You can have this Beautiful, Doll. She has closing eyes, movable arms and legs, turning head, real hair. Dressed as you see her in this picture. Dress can be taken off and put on. She also wears socks and baby bonnet. We will send her free, all charges paid, for selling 12 packs of Post Cards at 10c per pack.

Jones Manufacturing Co.,
Dept. 400. Attleboro, Mass.

A Bushel of Reading Matter

REMEMBER We will not send you merely your choice of one of these books, but ALL FIVE of them, just as listed above. You all know Charlotte M. Braeme. She is one of the world's most fascinating writers. Her name alone is enough to guarantee a good strong story, interesting and entertainingly told. Here is a chance for you to read 5 of her best books, aggregating 160 large double column pages.

FREE OFFER To introduce our publication, EVERYDAY LIFE, the great monthly story paper of interest to all members of the family. Send only 25c to pay for year's subscription, and 10c extra to pay for postage, etc. (35c in all) and we will send our paper for one year and the collection of books as above. This is a big introductory offer. If the above titles are out, will send others just as good.

EVERYDAY LIFE, 337 W. Madison St, R M 85, Chicago

Elegant thin model, 21 jewel watch in beautifully engraved high grade gold filled, stamped and guaranteed case, only Fitted with a fine 21 jewel movement—fully adjusted to position and temperature.

Every Watch Guaranteed for a life time of satisfactory service. Send no money. You don't risk a cent. Simply send your name and address and we will ship immediately parcel post your watch together with handsome knife and chain to match. FREE all complete. For $9.75. Order today, at this rock-bottom price as we have a very small supply

Guarantee Jewelry Co.
20 E. Lake Street
Dept. 14A, Chicago

BOYS! BOYS! BOYS!

OVER 2 FEET LONG TELESCOPE
GIVEN FREE. Sell 20 perfume pkgs. at 10c each. R. MORE CO. 336 W. 63rd St. T-3 Chicago

I Help Young Men
MAKE MORE MONEY

3 AUTO SCHOOLS 3 AUTO SCHOOLS

ARE you REALLY ambitious? Are you anxious, impatient, eager to get into big pay work—to be happy, prosperous, SUCCESSFUL.

Here is your opportunity. I have three big Auto and Tractor Schools—Chicago, Kansas City and Cincinnati. I built them in order to help men be SUCCESSES. From them thousands of men have graduated and stepped into positions paying $150 to $400 monthly, and up. If you have ambition, YOU CAN DO THE SAME.

Own a Paying Business

You can earn a part of the THREE BILLION DOLLARS being spent yearly for Auto and Tractor upkeep. Come to a RAHE SCHOOL—the closest one—learn Motor Mechanics thoroughly under the Practical Job Method. Be a Garage Owner. Be independent.

Are You Really Ambitious?

Do you feel you can't hardly wait for a big pay position? Write today for my 68-page book, describing opportunities and training. Don't delay—to delay may mean you'll never succeed. ACT. Write NOW.

HENRY J. RAHE, Dept. 2080
Rahe Auto & Tractor School
CHICAGO Ontario & Michigan Blvd.
KANSAS CITY 22nd & Oak Streets
CINCINNATI 6th and Walnut Sts.

LEARN HERE IN 6 to 8 WEEKS
EARN $150 to $400 a MONTH

Ford Owners WANTED

To introduce the CATARACT Circulating Water Pump for Ford cars and trucks.

Positively prevents overheating, freezing and 90% of all Ford engine troubles. Makes used Fords run like new—keeps new Fords new. Doubles power, flexibility and life of any Ford car or truck. Ford owners buy eagerly. They are anxious to get one of these wonderful pumps. Sold on FREE trial money back guarantee.

FREE Cataract Water Pump for Your Own Car

FREE Cataract Pump for Your Ford

Cataract agents make from $75 to $150 a week. All you have to do is to put a CATARACT on YOUR Ford and accept big, profitable business day after day. No limit to the money that you can make. Write for illustrated literature and AGENTS proposition—TODAY.

Cataract Manufacturing Co.
3111 Fifth St. :: Milwaukee, Wis.

Semi CORD TIRES
5000 Mile Written Guarantee

Most modern and lasting of reconstructed tires. These semi-cords are heavily reinforced with Genuine New Goodyear or Miller "geared to the road" treads and will give wonderful service. Do not confuse them with sewed or half soled tires. A remarkable low factory purchase enables us to offer these guaranteed tires at smashed prices.

Standard Make	TUBE FREE Fresh Stock
28 x 3	$6.90	32 x 4½	$12.90
30 x 3	7.15	33 x 4½	12.90
30 x 3½	8.35	34 x 4½	13.40
32 x 3½	9.10	35 x 4½	13.90
31 x 4	10.20	36 x 4½	14.40
32 x 4	10.70	33 x 5	15.10
33 x 4	10.95	35 x 5	15.10
34 x 4	11.70	37 x 5	15.60

SEND NO MONEY
Pay only after examination at express office. Unwrapped section for inspection. If cash with order, deduct 5 per cent. Cost you nothing to send for tire. Write today. Return if not like new.

HUDSON TIRE CORP.
414-A Harrison and Peoria Sts., CHICAGO, ILL.

Delivered to you Free for 30 days trial on approval. Your choice of 44 Styles, colors and sizes of famous Ranger Bicycles. Factory-to-Rider lets you buy at wholesale prices, express prepaid, direct from maker.

12 Months to Pay lets you enjoy your Ranger at once. Many boys and girls easily save the small monthly payments. The Ranger is a better bicycle than you can buy anywhere at any price.

Tires lamps, horns, wheels, parts and equipment at half usual prices.

SEND NO MONEY. Simply write for our big, illustrated free Ranger catalog with lowest prices and terms; also Special Rider Agent offer.

Mead Cycle Company Dept. K-3, Chicago

We Pay $6 a Day

taking orders for Insyde Tyres—inner armor for automobile tires. Positively prevent punctures and blowouts. Guaranteed to give double tire mileage.

Work Spare Time or Full Time
Every auto owner buys on account of low price. Enormous demand. Write quick for territory and special terms to County Representatives.

AMERICAN ACCESSORIES CO., B. 1423 CINCINNATI, O.

TYPEWRITER SENSATION

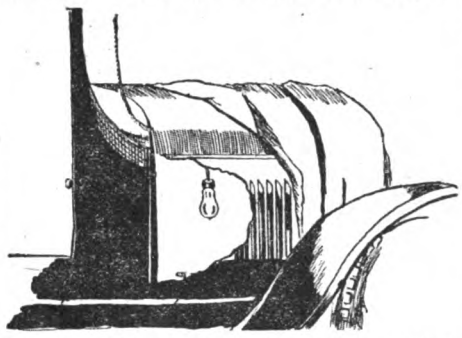
$4 or $5 a month WILL BUY
Any Standard Make Guaranteed TYPEWRITER With Every Modern Writing Convenience.

Write Today For Illustrated Catalog Explaining Try-Before-You-Buy Plan.

SMITH TYPEWRITER SALES CO.
(Free Trial) 364-218 No. Wells St., Chicago, Ill.

Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

Questions relating to gasolene engines and automobiles, by our subscribers, addressed to COMFORT Auto Dept., Augusta, Maine, will be answered by our expert, free, in the columns of this department. Full name and address is required, but initials only will be printed. That we may intelligently diagnose your trouble please state the year in which your car was made.



Cold Weather Precautions

COLD weather turns the owner's train of thought to frozen radiator, cracked cylinders, hard starting, etc. Naturally, a subject of interest is the means of heating the garage so as to eliminate the usual difficulties which appear with cold weather. True, if an anti-freeze agent be used in the cooling system there will be no danger of freezing, but this does not have any effect on starting. There are several methods used for providing heat, some good and others to be discouraged. Steam or hot water piped into the garage from an outside source is an excellent system for this purpose. If the garage is attached directly to the house, it will usually be convenient to break through an opening into the cellar and take advantage of the waste heat generated by the furnace or boiler.

On the other hand, when the garage is built on a corner of the lot, some other means must be devised for the heating of the building.

In many cases I have found that an oil heater is used. To my way of thinking, it is not safe policy to use an oil heater for this purpose. There is always some gasolene on the floor or in the drip-pan of the car, and as the vapor from gasolene is heavier than air it will settle close to the floor. A common parlor stove with chimney is much better for safety reasons inasmuch as the burned air is carried through the chimney out of the building. This condition causes a circulation inasmuch as fresh air will be drawn into the garage. No building is absolutely air tight and the fresh air will find a way in without making special provisions for its admittance.

Some owners have been known to place a kerosene lamp just back of the drip-pan so that the heat generated by the lamp will circulate around the engine. There are several reasons why this practice should be discouraged. If there should be a leakage of gasolene the lamp is likely to set it on fire. Should the lamp be upset there would be fire. Should the lamp be blown out by a gust of wind there would be danger of the water in the engine freezing.

ELECTRIC LIGHT BULB UNDER HOOD TO PREVENT FREEZING.

When the garage is fitted with electric lights some owners have made use of a drop cord. The engine hood is raised just a trifle to admit the cord and an electric light bulb is placed at a low point on the motor. The heat from this lighted bulb will, if the engine hood be covered with wraps, maintain a temperature that will insure easy starting and against freezing. I do not know of any objection against this method.

If an anti-freeze mixture is used in the cooling system and it is decided to do without heat in the garage, the one point to bear in mind when starting is that the cold manifolds cause condensation of the fuel. Hot water poured over the manifolds or a sack of heated sand placed on the intake manifold will raise the temperature to a point where sufficient vapor will reach the cylinders to effect a start.

I heard of one owner who had difficulty in starting on a cold morning and having heard that heat was the essential element that was missing, decided on building a small fire under the motor. He gathered some straw in a large pan and then touched it off with a match. More heat than calculated was generated and as a result of the experiment this owner lost car and garage in the conflagration.

Speed

Step on 'er and there is a rapid change of scenery. It is a condition termed "speed" with which every car is to some extent blessed or cursed, depending on the viewpoint taken. Speed is no accomplishment. Press down on the accelerator, advance the spark and speed is obtained. Everyone has a hankering to occasionally drive on a good road where there is little traffic and open the throttle for a speed of thirty to forty miles. Where there is not much traffic and the roads are good, an occasional spurt of this kind does not place the driver out of the group of "safety first" operators.

It is the driver, however, who after having his taste of speed cannot resist the temptation to continue. He is the type of driver that endangers the lives of others. He is the type of driver who has the "Excuse my dust" attitude while others quote the old saying, "Fools plunge in where angels fear to tread."

Everyone knows the type of driver I have tried to describe. Drive on a narrow road with heavy traffic traveling in both directions and you will find him try to shoot by a long string of cars in order to gain the front position. Finding that he cannot make it on his first attempt he crowds into the line, causing in some cases rear-end collisions, etc. He sees another opening and he is gone again, probably to break back into the line a little further up. In the majority of cases, if you were to corner this man and inquire the reasons for his desire for speed, you would probably get an answer to the effect that this was no funeral procession.

If any COMFORT readers have the yearning for speed allow me to submit a few facts as to the chances you will have for continuing existence on terra firma, providing you were to be suddenly stopped by a pole, bridge, etc.

Traveling at the rate of 25 miles per hour the car has the same velocity as if it were raised about 20 feet and then dropped. You might think that at a car speed of 50 miles per hour it would be comparable to being dropped 40 feet in a car. Such is not true, for the stored energy increases as the square of the speed. Race tracks are built, policed and every other possible caution taken for speed and yet we read of the casualties.

Answers to Last Month's Quiz

1. The current produced by a storage battery, generator or magneto is not of sufficient pressure to jump the gap at the sparkplug and for this reason must be stepped up to a higher potential. Let us turn to water as an example of the principle involved. Anyone who has watered the lawn with a hose knows that by adjusting the nozzle it is possible to obtain varying pressures. Having a certain pressure from the main line, this pressure can be increased by restricting the opening at the nozzle. This principle is applicable to electrical current. Having a given amount of current, it is possible by the use of finer wire to step the current up to higher pressure. Some magnetoes are of the high-tension type. They have both low and high-tension windings. The high-tension windings take care of the stepping-up process and therefore no coil is necessary.

2. It will be understood that with the four-coil system it is difficult to adjust each vibrator so as to insure sparks of the same intensity in each cylinder. For this reason, owners of cars having the four-coil system often prefer to install a master vibrator. This device consists of a primary winding, one vibrator and a condenser. When installed into the system, the vibrators on the four coils can be screwed down tight or short circuited. The master vibrator replaces the vibrators on the four coils and it will be readily appreciated that inasmuch as there is only one vibrator to adjust, all cylinders will receive sparks of the same intensity.

3. It has been previously explained that piston displacement is determined by multiplying the area of a circle, the diameter of which is the cylinder bore, by the stroke. If the cylinder has a 5-inch stroke and 3 3-16 inch bore we must first find the area, which is as follows: 3 3-16x 3 3-16x.7854 which equals 7.9797 square inches. Multiply 7.9797 by 5 and we obtain 39.8985 cubic inches as the displacement for one cylinder. Since this is a six-cylinder motor, we must multiply 39.8985 by 6, and we obtain as a result 239 cubic inches as the piston displacement for the motor.

4. The load is not carried in the same manner on artillery wheels as on wire wheels. On wire wheels the load is carried above the hub. In other words, the load is suspended on wire spokes. On artillery wheels the load is carried below the hub.

5. A weak mixture causes a slow-burning exhaust which in turn ignites a charge which was not fired in the cylinder and has entered the muffler. A mixture that is too rich is not completely fired in the cylinder. Naturally much of the gas finds its way into the muffler where it is ignited. Even though the carburetor may be properly set, if a cylinder misses occasionally this unignited gas must be expelled into the muffler. There is always a chance of the hot exhaust from another cylinder causing this unignited gas to fire in the muffler. If the valves are not properly timed, the gas may be sent into the muffler and there ignited. A spark that is timed much too late will give a like result.

Monthly Quiz

1. Is kerosene satisfactory as an anti-freeze agent in the radiator?
2. Would you press down or pull up when turning the motor over with the hand crank?
3. What causes premature ignition?
4. What is the freezing point of water?
5. Will a plug that sparks outside the cylinder always spark inside the cylinder?

Answers to Correspondents

SOME GENERAL PRINCIPLES.—I have in my care three cars, a Wescott, Hupmobile and Ford, also two trucks, a Ford and a Service, and would like to be enlightened on the following points:

1. What is meant by a "four-stroke cycle engine"?
2. When one adjusts his carburetor to a leaner mixture so that engine is running well and shows a clear exhaust while idling, what causes the engine to die or show less power under normal load?
3. What is the S. A. E. formula for figuring the H. P.? Can you give me another formula?
4. When auto engineers figure an engine's horsepower to be 25.6, what do they figure the engine weight for one horse power, and what would the engine weight be for 25.6 H. P.?
5. What is meant by "actual" H. P., and what by "rated" H. P.? As I remember a 12-cylinder Liberty aeroplane engine was rated 120 H. P., while its actual H. P. was given at 420. I don't understand the terms.
6. Can you advise me which grades of "Mobiloil" are best adapted for use respectively in the cars and trucks mentioned?

H. D. K., Brazil, Ind.

A.—(1) By the term "four-stroke cycle" it is meant that there are four strokes of the piston for each explosion in the cylinder. The four strokes are as follows:

FIRST.—Let us start with the suction which is a downward stroke or sweep of the piston in the cylinder. The gear timing has been arranged in such manner that the intake valve is open and the downward sweep of the piston creates a suction and draws gas into the cylinder from the carburetor.

SECOND.—The intake valve closes and as the piston travels upward on its next stroke it compresses the gas in the top of the cylinder. This is the compression stroke.

THIRD.—Remember that all valves are closed and the gas is tightly compressed. At this point a spark takes place in the cylinder and ignites the gas. Immediately there takes place a condition which might be compared with an explosion. In reality it is an expansion of the gases which drives the piston down and thus imparts a rotary motion to the crankshaft. This is the power stroke.

FOURTH.—The power stroke past, we now have an accumulation of burned gases in the cylinder. An exhaust valve opens and the next stroke of the piston, which is an upward one, sweeps or pushes these burned gases out of the cylinder through the exhaust valve which has been mechanically opened. This is the exhaust stroke.

It will now be appreciated that the strokes in a four-stroke cycle are suction, compression, power and exhaust.

(2) You have brought up a question from which I am unable to grasp the condition to be solved. I assume that you have determined that the mixture is too rich and have cut it down. By running the motor idle you have found out that all cylinders fire evenly. Next you have placed the motor under load and have experienced irregular motor operation. If such is the state of affairs, I would take it that you have done all the adjusting on the low-speed screw. When you open the throttle and place the motor under load, the mixture is not rich enough to furnish the required power. I do not believe you are following the manufacturer's directions in setting this carburetor.

(3) The S. A. E. formula assumes that motors should deliver their rated horse-power at a piston travel of 1,000 feet per minute. Do not become confused; this formula is based on feet travel and not on revolutions per hour. The formula is as follows: the square of the bore in inches multiplied by the number of cylinders and the product divided by the constant 2.5. For example, consider a four-cylinder motor, the cylinders of which are four-inch bore. Multiply 4 by itself and the product is 16. There are four cylinders so we must multiply 16 by 4 and the product is 64. Now divide 64 by 2.5 and the quotient is 25.6. The rating for this particular motor by the S. A. E. formula would be 25.6 horse-power. I could give you several other formulæ compiled by other authorities but I refrain from doing so inasmuch as they would require lengthy explanation regarding the foundations on which they are founded. I believe the S. A. E. is the one recognized by every state in the Union.

(4) Weight is not a controlling factor in figuring horse-power. Design controls weight.

(5) The rated horse-power is the one arrived at by the S. A. E. formula. As stated before, the states recognize the S. A. E. formula as a basis for assisting in arriving at the fees to be paid by automobile owners. For this reason it is common practice for a manufacturer to specify in his advertisements the rated horse-power. Following the rated horse-power he gives the actual horse-power. This power is usually arrived at by placing the motor on a test stand and applying load to it. The actual horse-power it will develop is then determined accurately.

(6) My advice to you regarding the proper oils to use for the different seasons is to write to the car manufacturers for their opinions. Most factories have oiling sheets which are gladly furnished upon request.

ENGINE STARTS HARD.—My 1917 Ford is hard to start when it has stood a while and engine is not hot, unless one back wheel is jacked up and gear put in high; then, by spinning the wheel it starts immediately. What is the matter?

A. F. B., Farmington, Minn.

A.—It makes no difference whether you crank from the front or the rear of the car. If you could spin the motor at the front end at the same speed you develop when one of the wheels is jacked up, starting would be just as easy. When the wheel is jacked up you are cranking through the differential, and on account of the gear ratio you develop a greater cranking speed. I would suggest that you clean out the timer, clean the vibrator points and readjust them. If this does not help, I would suggest recharging the magneto magnets.

PISTONS VARY IN WEIGHT.—The two middle pistons in my 1915 Ford are each a half pound lighter than the end ones. Has this any effect on the power or speed of engine? Could this be the cause of a knock?

C. S., Ashland, Ohio.

A.—Each piston must weigh exactly the same if the motor is to be perfectly balanced. Evidently, someone has fitted new pistons without regard to weight. Your motor is out of balance and the difference in weight will in all probability develop knocks.

Auto Owners WANTED!

To introduce one of the best automobile tires in the world. Made under our Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process that enables us to sell our tires under a

10,000-MILE GUARANTEE
against Blow-Out—Stone-Bruise—Rim-Cut

We want an agent in every community to use and introduce Hydro-Toron tires at our astonishingly low prices to all motor-car owners.

Write for booklet fully describing this new process and explaining our amazing introductory offer to owner agents.

Hydro-United Tire Co.
Dept. 167, Chicago or Philadelphia

STANDARD TIRES
LESS THAN 1/2 Price

Send No Money

Don't miss this chance to cut your tire cost in two and get a reliner with each tire FREE. We ship at once on approval standard Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone, Mason and other adjusted tires in excellent condition and Your Money Back if you don't like them. They can readily be guaranteed for 6,000 miles. So sure are we you will like these tires that we request no deposit in advance. These are not sewed together tires known as the double tread and reconstructed tires.

SEE THESE LOW PRICES

Sizes	Tires	Tubes	Sizes	Tires	Tubes
28x3	$4.95	$1.25	34x4	$ 8.50	$2.60
30x3	5.25	1.50	32x4½	9.50	2 75
30x3½	6.25	1.60	34x4½	9.25	2.95
32x3½	6.75	1.75	35x4½	9.65	3.15
31x4	7.75	1.95	36x4½	9.95	3.25
32x4	7.95	2.25	35x5	10.50	3.45
33x4	8.25	2.40	37x5	10.75	3.65

Remember, a reliner Free with each tire. When cash is sent with order 5 per cent discount allowed. Examine—judge for yourself. If not satisfied, return goods at our expense. Specify straight side, clincher, non-skid or plain wanted.

CLEVELAND TIRE AND RUBBER CO.
3116 Michigan Avenue Chicago, Illinois

Prices Cut to the Bone

$2.00 Brings a Satisfactory Tire

Special offer on "SATISFACTORY" reconstructed double tread tires. Each tire guaranteed 6000 MILES. Reliner free with every tire—also a new Miller inner tube at factory price.

Size	Tires	Tubes	Size	Tires	Tubes
28x3	$4.75	$1.50	34x4	$8.15	$2.60
30x3	4.75	1.60	35x4	9.40	2.75
30x3½	5.75	1.75	34x4½	9.40	3.00
31x3½	6.15	1.85	35x4½	10.40	3.15
32x3½	6.40	2.00	36x4½	10.90	3.40
31x4	7.40	2.25	35x5	12.25	3.50
32x4	7.65	2.40	36x5	12.50	3.65
33x4	7.90	2.50	37x5	12.50	3.75

State size, also whether straight side, clincher, plain or non-skid. Send only $2.00 deposit for each tire, balance C.O.D. subject to examination. Orders shipped day received. Extra 5% discount for full cash with order. Order now.

SATISFACTORY TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
2941 S. Michigan Blvd. Dept. 18F Chicago, Ill.

2 Tires for $11.25

FREE Tube with Each Tire

Most sensational tire offer of the year! Two tires for less than the usual cost of one—and a free tube with each tire! This is a special lot—all standard makes—selected for record-breaking sale. No double treads or sewed tires. Our big volume means best tire values! Thousands of steady customers everywhere are getting full mileage out of these slightly used tires and you, too, can get

8000 Miles

Size	1 Tire	2 Tires	Size	1 Tire	2 Tires
30 x 3	$ 7.00	$11.25	32 x 4½	$13.50	$22.90
30 x 3½	7.95	13.65	33 x 4½	13.95	23.45
32 x 3½	9.00	15.45	34 x 4½	14.45	23.90
31 x 4	10.00	16.90	35 x 4½	14.95	24.45
32 x 4	11.50	19.75	36 x 4½	15.45	25.45
33 x 4	12.25	20.90	35 x 5	15.90	26.15
34 x 4	13.25	22.45	37 x 5	16.45	26.55

SEND NO MONEY! Shipment C. O. D. Express or Parcel Post. Examine tires on arrival and if not fully satisfied return same at our expense and your money will be promptly refunded, including shipping charges. State whether Straight Side or Clincher. DON'T DELAY! ORDER NOW!

ALBANY TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
2721 Roosevelt Road Dept. 303, Chicago, Illinois

A Practical Use of Early Ideas for Holiday Gifts

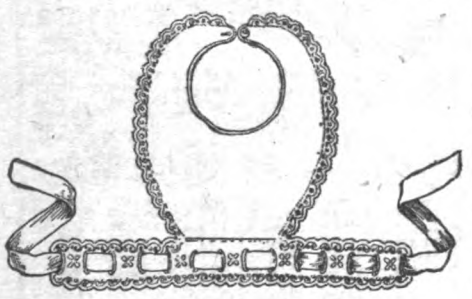
ARE you cultivating at home the domestic work commenced at school? If not, let us talk about how really important it is, that during these highly receptive years, children should put into actual practice their early ideas of drawing, sewing, embroidery, knitting, crocheting, etc. This applies to both boys and girls. To be sure, the boy is not likely to make needlework his business in life, but in youth he will enjoy doing it, and develop a certain accuracy and patience, which, while he may not realize it, will be of great value in whatever line of work he may later follow. The value of drawing cannot be overestimated, as it trains the eye, mind, and hand, as nothing else can. If you will watch the average child who pursues drawing, you will see how rapidly an ability to correctly observe forms, color and quality is being developed, and if encouraged will constitute a valuable asset through life.

Advantages of Home Work to the Child

Any child can be taught to take an interest in making things for the house, or for each other, if the idea is commenced early. Take, for example, the figure on the school bag, and the one on the pillow, and you will see they are the same subjects you have watched your children draw for amusement. Now that fashion dictates the use of all kinds and forms of hand work, why not put them into practical use, and allow the children to contribute their personal efforts to the higher development of their natural gifts? The cat is simply a bit of patchwork, and the boy, "Off to School," is but a free-hand drawing which any child will delight to experiment with. And watch, for he may succeed in doing something even better.

What older sister would not delight in making a toy or bib for baby sister, or a mat for table or floor, for holiday or birthday gifts? Encourage the thought, mothers, in the days when, to the child, it is more play than work, for it will give a new meaning to home and add an interest that will hold them closer to the home fireside.

Couch Cushion



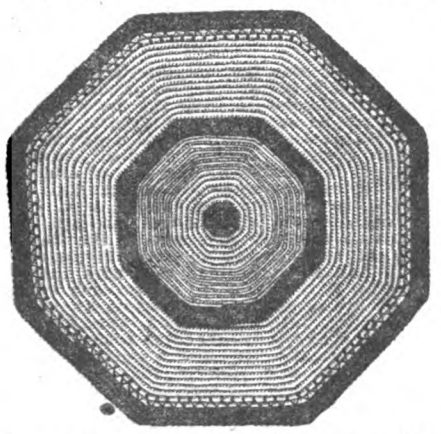
Two distinct shades of material are used for this cushion; light and dark. Or, ends of dark green, a "field" of light pink, and cat and ball of black sateen. This combination is decorative and interesting, and there is a wise saying that a black cat brings good luck. First make a drawing of the cat on a good quality of paper, so the pattern will retain its sharp edges when cut out and placed on the material. Iron the material, place the pattern thereon, and hold the iron on a few seconds. This will usually cause cloth and paper to hold together, which will greatly facilitate marking around the edge, which should be done with a sharp-pointed pencil. Cut out the cat, place on material, hold it in place with flat weights of some sort, and baste carefully around. A buttonhole stitch is the best as it takes care of the raw edges. For kitty's eyebrows and feelers, also for outlines about ears and legs that do not work out in the pattern, use an outline stitch. The dark ends of cover are sewed on with an ordinary seam, then turned back, which makes the cushion stronger.

COUCH CUSHION.

Baby's Bib

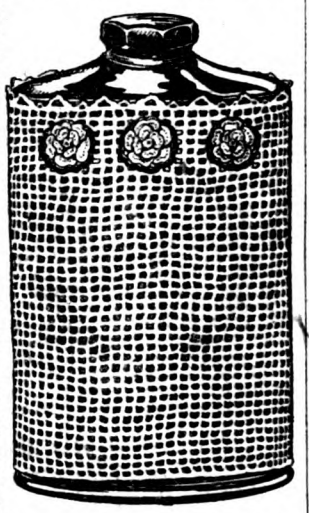
The important point of this bib is, that it loosely ties around the waist, thus holding it in place and giving added protection to the dress. To shape, use the top of a dress pattern, that the neck may be the right size, then cut the required length, and cut on the strings if it is to be all in one piece. The strings of the one illustrated were made by simply sewing on a strip of Hamburg beading through which a ribbon was run, but the more practical, everyday bib is cut with bib and strings in one, and buttoned at the back. Bind the entire bib with a soft bias piece, then stitch around. If a more elaborate finish is desired, crochet over the edge.

BABY'S BIB.



Toy for Baby

There are several ways of developing this interesting toy. A bone, celluloid or rubber ring must be used, as metal will corrode from dampness and become poisonous. Use woolen yarn, or heavy soft cotton string and cover the ring with a buttonhole, or crochet stitch. A cord is made by braiding soft materials and sewed to the ring, that it may be worn around the neck. Five celluloid bells are sewed to the under side of ring. The toy is washable, and may be kept sanitary for baby's lips, for unconsciously small children are apt to put toys to the lips.



Crocheted Table Mat or Rug

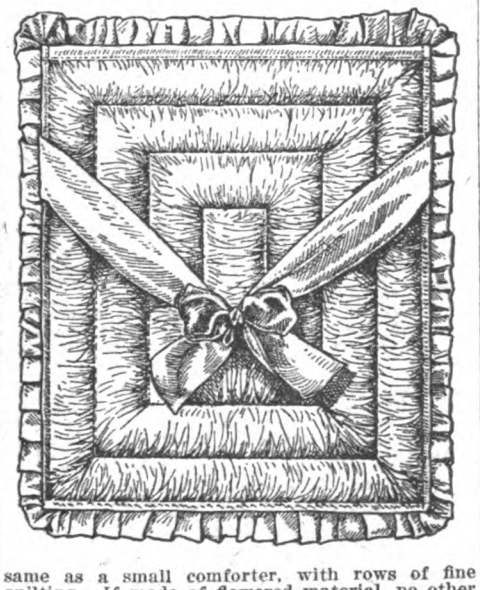
Use woolen yarn, coarse crochet cotton, or stripped rags. Begin at center. Ch. 7, join in a ring. First Round. Ch. 3, 2 s.c. in ring, ch. 1, 2 s.c. in ring, repeating eight times from ch. 3 to form eight sides. Ch. 1, join. Second Round. Ch. 3, 3 s.c. into first round. Ch. 1. Repeat to Ch. 3. Ch. 1, join. Continue until desired size is reached. Cross-stitching with wool over two or more rounds gives a pretty finish for a table mat.

Talcum Powder Can Cover of Filet with Medallions

Ch. to reach around bottom of can. Ch. 4 more, skip 8 sts. 1 d.c. into the next stitch to form a block. Ch. 2, skip 2 sts., 1 d.c. into next st. to form block. Repeat until the filet is long enough to cover can. Crochet edges together.

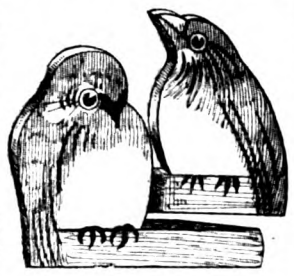
Top Edge

Four s.c. into each block. Turn. Skip 1st, s.c. into next. Ch. 11, skip 8 sts., hook into next. Ch. 5, skip 3 sts., hook into next. Repeat around edge. Turn. 4 s.c. into small loop. 14 s.c. into large loop. Repeat around edge. Fit muslin to bottom of can, finish with a tiny hem, and sew it to filet. Three medalions ornament the upper edge.



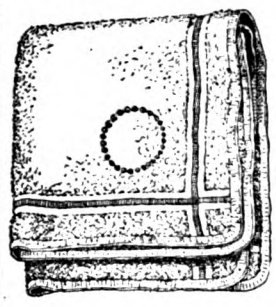
School Bag

Denim is a practical material for school bags; also khaki, and usually enough can be obtained from an old suit for this purpose. If the material is old, probably it is somewhat faded so dip it in dark brown dye. Make the bag large enough to hold the largest sized books the children carry. If lined, it will give longer service and often prevent wetting through. Make a run around the top and draw in a heavy shoelacing; soft, narrow leather ones are preferred by the boys. Two strings are preferable to one, as two balance the weight, which is considerable when the bag is full of books. The decorations are finished before the bag is seamed together. The letters may be drawn on the material, or paper patterns of the block letters cut and marked onto the cloth. If a heavy effect is desired, use three rows of outlining done closely together. And now it is "up to the boy or girl" to draw a boy running with books under his arm. I hear someone say that his books should be in a bag for he may drop them and "spill" the problems worked out the evening before, which would be hard luck for a boy in a hurry. The figure and letters are outlined in black or in a color.



Carriage Robe

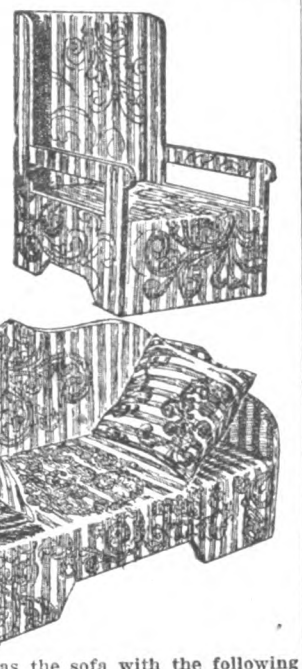
To be made of light-weight material, such as silkalene, thin silk, sateen, or of a woolen fabric such as albatross or cashmere. It is made the same as a small comforter, with rows of fine quilting. If made of flowered material, no other decoration will be required, but if plain, and a more elaborate effect is required, draw daisies around the robe half way between the edge and where the first row of quilting is to be made, and work with wool. The robe shown in illustration was all in pale pink; the ribbon and thin sateen exactly matching. The edge of top and lining are turned in, and held in place with a row of fine pink silk cross-stitching. The soft satin ribbon is folded once, side plaited, and selvage edges sewed flat just under the edge of robe. The "sash" bow makes a handsome finish. The padding is made of two thicknesses of white wadding.



Window Wedge

A sharp knife, a piece of soft wood, some paint and the ability to whittle that comes naturally to every boy, is all that is needed to make bluebird window wedges like those shown here. The piece of wood should be one-quarter of an inch thick and two and one-quarter inches high by two and one-half inches long. Carve body of bird and sharpen wedge slightly so that it can be inserted between the offending sashes. Paint head and wings with blue paint and breast with yellow and eyes, beak and toes of black. Wedge part can be of green.

Face Cloth



This face cloth with its band of lavender and its wreath of lavender and yellow French knots is almost too dainty to be used, but it makes an attractive gift and thus you shift the responsibility onto someone else. Face cloths can be bought with borders of various colors and it is an easy matter to embroider a wreath of French knots in harmonizing shades. A hand towel and bath towel, matching face cloth, and embroidered in same design, makes an ideal gift and one that would delight the heart of a bride, especially if the color scheme of her guest room has been carried out.

Sofa and Chair for Dolly's Playhouse

A really and truly sofa with an easy-chair to match, both of a size to accommodate her next-to-the-smallest doll, will make Little Sister very happy and Big Sister should enjoy making them. Rather thin pasteboard and some scraps of cretonne are all that is required. Back of sofa measures nine and one-half inches wide by five and three-quarters inches in highest part, cut as in illustration, curving to four and one-half inches at ends. The end pieces are four and one-half inches long by three and one-half inches wide, cut down to form arms. Front measures nine and one-half by two and one-quarter inches and has small section cut from center of lower edge, as shown. The seat measures nine and three-eighths by three and one-half inches. All pieces should be made double and sewed together in pin-ball fashion to insure neatness. The different pieces can then be sewed together to form the sofa. Little pillows, two and one-half inches square, give it a most comfy look. It is better to sew these in place and a stitch or two at upper corner of each will suffice.

The chair is made in exactly the same manner as the sofa with the following measurements: back, eight and one-quarter by four and five-eighths inches; sides, eight and one-fourth inches at highest part, cut down four inches to form side wings; the part forming arms measures four and one-quarter inches in width, and the same in length. Front, four and five-eighths inches by two and one-quarter inches, with seat of sufficient size to fill space, which will be just a trifle less than outside measurements.

Baby's First Shoes

The baby that is small enough to wear such a diminutive slipper is almost too small to appreciate how very cunning they are, though later he might be interested in pulling off the funny, fat tassel or picking at the little wreath of French knots that adorn the front of each slipper. No. 2 soles are used, though soft soles could be cut from pieces of leather. Sew twelve inches of two and one-half inch ribbon onto sole, with piece of narrow tape or ribbon sewed short distance from top on inner side, to form band for elastic. The slipper used in illustration was made of soft pink silk ribbon with wreath design in pink and blue, with pink ball tassel, though any color could be used as well.

A good old Friend

Remember the good old-fashioned mustard plaster grandma used to pin around your neck when you had a cold or a sore throat?

It did the work, but my how it burned and blistered!

Musterole breaks up colds in a hurry, but it does its work more gently,—without the blister. Rubbed over the throat or chest it penetrates the skin with a tingling warmth that brings relief at once.

Made from pure oil of mustard, it is a clean, white ointment good for all the little household ills.

Keep the little white jar of Musterole on your bathroom shelf and bring it out at the first sign of tonsillitis, croup, neuritis, rheumatism or a cold.

Sold by druggists everywhere, in jars and tubes, 35c and 65c; hospital size, $3.

The Musterole Co., Cleveland, Ohio

BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER

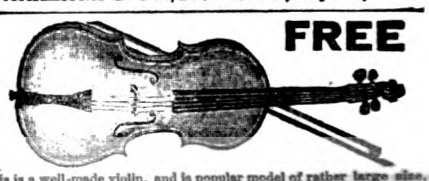
MUSTEROLE

WILL NOT BLISTER

AGENTS: $72 A WEEK

New Can't Clog Coal-Oil Burner Newest Invention

Most perfect burner ever invented. Intense blue flame. Can't clog up. Turns any coal or wood stove into a gas stove. Cheaper than coal. No more dirt, no ashes, no coal or wood to carry. Heats oven to baking point in 10 minutes.



ONE HOUR FOR TWO CENTS

Cheapest fuel known. Big opportunity for agents. Low priced. Sells everywhere. Nothing else like it. New patented. Not sold in stores. First season. No competition.

$2 AN HOUR TO HUSTLERS

Act quick. Be first in your territory to introduce this new big seller and make some real money this season. Don't delay. Best time of the year right now to sell "Can't Clog" Burners. Write quick for agency, territory and terms.

PARKER MFG. CO., 417 Coal St., Dayton, Ohio

FREE

This is a well-made violin, and is popular model of rather large size. It is finely proportioned and well finished. Body is well arched from the center with ample depth from the bridge. Flamed maple back and sides to match. It is a beauty. We send it complete, bow, rosin, etc., FULL INSTRUCTIONS how to play, for selling only 25 packages of Post Cards at 10c per pack. We trust you. Just write to

Jones Mfg. Co., Dept. 419, Attleboro, Mass.

Handsome Bracelet FREE 14 Karat Gold finish, patent lock catch, fits any arm. To introduce our catalogue. Send 15c to help pay adv. and mailing.

Sun Jewelry Co., Dept. B5, East Boston, Mass.

Stella Rosevelt

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12.)

own living, I know of no way so congenial to my feelings as through literary pursuits. Perhaps I made a mistake in appealing to you just now, but I could think of no other way out of my difficulties, for of course I am wholly ignorant of the manners and customs of this country. I mentioned these things to Mrs. Richards this morning——"

And now Star's voice trembled, and the beating of her heart nearly choked her, for she did not know how this man would receive her appeal to him against his own wife.

"Well, and what did she say?" he asked, feeling somewhat perplexed over the matter.

"She told me that I could not go on with my education as papa wished; that—I was to take the place of a girl named Maggie Flynn in your family."

"What!" exclaimed the gentleman, in tones of the most emphatic astonishment.

"Maggie Flynn, I understand," Star went on, gathering courage as she noted his surprise, "was a sort of chamber and waiting maid, and Mrs. Richards says that I am henceforth to perform her duties. I cannot tell you," she continued earnestly, "how repulsive such a life would be to me—to give up all my hopes, to forget, in the ceaseless routine of such an existence, all that I have already acquired; and I have come to appeal to you—to ask you if you will not try and persuade your wife to allow me to continue my studies? I am willing to work, and work hard, but I must have some time to improve and develop my mind. There are plenty of girls who can be employed in my place"—Star did not know of the curtailing business—"and who do not care for an education. Papa authorized a friend of his to dispose of his library and our household goods, and give the proceeds to me, after paying all bills. I have a letter of credit to the amount of a hundred pounds. I do not know the expense of schooling in this country, but could I not be sent to some institution for a year or two, and take this money to pay for it? I should be fitted by the end of that time, I think, to teach, and could relieve Mrs. Richards of all responsibility regarding my support."

Mr. Richards' face was very stern when the young girl concluded, and Star, looking into it, felt almost frightened at what she had done.

But she reasoned that her situation could not be much worse than it already was, and it demanded desperate measures.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we shall be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

How's This for Saving Money?

Compare this price with prices in your local stores. Isn't the saving worth while? Write and get similar money-saving prices on Kalamazoo Heaters, Furnaces, Washing Machines, Paints, Shoes and many other articles in our catalog. Now is the time to save money and we can help you do it. Ask for Catalog No. 501

Cash or easy payments. Quick shipment. Money-back guarantee

KALAMAZOO STOVE CO., Mfrs. Kalamazoo, Michigan

A Kalamazoo Direct to You

MAN'S BEST AGE

A man is as old as his organs; he can be as vigorous and healthy at 70 as at 35 if he aids his organs in performing their functions. Keep your vital organs healthy with

GOLD MEDAL HAARLEM OIL CAPSULES

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles since 1696; corrects disorders; stimulates vital organs. All druggists, three sizes.

Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

Help Wanted

We require the services of an ambitious person to do some special advertising work right in your own locality. The work is pleasant and dignified. Pay is exceptionally large. No previous experience is required, as all that is necessary is a willingness on your part to carry out our instructions.

If you are at present employed, we can use your spare time in a way that will not interfere with your present employment—yet pay you well for your time.

If you are making less than $150 a month, the offer I am going to make will appeal to you. Your spare time will pay you well—your full time will bring you in a handsome income.

It costs nothing to investigate. Write me today and I will send you full particulars by return mail and place before you the facts so that you can decide for yourself.

ALBERT MILLS, Gen. Manager Employment Dept. 6388 American Bldg., CINCINNATI, OHIO

What 15 Cents Will bring You From the Nation's Capital

The little matter of 15c will bring you the Pathfinder thirteen weeks on trial. The Pathfinder is a cheerful illustrated weekly, published at the Nation's center, for people everywhere; an independent home paper that tells the story of the world's news in an interesting, understandable way. Now in its 29th year. This splendid National weekly supplies a long-felt want; it costs but $1 a year. If you want to known what is going on in the world, this is your means. If you want a paper in your home which is reliable and wholesome; if you would appreciate a paper which puts everything clearly, strongly, briefly, entertainingly—here it is. Splendid serial and short stories and miscellany. The Question Box answers YOUR questions and is a mine of information. Send 15c to show that you might like such a paper, and we will send the Pathfinder on probation 13 weeks. The 15c does not repay us, but we are glad to invest in new friends. The Pathfinder, 218 Langdon Sta., Washington, D. C.

"Linene"

Send 2 Cents in U. S. stamps to pay postage and we will send you FREE a SAMPLE COLLAR of our New Style "Copley." State size wanted. REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. E, Boston, Mass.

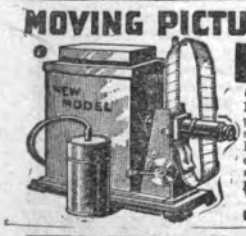
FREE TRIAL

Let us send this fine Razor for 30 days free trial. When satisfied after using, send $1.85 or return razor. Order Today. JONES MFG. CO. 160 N. Wells St. Dept. 648 Chicago

WHITE FLAME

BURNERS make your old kerosene lamps and lanterns give a brilliant white light better than electricity or gas. Doubles your light. Saves oil. No Mantle to Break. Guaranteed Safe and Reliable. Delights every user. Send now for complete sample postpaid 50 cts., stamps or coin. 3 for $1.25. Money back if Not Satisfactory. Live Representatives Wanted. Exclusive Territory.

WHITE FLAME LIGHT CO. 76 Clark Bldg. Grand Rapids, Mich.



OVERLAND SHOES 10 DAYS FREE

Light-weight, easy, durable Aluminum Bottom Shoes. Water-proof. Rust-proof. Health protection, ideal shoe for farm work, etc. Special non-slip Cordo sole. 3 styles, 4 heights, 6 to 16 in. Low in price. Write for 10-day free offer. Address Dept. 302

OVERLAND SHOE CO. RACINE, WIS.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE FREE

Genuine New Model American Moving Picture Machine, complete with film, given free for selling 30 packages Colored Post cards at 10c a pkg. You can earn money by giving shows at your own home. Extra premium of admission tickets. Write today.

COLUMBIA NOVELTY CO., Dept. 615, East Boston, Mass.

Wrestling Book FREE

Be an expert wrestler. Learn at home by mail. Wonderful lessons prepared by world's champions Farmer Burns and Frank Gotch. Free book tells you how. Secret holds, blocks and tricks revealed. Don't delay. Be strong healthy. Handle big men with ease. Write for free book. State age. Farmer Burns, 3045 Ramge Bldg., Omaha, Neb.

November Garden Calendar

NOVEMBER finds gardening operations in the common farm garden about over for the season. Winter may not yet have arrived, but you may be sure that he is hiding just around the corner, holding his chilly breath and waiting to put in an appearance on a moment's notice. Will he find us ready? We all learned the meaning of the word "preparedness" during the war; it also has a peace-time meaning that can well be applied on the farm and in the garden.

October should have seen things put in shape for cold weather but in case some of us have been tardy—and it would be surprising if we all did everything on time—here are some of the little odds and ends that will bear attention.

All root crops with the exception of parsnips must be lifted at once and stored either in the cellar or in outside pits. This is such an important matter that we will go into winter storage of vegetables at greater length later on. Parsnips may be left in the ground all winter, and usually are, but for convenience it is well to dig a few after a fairly hard frost and keep them handy for early winter use. No sense in waiting until spring before we have this tasty vegetable on the table "where it will do the most good." Cabbage sown in September should now be placed in the cold frame, unless this has been done already. Mature cabbage should be pulled up and stored either in the cellar or in trenches. By the way, do not throw away cracked heads of cabbage. Keep them for the poultry. Always keep a head of cabbage and one or two large sunflowers hung up in the poultry house where the chickens will have to jump for each morsel of green feed or each sunflower seed. Exercise is essential to the best condition and production of poultry in winter; induce it by making them work for their feed. A little thought will turn the trick.

Dig turnips, beets, carrots and onions on a bright sunny day when the soil is comparatively dry. If a good breeze is blowing so much the better, as it will make it easier to riddle out any adhering dirt. Be careful not to bruise vegetables; bruising has the same effect as in the case of apples. Take them to the cellar. We will tell you how to store them later.

Unless the strawberries were mulched late last month, now is the time to do it. Pull out by the roots any large weeds that have been overlooked; the birds will scatter the ripe seed where it will greet you next spring. Then mulch with a thin covering of straw. Too heavy a covering induces winter growth and endangers the plants. Mulch asparagus with leaves or straw. Rhubarb should be covered with manure. Mulching should be done as soon as the ground is slightly frozen. While we have the pitchfork handy, let's put in a little dry dirt around the rose bushes then heap a good big forkful of manure on top. They may be mulched to a depth of a foot or more to good advantage. A light covering of manure and straw will protect the bulb bed and assure you of tulips, crocuses and snowdrops as soon as the snow leaves in the spring. If you have no bulb bed, now is the time to make one as the new bulbs are now ready for the market. Fresh bulbs are essential to success; avoid old, dry bulbs.

Winter Storage of Vegetables

Storing vegetables in their natural state, just as they come from the garden, is the ideal way of keeping them for winter use on the farm. Canned or dried vegetables are both very fine in their way but they require a lot of work on the part of "Maw" and the girls. Besides, it is not possible to preserve the characteristic freshness and flavor in either canned or dried vegetables. Simple storage is the best, cheapest and least laborious way of handling them for winter.

Most of us who have a garden, large or small, may choose between the house cellar, outside root cellar or dirt-covered pits for the storage place for winter vegetables. Each of these is good, but not all vegetables will keep equally well in each. This is a point well worth considering further. Where two kinds of storage are available it is well to consider the storage requirements of the vegetables at hand, then give each the place where it will feel strictly "at home."

The House-Cellar

Because it is no doubt the commonest, let us consider the household cellar without a furnace first. Provided it is what we call a "warm cellar," one where the temperature does not fall below the freezing point in coldest weather, it supplies almost ideal storage requirements for a large range of vegetables. A dirt floor in the part used for vegetables and one or two small windows to provide ventilation and a circulation of fresh air within the control of the gardener are additional requirements. If there is a furnace in the cellar a small room in the corner farthest from it may be partitioned off for a storage room, but unless we are willing to go to the trouble of making at least a double and airtight partition, or preferably a concrete wall, to keep out the heat, we should not expect vegetables to keep well. For ordinary purposes a constant temperature of between 35 and 40 degrees Far. is best, though cabbage can stand freezing.

Outside Root Cellars or Caves

In some respects outside root cellars are preferable to house cellars, but the inconvenience of going out of doors every time fresh vegetables are needed offsets the advantage of constant temperature, to our way of thinking. If easy access is provided into the root cellar by a door opening from the house cellar this objection is overcome. It is true that there is no unpleasant vegetable odor permeating the house in the spring from the outside root cellar; we have all experienced the disagreeable odor of decaying potatoes in our house cellar, and would do a lot to avoid a recurrence.

Storage Pits in the Garden

Pits are a poor third choice when it comes to vegetable storage, from our way of thinking, but still we know of many gardeners who think otherwise. Tastes differ, and every man to his own. If they are to be used, probably because there is not room in the cellar for everything, the small pit has many advantages over the large. Small pits take a bit more work to make than would one large pit, but they make it possible to store each kind of vegetable separately and in quantities which enable the gardener to remove all at one time. Taking part of the vegetables out of a large pit in cold weather, then trying to close it up again so that neither cold nor wet will penetrate, is a "chore" that few have mastered, nor do we care to spend a lifetime learning it. The small pit will hold just about as much as can be used nicely without spoiling, and there is no necessity of closing it after they have been removed.

We ae not going into detail on the construction of pits. We take it for granted that every gardener knows how they are made, and will use our limited space for something else. Still, if any of our readers of Modern Farmer wish, we will gladly go into detail on this point in a later issue of COMFORT. All they need do is drop us a line.

Successful Storage Requirements

There are three important things to keep in mind if vegetables are to be stored successfully. They are: choose sound, mature vegetables; provide proper storage temperature; provide proper moisture and ventilation. Many gardeners come to grief because they overlook the first requirement, the selection of fully ripened vegetables. Carefully select all vegetables to be stored. Soundness should include freedom from all disease conditions likely to cause rot, and from bruising or insect injury which provide an entrance for rot organisms or favorable conditions for their development. It is not the loss of the affected vegetables which is so important, but the fact that when decay once gets a start in them it will spread and damage a considerable portion of the stored crop. Nor does soundness stop with the selection of ripe and unbruised vegetables; it includes careful handling all through the process of storage. We all handle fruit such as apples with the greatest care, knowing that unless we do the fruit will spoil, but very few of us seem to think that bruising vegetables matters much. It does! While the result of bruising and rough handling are not so marked in vegetables as in fruits, still we may trace much of the loss in storage directly to rough handling. Let's keep this in mind and benefit by the caution.

Storage Temperatures

The best temperature for storing vegetables varies somewhat with the different kinds, but there are two fairly defined limits. The temperature should not be so low that they freeze, nor should it be so high as to encourage premature growth. Also, the warm cellar provides ideal conditions for the growth and development of rot organisms. For general purposes, a temperature very close to and slightly above the freezing point is best. Cabbage will stand freezing, but for the others a temperature of from 31 to 33 degrees Fahrenheit should be maintained if possible. It is true that they will keep at higher temperatures, but there is a much greater danger of spoiling. Squash and pumpkin are the two exceptions to the rule. They do best where a relatively high temperature, say around 40 to 50 degrees, is maintained.

Moisture and Ventilation

Strange as it may seem, large losses are caused by improper moisture in storage rooms, and most of them are the result of too little, not too much, moisture. We overlook the fact that all vegetables have a relatively high moisture content and that in dry atmosphere they dry out quickly with a consequent loss of quality and flavor. We have all seen the shriveled, soft, wrinkled potato or carrot come out of the cellar in late winter. The dry air has robbed them of their moisture and also a part of their vitality. Onions, pumpkins, squash and shelled beans are the exceptions to this rule; they need higher temperatures and dry air. As regards too much moisture, dampness is conducive to the development and spread of rot, out in a house cellar with a dirt floor there is less danger of having the air too moist than of having it too dry. The sooner we correct the mistaken notion that dry air is needed in the cellar the better for ourselves and our vegetables. The aim should be to keep the air moist enough to prevent wilting. This may be done by keeping pails or tubs filled with water in the cellar, and these will be a protection also in case the window should be left open by mistake on a cold night. Good ventilation is desirable for the best storage. It helps to regulate both temperature and moisture, removes foul odors and may also help to prevent decay. It is particularly necessary where fruits such as apples are also stored in the cellar as it has been found that apple scald can be almost entirely prevented by a free circulation of air.

Special Storage Requirements

We have merely mentioned early in our discussion of storage requirements of common farm vegetables that some need slightly different care than others, that temperature needs vary and that some do best in dry air while others need moist air to keep them from wilting or shriveling due to the evaporation of the moisture they contain. Now we will go into somewhat greater detail and point out the "do's" and "don'ts" for the vegetables we are most likely to wish to store in our farm cellar.

POTATOES.—Most farmers and gardeners, and even other less fortunate mortals who have to buy their winter supply of vegetables, have learned by experience something regarding the correct way to handle potatoes. The general rules laid down for vegetable storage apply in their case. For best results, select mature and disease-free tubers; discard for use early all potatoes frosted in the field, badly bruised or "scuffed" tubers or those that have been borne as "twins" or "warts"

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 28.)

A ROGERS NOW at $1.95

SEND NO MONEY! Just your name and address and we will send you parcel post PREPAID, the famous Rogers Folding Clothes Rack. By special arrangement the postman will accept bargain factory price upon delivery. Our radical change in sales method saves you money. We pay the delivery charges and you get the Rogers at the SPECIAL MANUFACTURER-TO-USER PRICE.

10 DAYS' TRIAL. You are dealing with the manufacturer and take no risk. If for any reason you return the Rogers Clothes Rack to us within 10 days you get your money back immediately. We pay charges both ways.

35 FEET OF DRYING SPACE. The Rogers gives you 35 feet of drying space—yet it folds into a convenient bundle that is easily stored. You have seen it in your friend's kitchen. Think how convenient it will be for baby's clothes or the family ironing.

WRITE TODAY! This is a SPECIAL OFFER and requires prompt attention. Send us your name and address requesting immediate shipment of a Rogers Folding Clothes Rack. Don't miss this unusual opportunity. Write today! Send no money.

ROGERS CLOTHES RACK COMPANY, Dept. B, Kendallville, Indiana.

BIG $ CUT WITTE Makes NEW Prices On ENGINES All Sizes Lower

GASOLINE — KEROSENE

Prices f.o.b. K.C. Carload fgt. to Fbg.

Don't pay wartime prices. Note the big saving NOW buying direct from WITTE. Full list and catalog, Free.

2 H-P. (was $ 59) Now $ 39.95
6 H-P. (was 180) Now 119.90
12 H-P. (was 352) Now 249.00
30 H-P. (was 1091) Now 699.80

WITTE ENGINE WORKS,
3647 Oakland Avenue, KANSAS CITY, MO.
3647 Empire Building, PITTSBURGH, PA.

NEW FORD FOR $12

FREE 10 Days Send No Money

The CATARACT Circulating Water Pump will make any Ford car or truck run like new. It will keep new Fords new. Positively prevents overheating, the cause of 90 per cent of all Ford engine troubles. Keeps water circulating. Freezing impossible. Proper temperature of the motor at all times gives greater power, snap, flexibility and doubles the life at half the expense. The Cataract is guaranteed in writing.

Use for 10 Days at Our Risk

Send no money. Just send name and address. When the package arrives deposit $12.00 with the Postmaster. If the CATARACT Pump which we send to you does not please you in every way, your money will be refunded. Write today.

CATARACT MANUFACTURING CO. 311-12 Fifth St. Milwaukee, Wis.

AGENTS: $50 a Week

taking orders for New Kerogas Burner

Fits any stove, just shove into the fire box. Quickly lighted, turns off by valve—just like gas. Burns Kerosene (coal oil) cheapest and cleanest fuel known.

For Winter or Summer

Our Agents report big success. The high price of coal makes this New Burner sell everywhere. Big money for spare time workers. Write quick for demonstrating sample.

Thomas Mfg. Co. B-330 Dayton, Ohio

Will You Sell Us Your Spare Time?

We will train you to write show cards for us. No canvassing or soliciting; we supply you with steady work; distance no object; will pay you from $15 to $50 a week. Wilson Methods, Limited, Dept. L, 64 East Richmond, Toronto, Canada

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

BY ONE MAN. It's KING OF THE WOODS. Saves money and backache. Send for FREE catalog No. B8 showing low price and latest improvements. First order gets agency. Folding Sawing Machine Co., 161 West Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Save 25% on Roofing

CENTURY Roll Roofing is sold direct from factory to you. Best and cheapest in America. Long guarantee. Freight paid. 14 shipping points. FREE Send for samples, catalog and bargain prices. Write today.

CENTURY MFG. CO. 221 Metropolitan Bldg. E. St. Louis, Ill.

MAKE $1,000.00 In Your Spare Time

Here's How: Use an OTTAWA Log Saw, the Fastest Cutting, Easiest Handled, Most Powerful One-Man sawing outfit built. Cut down trees; saw up logs, limbs and branches. Make good money sawing wood for yourself and neighbors. Many ambitious men are going into the wood business—making big money! Start now to saw wood to sell. The OTTAWA does all the hard work—saws wood Fast, Easy, Cheap. LOW Prices Now: The price of the OTTAWA is now so low that any man with wood to cut cannot afford to be without one.

Fastest Cutting

The World's Standard

MADE $1,000.00; Here's the Proof: "The OTTAWA Log Saw is sure a fine outfit" writes Joe Layer, Scranton, Ark. "I have made about $1,000 with it in spare time. I have earned me a new Ford car with my saw. I would not be without it for anything."

MAKES $10 A DAY: "I get all the sawing I can do at $10 a day with my OTTAWA. It does more work than I ever expected." —W. O. Wynne, Empire, Ga.

Others are doing as well and better with the OTTAWA. So can you. Dependable, Powerful. Write for New Lower Prices.

30 Days Trial; 10-Year Guarantee. Cash or Easy Terms. Direct from Factory to you. Quick shipment from nearest of 9 Factory Branches. Write TODAY for full particulars. Your name and address on a post card will do.

OTTAWA MFG. CO. 915-B Wood St. Ottawa, Kans.

Easy Now to Rid Your Farm of Rats

Wonderful Discovery by Noted Scientist Kills Every Rat Within a Week's Time Not a Poison.

Rats cost farmers over two hundred millions of dollars a year, through the destruction of grain, poultry and buildings. Farmers need no longer suffer this loss because they can now kill off all the rats on their farm in less than a week's time. This is possible through the remarkable discovery of E. R. Alexander, a Kansas City chemist, who has perfected a virus which kills rats, mice and gophers as though by magic. This product is not a poison—it can be eaten by human beings or any animal on the farm as safely as their regular food, but means quick, sure death to rats.

This wonderful rat virus, which is known as Alexander Rat-Killer, is merely mixed with bread or meat scraps and placed where rats, mice or gophers can get to it. Within a few hours after a rat has eaten Alexander Rat-Killer he gets a high fever and suffers a terrible thirst. He leaves the barns and nesting holes and goes to the open fields in search of pure air and running water. Rats and mice affected always die away from the barns and houses, so there is no odor.

It is a scientific fact that one rat affects others and soon the whole colony leaves the buildings and dies. And though this virus is absolutely deadly to rats—chickens, hogs, cattle or any farm animal can eat it and not be affected at all.

So confident is Mr. Alexander that Alexander Rat-Kill will kill every rat on your farm in less than a week's time that he offers to send, as an introductory offer, a regular $2.00 tube for only $1.00. Give it according to directions, and if at the end of a week's time you are able to discover any rats, mice or gophers on your farm, your money will be refunded. A big Kansas City bank guarantees that Mr. Alexander is reliable and will do as he says.

Send NO MONEY. Just write to E. R. Alexander, Alexander Laboratories, 184 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the tube will be mailed at once. When it arrives, pay the postman only one dollar and postage on the guarantee that if not absolutely satisfactory your money will be returned without question. Write today—a postcard will do—and stop your rat losses now.

FEATHER BED OUTFIT

Now Only $12.50

Send us $12.50 and nearest express office and we will ship you this wonderful outfit consisting of One 40-pound New FEATHER BED, One Pair of 6-lb. New FEATHER PILLOWS, and One Pair full size BED BLANKETS or BED SPREAD. All new clean, sanitary feathers; best 8-ounce A. C. A. feather-proof ticking. Positively biggest bargain offered by any one. About half store price. Sold on our MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. Mail Money Order today. Our Bargain Catalog mailed FREE.

SOUTHERN FEATHER & PILLOW COMPANY
DEPT. 81 GREENSBORO, N. C.

Don't pay more! $5.00 will put a genuine PURITY BRAND new feather bed in your home, guaranteed full weight and full size and featherproof ticking. Biggest offering in the bedding field made direct by manufacturers who undersell the world. Money back if not satisfied. Write now for details and catalog.

PURITY BEDDING FACTORIES
Dept. 307 Nashville, Tenn.

Get a FEATHER BED Save $11. 1 25-lb. bed; 1 pair 6-lb. pillows; 1 pair blankets, full size; 1 counterpane, large size; all for $13.95. (Retail value $25.00). Same as above with 30-lb. bed, $14.95; with 35-lb. bed, $15.95; with 40-lb. bed, $16.95. Beds alone, 25-lb., $8.95; 30-lb., $9.95; 35-lb., $10.95; 40-lb., $11.95. Two 2 1-2-lb. pillows, $1.75. New feathers, best ticking. $1,000.00 cash deposit in bank to guarantee satisfaction or money back. MAIL ORDER TODAY OR WRITE FOR CATALOG.
Sanitary Bedding Co., Dept. 114, Charlotte, N. C.

Every Quilter

Should have our book of 450 prettiest and scarcest patterns from old log cabin to star and puzzle designs. We will mail you this wonderful 25c book, also catalogue of beads and needlework materials, for 20c. No stamps. Our latest book of applique designs containing over 25 beautiful patterns for quilts, spreads, etc., and above, 25c.
LADIES' ART CO., Block 18, St. Louis, Mo.

DOLLARS IN HARES

We pay $7.00 to $18.50 and up a pair and express charges. Big Profits. We furnish guaranteed high grade stock and buy all you raise. Use back yard, barn, cellar, attic. Contract and Illustrated Catalog Free.

STANDARD FOOD & FUR ASS'N
405 A. Broadway New York

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

Making the Most of the Winter Months

THE approach of Christmas makes every housewife and mother long for extra money to spend on presents and good things for the family table. Town and city women have to scrimp and scrimp for months to gratify such desires, but the country woman, with her poultry and other farm products, can easily earn the wherewithal for gifts and good cheer, as well as yearly income, by taking advantage of the parcel post to bring her in touch with private customers. On every farm there is some product which the city dweller would be glad to have direct from the country, and, now, when the rural delivery picks up parcels right at the gate, a woman can ship from a comb of honey to a quart of berries, a dozen eggs or a fifty-pound box of vegetables, without having to wait for the men folks to hitch up and take them to the express office, which used to be one of the greatest obstacles to small orders, even when customers were willing to pay the heavy charges made on small packages by express companies.

How to find such customers is usually a puzzle, unless one has city friends who can be bribed into doing a little dilettante canvassing. Failing any such friendly agency, more commercial methods must be employed. A personal letter to a few doctors in good localities, stating that the writer was making a specialty of strictly new-laid, sterilized eggs for invalids and children, would be likely to bring results.

A city telephone book or business directory will furnish the names and addresses of private hospitals and sanitariums, and also of trained nurses. An ex-city business woman, who was compelled by illness to return to her father's farm, worked up a very comfortable independence along such lines. She wrote to the Young Women's Christian Association in the city for a list of registries and boarding houses of trained nurses. A few of these located in the best neighborhoods were selected, and a carefully worded note and a self-addressed and stamped envelope was sent to each, asking the manageresses to supply the names and addresses of a few of their senior nurses. On receipt of replies a few names were selected and personal letters were written, explaining that strictly fresh eggs could be shipped each morning for invalids' use in half-dozen or dozen boxes; price seventy-five cents a dozen or forty-seven cents for a half-dozen.

By return mail she received an order for half a dozen three times a week, and another order for a dozen a week. Within ten days three more orders had been received, one for a dozen a week, one for six twice a week, and another for a dozen twice a week.

Gradually she acquired a large clientele of customers; and in many cases where illness brought fresh orders for eggs, the family became regular customers for table eggs, and fresh vegetables and fruit when in season. In time they added squab broilers, chicken and currant jelly to their specials for invalids, and are now clearing from fifteen to twenty dollars a week.

There are several firms making corrugated paper boxes and cases specially made for shipping eggs, berries, vegetables and dressed poultry through the parcel post, and as they are all constructed on the collapsible plan, they can be returned by the customer and used over and over again, which minimizes the cost, which seems heavy until that fact is considered.

The egg boxes which hold one dozen cost $2.30 for fifty. Two dozen size, $3.00 for fifty. The vegetable boxes also come in two sizes—15x9 and 14x13 inches, and cost respectively $2 and $2.50 for twenty-five. Postage on a dozen eggs is six cents within the first and second zones, which means within one hundred and fifty miles of the shipping point. Two dozen cost only an extra cent. The first-sized vegetable box, when filled, usually weighs about eight pounds, on which the postage would be twelve cents.

The most satisfactory method is to have a fixed price, which will cover postage, for trying to follow the fluctuations of market prices is annoying to both shipper and receiver, and is very likely to cause mistakes and dissatisfaction, besides which it causes much more labored bookkeeping. If you know that every dozen eggs is going to bring you in just so much cash return, you can estimate your income without any trouble, and the housekeeper who takes your supplies will know just what she has to pay.

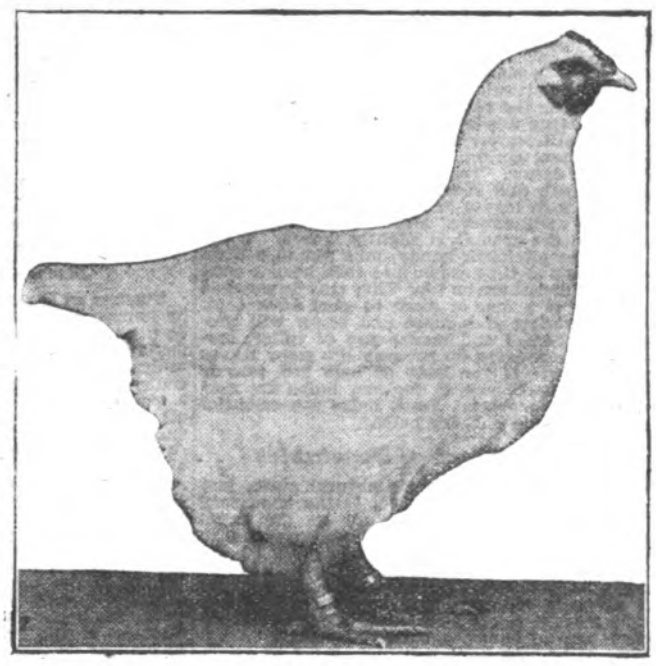
But to return to the ever-in-demand fresh egg. It must be of good size, uniform in color, and have strong shells. To get these qualities, the birds must be all of one variety, for a mixed flock will produce eggs of all shades between white and brown. To be sure of having a good supply during the early winter, the hens must have been hatched early the preceding spring. Size and weight depend first on the breed; secondly, on the feed and care the birds receive.

In the wholesale market of New York, the white-shelled egg brings the highest price; in Boston, the dark-shelled egg is favored, but for the first-class private trade there seems very little distinction, except in the case of people who have traveled much in Europe, and they always prefer the brown shells. So you see locality and the class of customer to which you are likely to cater, should decide what breed will be the most profitable. Leghorns and Anconas are the best layers in the white-shelled class; Wyandottes and Orpingtons for the brown shells. They must have good houses and plenty of room, especially in the scratching shed, for hens that are expected to produce eggs during the winter must have a big open air shed which communicates with the roosting house, so that they can get into the fresh air and exercise without getting their feet wet and cold. The shed should face south, be boarded up at the back and ends, and have a good roof, and the front covered with wire netting, with muslin curtains to be let down during periods of driving rain or snow.

The floor should be covered to a depth of ten or twelve inches with chopped straw or dry leaves. Many people think that anything will do for litter, as it is only for the birds to scratch in, but experienced poultrymen know that musty or mouldy scratching material on the floor of the house is a terrible menace, for it harbors germs which are most dangerous to the life of the birds, so always be extremely careful that the litter and hay, or whatever is used in the nest boxes, is dry and sweet and clean, for the shell is porous, and if laid on musty material, the flavor is spoiled.

To produce eggs during the winter, when shut into close quarters, hens must have animal and green vegetable food, or they won't produce eggs, no matter how much grain is given them.

Really hard and sharp grit, oystershell and water are just as essential. And remember that oystershell, lime and plaster, does not take the place of grit, which is necessary for the digestion and assimilation of grain.



Male birds are not to be allowed with the flocks of hens being kept specially for market eggs. The hens produce better without them, and sterile eggs keep much longer, and are much to be preferred for table use.

Even for home consumption it is desirable to fatten, kill and dress poultry knowledgeably. It makes such a difference to nutriment and flavor.

Fattening, as understood in France and some parts of England, is a semi-artificial process. Birds—capons and turkeys principally—are confined in small individual coops and fed heavily on moderately soft mash for two weeks, by which time the appetite commences to fail and artificial stuffing is resorted to. A funnel-like appliance is inserted in the bird's mouth and pushed down into its throat; then a liquid food is poured in the crop until it is filled. The very large commercial establishments use an apparatus which looks something like a street knife-grinder's machine, and is worked in the same way by the attendant's foot, only instead of turning the wheel the treadle action controls a pump which forces the feed out of a tank down a tube into the bird's crop. Both excellent methods, possibly, but after seeing them in operation, I confessed to preferring a little more humane and wholesomely old-fashioned way of providing delicacies for our table.

We have coops six feet long by two and a half wide, with yards six by ten, into which from five to ten birds are placed three weeks before killing. Fowls of a year old when properly prepared make good roasters; taken from the general yard, they are tough and fit only for soup. Cockerels of ten or twelve weeks old will, by special fattening and inactivity, become plump very quickly. The roost in a coop is only a foot from the floor; yard and floor of coop are of firmly-trampled earth, with no loose gravel, sand, or scratching material of any description, the object being to keep the birds as placid as possible.

Morning, noon and night mash is fed, as it is more easily digested and assimilated than whole corn. The first ten days the mash consists of one quart of ground feed, one-third of a teaspoonful of salt, one pint of boiled and mashed carrots, potatoes, or beets, mixed and moistened with skimmilk. Last ten days, one quart of corn meal, one dessertspoonful of powdered charcoal, one pound of potatoes, and two onions, boiled and mashed. Mix all together and make quite soft with skimmilk in which beef suet has been boiled. Suet is only about six cents a pound. Half a pound chopped fine is sufficient for two quarts of milk. Simmer for fifteen minutes. Feed in V-shaped troughs as much as the birds will eat in fifteen minutes. It must not be allowed to stand before them continually, or they will become satiated. It was an old Frenchman who gave me this hint about suet, which is excellent, making the flesh deliciously tender and juicy.

NO BETTER ROASTER THAN A WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCK HEN.

The effect of food on cavor has been set forth as most important in the New York Market Journal. They call poultrymen's attention to the fact that the exquisite flavor of the canvasback duck is due to the wild celery it feeds upon. The delicious Congo chickens owe their superior excellence to the pineapples they eat. The grouse meat of the far Western plains is aromatic with the wild sage.

The feeding for mere weight or size will, in the near future give place to the higher art of gratifying the palate. The capon now ranks high above ordinary poultry without any special methods of feeding. How much greater must its superiority be when fed for flavor as well as tenderness and size. Now and then some enthusiastic thoroughbred raiser will descant on the merits of his favorite breed—"their tender, juicy flesh and rich, highly-flavored eggs, not to be compared to the 'dunghills' long ago discarded"—forgetting that the "dunghills" were truly named, and that from hard scratching in the barnyard for a living resulted the small, tough bodies and ill-flavored eggs complained of. His thoroughbreds have a yard to themselves, are fed on the choicest grains and grasses, and have only pure water to drink. Feeding for flavor must sooner or later become a generally acknowledged part of poultry culture.

After the fattening has been successfully accomplished, correct killing and dressing must follow to insure excellence. Twenty-four hours before killing, birds are removed to individual coops a foot and a half square, with wire netting sides, floor or slats half an inch apart, and legs two feet high. The open flooring and elevated position allow the droppings to fall through and out of the bird's reach. For twelve hours they have milk before them all the time, but no food. Last twelve hours, nothing but water, to insure the crop being empty.

The most humane and best way of slaughtering the poor things is to have a string with a noose at one end suspended from a beam in some outhouse. Slip the bird's feet through the noose. Instruct the operator to stand with his back to the bird; take the body under his left arm, breast uppermost, the head in the left hand; open the beak by pressing at the sides between the thumb and finger, and with a French killing knife stab up into the extreme back of the roof of the mouth. Give a quick turn to the left and withdraw the knife. Leave the bird suspended for a few minutes before taking the feet from the noose.

Plucking must be done at once. Commence with the long wing and tail feathers; then from the shanks, down the inside of the thigh, and over the breast to the neck. Take only a few feathers at a time; grasp as closely to the skin as possible, and pull quickly towards the head. At first it may be difficult to remove the feathers without tearing the skin, but a little assurance and some practice will render it quite easy. After the feathers, all pin-feathers or quills have to be extracted. Then hang the bird up to become quite cold before drawing; but don't delay more than two hours.

Cut off the head with a sharp knife, leaving about three inches of the neck, slit the skin at the back lengthwise, push back, and cut out the neck-bone close to the body. With the point of the knife sever the membrane which holds the windpipe to the breast, cut off the shanks, make a straight cut from the end of the breast-bone, being careful to sever the skinny flesh only. Continue to cut in a circle round the vent, and the bird can be drawn without any unseemly exposure or soiling of the flesh.

Place a peeled onion or a piece of charcoal in the body, and hang up in a cold cellar for twenty-four hours. Following the above method of drawing leaves the bird unmarred; and the neck skin being folded under the back after the stuffing has been put in holds it firmly in place for roasting and carving. The few stitches necessary from the breast-bone down do not show when the bird is trussed. The gizzard and liver must be carefully severed from the remaining parts to avoid breaking the gall-bag, which is a small sac lying between the two parts of the liver. Hold the gizzard with the narrow, smooth line that runs on one side uppermost. Lay the edge of the knife on the line and make a small, shallow cut, which will reveal a gray-colored inner bag that is to be removed intact, hence the necessity for the cut being shallow.

It has not yet become the general market custom in this country to draw and truss birds at once; but private customers will quickly appreciate the improvement in flavor that immediate attention to cleanliness makes, and before long I believe that the present custom of keeping and shipping undrawn birds will be condemned by the health authorities. When birds are going to customers, instead of being sent in a sprawling condition, they are trussed as for roasting, leaving a piece of charcoal inside to insure perfect sweetness.

Correspondence

Subscribers are entitled to advice of our Poultry Editor, free, through the columns of this department. Address Poultry Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. BE SURE to give your full name and address, otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

M. C. K.—Your description of the bird's general conduct and of the blood and liver after death leaves no doubt as to the nature of the disease. Tuberculosis has got a strong hold of your flock, and you will find it very difficult to eradicate. Tuberculous fowls present a constant decrease in weight, and the difficulty in breathing is quite manifest. In connection with every case of tuberculosis there is to be found at work as a factor in the disease, a germ—bacillus—and this germ must be present to confirm the diagnosis. There have appeared cases enough of tuberculosis in poultry yards, apparently contracted from sick cows, to warrant our being on the watch for all sources of possible trouble. Even a case of a single bird going "light" should be quarantined as a possible source of future trouble. Suppose you find you have a case on hand resembling the trouble we have under consideration. Your best plan will be to kill and burn the sick fowl. It is not safe to depend upon burying the bird. It may become exposed through the efforts of some dog, and so become an object of danger. The sick birds disposed of, then turn your attention to the protection of the well members of the flock. Clean out at once all litter from the houses and yards. Take off a thin layer of soil from the earth floors of the pens, and a little from the bare yards near the houses. Brush up the inside of all the buildings and remove all the dust and cobwebs from the windows. Whitewash in a thorough manner the woodwork of the buildings, not forgetting the roosts and dropping boards. Last of all, scald all drinking and feed vessels. If you have the time and inclination to doctor some of the cases in the beginning of the disease, you will find the use of good tonics and cod liver oil to give fair results in a small proportion of the sick fowls. The chances are about equal, however, that you have had indigestion to contend with instead of real tuberculosis. Birds that are really tuberculous are seldom cured by any treatment. Any good emulsion of cod liver oil mixed with the mash will help nourish the fowl. For a tonic there is nothing better than the arsenate of iron in pill form, 1-50th grain each, twice a day. If the breathing is at all labored, the use of the syrup of hydriodic acid, five drops three times a day in mash, will do much to relieve the condition. The ravages of tuberculosis in the human family are too patent to ignore its gravity in the lower creation, and the poultry fancier will best consult his own interests in studiously avoiding breeding from or purchasing birds of scrofulous or tuberculous taint, and in the event of the disease manifesting itself, to dispose of his stock, thoroughly disinfect his grounds, and after a sufficient interval import fresh and pure blood.

H. A. L.—Please read answer to M. C. K. in this issue.

J. B.—The birds have inflammation of the mucous membrane around the eye, which sometimes follows cold, but is just as frequently the result of some irritating substance, such as wood ashes or fresh lime. Should you have any more affected in the same way, confine them in a shaded coop, as the light hurts their eyes. Put fifteen drops of tincture of euphrasia in a pint of water. Keep it before the birds all the time, removing any other drinking water. Cleanse the eye by bathing; one part of dioxogen to two of water, or any simple antiseptic lotion which you may have in the house. When bathing the eye, see that the nostrils are open and the mouth clean, after which anoint with the following ointment: Half a teaspoonful of boric acid, finely powdered; half a teaspoonful of subnitrate of bismuth, well mixed in a tablespoonful of vaseline.

L. H.—You will find it more satisfactory to deal with breeders who are within easy distance, freight charges on live animals are so very heavy. Chickens should only be hatched in the fall for table use. It is never profitable to carry fall-hatched chicks over for stock.

E. C.—Please read answer to J. B. in this issue.

E. B.—From the description you give of the liver and intestines after death, there is no question that the turkeys were suffering from what is commonly termed blackhead—an unfortunately misleading name, as it is really a liver complaint, which only occasionally affects the color of the head. There is nothing to be done for young turkeys when affected by this disease. Your only course is to try and clear the premises and get old birds into good condition before next spring. As you are a subscriber to COMFORT, you will have had the fall numbers. Refer to them, and you will find advice along these lines.

Clear Out Rats In 3 Nights

"Rough On Rats" rids your premises of all rats and mice in 3 nights. Change the bait you mix with "Rough On Rats"—that's the secret. Rats won't eat the same food that they know killed others. Varying the bait fools them. Druggists and general stores sell "Rough On Rats"—the most economical, surest exterminator. Write for "Ending Rats and Mice." Mailed free to you.

E.S. WELLS Chemist

Jersey City, N. J.

ROUGH ON RATS

BLUSTEIN Pays NEW YORK PRICES for FURS

Trappers and Collectors —this season you cannot afford to take chances. Be careful where you ship. Don't be satisfied with low prices—get more money by shipping to BLUSTEIN in New York—the gateway to the fur markets of the world. Send us a trial shipment and you will be so pleased that you will never ship elsewhere.

Why We Can Pay More Than Others

We pay more for furs than others because we have the best foreign market. We charge no commission, that's another 5% you save. If requested at time of shipment we hold furs separate and advise our best price—if not satisfactory, we return furs at our expense. Write at once for our latest Price List and Shipping Tags. We will place your name on our mailing list so you can keep posted on the New York fur market. Write us at once. Our prices will surprise you.

David Blustein & Bro.
196 W. 27th St. New York City

Skunk—Rats—Raw Furs

Skunk, muskrats—any kind of Raw Furs. We are in a position to pay the top prices of the market, make liberal assortment and immediate returns.

Write for quotations

Don't fail to write us for quotations and market reports. Send name and address today. It means money to you!

References: Any bank in the world.

CHARLES S. PORTER, INC.
121 W. 27th St., New York

"ARROWHEAD" FOUKE TRADE MARK REGIST'D

Fouke Pays Trappers Big Money This Year.

Send for new Fouke book—The Trappers' Partner—written by P. B. Fouke, leader in the fur business in St. Louis for over 30 years. Tells all about Fouke SMOKEM-OUT and Fouke Animal Baits—sure money-makers. Animal lore and sets, how to grade, etc. Send name and address on postal today to FOUKE FUR CO. ST. LOUIS, MO.

Send for "Trappers' Partner" and Fur Price List Service all season FREE.

149 Fouke Bldg. The House That Treats You Right

Lower Trap Prices If you order from FOUKE

Fouke Animal Baits bring 'em from miles around to your traps—$1.00 a can postpaid. 3 cans $2.50.

Fouke Smokem-Out sure drives 'em out of deepest den. Postpaid, with 10 ft. cable and 12 Fouke Smoke Shells, $1.75.

Fur News
Free to Trappers

Complete—Reliable—Up-to-date. Full facts and news about furs, from St. Louis, world's greatest fur market. Written by experts. Also FREE—Illustrated list of TRAPPER'S NECESSITIES. Gives live information. Just send postcard with name and address. And be sure to always ship to the house that pays SPOT CASH, charges no commission and completely satisfies its trapper friends.

PIONEER FUR COMPANY
124-26 N. Main St. St. Louis, Mo. where you always get most for your furs

TRAPPERS GET OUR PRICE LIST

We pay what we quote and do not undergrade. Cash sent you the same day your furs are received and you get highest market price.

YOU GET HONEST GRADING

Get our price list and shipping tags. They are SENT FREE. Write today.

McCULLOUGH & TUMBACH
134 North Main St.,
St. Louis, Mo.

The Quest of Otter Pelts

By Dick Wood

CHAPTER II.

AN UNSUSPECTED FOE.

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

THE trappers decided to spend the following day laying in a supply of wood. It was most too early for trapping, furs not being prime until well past the first of November in most states. Most trappers plan on having a week or two in camp before the season opens. This insures ample time to look over the grounds, blaze trails, gather camp wood, kill bait for the traps and tend other preliminaries of a successful trapping expedition. Also it requires about a week to get the swing of the woods life and adjusted to the change from civilization to the semi-primitive life.

A plentiful supply of wood is one of the necessities for camping in the winter north woods. This the young trappers knew, and their two axes and five-foot crosscut saw were selected for service. They happily found an abundance of dead wood within easy reach of the cabin. The standing trees were cut down and divided into stove lengths. The wood was then split and corded and finally covered over with bark or evergreen boughs. After the first big snow, if not too busy, they would haul it down to the cabin on the toboggan.

Two days of steady sawing and chopping provided several cords of wood. They now cleaned and polished their guns one evening preparatory to a day's hunt on the morrow. While the next day was the opening of the deer season, and each of the trappers expected to fill his license, they did not expect to hear other than their own guns fired. They did hear the distant booming of deer rifles in the early morning, but no one came so far back into the woods. Deer must be killed reasonably close to a means of transportation for the average sportsman's purposes. Of course, a few more of the venturesome hunters take a canoe or guide boat and get back into the woods and kill their game near the water, but it isn't a necessity anywhere in the North Woods.

The trappers now had their wood supply in and the weather indicated it was none too early. The first day of the hunting season was cool and cloudy. The magpies, or whiskyjacks, as the trappers call these birds that predict the weather, were acting very strangely. An old woodsman would instantly have prepared for a big snow.

Fred and Bill left camp in different directions, each with a pocketful of cartridges. They had their own suspicions of a coming snowstorm and didn't want the camp larder to be caught empty. Like clever trappers they were, each stuck a couple of steel traps in his spacious coat pockets. These were to be set around the entrails of the deer they killed and dressed. Such a set would be reasonably sure of getting some furs, perhaps a fox or fisher.

The young trappers still-hunted all the forenoon without success. They circled the ridges well up where the timber was open enough to give them a view for several hundred yards. The deer are accustomed to feeding up to the tops of the ridges and mountains in the mornings. Both boys had hunted deer before and were fairly well acquainted with their habits; and although the country was new to them they were not entirely at a loss. They knew it is an unfailing habit of the deer to lie on the peak of a ridge or the point of a mountain, preferably in the shelter of evergreens, where they can command a view over the country and thus elude any approaching enemy.

At noon the boys met by inadvertence, and while eating their lunch in a hollow talked over a different plan of action. They agreed the deer must be hanging around the swamps as usual just prior to a heavy snowstorm. This fact also strengthened their expectations in regard to weather conditions.

"Bill, I've got the scheme to get our bucks—and we've got to get them today for I opines we will want to get out with the traps after the snowstorm. They're down in the balsam swamps sticking closer than Dick's hatband, waiting for the storm. Now you do the driving and I'll take a stand and get 'em as they go by, unless they give the password, which is silence," outlined Fred.

"Yes, an' you know what'll happen then? Why, they'll just go around in a circle, being able to detect my approach, and easily keep out of sight in the thick balsams. They're foxy like that," objected Bill, who had hunted deer some himself.

"See that tin tea pail of yours? Well, just put a few pebbles in it, close the cover and rattle that. I'll guarantee the deer will come out."

Everything agreed upon, Fred took his stand at the head of the swamp between two ridges, which a deeply-worn trail would indicate was the natural outlet for the deer, and Bill was to wait ten minutes before starting the drive.

The first thing Fred did after reaching his stand was to take note of the direction of the wind and station himself to the leeward. The slightest breeze blowing from the hunter toward the quarry would be fatal to his purpose. Placing himself in a position to command a view across the hollow and bare ground around the point, in case the deer should turn around the opposite side of the ridge, Fred sat silent as the trees around him for half an hour.

At the end of that time he had seen nothing and only heard the distant yelping of Bill's voice, in imitation of the deer hound. He was growing impatient and had about decided the deer were going out elsewhere, when a slight snort attracted his attention. Without moving his body, he cast his eyes toward the direction of the sound and saw a spike-horn buck going up the side of the mountain at right angles to him. It winded him and turned aside.

As soon as possible Fred threw his 30-30 carbine to his shoulder and fired three times in rapid succession. Almost simultaneously he heard the dull roar of Bill's 30-40. Taking up the trail by sight, he soon came upon the deer itself.

Like the experienced woodsman-hunter-trapper he was, Fred immediately dressed the deer. After tying the hind legs together, he bent over a sapling and thus swung up the carcass without assistance and undue exertion. He now started for the swamp, occasionally emitting a whistle so as not to be mistaken by his partner for an animal coming through the brush.

He was much perturbed at Bill's long silence and failure to show upon the trail of the buck lately driven out of the swamp. It hadn't occurred to him that Bill would get an effective shot in the dense balsams. Likely he was shooting to drive or at best had got a fleeting glimpse of a running deer.

"Hey, Deerslayer, how did you sneak up on one?" exclaimed Fred, much surprised to come upon Bill in a dense thicket dressing out a buck.

"Didn't think I was going to leave myself out, did you? This old buck thought he could circle me and then lay low till I passed, but I put one over on him."

It took the boys together only a few minutes to hang up this deer. Then they hurried to camp, knowing the man smell on the carcasses would keep the more destructive animals away, and that they were hung too high for small animals to reach.

Before the trappers reached camp it began to snow in heavy, soft flakes, in flurries at first, but as darkness settled down, in rhythmical regularity. The boys were pleased to have their camp wood prepared and two young bucks hanging up in their outdoor cooler. Now they could get out on the trap line, since the snow indicated fur primeness. Before retiring for the night the boys decided to go to Otter Pond on the morrow and set out the first traps of the season.

Otter Pond glistened like a black diamond in a white setting the morning the two young trappers evaded its shores. The wind had blown the snow off the bushes, which made traveling comfortable; and the snow was a telltale blanket the trappers could not afford to miss. It would disclose the doings of the fur bearers during the latter hours of the night, the time they are mostly out.

Fred guided Bill to a spot where he could rely with certainty on finding otter sign. It was at the mouth of a small stream. Here on his previous visit the otters had been playing around the steep banks and there was no doubt now with snow on the ground, the otters would have a slide at this place.

Sure enough there were numerous otter tracks in the snow at the mouth of the inlet stream; these the boys could see from a distance. But imagine their amazement, upon approaching closer, to find freshly-set traps at the bottom of the slide and in the trails. It took Fred's keen eyes to note this before stepping into one of the traps himself. They had evidently been set earlier in the morning by a skillful trapper.

"Isn't that trapper's luck, back here where we thought we were alone, miles from civilization. Let's rush over to the beaver dam and give that the once over," exclaimed Fred.

They were not greatly surprised to find traps on the dam, set in the same manner as the other traps, and thus the method indicated that one trapper had done all the work.

The boys were greatly disappointed that someone should get ahead of them, particularly a skillful trapper who stood a fair chance of making a complete clean-up. However, apparently he had secured the grounds by legitimate means, as it is a law of trapping that one must actually have traps set or the ground staked to hold them. The possibility of another trapper being in the vicinity never occurred to either of the boys.

The young trappers decded to go back to camp, cook a meal, then get out to Bill's grounds with traps before the trapper beat them there. They had reached a dense balsam swamp, back-tracking over their trail, when a buckskin-clad trapper stepped out in front of them, holding a gun menacingly.

"Old Curley!" exclaimed Fred, under breath.

The boys were taken back by the sudden appearance of the old trapper. What he might do they could only conjecture. Certainly he was not in a very amiable frame of mind.

"Look here, Kids, this ain't a healthy country fer fellers who butt in on a trapper's grounds and take a man's own shack. Gettin' to be a hull-of-a-note when old Curley must be cheated out of his own cabin made with his own hands, and let a couple of kids in to scare the game

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

HE BOLDLY STEPPED PAST BILL AND POSTED HIMSELF IN FRONT OF OLD CURLEY.

HILL BROS. Says—HOLD YOUR FURS

Don't sell a dollar's worth to anyone until you get HILL BROS. Official Fur Price List. No matter what prices others may offer, you cannot be sure you are getting all your furs are worth until you see the extra high prices HILL BROS. are paying. Send for Official Fur Price List today. It will open your eyes to the advantages of shipping to this old reliable house where you are assured correct grading, highest prices, prompt returns and NO COMMISSION CHARGED.

FREE

With our Official Fur Price List, we will also send you our new book, "How to Grade and Trap Furs", complete Catalog of Trappers' Supplies, Game Laws, Shipping Tags, etc. All sent FREE. Write today—get acquainted with HILL BROS.—the house that pays highest prices for all furs. Use coupon or a postal card will do.

MAIL COUPON TODAY

HILL BROS. FUR CO.
306 Hill Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.
Send me FREE Official Fur Price List, "How to Grade and Trap Furs", Game Laws, etc.

Name.....
Town.....
State..... R. F. D.....

BIG FUR Money

Trap for-Ship to Taylor
BEST FOR FIFTY YEARS
FREE BOOK OF TRAPS
—tells all you want to know. Write for it. Quotes lowest prices for traps, bait and other supplies. Send every skin you get to headquarters. Every "Old Timer" deals with—
F. C. TAYLOR FUR COMPANY
685 Fur Exchange ST. LOUIS, MO.

Learn Fur Grading

Make Money Buying Furs For Abraham

Become an expert. Learn the big secret of how to make more money out of every skin you handle. Learn how to grade and value furs—how to buy and sell at a profit. Our Free Book gives you all this information—worth its weight in gold to anyone who handles furs. No book like it ever published before. Real prosperity for smart trappers and dealers that follow our advice, the advice of the Largest Fur House in the world today.

Trappers' Supplies

We carry the largest line of Trappers' Supplies in the World—everything the trapper needs. Write for our price list today. Do business with Abraham Fur Co. and you will get the most satisfactory results. We save you big money on supplies—pay you more money for your furs and teach you how to Grade, Value and Buy Furs from others.

Write us today—sure—it's all free.

Abraham Fur Co.
214 Abraham Bldg. St. Louis, Mo.

FURS

A Towering Monument. Our sixteen story home. 34 years of successfully serving Trappers and Fur Shippers.

BIG DEMAND—SHIP QUICK

To The "WORLD'S LARGEST FUR HOUSE"

Our $2,500,000.00 capital and our branches in every large city of the Globe enable us to pay you MORE MONEY for your Furs.

BETTER Prices Grading Returns

We pay all express and parcel post charges and do not deduct any commission. Our Reference; Your own Bank or Banker.

FREE Guaranteed price list, shipping tags and complete market News. Don't send a single skin anywhere until you get our important information.

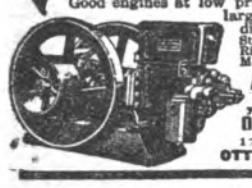
A postcard will do. WRITE TODAY.

ALBERT HERSKOVITS & SON.
103 Herskovits Bldg. 44-60 W. 28 Street NEW YORK CITY
Largest Fur Market in the World.

ALBERT HERSKOVITS & SON

Thousands do business with us
—Spot cash
—Honest grading
—No commission
In business over 20 years. Dept. 100.

Top Fur Prices
You will lose money if you don't get our Price list. Write now.
ROGERS FUR CO. St. Louis



OTTAWA

1½ H-P ENGINE IS Now only $35.50

Other sizes 2 to 22 H-P at proportionally low prices.

90 Days Trial—10 Yr. Guarantee

Good engines at low prices because made in large quantities and sold direct from factory. Stationary, Portable, Saw Rig, Kerosene, Gasoline. Most sizes to choose from.

FREE ENGINE BOOK—Get our low prices before you decide on any engine.

OTTAWA MFG. CO.
1273-A King Street
OTTAWA, - KANSAS

Prices Slashed — Wonderful Feather Bed and Pillows

Sleep on it FREE

Yours to sleep on for 30 nights—a magnificent feather bed! All new live feathers; best tickings; use it as if it were your own. If you're not amazed with the quality and the sensational price, return bed to us. No cost or obligation to you. A daring offer which we defy others to equal.

Bargains in Feather Beds

Prices Guaranteed Lowest in America. Quality finer than you ever dreamed possible. Other factories wonder how we do it. Full particulars in our free book—nothing ever like it—full of astonishing bargains. Send today for Free Book, Samples of Feathers and Ticking. Read about our free test offer and our $2,500 Guarantee Bond. Mail postal now!

Lewis Feather Bed Co., Dept. 1133 Nashville, Tenn.

Feather Beds Delivered To You FREE

Write at once for Free, Big Bargain Book on New Sanitary Feather Beds and Pillows, also special low prices. All feather beds delivered to you express prepaid, for 10 Days Free Trial. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Before you buy, get this free book and sample of feathers. Write us today—now.

AMERICAN FEATHER & PILLOW CO., Dept 10 Nashville, Tenn.

AGENTS: $8.00 A DAY

New 2 in 1 Reversible Raincoat

This new coat of elegant style is finished on both sides. One side rich tan dress coat, other side storm work coat. Two coats for the price of one. Saves $10.00. Sells to professional men, business men, clerks and appeals especially to men for outdoor work.

Positively Guaranteed Waterproof

Popular price. Great Seller. Real money for agents. Haut sold 16 coats in three days. Send for free outfit—big swatch book, style plates and reversible coat to wear and show. Sell other models and dozens of other fabrics to men, women and children. Commission paid same day you write order. We make deliveries. Write for sample. All coats guaranteed water-proof or money back.

PARKER MFG. CO., 117 Storm St., Dayton, Ohio

HAMILTON 22 CAL. RIFLE WITHOUT COST

1000 SHOT ALL STEEL MAGAZINE AIR RIFLE FREE

WE GIVE TO BOYS

Choice of Six Guns (on four easy plans) for selling our Magic Healing Wav-o-Lene at only 25c Box. WE TRUST YOU! Order Six Boxes Today On Postal Card—We send promptly, Prepaid! Easy to Sell—the Healing Ointment needed in every home! Sell at once, return money, as we direct, choosing your Gun according to one of the Plans shown in our Big Premium List. 200 Other Gifts! Or Big Cash Commission! Just for promptness a Free Gift—SO ORDER TODAY

NEW MILITARY RIFLE

WAVERLY SUPPLY CO., Box 202 Monongahela, Pa.

$1.97

GUARANTEED WATCH

To advertise our business, and introduce our bargain price list of High Watches, we will send this elegant guaranteed watch by Parcel Post C. O. D. $1.97 ONLY, nickel silver plated case, stem wind and stem set, genuine American lever movement, fully guaranteed a reliable timekeeper. Give your full P. O. address, box or St. No., and watch will be sent at once. Pay your Postmaster $1.97 and it is yours. Satisfaction guaranteed. Boston Jewelry Co. 89 W. Adams St. B 31, Chicago, Ill.

Wear Absolutely Waterproof Steels

Cost less than leather, wear 3 to 6 times longer, are lighter, easier, stronger. Stop big shoe bills. Eliminate repair bills. Stop foot troubles. Prevent Colds, Rheumatism, Corns, Bunions. Keep feet warm and dry in snow, rain, mud, slush. Never change shape — comfortable always. Free Shoe Book Tells All. Write Today.

N. M. RUTHSTEIN, Pres.

STEEL SOLE SHOE CO., Dept. 44, Racine, Wis.

55 EGGS FROM 57 HENS were received by Mr. C. E. Graham after feeding ARROW EGG TABLETS. They will double your egg supply and prevent cholera. Feed them now while eggs are high.

Don't send a cent. Cut out this adv. and mail to us, giving your name and address, and we will send you two $1.00 boxes ARROW EGG TABLETS. When they arrive, pay the postman $1.00 for one box, the other is yours free of charge.

Feed for 30 days and if not satisfactory, we will refund your money. Write today. ARROW CHEMICAL CO., Rocky Ridge, Maryland.

POULTRY AND PIGEONS FOR PROFIT

Foy's big book tells all about it. Contains many colored plates—an encyclopedia of poultry information, poultry houses, feeding for eggs, etc. Written by a man who knows. Sent for 5 cents. Low prices, fowls and eggs.

FRANK FOY, BOX 6, CLINTON, IOWA.

The Modern Farmer

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 25.)

and show scars where they have broken apart. Keep in a dirt-floored part of the cellar if possible. If stored in bags, see that they do not rest directly upon the floor. Better set them on a few planks raised off the floor to provide an air space below. Better still, spread out on a raised board floor or put them in a shallow layer in a potato bin. Free circulation of air is a big factor in their keeping qualities.

ROOT CROPS.—Carrots, turnips and beets, as well as the less common root crops, all require about the same handling. A temperature only slightly above the freezing point and relative moist air are both necessary if they are to be kept until spring without shrinking, wrinkling and becoming soft and tasteless.

Two general practices are common. The first is to put the vegetables in boxes in lots of a bushel or so in a part of the cellar where the temperature rests at slightly above the freezing point, then cover the boxes with gunny sacks. By sprinkling the bags with a little water from time to time the necessary moisture will be supplied. The other plan is to pack roots in boxes of sand. A little water, just enough to moisten the sand, should be sprinkled over the boxes occasionally. Too much moisture will cause rot or molding.

CABBAGE.—Steady cold does not harm cabbage in storage, but alternate freezing and thawing are very harmful. Cabbage can withstand a freezing temperature, however, and for best results a temperature of about 31 degrees should be maintained. Where they are to be kept in the cellar many gardeners remove the outer leaves and the stem and wrap and tie up in several thicknesses of heavy brown wrapping paper. Though this may seem to be too bothersome a plan, it works very well indeed. Another custom is to bury in boxes of sand, especially if the cellar can be kept cold enough to prevent premature growth. Another less common way is to lay a row or two of heads along the wall with the stems sticking up at a 45-degree angle, then cover the heads with sand and the stem with moist earth. Some farmers hang heads up by the roots from the ceiling but unless the cellar is both cold and moist they are more likely to dry out than if they were buried in sand or wrapped in paper.

ONIONS.—If this crop has been thoroughly dried and cured in the field there should be little trouble in storing it. Select good hard globes, avoid the long-necked ones and those that are soft. Snap off the dried tops an inch or more from the bulb; to cut them shorter induces early sprouting. Store either in slatted fruit crates or half-bushel baskets, though sacks or bushel baskets will do. If the temperature is kept slightly above the freezing point, and if comparatively dry air and sufficient ventilation are supplied, there is little chance of damage.

SQUASH AND PUMPKINS.—These two vegetables are the exceptions that prove the rule, as the old saying goes. They do not keep well in a cold place. For best results they should be placed on shelves not far from the furnace if there is one in the cellar. If not they had better be put in the attic or in a closet or some other out-of-the-way place upstairs. A dry atmosphere and a temperature of around 50 degrees is necessary, and if the air is allowed to become either too moist or too cold they will soon spoil. Fully matured vegetables only should be kept.

Curing Seed Corn

There are still many farmers who seem to think that seed corn taken from the corn crib in the spring "is good enough and a darned sight cheaper," but thanks to the steady spread of knowledge concerning germination of seed and stored-up vitality they are becoming scarcer and scarcer every year. Then there are the vast numbers of farmers who hand pick good seed early in the fall to guarantee early maturity, but who stop before the job is more than half done. They simply hang up the ears under the back porch, under the eaves, or onto the windmill where it will be exposed all winter long to snow and cold and sun and thaw. Why is this a costly practice and one that no good farmer can afford?

In the first place, the sooner seed corn is thoroughly dried the better will be the results obtained when it is planted. Unless all the excess moisture is removed before cold weather it is sure to freeze, and freezing greatly lessens both germination and vitality. There is no commoner explanation of missing hills than poorly cured seed corn, and we all know how we "cuss" when we have to replant. Why, if the crows pull up even a few hills in return for the white grubs they eat, we go right after the shot gun! Then why not prevent missing hills where and when we can? Experiments conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture have shown that yields from poorly cured seed or from crib corn may fall as much as 18 bushels per acre below the yields of the same quality of seed well cured. No farmer can snuff at a loss of 18 bushels to the acre.

For ordinary farm practices the elaborate seed curing house is out of the question. Nor is it needed, though it is more of a necessity than a luxury on the large place. If good ripe ears are brought into a dry, warm place as soon as they are picked, it will take only a short time to dry them out so that there is little excess moisture left. Though the good wife may object, we find few who will not let us keep seed corn in the kitchen near the stove for a short time in the fall. If there is a furnace in the cellar so much the better. It is far better to put up with a little inconvenience for a short time than to find that the seed we plant in the spring is faulty, poor stuff, and that a lot of our hard work must be done over. Worse than that, we may have to buy seed at the spring seed prices, and they are usually quite high, as the farmer who has been "caught" will agree.

Once the corn is dried out thoroughly it will not be so greatly damaged by freezing. Still, it is best to keep it in a place where the temperature never reaches the freezing point. Ideal conditions would be about 50 degrees Far. If there is room in the attic a simple rack may be made out of trays of common chicken fence netting upon which the ears are laid so that no two touch. Another plan is to make "ladders" with wire or string, spacing the ears three inches apart. Still another plan is to take short planks, say four feet long, and drive nails through them at a slight slant upwards. Hang these boards up along the rafters and spike the butts of the ears on the projecting nails.

Once dried, about the only chance of damage is from mice or rats. The house cat that can be induced to make its home in the storage room will do a lot to keep the former within bounds, but few cats are willing to tackle a grown rat. Carefully placed poison will soon rid the place of both mice and rats, but it should not be used in the house where the dead vermin are certain to create a fearful stench between the walls. Here it is better to use small and inexpensive traps.

Remember that only well-cured seed corn will germinate as it should and that it alone can withstand a long wet spring. Poor seed is low in vitality and a source of endless trouble.

Asphyxiation

It is a real mouth-filling word, but one that we all have learned the meaning of, some even at the cost of their lives.

"Beware of the partly-filled silo which has been closed for some time," says Prof. E. B. Hart, Agricultural Chemist of the University of Wisconsin. This is an old warning, yet from the number of deaths we see reported in the daily papers each fall it seems necessary to repeat it.

Fermentation takes place very rapidly, especially in the newly-filled silo. Carbon dioxide, a deadly gas, is given off. This gas is heavier than air and therefore remains close to the surface of the silage unless the silo is open and a free circulation of air allowed. As this gas is colorless and has no marked odor by which its presence may be recognized, it may get in its deadly work before the farmer is aware that anything is wrong. Frequent cases have been reported where a hired man or even some membr of the farmer's family, though standing close to the silo, did not hear a single sound of distress or a cry for help from the man inside.

How can we guard against this great danger? At silo filling time never enter the partly-filled silo until the blower has been turned on for some minutes to circulate the air and drive the heavy gas out. Another safe test for the presence of carbon dioxide in the silo is to lower a lighted lantern in it. At any time it is a good precaution to take a lighted lantern or candle with you when you go into the silo. If gas is present in dangerous quantities the flame will immediately be snuffed out. Where gas is found in the silo it may be removed by opening the doors and creating a draft or circulation of air.

Trade-Mark Farm Names

The United States Patent Office recently approved and published in the Patent Office Gazette a trade-mark covering the name of a farm belonging to an Iowa farmer. Ledru C. Willits, the farmer in whose name the trade-mark was issued, is a breeder of pure-bred hogs, cattle and sheep. The trade-marked name is "Hawkeye."

So far as can be ascertained by the livestock men in the United States Department of Agriculture, Mr. Willits is the first farmer to obtain a trade-mark for his farm. There is nothing in the law to prevent it, but apparently nobody ever thought of it before. If a farmer uses his farm name in his advertising it is well to protect it for his own exclusive use by having it trade-marked. Several states have laws authorizing the registration of farm names by the state authorities, but a trade-mark issued by the U. S. Patent Office protects the user of the farm name both inside and outside the borders of the state in which the farm is located. Widely advertised farm names might well be so protected.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from the eminent specialists and experts of our Agricultural Staff on questions relating to farming, live stock and dairying.

Address Modern Farmer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published

Questions and Answers

ANTS IN TREE TRUNK.—Ants are hollowing out the trunk of my large apple tree. What shall I do for them? W. S. H., Mannington, W. Va.

A.—Locate the ant-hill and destroy the ants by making a few holes in the heap, pouring an ounce or two of bisulphide of carbon into each and then covering with a tarpaulin or canvas to keep in the fumes. Perfectly cleanse the cavity in the tree trunk, scrape away all diseased wood, apply hot pitch to the surfaces and then fill with cement.

PRUNING GOOSEBERRIES.—Should my four-year-old gooseberry bushes be pruned, and if so, how? (2) How should currant bushes be trimmed? (3) Should large apple trees be pruned, and if so, how. (4) How should I treat an apple tree that has had its entire top killed by freezing and has grown up from the ground like a bush? MRS. H. B., South Shore, So. Dak.

A.—Gooseberry bushes must be pruned severely each year. If this is not done they will become clogged with new growth and small fruit and mildew will result. Leave only five or six good strong shoots each year. After stems have borne two or three years remove them immediately after fruit is picked to allow new shoots more room. Fruit of the gooseberry is borne on the last season's wood; therefore an annual growth of new wood must be added to each bush. Burn all stems removed to destroy borers and other pests. Also trim heads occasionally to keep bushes symmetrical in shape. (2) Red currant bushes fruit on wood two or more years old. Therefore it is necessary to have several canes ranging from one, two, three to four years old in the same bush to assure a steady crop each year. After the fourth year, canes begin to fail so it is best to remove all four-year-old wood after it has borne a crop. Burn all wood removed to destroy insect enemies such as borers. Each year leave two to four of the best shoots that spring from the stool and cut out all other inferior shoots and excess wood to give the ones selected a good chance to grow. In this manner new growth is added to the bush each season and the old worn-out stems are removed. Nothing more in the line of pruning is needed for currant bushes except to trim up the tops occasionally when they grow too tall or straggling. (3) Apple trees require pruning from time to time, but treatment varies with age and variety. For detailed instructions write for a bulletin on this subject to the Horticultural Department of your State Agricultural College. The bulletin will be mailed you free. (4) Regarding the apple tree that was frozen and that has grown up from the roots, there is only one thing to do and that is to grub it out. The new shoots are growing from the old root upon which the tree had been grafted. It is unlikely that these shoots would ever develop into desirable trees bearing good fruit.

POTATO SCAB.—Kindly tell me what is the cause of our potatoes getting scabby. We always raised good, smooth potatoes until we bought some manure from a livery stable, and the last three years we have planted rye and used agricultural lime. The Early Ohios seem to be worse affected than the Early Rose.

MRS. F. K., Elm Grove, W. Va.

A.—Several varieties of potato scab are quite common. These may be introduced by infected seed potatoes; also the addition of stable manure, lime or wood ashes tend to increase the disease. No doubt your crop was infected by the new seed you mention, and the livery-stable manure provided ideal conditions for extensive development. The lime used may also have had some influence on the spread and development of the disease. Potato scab may best be prevented by treating seed stock by submerging in a solution of one pint of formaldehyde to 30 gallons of water, then planting next day. Avoid the use of fresh horse manure and lime on land to be put into potatoes. Better plant on land which has not been planted to this crop for some time. Best results are obtained by planting where a good stand of red clover has been turned under. Early potatoes are less likely to be damaged by scab than are the late ones on account of the fact that scab has not had time to develop to the same extent when they are dug.

Shade trees and ornamental shrubs in the United States represent a value of one billion dollars, according to the estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture.

A NEW OIL LAMP FREE

Burns 94% Air

M. A. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., the inventor of a wonderful new oil lamp that burns 94% air and beats gas or electricity, is offering to give one free to the first user in each locality who will help introduce it. Write him for particulars. Agents wanted.—Advertisement.

PROTECT YOUR HOME and Earnings

With this 25 Cal. regulation blue steel AUTOMATIC REVOLVER Regular Price $22.50 $9.75 OUR PRICE While they last

Keep one of these safety brand new revolvers in your home and be fully protected against burglars, thieves and hold-up men. It's a terrible fright to wake up in the night—hear noises down stairs or in the next room—and realize your neglect has left you wholly UNPROTECTED.

Buy one of these revolvers and be always fully protected. Handsome blue steel, gunmetal finish. HAS DOUBLE SAFETY and is practically "fool-proof" against accidents. Perfect grip, accurate aim. Rifled barrel, hard rubber, checkered grips, safety lever. Holds 7 cartridges. Small, compact, lies flat and will not bulge out pocket. Shoots the famous Colt Auto Cartridges.

SEND NO MONEY

Order today. Just send your name and address and say which revolver you want. No. 322 is 25 calibre, 7 shot. Regular price $22.50. Our price..... $9.75

No. 722 is larger size, 32 calibre military model, 10 shot, extra magazine FREE. Regular price $25.00. Our special price only $12

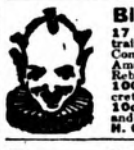
Don't wait. Order this bargain today. Write clearly your name, address and the Number of the Revolver you want to order. Send no cash. We ship by return mail. Pay Postman on arrival, our price, plus postage. Send for Free Catalogue.

Paramount Trading Co.
34 West 28th St., New York City

Sloan's Always Relieves Your Rheumatism

Sloan's has been the old standby for all sorts of external aches and pains resulting from weather exposure, rheumatism, neuralgia, sprains and strains, lame back and over-worked muscles. Penetrates without rubbing.

At all druggists, 35c, 70c, $1.40



Keep it handy

Sloan's Liniment Pain's enemy

BIG VALUE for 10 Cts.

6 Songs, words and music; 25 Pictures Pretty Girls; 40 Ways to Make Money; 1 Joke Book; 1 Book on Love; 1 Magic Book; 1 Book Letter Writing; 1 Dream Book and Fortune Teller; 1 Cook Book; 1 Base Ball Book, gives rules for games; 1 Toy Maker Book; Language of Flowers; 1 Morse Telegraph Alphabet; 12 Chemical Experiments; Many Age Table; Great North Pole Game; 100 Conundrums; 3 Puzzles; 12 Games; 30 Verses for Autograph Albums. All the above by mail for 10 cts. and 2 cts. postage. ROYAL SALES CO., Box 423, South Norwalk, Conn.

Big Premium Budget 10c

17 Popular Songs with Music, 25 Portraits, Actresses, Presidents of U. S., 14 Complete Stories, 63 Magic Tricks, 24 Amusing Experiments, 18 Puzzles, 22 Rebuses, 60 Parlor Games, 150 Riddles and Conundrums, 100 Jokes and Funny Readings, 60 Money-Making Secrets, 84 Album Verses, Dictionary of Dreams. Send us 10c, and we will send all the above, and Big Novelty and Jewelry Catalogue. Add 2 cents for postage. H. C. LORCH, Dept. C-7, GREENLAWN, N. Y.

Box Of Initial Stationery

Latest Style Monogram

IT is now the height of fashion and evidence of the very best taste to use stationery with your own monogram initial or "crest" on it. In this offer we give you two dozen sheets white linen stationery 10½x6¼ inches in size, each sheet beautifully embossed in colors with any monogram initial you desire and two dozen envelopes. Just think how nice it will be when writing to your friends to have your own letter crest monogram initial embossed in colors on this high-grade fine quality stationery. Remember you get one full quire of choice paper and twenty-four envelopes in this complete writer's outfit. Don't hesitate to send for this premium today because you will surely be delighted with it.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you a box of this Initial Stationery free by parcel post, prepaid. When ordering be sure to specify what monogram initial you want. Reward No. 9482.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

WANTED

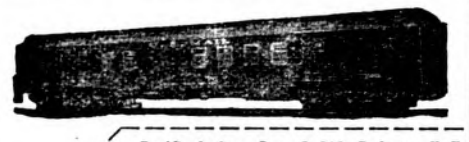
Railway Mail Clerks

$1600 to $2300 Year.

Hundreds Needed

MEN—BOYS OVER 16

SHOULD WRITE IMMEDIATELY



Steady work

No Layoffs

Paid Vacations

Common education sufficient.

Send coupon today—SURE

COUPON

Franklin Institute, Dept. S 212, Rochester, N. Y.

Sirs: Send me, without charge, (1) sample Railway Mail Clerk Examination questions; (2) Schedule showing places of all coming U. S. Government examinations; (3) list of many Government jobs now open.

Name .....

Address .....

No More Club Foot

Seven-year-old Albert Albin's Club Foot was so straight that he surprised everybody when he came home from McLain Sanitarium. His parents write:

Albert's foot is in good shape. He is walking on two good feet. We are certainly proud of him and also the McLain Sanitarium. You certainly do great work. Everybody says it is more than they expected to see.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Albin,
235 Milton St., Rensselaer, Ind.

For Crippled Children

The McLain Sanitarium is a thoroughly equipped private institution devoted exclusively to the treatment of Club Feet, Infantile Paralysis, Spinal Disease and Deformities, Wry Neck, Hip Disease, Diseases of the Joints, especially as found in children and young adults. Our book, "Deformities and Paralysis," also "Book of References" sent free.

L. C. McLAIN ORTHOPEDIC SANITARIUM
990 Aubert Ave. St. Louis, Mo.

They Talk and Walk

WORLD'S MOST WONDERFUL DOLL

Order direct from manufacturer—save the dealer's profit. Write us today for agents' plan and secure an American Beauty Doll. Use it yourself or for a sample. Develop a profitable, seasonable business. All your neighbors and friends will buy dolls this Christmas—secure this business with this wonderful walking and talking doll. Doll guaranteed to give satisfaction. Unbreakable, light weight, 22" high. Regular retail price $12.00

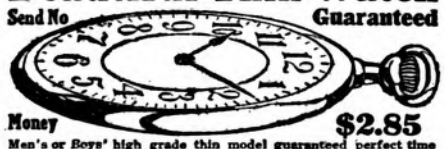
Direct factory price $7.50. Special Agency Offer.

When ordering, enclose Money Order or certified check.

AMERICAN BEAUTY DOLL COMPANY, Inc.
DEPT. 152, 181 CHESTNUT STREET, NEWARK, N. J.

ARMY OVERCOATS $6

Reclaimed by army, first-class condition, olive drab, knee length, heavy overcoats. Sizes 34 to 42 breast.



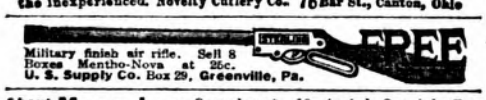
BLANKETS, olive drab army, pieced, 68x84, 4 pounds, slightly soiled $3.50

Money back if not satisfied. Send money order or we will send parcel post C. O. D.

HARDING'S ARMY STORE
Established 21 years
22 School St., Boston, 9, Mass. Dept. A8

Beautiful Thin Watch

Send No Money — Guaranteed



$2.85

Men's or Boys' high grade thin model guaranteed perfect time keeper, only $2.85. Popular 16 size, solid silveroid thin model case. Open face, stem wind and set. High-grade guaranteed movement. FREE—Elegant vest chain and knife given absolutely free with each watch ordered. SEND NO MONEY—simply pay postman $2.85 on arrival and the watch, knife and chain is yours.

UNIVERSAL WATCH CO., 533 S. Peoria St., Dept. 11, Chicago, Ill.

Sales Agents wanted in every county to give all or spare time. Positions worth $750 to $1,500 yearly. We train the inexperienced. Novelty Cutlery Co. 76 Bar St., Canton, Ohio

Military finish air rifle. Sell 8 Boxes Mentho-Nova at 25c. FREE
U. S. Supply Co. Box 29, Greenville, Pa.

About 60 Magazines Samples, etc., 10c (coin). Special offers for starting mail order business, name collecting or circular mailing bureau. Rex Pub. Co., Wichita Falls, Tex.

MONEY Made quickly by smart men. Artol Co., 115 Nassau St., N. Y.

CARDS, Dice, Magic Goods, Novelties, Catalog Free. D. M. SMYTHE Co., Newark, Mo.

BE a popular entertainer. Memorize my six special tricks. Easy. Effective. Dime. V. M. Norr, 1819G St., Washington

MAKE MONEY SELLING GLASSES
Prescriptions filled — Broken lenses duplicated.
Send for Catalog. COULTER OPTICAL CO., Dept. B, Chicago

Florida Oranges Bushel size box, $4.50 express paid. J. R. Taylor, P. O. Box 661, Tampa, Florida

Play the Hawaiian Guitar
Just Like the Hawaiians!

Our method of teaching is so simple, plain and easy that you begin on a piece with your first lesson. In half an hour you can play it! We have reduced the necessary motions you learn to only four—and you acquire these in a few minutes. Then it is only a matter of practice to acquire the weird, fascinating tremolos, staccatos, slurs and other effects that make this instrument so delightful. The Hawaiian Guitar plays any kind of music, both the melody and the accompaniment.

Our complete course of 52 lessons includes FREE a beautiful Hawaiian Guitar, all the necessary picks and steel bar and 52 pieces of music. Special arrangements for lessons if you have your own guitar. "This makes a splendid Christmas Gift."

Send Coupon NOW
Get Full Particulars FREE

First Hawaiian Conservatory of Music, Inc.
233 Broadway, Woolworth Bldg., New York
I am interested in the HAWAIIAN GUITAR. Please send complete information, special price offer, etc., etc.

Name .....
Address .....
Town ..... County ..... State .....
Print Name and Address Clearly E. E.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

Through the columns of this department free information pertaining to Etiquette, Personal Appearance and kindred subjects will be given in answer to questions by our subscribers, but not more than two questions the same month by any one subscriber. Address Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and give your own full name and address. Name will not be published.

R. E. B., Prospect, Va.—Cantaloupe should be served well-chilled from the cellar or ice-box. The melons are cut in half, the seeds removed, and a half melon is placed before each guest. A small piece of ice may be placed in the center of each half, although this may be omitted if the fruit is thoroughly chilled. Cantaloupe is eaten with a spoon, and salt or powdered sugar is added at the time of eating, according to the taste of the guest. (2) There is no set reply needed when a young man thanks you for a dance; a smile is sufficient response, and you can continue any conversation regarding the music, dance, etc.

GRAY EYES, Hartsville, Tenn.—A girl may acknowledge the "I beg your pardon" or the "pardon me" of a stranger by bowing slightly with no further sign of recognition. (2) You may safely omit to reply to any such remark of "how are you?" made at the moment of an introduction, and your best course would be to acknowledge the presentation by a bow, a smile and a simple "How do you do?" You may extend your hand if you prefer, or wish to appear particularly cordial.

JIMMIE, Allenwood, Pa.—As a guest at any sort of a dinner, you should wait until your hostess has indicated where you are to sit. (2) At an informal meal there is no rule as to which direction a dish should be passed. The best way would seem to be to continue the dish on the course by which it reached you. This is purely a matter of convenience and common sense.

SUNSHINE MARY, Ill.—Unless it is arranged in such a manner as to inconvenience her, a bride need not remove her veil while dancing. (2) The wedding ring is worn on the third finger of the left hand, counting from the index finger.

M. S. J., Oldfield, W. Va.—A man of thirty is not necessarily too old to pay serious attention to a girl of seventeen, but if you do not care for him and have refused to marry him, we certainly advise that you discontinue "going" with him "just to pass the time." There are much better uses than this to which time can be put, and how about some other more satisfactory suitor whom your "going" with this refused thirty-year-old suitor may be keeping out of the running? Consult your parents and have this man sent about his business if his attentions are undesirable to you.

EX-SOLDIER'S BRIDE-TO-BE, Gregory, S. D.—We answer the most important of your questions—whose number exceeds the rules of this column: Because of the nature of this double wedding of your sister and yourself, the invitations and announcements need not be made separately and can be included in one. (2) A bride retains her complete costume until after the wedding breakfast. During the ceremony, the hand upon which the ring is to be placed may have the glove turned back beforehand, or the glove finger may be slit before the glove is to be put on. We think it best that your sister and yourself should wear bridal costumes as much alike as possible. You have COMFORT'S best wishes for your happiness.

F. M. C., Imler, Pa.—If this red-headed girl cares more about "having a good time" than she does about receiving your honest attentions, we don't quite know what you can do except to strive to make her see the error of her course, and the wrong influence of the leading of this girl friend. You will never do this by swearing or losing your temper, as you say you have done, and for which you will now have to apologize in order to regain the influence you have foolishly thrown away. We advise you to pay little heed to what this girl is "said to have said" to this or that cousin. What should only interest you is what she says to you and if she means what she says. We certainly cannot tell you if she loves you, but it's a sure thing that she won't if your method of keeping her affection is to use the language you quote to us in your letter. Do not try any so-called "love powders" (they are worthless fakes, or possibly dangerous), and do not seek her father's aid in your complaint against her conduct. That you suggest this last course shows that you have much to learn before you understand the ways of a maid.

SUBSCRIBER, Weiser, Idaho.—You may excuse yourself to this man with whom you do not wish to dance by saying that you are tired, or that you have promised the dance to someone else—if you are sure that you can arrange the last statement to be true.

N. W., Grafton, Ill.—Yes; low shoes worn with stockings of wool will be in as much favor this winter as they were a year ago. It is a sensible fashion.

B. B., Albert, Texas.—For a boy to wink at a girl is a silly form of ill manners, and a girl should never endorse the error by winking back.

M. H. L., Russell, N. Y.—We strongly advise you to continue your education by a high school course, or else to take some business college or commercial course if you are really desirous of doing work outside of your own home. (2) There is no reason in the world why you should not accept the renewed friendly advances of this young man. There is no question of "coming between another couple." This is the young man's lookout. His is the responsibility to this other girl, if there is any such responsibility involved. If you like him, admit this to yourself and receive his attentions in this spirit.

ANXIOUS, Constantia, N. Y.—No matter how large for her age a girl of thirteen may be, she is sure to be far too small in years to even consider "paying any attention to boys," or having them pay attention to her. Stick to your school books and let boys wait a while. There will always be plenty of young fellows looking for pretty girls, but there is only one time when you can get the education without which your life is sure to be sadly handicapped. And take no further time from your classes to write letters to sailor friends.

BLUE EYES, Indiana.—Your questions are in number far beyond the rules stated at the head of this column. The best man carries the ring and hands it to the groom at the proper time during the ceremony. This time is indicated by the words of the marriage service. (2) Any stationer can arrange for the engraving of your wedding invitations and announcements and can show you the proper forms which we have not space to reproduce here. Wedding announcements are mailed immediately following the ceremony. Immediately in this case meaning perhaps the day after.

V. B., Albert, Texas.—We have no knowledge of the rules or methods of play in the game you mention, and cannot therefore tell you how it might affect the deportment of automobiling. A safe way is to have a chaperon along who can pass on the propriety of any car-riding episodes.

SHORTEY, Rifle, Colo.—We don't quite see why these "high school boys" have any right to dictate the selection of your friends or guide your conduct. If your mother approves of your friendship with this unpopular boy, there is no reason why it might not continue. But unless you are ready to consider this boy as a prospective fiance, you should be careful how you receive his attentions, and should guard against your "good influence" and reforming instinct drawing you into a genuine love affair with someone unworthy perhaps of your affection. For we have little faith in the plan of marrying a man to reform him, and the picture you have perhaps unconsciously drawn of this boy does not make us think he would be the best sort of a husband. It is not his fault that he was started wrong, but unfortunately the effect of early environment is often too lasting. Your letter is a sensible one, however, and we believe your own judgment will guide you aright.

LONELY, Cawood, Ky.—You ask us what you had better do, but you more justly should have asked what should be done to you: a girl who at twelve promised to marry a boy with whom, now she is fourteen, she is thinking of eloping! No wonder your parents are objecting. They should be taking far more strenuous action than this with a slipper or hairbrush. Consider for a moment how foolish you are acting and how you must be worrying your parents and your best friends. Become engaged to your schoolbooks for the next three years at least, after which you will perhaps know enough to be able to look back and feel ashamed of your present silly conduct and questions.

N. P., Phila, Miss.—The questions you said you were asking were not with your letter. If you will repeat your inquiries, we shall be glad to answer in this column.

Missing Relatives and Friends

For the convenience of its subscribers, COMFORT reopens the "Missing Relatives' and Friends' column.

To the readers of COMFORT is extended the privilege of inserting three-line notices in this column if they will secure only one new yearly subscriber to COMFORT at 50c. If you wish to find a missing relative or friend you can insert a three-line notice containing not over 22 words in this column by securing only one new subscription at 50c. If a longer notice is required send one 50c subscription for each additional seven words.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Mearl Peed, last heard of in California, please notify his grandfather, J. L. Peed, R. R. 2, Goodman, Mo.

Edna Hall, formerly Edna Southworth, Westover, Texas, wants to know of Frank Mitchell, last heard of in Lonoke County, Ark.

Ted Randolph would like to know the whereabouts of his mother, Fanny Turner, last heard of at Ada, Ohio. Address, Rohana H. Piercy, Vici, Okla. Star Route.

Eva Gipe, Ft. Morgan, Colo., would like to find her sister, Mrs. Geo. Brown, last heard from in Seattle, Wash., 1914. Any information would be gladly received.

Anyone knowing the address of Mary C. Belcher, please write to Box 25, Niota, Ill.

Anyone knowing of Claude Crowl, missing Christmas, 1919. Age 21, dark eyes and hair. Last heard of, Chester, Pa. Please notify his mother, Mrs. Thos. Crowl, Richwood, W. Va.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Mrs. Katie E. Nash and son, Earl Nash, last heard of in Detroit, Mich., please write to Mrs. Frank Ellsworth, Gray, Ky.

Mrs. Anserena Jensen, Crivitz, Wisc., wants to hear from her sister, Mrs. Hannah Balreke, Banard, Kans. Write to her niece, Mrs. Alma Hamblen, Crivitz, Wisc.

Wanted, information of Luther L. Davis, last heard of in El Paso, Texas. Mrs. R. R. Davis, Rockingham, Box 16, R. R. 5, N. C.

Anyone knowing Mike Ganly, send his address to Mike Hughes, Chief of Police, Chicago, Ill.

Do You Need Extra Money?

If you need the extra money which forms the margin between mere existence and comfortable living, the Gearhart Knitter and our home money-making plan is for you. Read it.

Make woolen socks—our standard All-Wear brand—for us on the Gearhart Knitter, a wonderful and simply operated machine with which you can make woolen hosiery with remarkable ease and quickness. We supply the yarn, you do the knitting, and we guarantee you a definite and substantial rate just for knitting, with additional profits as the market affords when sold.

Here is the best opportunity we know of to make money in the privacy of your own home. With your own working hours and the complete assurance of a regular income. You need no experience whatsoever as a knitter. We gladly give you all the instructions you need, and furnish all the yarn. Knit for your family, and for neighbors, friends, and nearby stores at excellent profits.

Take advantage of this opportunity now. Begin making money at once with this pleasant home occupation which provides regular or spare time profits, as you choose.

Send today for all particulars, free samples of knitting, and our Profit Guide Book.

Gearhart Knitting Machine Co., Inc.
Dept. CO626 CLEARFIELD, PA.

GEARHART KNITTING MACHINE CO., Inc.
Dept. CO626, Clearfield, Penna.

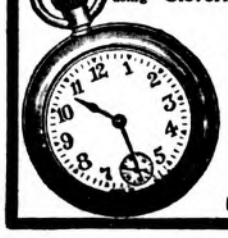
Please send me my copy of the free Profit Guide Book, Knitting samples and full particulars about making money at home with the Gearhart Standard Knitter.

Name .....Address .....

When Meals Disagree

and you experience an acid, sour condition due to indigestion or dyspepsia, there is prompt relief in

STUART'S Dyspepsia Tablets



They neutralize the acidity by giving the stomach the alkaline effect, the same as when in normal condition.

As a first aid in stomach distress these tablets are highly recommended by many physicians.

They are sold by druggists everywhere at 60 cents a box.

WATCH, CHAIN AND TWO RINGS

as premiums—send no money—simply name and address—merely give away FREE 12 Beautiful Art Pictures with 12 Boxes of our famous White Cloverine, which you sell at 25c each. We will send you this Genuine American Watch, also Chain and two Gold Shell Rings, according to offer in our Premium Catalog which you receive with the Cloverine. Millions are using Cloverine.

OR LADIES! YOU CAN ALSO EARN A BEAUTIFUL DINNER SET
SIX LACE CURTAINS

and many other beautiful premiums. Our plan is the easiest and absolutely square. Write quick—Pictures and Cloverine sent promptly, post-paid. Be first in your town.

THE WILSON CHEMICAL CO.,
BIG CASH COMMISSION TO AGENTS Dept. M. 102, Tyrone, Pa.

We Want Your Skunk!

Highest Spot Cash Prices!

Ship us your Skunk, Muskrat, Mink, Coon, Fox, Civet Cat—all furs right through the season. For 40 years FUNSTEN grading has brought back biggest checks to trappers. Ship to FUNSTEN, the World's Largest Fur House.

FREE BOOK—How To Grade Furs!

Learn how expert grading is done—why some furs bring more than others—how to handle furs to make most money. Also Trapping Secrets, Game Laws, list of Trappers' Supplies. Book sent FREE. Write!

FUNSTEN ANIMAL BAIT

Double your catch! Just a few drops to a set. Bottle lasts all season. Different Bait for each kind of animal. State kind wanted. Guaranteed $1.00 Per can 3 cans for $2.50 postpaid

SHIP TO

FUNSTEN

Funsten Bros. & Co., 322 Funsten Bldg., ST. LOUIS, MO.

How To Get Trappers' Supplies FREE!

Send me your name and address today for our Free Special Plan. Shows you how to get all or a large part of your trapping supplies, Guns, Traps, Baits, etc., Absolutely Free. Big fur season ahead! Splendid money trapping this year. Get ready.

FREE Trappers Exchange

Get your name on Free subscription list of "Trappers' Exchange," our magazine for trappers—greatest published. Comes to you monthly FREE. Contains all secrets of successful trapping. Send today.

E.W. BIGGS & CO. 302 Biggs Bldg. Kansas City, Mo.

BIGGS

SKUNK

We pay highest cash prices for all staple furs—Skunk, Mink, Muskrat, Raccoon, Red Fox. Fancy furs a specialty, including Silver and Cross Fox, Fisher, Marten, etc. Est. 1870. Our continued prompt returns and liberal policy are now bringing us shipments from all North America, Alaska to Mexico. Send for free Price List. Address

M. J. Jewett & Sons, Redwood, N. Y. Dept. 5.

INNER TUBE FREE

6,000 Miles Guaranteed

SEND NO MONEY

Here is the greatest tire offer ever made. Never before such low prices. Brand new Inner Tube given Free with every one of our special reconstructed tires guaranteed for 6,000 miles. We ship at once on approval. Pay only when convinced.

Inner Tube FREE

Less Than ½ Price

30x3	$6.15	32x4½	$9.10
30x3½	6.75	33x4½	9.60
32x3½	7.10	34x4½	10.25
31x4	7.35	35x4½	10.75
32x4	7.95	36x4½	11.50
33x4	8.25	35x5	11.95
34x4	8.75	37x5	12.50

Also Free Reliner with each Tire

Write Today No money now—just your name and number of tires wanted. Pay on arrival. Examine and judge for yourself. If not satisfied return at our expense and your money immediately refunded. Be sure to state size and whether clincher or straight side. Don't delay—send now. Immediate shipment.

Seven Ply Tire Co., 115 E. 29th St., Dept. 234 Chicago

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

You can make from $1 to $2 an hour writing show cards in your spare time, quickly and easily learned by our new simple method. No canvassing or soliciting. We sell your work and pay you cash each week. Full particulars and booklet free. Write today.

AMERICAN SHOW CARD SCHOOL
238 Ryrie Building TORONTO, CANADA

Learn Autos & Tractors Earn $100 to $400 Per Month

Qualify right away for a good paying job and bright future in the Auto and Tractor field. At our great school, under expert instruction, you can learn to operate, adjust and repair all makes of Autos, Tractors, Trucks and Gas Engines, including complete automotive electricity. Low tuition now. Work with actual tools. Write at once for particulars.

FREE A fine kit of tools given to everyone who enrolls now. Send for free book. Get full information.

MILWAUKEE MOTOR SCHOOL
Dept. 1611, 555 Downer Ave., Milwaukee

Big Powerful Bell Shape Lens GIVEN FLASH LIGHT

Splendid Big Bell Flash Light double-cell battery mazda lamp. Complete for selling only 12 boxes Mentho-Nova. Sell at 25c, return $3.00 and flashlight is yours. Order today. Sharp-O Clutch Pencil Free for promptness.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. 164, Greenville, Pa.

FREE WRIST WATCH & RING

Guaranteed Timekeeper

We positively give this Genuine Stylish Wrist Watch & Handsome Ring for selling only 25 & 12 beautiful Art and Religious pictures at 10c. Order today. You can't fail.

It's easy our way

GAIR MFG. CO. 1926 Sunnyside Dept. 201 CHICAGO

Boys and Girls

Earn Easy Christmas Money

Send for 25 packages, each containing 48 Xmas cards, tags, seals, stickers, etc. Sell for 10c pkg. Send us $1.50, keep $1.00 yourself. We trust you. Many earned $5 last year. Order 25 NOW.

New England Paper Co., Mill M, Barton, Vermont

The Quest of the Otter Pelts

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 27.)

out of the country. Don't your mammies look after ye? By gad, I will; I'll learn ye a think or two if you hang around old Curley's place. Don't ye know this country from Pelcher to Racquette belongs to me? I've held it fer twenty years and d—— if I'll let a couple of young uns run me out 'cause I'm shedding the hair on the top of my head. Get outta here, outta the woods; and if ye ain't outta my camp by dark, so I can come in, I'll burn it down on the both of ye," grimaced and yelled the irate old trapper.

By this time Curley had worked himself up to a heated state of animation and flourished his battered old rifle around in careless abandon of objects it covered, and the possibility of accidental discharge. Both boys were taken a-back at such an outburst of rage for which there was no due cause. In fact, Bill showed decided nervousness and wished himself out of the woods and back on his farm-land trapping grounds. Not so with Fred, who knew the nature of isolated woods trappers and what to expect of them, and was himself easy to antagonize. He boldly stepped past Bill and posted himself in front of Curley.

"Look here, Curley—and hold that gun with the muzzle up while you're at it or I'll get careless with mine. Bill's right behind me, too, with a cocked carbine; and if your gun should go off and hit one of us, the other will let the light into your inwards. You can't get us both.

"Now we fixed up your old camp because we thought you were not coming back again. We wouldn't have come into these woods if we'd known you were here. But now that we are here, we are not going back to Morehouseville and let them guy us because a misguided sixty-year-old Old Curley ran us out. We'll get out of your camp and you'll give us time to take all our stuff out if one of us has to hold a gun on you. And until I see your papers I'll hold the state owns this land and I have as much of a right here as you. This is not Hudson's Bay country. You can't scare us out. You couldn't scare nothing, nowhow, but crows in our cornfield. Since you're such a bluff, we'll show you we have as much right to the furs in these woods as you, and we're going to get 'em."

Fred showed himself capable of getting angry, too, to the point where he wasn't mindful of the English he was taught in high school. Curley was quite taken back by the boy's pluck and "nerve" and sneakingly replied he'd give them time to get their plunder out, then glided off into the snow-laden evergreens without another word.

"Say, Fred, you certainly laid the law down to the old trapper. Aren't you afraid he will shoot us in the back from the bushes?"

"No, he's too big a coward. I know his kind. Dad has had all kinds of experiences with such men who come into his lumber camps. He said Curley once came down and hung around camp, eating everything in sight for two weeks. Dad didn't ask him to pay for his board, but one day decided to send Curley out to kill a deer for a change in the larder. Curley got a deer in sight of camp and the company horses hauled it into camp. Would you believe it, Curley wanted to charge the 'Old Man' ten dollars for shooting the deer, and after coming and going to the cook's shanty as he pleased. Dad's got no patience with that sort of humanity, so he showed old Curley the woods and told him to beat it. Of course, Curley don't know me or he'd have it in for us worse than ever. We needn't fear anything from Curley in the open. His method is to burn down camps when the owners are away, or steal traps and furs, and such sneaking tricks."

Fred was peculiarly fitted for wilderness trapping in all its strenuous phases. He could cope with the cunning of the fisher and baffle the mean pranks of outlaw trappers. In a showdown he could hold his own in a free-for-all fight, being a husky farm lad of near six feet and carrying one hundred and seventy pounds of farm-hardened muscle and bone.

"Here's where my foresight in bringing a tent along comes in handy," Fred explained. "I thought one of us might want to move onto new grounds before spring, and a tent could be set up quicker than the time necessary to build a cabin. We'll just load up the toboggan and while I guard the camp, you can take the outfit over to Pelcher Lake; you know the way. I wouldn't trust that skunk now; he is apt to come in and steal our things if both leave the cabin."

The boys were able to get their equipment out of the camp before dark, including a couple of loads of wood, to start them off in their new location. The rest they piled up and set fire to, though, after an argument, Bill prevailed upon Fred to leave their roofing on the camp. Also the window panes they had brought in from the "outside." Fred was keenly in favor of leaving the camp in its original state of condition.

The tent was an eight by ten wall pattern, with a ground cloth. The boys set it up by lantern light. First they cleared the snow off a ten by twelve spot, then staked the tent down. Next they built them a bunk on the floor with some boards, and filled it full of balsam boughs which had been shaken free of snow. They spread their canvas sheet, quilts and blankets down and had a warm bed.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Wild animals know where they can find protection, says a United States Department of Agriculture circular on the fur industry. In places where there are game sanctuaries, wild creatures hasten to them at the beginning of every open hunting season.

VETERINARY INFORMATION

Subscribers are invited to write to this department asking for any information desired relative to the treatment of animal troubles. Questions will be answered in these columns free by an eminent veterinarian. Describe the trouble fully, sign full name and give your address; direct all correspondence to the Veterinary Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address, but we will print only initials if so requested.

Those Pesky Warts

SOME people have the impression that warts are contagious, or "catching," but we have no evidence to corroborate that belief. Neither is there anything mysterious or superstitious about the bothersome things. They merely indicate an overnutrition of the skin, the cause of which is unknown; but in some instances, as when they form in masses on the teats, bruising of the skin possibly may be the cause. Young cattle are most affected and we also frequently see the muzzle of a colt or dog covered with slim warts. The similar projecting bodies seen upon the lining membrane of the cheeks in cattle are not warts but papillæ placed there by the Creator to help the cow keep the feed in her mouth when chewing her cud. Some owners have written us that they snipped these supposed warts off with scissors when they found cows sick, yet the treatment "did the beasts no good". Of course not! but it did them a lot of harm and one should study his animals to recognize what things are natural that they may not be mistaken for unnatural things which should be removed. Warts are a simple affair, as a general rule, and therefore need not cause alarm. They tend to disappear of themselves as cattle grow, but may easily be removed if thought best. That certainly is the case when numbers of them on the teats interfere with milking and even make the parts so sore that milk is "held up," sours, curdles and tends to cause mischievous garget. Snip off with scissors warts on the teats that have slim necks. Remove a few at a time and then swab the wounds with tincture of iodin, or, if the cow is dry, coat the parts with pine tar. We have several new treatments for warts, however, which possibly may obviate the necessity of using scissors. One is to coat the affected parts of the teats with collodion in which salicylic acid has been dissolved. Use a saturated solution, but not where there is an open flame or lighted pipe, cigar or cigarette; but smokers of such things should be kept out of the barn, on general principles! The salicylic acid solution is also excellent for the hard, callous or warty growths which form at the tips of the teats and are probably caused by constant bruising of the parts with the butt of the hand when milking. Another new application for warts on the teats is a thick paste of salt, sulphur and cold-pressed castor oil. It is a good one, too, and some like it better than the plan of soaking the teats twice daily in hot water containing all the bicarbonate of soda it will dissolve. A new treatment for blood warts on colts or horses is a paste of salt and yolk of egg well rubbed in. Repeat the application of these mixtures as often as found necessary. Large warts on cattle may at once be twisted off; then rub in pine tar with a hard brush. Warts on the muzzle disappear after a time if rubbed daily with castor oil. Where a wart seems to be cancerous, especially those of the lips, apply Fowler's solution of arsenic twice a day.

SALIVATION.—I have a cow that was taken sick last spring. She was in good condition, giving a fine flow of milk. She gradually stopped eating, and swelled under her jaw. In three weeks she failed from six gallons a day to two quarts. She was on green feed, mostly alfalfa, all day and had good hay at night. Sometimes she eats as though it hurt her to move her jaw. I have two more coming down the same way. F. B.

A.—The fact that saliva runs from the mouth may indicate that some sharp object has lodged in the tongue or that there is a cyst under the tongue or actinomycosis of the tongue (wooden tongue). The veterinarian should examine for these conditions and if none is found, test the cow for tuberculosis. A sharp object penetrating the wall of the stomach and lodging in the sac of the heart might also cause similar symptoms. There is no cure for tuberculosis or traumatic pericarditis caused by swallowing of a sharp object. Write again, if necessary, after the examination has been made.

WEAK BACK.—I have a spring pig. When she walks her back will fall down and in and she drags her feet behind her. The skin cracked across her back. I greased it and it stopped for a while but now it is bad again. I am feeding her milk and she has all the charcoal she wants. What is the matter and what can I do? MRS. V. F.

A.—Sunscald often causes severe skin troubles in white pigs that graze wet rape or other rank green crop. Washing daily with fresh buttermilk often suffices, but in severe cases it may be necessary to apply a lotion composed of 2 ounces of Goulard's extract, 1 ounce of glycerine and 1 pint of soft water. Open the bowels freely with Epsom salt in slop, then let the pig graze green crops and also have milk daily and mixed meals from a self-feeder.

BLOODY MILK.—I have a cow, two years old, that has been giving bloody milk for three months. For a few days she will not give any bloody milk, then it becomes clotted and it is hard to milk it out. There are no lumps in her teats. Is there anything that can be done to help her? I have taken COMFORT ten years. MRS. D. L. C.

A.—Bruising of the teat or quarter in some way or another might well cause bloody milk in this case. Watch the cow to see if bruising occurs. Chronic, incurable garget would be a likely cause if the cow is not bruising her udder. If it is present, the milk in that quarter should be dried off. We are unable to assign the exact cause but shall be glad to hear from you again when you have made a more careful investigation.

THOROUGHPIN.—I have a fine three-year-old mare that has a thoroughpin on both legs. Is there any cure? If so, please give remedy. MRS. W. C. W.

A.—The unsoundness mentioned is practically incurable when established. If lameness is present, you should have a veterinarian line-fire and blister the hock joints, one at a time, but not in very hot weather. If lameness is absent, some good may be done by persistent application of a proprietary reducing preparation used according to directions given by the manufacturer.

ECZEMA.—I have a cow six years old which I think has been poisoned while out feeding. Her head, neck and brisket are swollen and little broken places appear on the outside from which a yellow sticky substance appears. Do you think this would affect the milk and is it safe to use it? Can you tell me what has caused this trouble and what to do? J. S. J.

A.—White skin is sometimes affected in the way described by poison ivy or St. John's wort. We cannot assign the exact cause without an investigation but on general principles should advise you to wet the affected parts twice daily with a lotion composed of 4 ounces of Goulard's extract, 2 ounces of glycerine and soft water to make 1 pint. We do not think the trouble will have any injurious effect upon the milk.

THICK, SWOLLEN GLANDS

that make a horse Wheeze, Roar, have Thick Wind or Choke-down, can be reduced with also other Bunches or Swellings. No blister, no hair gone, and horse kept at work. Economical—only a few drops required at an application. $2.50 per bottle delivered. Book 3 R free. ABSORBINE, JR., the antiseptic liniment for mankind, reduces Cysts, Wens, Painful, Swollen Veins and Ulcers. $1.25 a bottle at dealers or delivered. Book "Evidence" free.

ABSORBINE

W.F. YOUNG, INC., 349 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Land Clearing Book FREE

Most valuable book ever published on land clearing. 80 Pages, illustrated in colors. Written by experts—men who know that land clearing pays! Don't pay taxes on dead stump land. Bring it to life. Land-Clearer's Guide tells you how. Write today! Free to you.

A. J. KIRSTIN CO.
1801 Lud St., Escanaba, Mich.

Throw your VOICE. Under the table, down in the cellar, into a trunk or any where. Our VENTRILO which fits in the mouth enables you to fool all your friends. Also art of ventriloquism an big book of Jokes. By mail 10 cts. Prepaid.

ARDEE NOVELTY CO. Box 103 Stamford Conn.

U.S. NAVY SWEATERS

$2.90 PARCEL POST 10c EXTRA

A Real $6.00 Value!

Every sweater brand new and perfect. Positively the best Navy sweater the Government ever issued to the United States Navy. This sweater does not stretch out of shape—but clings to the body. Can be used under outer shirt for real warmth. Ideal for motoring and all outdoor work. Dark blue in color. A size for every man and boy. When ordering give chest measurement.

All orders must be accompanied by cash, money order or check. Ask your bank as to our responsibility.

U. S. ARMY WOOL GLOVES 35c

3 PAIRS $1.00

Parcel Post 5c Extra Worth $1.00 a Pair

Real gloves for outdoor work and motor driving in cold weather. Extra heavy and extra long to protect the wrist. Every pair new and perfect. Uncle Sam issued these gloves for the boys in cold weather.

Army & Navy Store

225 MARKET ST. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Established 1861

Beautiful Silk Remnants

REMNANTS of real silk, in all shapes, sizes and colors. They are carefully trimmed and just what you need for making up quilts, tidies, pillow tops and all kinds of "crazy patchwork." We will send you a package containing more than one hundred of these beautiful silk pieces and 5 skeins embroidery cotton in different bright colors, also an Instruction Book with eight full-page illustrations showing how to ornament seams of crazy patchwork and other work where fancy stitches are used, also how to work the Outline and Kensington Stitch, Arrasene and Chenille Embroidery, ribbon work, plush or tufted stitch, also directions for Kensington painting. All this is yours free upon the terms of the following special offer:

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you one package of these Silk Remnants free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 5561.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Fine Shaggy Teddy Bear

The Best Playmate A Boy or Girl Ever Had

Ten Inches High Full Jointed

FOR A CLUB OF TWO!

EVERY little boy and girl wants a Teddy Bear and here is an opportunity for every father or mother who reads COMFORT to get one without expense. "Teddy" looks exactly as you see him in the picture above. He is a shaggy fellow, 10 inches tall, made of brown plush, paws lined with felt, carefully stitched and finished and his head, arms and legs are jointed in such a manner that you can place him in almost any position. He will stand up, sit up, stand on his head, go on all four feet; in fact, you can make him assume all kinds of positions that are so comical and lifelike that it makes the children scream with delight just to look at him. "Teddy" is so well made that no matter how roughly he is handled he cannot be broken and with ordinary care should last for years. We will send you "Teddy" free if you will accept the following special offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this Teddy Bear free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9992.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

3-Piece Toilet Set

THERE does not live a girl whose heart will not fairly jump with joy at the sight of this swell dull black finish Toilet Set.

The Brush is nine inches long, 2½ inches wide, firmly set with white bristles. The Mirror is 8½ inches long, 4½ inches wide on back, with a four-inch clear, finely beveled glass set with rich ebonized frame. The Comb is seven inches long, 1½ inches wide, with fine and coarse teeth. Both Mirror and Brush have a handsome silverine shield on the back for monogram or initials.

This fine Comb, Brush and Mirror Set comes in a specially fitted box and is yours absolutely free if you will accept the following offer.

Given To You! For only five one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send this fine Three-Piece Toilet Set free by Parcel Post prepaid. Reward No. 7635.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's Information Bureau

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT subscribers on subjects not related to the special departments elsewhere in the paper will be answered, as far as may be. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions addressed to this Bureau. They will thus save time, labor and postage.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address but we will print only initials if so requested.

S. J. P., Detroit, Mich.—In your northern climate, you should remove your hyacinth bulbs from the ground for winter storage. Do this before the ground freezes and place the bulbs, covered with sand or dry earth, in your cellar.

S. L., Mississippi.—Despite all that we have many times stated in this column, the idea persists that there is a "divining" rod or needle which may be purchased and which will find buried treasure or other minerals. For this subscriber's benefit and for all others, we say here again that without qualification or exception no rod or instrument has been devised that will locate the presence of gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, or other non-magnetic metals or their ores, when these are hidden underground. Any such devices, if offered for sale, are done so with the intent to deceive and defraud purchasers. Necessarily we do not wish COMFORT readers to waste any of their money in the purchase of "divining rods" which can divine no treasure except that fraudulently obtained from credulous buyers of these worthless instruments.

C. H. B., Clearwater, Fla.—Under a resolution of the Sixty-sixth Congress, discharged soldiers, sailors and marines are given preferred right of homestead entry on vacant public lands of the U. S. Government. You should write to the Secretary of the Interior, Washington, D. C., for information concerning the regulations established under the resolution we have mentioned.

L. H., Williamstown, Pa.—You do not state what sort of a business you wish to purchase or engage in. Read the "Business Opportunities" columns of the leading Philadelphia newspapers, or place some advertisement in these journals regarding your requirements.

T. M., Leesburg, Ga.—In the United States, native white males of native white parentage exceed the same class of females by more than five millions. Of foreign-born whites, there are about a million and a half more males than females. Of the negro population, there are slightly more men than women. In all these instances those classified are of the age of 21 years or older.

B. W., Converse, La.—For the information which you wish concerning the Cherokee and Choctaw Indians, you should address the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C.

MRS. M. S., New Hampton, Iowa.—We have never heard of a "Federal Reserve stamp," and believe that you have confused this with the Federal Reserve notes—meaning banknotes—which are permitted to be issued by banks of the Federal Reserve system. If you wish any information concerning the working of the law under which these banks are organized, apply to the cashier or president of your nearest national bank.

L. J., Palmetto, Ga.—The coin you describe is one of an issue of the Royal Spanish Mint and bears the name and portrait of Alfonso XII, King of Spain. It has no value beyond the ten Spanish centimos which it represents.

R. K., Vincennes, Ind.—All land of the sort you wish to homestead has already been taken up in the states of Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas. In Arkansas, there remain but 276,595 acres yet available. The central and western portions of the state contain the hilly and diversified land in which you are interested. There are U. S. Land Offices in Arkansas at Camden, Harrison and Little Rock. Address the Registers of these offices for further information. Colorado has over 7,300,000 acres yet open for entry. You would find the western portion of the state preferable for your purposes. There are U. S. Land Offices in this locality at Glenwood Springs and Durango. Utah presents vast opportunities with 13,316,198 acres of vacant public lands. This state has produced over 600 bushels of potatoes on a single acre of land. In Utah also you would find the western part of the country most suitable for your likings. There are but two U. S. Land Offices—one at Salt Lake City and the second at Vernal. In your wish to avoid what you call "barren land," you must remember that such states as Utah and Colorado are accustomed to raising immense crops with little rainfall and that irrigation is an agricultural standby in these sections of the U. S. Much of the most productive land of the West could have been classed as "barren" until liberated to luxurious production by the magic touch of irrigation. You will have to expect far less annual rainfall in the states of Colorado and Utah than that you are now working under in Indiana. Do not make any change unless you believe you can accept these new conditions and accustom yourself to farming on an entirely new basis.

M. D., Montere, Tenn.—Copper is not a metal which admits of successful tempering, although it may be hardened by the addition of various other metals. The ancients were accustomed to harden copper by the addition of iron in the portion of 66 per cent. copper to that of 34 per cent. iron. This alloy turns dark, however, upon exposure to air. Finely-shaved copper can be added in 70 parts to 30 parts arsenic. This mixture will, when fused in a furnace, produce a hard metal of whitish coloring. There are also numerous other combinations in which copper forms a part and a harder metal results from the fusing.

W. F. E., Virginia.—You have strangely spelled the name of the tree you mention, which we believe you mean for one of the Myrtle family. The leaves and berries of the myrtle were used in medicine by ancient peoples, but the tree in our country has no use but as an ornamental plant and shrub. As the wood of the myrtle is compact and close-grained, we believe you are correct in thinking it would be valuable for fence posts. Some nearby nursery might be interested in buying young trees of this variety from you. (2) It is characteristic of apple trees not to bear every year, this being apparently a wise provision of nature to enable the tree's fruit-bearing organism to rest after the production of a large crop. Have you not heard of certain fruit trees "bearing themselves to death"? (3) We are unable to state where you can procure a copy of the life of the Rev. Joshua Thomas. Perhaps some kind COMFORT reader can aid in this.

R. R., Dowling, S. D.—Marguerite de France, sometimes called Marguerite de Valois, was the daughter of Henry II, King of France, and Catherine de Medicis. She was born in 1553 and in 1572 married King Henry of Navarre. Her married life was tempestuous and unhappy, and after not many years she separated from her husband and returned to the Court of France. Upon arrival there she was insulted by the then King Henry III, who arrested her and finally sent her back to Henry of Navarre, who refused to receive her again as his wife. She was afterward imprisoned at Usson, where she succeeded by intrigue in outing the old governor of the fortress and herself reigned as its head until 1605. She finally granted her husband a divorce, but retained her title of Queen of Navarre. She reappeared in quieter manner at the French Court in 1605 and finally died there in 1615.

MRS. J. D. Y., Burlington, W. Va.—Cannel coal is a dull and finely-grained sort of bituminous coal. It burns with a bright candle-like flame—from which characteristic its name "cannel" or "candle" is doubtless derived. This coal is especially valuable for gas making. It is considered by some to be a formation resulting from an accumulation of animal remains as well as those of the plant remains which constitute ordinary coal formations. Cannel coal has sometimes been worked libe alabaster, and various articles such as inkstands and paper-weights have been made from it. It takes a high polish. You are in a mining state and should easily be able to learn the present value per ton of this member of the court of King Coal. Our Maine coal yards do not sell this brand.

MRS. O. C. J., Iowa.—Gas really makes the best brazing heat, although gasolene torches may be used. The implements you have will do quite well for any small jobs and will give you sufficient heat. A good brazing flux is said to be: Boric acid, one pound; pulverized chlorate of potash, four ounces; carbonate of iron, three ounces. Mix thoroughly, rolling out all lumps, and then add two pounds of granulated yellow brass spelter. This mixture must be kept perfectly dry. A fruit jar will be a good container. In your brazing, remember that all heat must come from below. (2) In your difficulty with your soldering flux, try using a mixture of boric acid and sodium carbonate, or else see that your powdered borax is calcined before using. (3) The following so-called "marine glue" is one that will not draw moisture or grow soft under certain weather conditions: Dissolve one part of India rubber in crude benzine and mix, by the aid of heat, with two parts of shellac. You must guard against fire in making any such compound as this. Also any ordinary good glue will be aided against absorbing moisture if one part of acid chromate of potassium is added to five parts of the gelatine glue. All glues lose strength through frequent remelting, and are best when newly made and applied as soon after boiling as possible.

What the Average Man Has

I am writing this in the living room of my home on a typewriter that weighs no more than a moderate-sized book.

Light is provided by a lamp in which burn two incandescent bulbs.

In an adjoining room is a telephone from which I can talk to any city on the continent.

On the wall is a thermostat which regulates the flow of gas in my furnace and keeps the room at an even temperature of 70 degrees.

Almost within arm's reach are several shelves of books filled with the most profound and beautifully expressed thoughts of the ages.

The floors of my home are cleaned with a suction sweeper, operated by electricity, while the clothes are put through an electric washer and ironed in an electrically driven mangle.

My children attend a school where they are given a better education than the sons of kings could command a century ago.

I enjoy all these things and yet I am just an ordinary citizen with an ordinary income, living in an ordinary way. Tens of thousands have as much as I have and more.

And yet I kick and wonder what ails the world.

Were the good things of life ever so easily at the command of the ordinary man as they are today? Don't we all do a lot of welching that we haven't any right to do? And if we are not careful, isn't there a danger that we will upset the greatest civilization the world has ever known?—William Feather, in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Learn Music at Home—

New Way Makes It Easy

Either Playing or Singing—Every Step Made Simple as A B C by Print-and-Picture Lessons That You Can't Go Wrong On.

Entire Cost Averages a Few Cents a Lesson

How often have you wished that you knew how to play the violin or piano—or whatever your favorite instrument may be—or that you could take part in singing?

How many an evening's pleasure has been utterly spoiled and ruined by the admission "I can't sing," or "No, I am sorry, but I can't play."

At all social gatherings, some one is sooner or later sure to suggest music. When the others gather around for the fun, the one who can take no part feels hopelessly out of it—a wall flower—a mere listener and looker on!

Or those long and lonesome evenings at home when minutes seem like hours—how quickly the time would pass if you could spend it at the piano or organ—or in making a violin "talk," or in enjoying some other instrument.

And now—at last—this pleasure and satisfaction that you have so often wished for can easily be added to your daily life.

No need to join a class or pin yourself down to certain hours for lessons or practice. No need to pay a dollar or more per lesson to a private teacher. Neither the question of time nor expense is any longer a bar—every one of the obstacles that have been confining your enjoyment to mere listening have been removed.

My method of teaching music—in your spare time at home, with no strangers around to embarrass you—makes it amazingly easy to learn to sing by note or to play any instrument.

You don't need to know the first thing about music to begin—don't need to know one note from another. My method takes out all the hard part—overcomes all the difficulties—makes your progress easy, rapid and sure.

Whether for an advanced pupil or a beginner, my method is a revolutionary improvement over the old methods used by private teachers. The lessons I send you explain every point and show every step in simple Print-and-Picture form that you can't go wrong on—every step is made as clear as A B C. My method makes each step so easy to understand and practice that even children have quickly become accomplished players or singers under my direction by mail. Also thousands of men and women—including many who had never before tried to play any instrument or taken a lesson of any kind—have found my method equally easy. My method is as thorough as it is easy. I teach you the only right way—teach you to play or sing by note. No "trick" music, no "numbers," no makeshifts of any kind.

I call my method "new"—simply because it is so radically different from the old and hard-to-understand ways of teaching music. But my method is thoroughly time tried and proven. Over 250,000 successful pupils—in all parts of the world, and including all ages from boys and girls of 10 to 12 to men and women of 60 are the proof. Largely through the recommendations of satisfied pupils, I have built up the largest school of music in the world.

But I don't ask you to judge my methods by what I myself say. You can take any course on trial—singing or any instrument you prefer—and judge entirely by your own progress. If for any reason you are not satisfied with the course or with what you learn from it, then it won't cost you a single penny as outlined in our guarantee. On the other hand, if you are pleased with the course, the total cost averages a few cents a lesson, with your music and everything also included.

When learning to play or sing is so easy, why continue your enjoyment of music to mere listening? Why not at least let me send you my free book that tells you all about my methods? I know you will find this book absorbingly interesting, simply because it shows you how easy it is to turn your wish to play or sing into an actual fact. Just now I am making a special short-time offer that cuts the cost per lesson in two—send your name now before this special offer is withdrawn. No obligation—simply use the coupon or send your name and address in a letter or on a post card.

Learn to Play by Note
For Beginners or Advanced Pupils

Piano	Harmony and Composition
Organ	Sight Singing
Violin	Guitar
Drums and Traps	Ukulele
Banjo	Hawaiian Steel Guitar
Tenor Banjo	Harp
Mandolin	Cornet
Clarinet	Piccolo
Flute	Trombone
Saxophone
Cello

Voice and Speech Culture
Automatic Finger Control

Instruments supplied, when needed, cash or credit.

U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC
411 Brunswick Bldg., New York

MR. DAVID F. KEMP,
U. S. School of Music, 411 Brunswick Bldg., New York City.
Please send me your free book, "Music Lessons in Your Own Home," and particulars of your Special Offer. I am interested in the following course

.....
(Name of Instrument or Course)

Name .....
(Please Write Plainly)

Address .....

City ..... State.....

LOOK 50¢ Look Wonderful instrument. Greatest thing yet. Nine separate articles in one. Everybody delighted with it. Odd, curious and interesting. Lots of pleasure as well as very useful. It is a double Microscope for examining the wonders of nature. It is also an Opera Glass, a Stereoscope, a Burning Lens, a Reading Glass, a Telescope, a Compass, a Pocket Mirror, and a Laryngascope—for examining eye, ear, nose and throat. It is worth all the cost to locate even one painful cinder in the eye. Folds flat and fits the pocket. Something great—you need one. Don't miss it. Sent by mail, with 800 page Novelty Catalog, ONLY 50c or 3 for $1.25

JOHNSON SMITH & CO., Dept. 688 3224 N. Halsted St., CHICAGO

WRIST WATCH and RING GIVEN

OR BOYS WATCH KNIFE AND CHAIN — OR MOVIE MACHINE CURTAINS OR CAMERAS ETC

Your choice given for selling two lots of 20 Perfume pkgs. at 10c each. Order 20, when sold choose Watch or other valuable premiums according to big list. Write today.

ROBT. MORE CO., 338 W. 63rd St., Dept. W-1, CHICAGO

WATCH, RING AND CHAIN GIVEN

We positively give a genuine American Stem Wind and Set Watch, beautifully designed case, warranted time-keeper, 5-year guarantee; Sparkling Set or Plain Ring all for selling 25 of our easy to sell Jewelry articles at 10c each. When sold send $2.50 & we'll send Watch & Ring. Home Supply Co., 428 W. 59th Street, Dept. 100 Chicago

All These FREE
10 YEAR GUARANTEED WATCH, Watch Chain, Ring and Scarf Pin

American Watch—fancy back and fine chain. Lover's Knot Pin and Ring, both set with fine stones. All 4 pieces positively given for selling only 25 large colored Pictures OR 25 pkgs. Fancy Post Cards at 10c each. Order choice TODAY. All sent postpaid.

GATES MFG. CO. DEPT. 225 CHICAGO

THIS AIR RIFLE FREE

for selling 10 pkgs. Bluing at 15c a pckg. Rifle first-class in every way. When sold return our $1.50 and we will send rifle, all postage prepaid.

BLUINE MFG. CO., 207 Mill St., Concord Jct., Mass.

VIOLIN GIVEN

This special sweet toned Violin given for selling two lots of 20 pictures at 10 cents each. Order 20 pictures, when sold send the $2.00 and choose Violin or other prize according to big list sent with pictures.

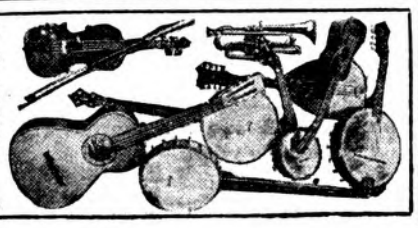
RAY ART CO., DEPT. 48, CHICAGO, ILL.

WRIST WATCH AND RING REALLY GIVEN

This up-to-date, serviceable, stem wind & set, popular size, guaranteed fine timekeeper, & fine ring actually given for selling only 24 pks Rluette, our famous wash bluing at 15c or 24 & 12 pks Sachet Perfume at 10c. Order Choice. Both in big demand and easy to sell.

CHICAGO BLUING WKS., 1920 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. 301, CHICAGO

FREE Eastman Film Camera



Popular size with handle and view finder, for time and snapshot pictures. Just order 12 boxes Mentho-Nova. Return $3 and complete camera is yours. Or choice of Moving Picture Machine, Thin Model Watch or Flashlight. Write for goods today. We trust you. Address

U.S. SUPPLY CO. Dept. 930, Greenville, Pa.

FREE PROFESSIONAL TONE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

and lessons sent on free trial. Violin, Tenor Banjo, Hawaiian Guitar, Ukulele, Mandolin, Cornet, Banjo Mandolin, Banjo Ukulele, Guitar, Banjo Guitar or Banjo. Wonderful new copyrighted system of teaching note music by by mail. Four lessons will teach you several pieces. Over 100,000 successful players. Do not miss this free trial offer. Write for booklet. No obligations.

SLINGERLAND SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Inc.,
1815 Orchard Street, Dept 121, Chicago, Illinois

$13.95 Goodyear Raincoat Free

Goodyear Mfg. Co., 35N-R Goodyear Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., is making an offer to send a handsome raincoat free to one person in each locality who will show and recommend it to friends. If you want one, write today.—Advt.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 18.)

be younger than a man, from at least one to five years. Women take the cares and worries of life to heart so much more seriously than men, and it or they with the bearing and care of children age them so much more quickly than men. A man from thirty to forty years old is practically a young man, while a woman from thirty to forty, that is if she has borne children, looks at least five years older than he does.

Then, too, it is natural for a woman to want to look up to a man, and feel that he is older than she is, and that in itself gives her a feeling that he is dependable. While he wants to think of her as being younger and depending on him, and being older than she is gives him a feeling of more responsibility, and not as some one older whom he must look up to and respect.

And more, when a girl marries a man younger than herself, she is nearly always jealous, and usually with good cause.

Now, girls, be warned, don't marry a man younger than you are, for you will be jealous later, and, girls, don't work for a man who is married to a woman older than he is, for in nine cases she will be jealous, whether with or without a cause.

And boys, don't marry a girl older than you are, for in nine out of ten cases you will have a boss and a jealous wife. It is not the natural course of life for a man to marry some one older than himself.

Of course in some cases they get along all right, but look around you, you see them. This is the cause of some of the cases of divorce which come into our courts.

Well, I am sure I have said enough, but I feel that a warning note should be struck by some one, and seeing several cases of just this very thing near, I couldn't keep quiet any longer. While of course, I don't mean to say that couples, the boy younger, the girl older, can't get along just as well as if it were otherwise, still it is not the natural course of marriage and is another risk to run.

Good luck to Mrs. Wilkinson and the sisters.

MABEL.

STOCKDALE, TEXAS.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

I am a new subscriber to COMFORT and like it, especially the sisters' letters. I did not think of writing until I read the letter from Molly-Joe. I'd like that cool kitchen, so cozy and convenient, too. And you have given us a hard question. Of course, like all others, there are two sides, or two different views to look at. First, you are at home with a kitchen "just as you want it" and no doubt you can cook anything you need and just as you want it, to say nothing of doing all the mending, reading and numberless other little things for yourself, those jolly big brothers and Father "the best ever." These are great privileges as you will see when looking back from a stuffy little room in a rooming house. I have a sister who is a stenographer and she is making her living very easily but she has to eat just what somebody else is pleased to cook and just as they please to prepare it. But she is satisfied and has a great many things that she could not have had at home, and she thinks she is independent because she doesn't have to ask anyone for her money, but she has to please her "boss" to get it. So, Molly-Joe, I tell you what I should do if I were you: I would cook the family a good supper, and when they all get full (excuse the expression), tell them just how you feel and what you have been thinking of doing. In my opinion someone will be willing to help without your going away. Explain your feelings fully, because more trouble comes from misunderstandings than anything else. Perhaps you think that they think so and so and they think you think thus and so, when neither of you have had any such thoughts. Be sure you understand the other fellow and certain that he understands you.

As to "keeping on giving up," I think all of us have to give up something we would like. You feel you are making sacrifices, so does the office girl who has to do without the privileges of home, and work for strangers instead of her loved ones. So does the woman who marries, she finds nearly every minute taken up in services for others. And when I happen to think of it, there is somebody working for me, too.

I haven't decided Molly-Joe's question for her but I hope she will find the best way out. I felt I wanted to say a few words to her. I would like to say something to the other sisters but I must go cook dinner for my three little boys and two little girls.

Your new sister, LELA CULPEPPER.

MT. PLEASANT, UTAH.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT FRIENDS:

I have been a subscribe to COMFORT for twenty years and think I am entitled to a hearing. I enjoy the sisters' letters and everything in COMFORT, from cover to cover.

This is my first letter to the corner. I never thought I could say anything interesting but after reading the letter from "Mother of Seven" which appeared some time ago, I cannot keep silent longer. I have read letters wherein women aired their troubles concerning husband, children and in-laws, but that was the first letter I ever read wherein a girl—herself a mother—says "I shudder when I think of my childhood. There are few pleasant memories and I lay all the blame of our unhappy home life to our mother."

I only hope that poor old mother will never read or find out about her daughter writing a letter like that for a million people to read. I cried when I read it. I didn't think a child could talk that way about her mother unless she had committed some crime or disgraced the family and even then I think I would have left it for someone else to say for you see it would still be mother.

Mother of Seven, I wonder how you will feel when the word comes that "Mother is dead." Don't you think you will wonder how you ever could have said such a thing?

I left my native land, Denmark, when eighteen years of age, leaving a good home, a kind father and a darling, old-fashioned, hard-working mother, and came to America and oh, the heartaches and longing for that home and mother! When I received the letter saying "Mother has passed away," I lived over again the happy, care-free days of my childhood. Although I had a family of my own, for a while it seemed as though nothing mattered any more.

We can have more than one child or husband or wife as the case may be but none of us can have more than one mother. What if she is old fashioned? If all mothers ran to short skirts and lip sticks there wouldn't have been so many of the world's bravest passing from the battlefield to the soldier's rest, with the name of mother on their lips. "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother" was not written around a woman who turned the snowflakes of her hair to druggists' gold and kissed the pain from childhood bruises with carmined lips. "For the old-fashioned mothers left to us, we praise Thee."

With the best of wishes for the COMFORT family,

MRS. J. C. CLYDE.

Mrs. Clyde.—To grow old gracefully is an art but only recently did I realize how important it is. I happened to be on a crowded street at a time when the traffic was heaviest and seeing the bowed figure of a woman, apparently older than myself, ahead of me I naturally and unconsciously stepped forward to take her arm and help her through the crowd. Ouch! I'll never forget the indignant look I got, not the face I saw! The effect of wrinkles, paint, powder and hair dye was positively terrible. Now I look before I offer to assist.—Ed.

WELLINGTON, COLO.

DEAR EVERYBODY WHO READS COMFORT:

Since reading the June number of COMFORT I have been anxiously waiting for the sisters' opinion on Mrs. Wallen's letter.

My opinion is that anyone desiring knowledge and being in a position to gain it, should do so by all means. I have known of many doing this and it always turned out satisfactorily for all concerned.

Molly-Joe, you are a wonderful girl and I hope you enjoy that summer kitchen to the fullest extent. Probably my mind is sadly warped but I could never stand to be the under man, although you may be repaid in the fullest measure.

You are wondering what sort of a person you are hearing from so I will give you the usual answer, "Just an ordinary sort of person" who will never see the sunny side of thirty again, and the mother of three children, a boy aged twenty who graduated from high school a year ago, a girl of thirteen that has completed her first year work in Junior High and a darling blue-eyed baby, two years old.

There is another question I would like to bring up before our corner. Is it right when a person moves from one state to another to be continually bragging about the former state and running down the new? I think not but many come here and owe their very lives to that fact, are always wrangling because they do not find the vegetation that was common in their native state, or some other reason.

I hope to hear from Eastern sisters especially and will answer all who enclose stamp.

PEGGY.

Peggy.—Never thought of it before but it really isn't polite, is it?—Ed.

Best Way of Doing Things Around the Home

Use the wrappers from bread to clean flatirons.

Vinegar and salt remove tarnish from copper.—MARY B. RAY, Ruppertown, Tenn.

Put a few drops of coal oil in the starch and it will not stick to the iron.—MISSOURI SISTER.

Save the sticks your children get with their suckers and use them (after washing) for home-made taffy.

If butter becomes rancid, boil a few pieces of potato in it for a few minutes.—MRS. HAROLD FLETCHER, Paso Robles, Calif.

When sour milk or cream seems determined to stick to the jar, put a little soda on dish-cloth and rub milk spots briskly.—BLACKBERRIES, W. Va.

When making starch, melt a small piece of soap, any kind will do, and stir it into the starch until it lathers. This makes the clothes iron much easier.

Use meal sacks for making underwear and sugar sacks for curtains and table covers. Just fringe the edge and starch and iron well and they look very good. —KATIE MAE JONES, Tallahassee, Fla.

FLEAS.—If outbuildings become infested with flees, have all loose trash and rubbish raked out and burned, then sprinkle lime thoroughly over premises and the fleas will not be at home next time you call.

If you have a can of lard that has become slightly rancid, set it where there will be no dust get into it and leave the cover off so the fresh air will get to the lard. This purifies it.—MAE MYERS, Hornsby, Illinois.

After making bread pudding, cover the top with marshmallows and set in oven till they melt and brown. This forms a delicious mock meringue and takes the place of the hard sauce usually served with bread pudding.

LICE.—This last is for the timid mother who hesitates about going to the family doctor when her small daughter comes home from school with her hair full of lice. Wet the child's head with ordinary castor oil and let her wear an old cap for several hours. Shampoo hair with warm water and soap until all trace of oil is gone.—JUANITA ADAIR, Virginia.

BEDBUGS.—Take one-half gallon of kerosene and same quantity of gasolene, with six or eight pulverized moth balls. Mix well and spray on all parts of bed. Scald bed frame and then stand all four legs of bed in can filled with kerosene. This prevents bugs from crawling up bedposts. Cracks around room could be sprayed. This is very explosive so keep all lights and matches away from room.—LONESOME, West Virginia.

SURE REMEDY FOR ITCH.—Vaseline, one-half bottle; calomel (powdered) one level teaspoon; one level teaspoon sulphur; one block gum camphor and five drops carbolic acid. Chip up camphor and melt, then mix all ingredients together. Patient should take an all-over bath, with soap and soft wash-cloth, then apply ointment, rubbing well into all affected places. Clean clothes should be put on and all soiled clothing boiled. Repeat in three days.

BEDBUGS.—One quart of wood alcohol (poison) and ten cents' worth of corrosive sublimate (also poison) and mix well. Apply to every crack and crevice about beds and walls. A bunch of feathers can be used instead of a brush and later burned. It is well to put on gloves and glasses or goggles, as the solution will blister the skin if it happens to spatter. The beds should be taken apart and the work done thoroughly and the bugs will not inhabit the same place again.

Requests

How to white enamel old furniture.

How to remove mud stains from dark red taffeta.

An herb remedy that will eradicate the system of worms.

I would like to corresond with sisters living in Canada, Alaska and Hawaii.—MRS. R. J. WHEELER, Golden City, Mo.

Will buy March, April, May and June numbers of COMFORT for 1921. Write first.—LOIS NEVILLE, Meredosia, Ill.

I would like to obtain the song, "Will the Circle be Unbroken."—MRS. M. J. FLEMMING, Buchanan, Box 12, N. Y.

Can any sister tell me where I can learn to make watch chains from hair?—MRS. K. E. JASPERS, Bruce, L. B. 105, S. Dak.

I live in a lonely place and would like to receive letters from the sisters.—MISS M. H. MCLAREN, Hazelridge, Man., Canada.

Will some kind reader send me the July, 1921, issue of COMFORT.—MISS MARTHA WALLICK, Wrightsville, R. R. 2, Pennsylvania.

Will a sister please send me the songs, "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," and "Blowing Bubbles."—KATIE MAE JONES, Tallahassee, R. R. C, Fla.

How to dye furs. How to dry ground cherries. Cure for gas pains. Will someone send me the June, 1920, COMFORT?—MISS MARY JAYWILK, Hooker, Okla.

Have any of the sisters the Winner Violin Instructor, containing "Blue Danube Waltz"? Will pay for it but write first.—MRS. C. C. HURLBURT, Spokane, East 3408 32nd Ave., Wash.

Beautiful Violin, richly polished wood, well finished finger board and tail piece full set strings, fine bow, box of rosin, and Instruction Book, for selling 20 packages Colored Postcards at 10 cts. a package. Write for Postcards today.
COLUMBIA NOVELTY CO., Dept. 627. EAST BOSTON, MASS.

All this jewelry is yours for selling only 6 Boxes Mentho-Nova at 25 cts. Needed in every household. Sells easily. Order today. When sold return $1.50 and all 6 pieces are yours.
U. S. SUPPLY CO., Box 329, Greenville, Pa.

MOVIE MACHINE FREE
Have Your Own "Movie"
at home. Wonderful moving picture machine, complete with gas generator and 8 sets assorted reels (96 views). Shows large clear pictures. Sent Charges Prepaid for selling 35 large colored pictures or 35 packages Fancy Post Cards at 10c each. Order pictures OR cards TODAY.
GATES MFG. CO. DEPT. 525 CHICAGO

Watch REALLY GIVEN AWAY Ring

10 YR GUAR.
Stem Wind and Set, Handsome engraved, guar. timekeeper and fine ring given for selling only 16 pks. Bluette, Our Famous Wash Bluing, at 15c or 24 Pks. Sachet at 10c. Order Choice. It's easy.
CHICAGO BLUING WKS., 1920 Sunnyside, Dept. 101, CHICAGO

FREE
POWERFUL AIR GUN AND 500 BUCK SHOTS
The best Rifle ever offered. 31 inch, lever action, fully guaranteed. Given for selling 20 pkgs. Fancy Post Cards at 15c a pkg.
Our cards sell easy. SUN MFG. CO. DEPT 725 CHICAGO

FREE Beautiful Book About Taxidermy
Learn at home by mail to mount birds, animals, tan skins. Be a taxidermist. Delightful art easily learned by men and women. Decorate home and den. Make big profits. Wonderful new art. Write Today for this wonderful Free Book and our amazing offer.
N.W.Sch. of Taxidermy 2048 Elwood Bldg., Omaha, Neb.

BOYS AND GIRLS EARN XMAS MONEY
Write for 50 sets AMERICAN CHRISTMAS SEALS. Sell for 10c. a set. When sold, send us $3.00 and keep $2.00.
NEUBECKER BROS., 961 East 23rd St., Dept. 22, Brooklyn, N.Y.

ARE YOU SUFFERING FROM NERVE FORCE EXHAUSTION?

How to Tell and What to Do.

Thousands are failures in life and a burden to themselves and families from depletion of the nervo-vital fluid.

All success and happiness in life depend upon the nervous system which consists of countless millions of cells. In these cells is stored that mighty mysterious energy which we call nerve force. When your nerve force becomes weakened or exhausted, you may suffer from all kinds of alarming symptoms. The nervous woman of leisure feels bright and like herself during any exciting pleasure, yet every time she indulges in such, she is only further spending her already small supply of reserve nerve force and further aggravating her already lamentable condition. When such a woman has no exciting pleasure, she at once feels morbid and depressed, has headaches, periods of great weakness and moods in which she wants to scream.

The nervous business man feels in a perpetual hurry. He is impatient and restless while waiting for his car or luncheon. He eats rapidly, fidgets, and at night tosses and thinks for an hour or two before he can go to sleep. His memory fails, his judgment becomes poor and he often makes bad decisions, which greatly injure and sometimes ruin his business. The nervous student broods over his studies and cannot fasten his attention upon his work. The nervous mother or housekeeper is highly irritable, forgets where she puts things and often cannot remember what she started to do. At night she often has a "good cry" and excuses it by saying it is a relief for her nerves, when it means a high state of nerve force exhaustion. Without "nerve force," your will power becomes weakened. You have noble impulses and desires, but you do not carry them through. The most pitiful sight in life is a man or woman who has "no will." Of all diseases, except insanity, there are few, if any, more terrible in their nature than the exhaustion of the nervo-vital fluid. In such cases, it is often worse than foolish to take mere stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, may be at the expense of your life later on. What you need is to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood, to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the nerve and brain cells of man.

It also contains organic iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. This form of iron will not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It is an entirely different thing from metallic iron which people usually take. Nuxated Iron may therefore be termed both a blood and a nerve food, as it feeds strength-giving iron to your blood and the principal chemical ingredient of active living nerve force to your brain and nerve cells. Over four million people are using Nuxated Iron annually, and from the remarkable beneficial results which it has produced, the manufacturers feel so certain of its efficacy, that they guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser, or they will refund your money. Beware of substitutes, look for the word "Nuxated" on every package.

Nuxated Iron for the blood and nerves is sold by all druggists.

NUXATED IRON FOR THE BLOOD AND NERVES

I would like the poems, "Where Are the Wicked Folks Buried?" and "The Dead Pussy Cat."—AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

Remedies

CROUP.—Bind a thick slice of fat pork, heated in vinegar, to throat.—READER, Albany, Ala.

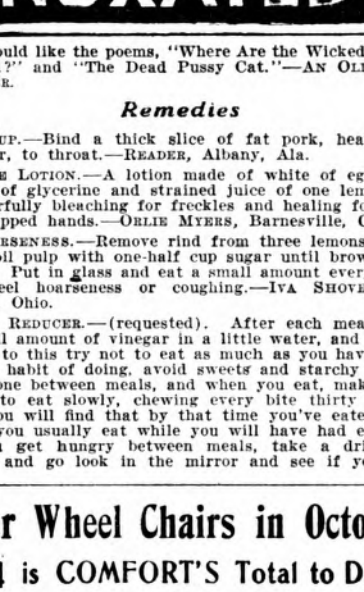
FACE LOTION.—A lotion made of white of egg, one ounce of glycerine and strained juice of one lemon, is wonderfully bleaching for freckles and healing for sore or chapped hands.—ORLIE MYERS, Barnesville, Colo.

HOARSENESS.—Remove rind from three lemons, slice and boil pulp with one-half cup sugar until brown and thick. Put in glass and eat a small amount every time you feel hoarseness or coughing.—IVA SHOVESTIEL, Akron, Ohio.

FAT REDUCER.—(requested). After each meal take a small amount of vinegar in a little water, and in addition to this try not to eat as much as you have been in the habit of doing, avoid sweets and starchy foods. Eat none between meals, and when you eat, make it a habit to eat slowly, chewing every bite thirty times, and you will find that by that time you've eaten half what you usually eat while you will have had enough. If you get hungry between meals, take a drink of water and go look in the mirror and see if you are any smaller, and forget to eat. Look over the back numbers of COMFORT and find some of the reducing exercises and do them regularly.—COMFORT SISTER, Sarasota, Fla.

Four Wheel Chairs in October

614 is COMFORT'S Total to Date



The four October wheel chairs go to Edwin John Thoms, 331 Second Ave., Frankfort, N. Y., 154; Thomas Heller, Camden, Del., 132; Mrs. Annie Matlock, Springton, Texas, 131; James Stanhope Love, York, S. C., 92. The figures following their respective names indicate the number of subscriptions sent in by them or by their friends for them.

Edwin John Thoms, age 11, is crippled in his legs by the effect of spinal meningitis which attacked him early last January. The wheel chair will be a blessing to this unfortunate boy whose mother is dead and his father an invalid obliged to seek a milder climate for his own health.

Thomas Heller, age 15 and crippled from birth, has no use of his legs and only partial use of his arms. The wheel chair will be a joy to him and help to his parents in caring for him.

Mrs. Annie Matlock, age 64, since a year ago has been crippled by rheumatism which has drawn her legs up so that she can not walk. She has one daughter on whom she is dependent for support.

James Stanhope Love, age 34, a lifelong cripple, can not walk and has but little use of his right arm and hand. He lives in the cotton mill village with his mother and sister. He is self-educated and earns a little money as a writer but is mainly dependent on his sister who works in the mill.

CLYDE W. SNYDER ENJOYING HIS COMFORT WHEEL CHAIR.

Don't forget or neglect this month to do something to bring Thanksgiving to the crippled shutins who are in need of a COMFORT wheel chair.

Sincerely yours,

W. H. GANNETT,
Publisher of COMFORT.

P. S. For the information of our many new subscribers let me explain that for each and every 150 one-year subscriptions to COMFORT, at 50 cents each, sent in either singly or in clubs by persons who direct that they are to be credited to COMFORT'S WHEEL-CHAIR CLUB instead of claiming the premiums to which they would be entitled, I give a FIRST-CLASS INVALID WHEEL CHAIR to some needy crippled Shut-in and pay the freight, too. It is a large and expensive premium for me to give for that number of subscribers, but I am always glad to do my part a little faster each month than you do yours.

Loves His COMFORT Wheel Chair

Catasauqua, Pa., 333 Race St.

Dear Mr. Gannett:

Just a few words to let you know that I love my COMFORT wheel chair and that I thank you and all those who helped me to get it. I enclose a picture of myself enjoying my wheel chair, and hope to see it in COMFORT. It seems like such a luxury as compared to the rocking-chair I had to use before the wheel chair came. I hope others to whom you have sent wheel chairs enjoy theirs as much as I do mine. Again thanking you, I am,

MRS. LOTTIE BRANT ENJOYING HER COMFORT WHEEL CHAIR.

Sincerely yours,
Clyde W. Snyder.

Proud of Her COMFORT Wheel Chair

Elvaston, Ill., Box 104.

Mr. W. H. Gannett,
Kind Friend:

I am sending you a picture of myself and wheel chair and I hope you will print it in COMFORT to show your readers how I enjoy the chair. I surely am proud of my wheel chair, and I want to thank all those that helped me to get it, and many, many thanks to you for your kindness. I remain, as ever, your friend,

Mrs. Lottie Brant.

COMFORT'S Roll of Honor

The Roll of Honor comprises the names of those who have sent five or more subscriptions, or a dollar or more in money, to credit of the Wheel-Chair Club during the month previous. Following each name is the number of subscriptions sent.

Mrs. Frank Dunn, N. Y., for Edwin John Thoms, 154 subs.; Mrs. William T. Jensen, Del. for Thomas Heller, 132; Miss Myrtle Matlock, for Annie Matlock, 43; Mrs. Theo. C. Dentinger, for Cathrine Dentinger, 40; Mrs. Claude Bridges, Texas, for Annie Matlock, 30; Mrs. M. Rollinger, Mich., for Cathrine Dentinger, 20; Mrs. Matilda Fillpot, Mo., for Jesse Fillpot, 17; Jas. Stanhope Love, S. C., for own, 13; Coye Steele, N. C., for own, 12; Dee Williams, Texas, for own, 8; Miss Margaret Lovas, Ill., for General, 5 subs. and $1.00; Mrs. Carl M. I. Card, N. C., for Clarence Tutherow, 5 subs and 25c; Mrs. J. C. Jagger, Mo., for General, 5 subs.; Ira B. Norton, Okla., for own, 5; Mr. Onnie Cupp, Tenn., for Johnnie E. Melton, 5; Miss Ella Vermillion, S. C., for Wm. Robt. Hudgins, 5; Mrs. Hoke Fields, Va., for General, $1.00; Mrs. M. J. Kralovec, Wis., for General, $1.00; Mrs. W. A. York, Oregon, for General, $1.00.

The Family Doctor

The remedies and advice here given are intended only for simple cases; serious cases should be taken to your local doctor.

Address The Family Doctor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published

---

MRS. J. M., Dekalb Junction, New York.—Have your local druggist write to any wholesale druggist for Basham's mixture and he can thus supply you.

MRS. M. T. J., Manson, N. C.—For your sluggish liver take a compound cathartic pill at night, avoid sweets of all kinds, drink plenty of water and eat green vegetables of all kinds. The limbs can be benefited by bandaging them with an elastic bandage daily.

MR. G. A. STORER, Beatrice, Nebr.—Basham's mixture can be compounded by any local druggist as it is an official remedy.

MISS R. S., Guyaz, Idaho.—Take a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted, after meals. This remedy will build you up and also regulate your periods.

MRS. R. A. D., Mt. Olivet, Ky.—Your trouble is malaria. Take a tablespoonful of Warburg's tincture after meals, well diluted.

MRS. G. F., Bushnell, Nebr.—Pain in the breasts at period is normal and needs no treatment. Spray your nose and throat with Dobell's solution for catarrhal symptoms. For the constipation take a compound cathartic pill at night.

MISS A. E., Altoona, Ala.—Dobell's solution is good for the catarrhal condition. Hay fever is a neurosis caused by some pollen from flowers of timothy hay. Potato is one of the starchy foods.

MRS. A. B., Bristol, Colo.—Probably the simple remedy of bicarbonate of soda taken in the shape of ten-grain tablets after meals will cure your troubles which are due to sour stomach.

MR. E. S., Park Falls, Wisc.—Just forget your blushing in the presence of another person and you will get over it in time. You are too sensitive and self-conscious.

MRS. L. M. K., Woodward, Okla.—Take five-grain pills of assafœtida after meals. Your throat condition is of nervous origin.

Cashion, Okla. (No name. Always give full name for a reply.)—Pellagra is an infectious disease with manifestations, according to the latest investigations. It is possibly also due to the lack of protein foods. Its pathology is not well understood.

MRS. A. B. P., Mobile, Ala.—You can reduce, if you desire, by eating on alternate days nothing but one quart of skimmed milk in divided doses and on the other days eat what you like except to be sparing of starchy foods, such as potatoes, etc. You are not much over weight and you should not worry. Of course, exercise is important in this connection as well as diet.

MISS M. G., Aline, Okla.—Basham's mixture will increase your appetite and incidentally increase your weight.

MISS C. M., Blossom, Texas.—Basham's mixture is iron preparation with some other drugs that not only act as a tonic but also have a direct action on the kidneys. You can have it put up by any good druggist. It must be made up fresh and be kept in a cold place, while being taken.

MR. J. A., Kaufman, Texas.—Cause of gravel in the kidneys is the drinking of improper water—water full of lime, salts, etc. The cure is obtained by taking some good solvent, or by operation. The kidneys should act about every four or five hours. About forty-two ounces of urine should be passed in twenty-four hours.

MISS C. G., Climax, N. C.—For your head colds and running nose, you should take a ten-grain tablet of bicarbonate of soda after meals. Spray the nose with Dobell's solution three times, or more, a day. Maybe also you have some nasal obstruction, which can be removed by operation.

MISS L. P., Paterson, N. J.—Bagging under the eyes can be helped by massage, or, better, having a small portion of the skin removed surgically. This operation is very satisfactory in skilled hands.

MRS. M. E., Batavia, Ohio.—Quinine and strychnia are dangerous when taken during the condition you mention. Calomel can be taken as needed with impunity.

MRS. M. McG., Memphis, Texas.—Basham's mixture is good for the kidneys, and general condition. It must be made up fresh, and any good druggist must have the recipe, as it is official.

MRS. C. S. K., East Lake, Tenn.—For the burning in stomach, take a ten-grain tablet of bicarbonate of soda after meals.

MRS. F. F. M., Norfolk, Va.—Basham's mixture is official and can be compounded by any good druggist.

MR. J. E., Quincy, Fla.—The only way to treat hay fever successfully is to have the irritable area of the nose treated or operated on—either cauterized or a portion of the middle turbinate removed. Internally a preparation known as pertussin may be useful. You should take, for the distress from intestinal gas, five- or ten-grain tablets of bicarbonate of soda after meals for a long period.

MR. B. G., Wayland, Texas.—Apply Sloan's liniment to the painful spot in the back. The torn muscle will reattach itself in time.

MISS L. G., Chatham, Va.—You are nervous and introspective. Forget the head symptoms as much as possible and take a five-grain asafetida pill after meals.

MRS. B. A., Fort Scott, Kansas.—For gall stones, you must avoid sweets of all kinds, and eat greens smothered in olive oil. As a laxative take a tablespoonful of American oil with your meals, and at bedtime one or more compound cathartic pills.

MISS M. M. L., Niota, Tenn.—Basham's mixture will not directly cause increase in flesh, but will aid the appetite and indirectly aid in putting on flesh.

MISS D. T., Lexington, Ky.—Improve your nutrition in every way and do not try to restore your hair by the use of any hair-dye. Apply at night a lotion of resorcin—two per cent. lotion, dissolved in equal parts of alcohol and rose-water.

MISS J. W., Paoli, Ind.—You have a nervous dyspepsia. Take a five-grain pill of asafœtida after meals.

MR. R. T., Chaumont, N. Y.—Diabetics should avoid sweets and starchy foods of all kinds. Milk, green vegetables, meats, fish, etc., should be the diet selected in a given case. As a remedy, some good strong tea is indicated. The bowels also must be kept open and plenty of water drunk.

MRS. E. G. B., Woodsville, N. C.—For the membranous colitis, take some high-up enemas of salt and water—about a teaspoonful of salt to the pint of hot water. You may also take ten-grain tablets of bicarbonate of soda between meals.

MR. I. T. H., Vivian, West Va.—The white skin spots are of nervous origin and are incurable.

MISS F. G., Rhinelander, Wisc.—A tablespoonful of Warburg's tincture after meals, well diluted, will help if not cure your mother's neuralgia.

MISS D. P., Ft. Fairfield, Maine.—The electric needle or cautery will remove the moles you inquire about.

MRS. A. H. R., Island, Va.—Dilute the Dobell's solution if it causes discomfort in any way. You should also have your ears treated and in this way get rid of the head-noises complained of.

MRS. T. L. H., Dedman, New Mexico.—The only cure for the hemorrhoids is an operation. Have the hemorrhoids operated on at once.

MR. E. E. D., Berryville, Ark.—For your high blood-pressure you can take a saturated solution iodide of potassium—ten drops three times a day after meals. Of course, it is especially necessary to keep your bowels free and to live upon the simplest diet.

MRS. A. E. R., New Market, Iowa.—Scars following second-degree burns are always painful and, as a rule, do not function properly. Manipulate the parts frequently, and apply at night a twenty per cent. ichthyol ointment.

MRS. A. D., Chatom, Ala.—A tablespoonful of effervescent citrate of potassium dissolved in a pint of water, and drunk three times a day, will probably cure kidney calculi.

Win $2,000

This Answer Puzzle

Bank Guarantee

State Bank of Philadelphia
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Mr. E. J. Reefer has deposited $10,000.00 with this bank as a guarantee that he will pay all the prizes awarded by the judges to the winners of this puzzle contest. This bank guarantees Mr. Reefer will do as he agrees.

STATE BANK OF PHILADELPHIA
F. L. Mowson
Cashier.

How many objects beginning with "L" can you find in this picture?

Open to Everybody

A GREAT big bona-fide chance to win $2,000 and 14 other Cash Prizes. Think of what you could do with $2,000 this very minute. Some one will win it! You have the same chance! How simple! Try your skill NOW!

Mail at once the names of all the objects you can find in the picture beginning with "L". It costs nothing to try. To the one sending in the largest and nearest correct list of names the first prize will be awarded. To the one sending in the second largest and nearest correct list the second prize will be awarded, etc. In case of tie for any prize offered, the full amount of such prize will be awarded to each tying contestant.

THE PRIZES

Winning Answers will receive Prizes as Follows:

	If No "More Eggs" is ordered	If $1 Worth of "More Eggs" is Ordered	If $2 Worth of "More Eggs" is Ordered	If $5 Worth of "More Eggs" is Ordered
1st Prize....	$40.00	$300.00	$600.00	$2,000.00
2nd Prize....	20.00	150.00	300.00	1,000.00
3rd Prize....	10.00	75.00	150.00	500.00
4th Prize....	10.00	50.00	100.00	250.00
5th Prize....	10.00	30.00	60.00	150.00
6th Prize....	6.00	20.00	40.00	100.00
7th Prize....	6.00	15.00	30.00	80.00
8th Prize....	6.00	10.00	20.00	60.00
9th Prize....	4.00	10.00	20.00	40.00
10th to 15th	4.00	10.00	20.00	40.00

(In the event of ties, duplicate prizes will be given.)

Special Offer on "More Eggs" During This Puzzle Contest
2 One Dollar Packages for $1.00.
5 One Dollar Packages for $2.00.
Economy Size Package for $5.00.
(The Economy Size package contains 20 times as much as the $1.00 size package)
No goods bought during this puzzle contest are subject to exchange, refund or approval.

Costs Nothing to Try

Read the great simplicity of this offer. All you need to do is to look over the objects in the puzzle picture. Get everyone to help you. Get the whole family around. Write out every object beginning with "L", such as Limousine, Lock, etc. Nothing hidden—no need to turn the picture upside down. If the judges decide that your list is nearest correct list—the first prize of $40.00 will be awarded to you even though you do not send an order for "MORE EGGS". But we are giving you a chance to win far more than $40.

Win $2,000

Will you win $40 or $2,000? If you are awarded first prize and have ordered no "MORE EGGS" you win $40. If you purchased $5.00 worth of "MORE EGGS," the same list wins $2,000. Which prize do you want?

Get Busy NOW!

Send in your list at once. Send your "MORE EGGS" order at the same time. Qualify for Big Cash Prizes.

E. J. Reefer Dept. 3048
9th and Spruce Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.
(Additional pictures sent free on request)

Observe These Rules:

1. Any man, woman, girl, or boy living in America but residing outside of Philadelphia, who is not an employe or relative of an employe of E. J. Reefer may submit an answer. It costs nothing to try.

2. All answers must be mailed by post office closing time, Dec. 10, 1921.

3. All lists of names should be written on one side of the paper only and numbered numerically, such as 1, 2, 3. Write your full name and address on each page in the upper right hand corner. If you desire to write anything else, use a separate sheet

4. Only such words as appear in the English dictionary will be counted. Do not use obsolete words. Where the plural is used the singular cannot be counted and vice-versa.

5. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though used to designate different objects or articles, or parts of objects or articles. An object or article can be named only once.

6 Do not use compound words, nor any words formed by the combination of two or more complete English words, where each word in itself is an object.

7. The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of names of visible objects and articles shown in the picture that begin with the letter "L" will be awarded first prize, etc. Neatness, style, or handwriting have no bearing upon deciding the winner.

8. Candidates may co-operate in answering the puzzle, but only one prize will be awarded to any one household; nor will prizes be awarded to more than one of any group outside of the family where two or more have been working together.

9. There will be three independent judges, having no connection with E. J. Reefer, who will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the contest, and participants agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.

10. All answers will receive the same consideration regardless of whether or not an order for Reefer's "More Eggs" is sent.

11. The announcement of the prize winners and the list of words will be printed at the close of the contest and a copy mailed to every person sending an order for "More Eggs".

The Thanksgiving Raffle

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 19.)

snap-shots which they all examined and in chatting about them they found out that Mrs. Gray had traveled a great deal and thus Mrs. Gray unconsciously gave Blodgett glimpses into her life which bore out many of the whispered stories that she had lived well at one time.

The couple got quite interested in a discussion of places, and Julian, noting this beckoned to Susan.

"Say, Susy, don't Blodgett and Mrs. Gray make a nice couple?" he asked, as they went to the kitchen obviously to get a glass of water.

"They surely do. I wonder why Blodgett doesn't marry somebody when he has such a lovely house just going to waste."

"I'd like to see him marry Mrs. Gray. Don't you know, I sort-a think of my mother when I look at Mrs. Gray at the bank. I'd hate to think of my mother working in an office."

"Yes, I suppose," returned Susan. "I'd like to see him marry Mrs. Gray. But people get married because they love each other, and I don't suppose old people love each other like young people do."

—"No," Julian said thoughtfully, "but, anyhow, lots of old people marry."

"Well, I suppose it must be some kind of love that makes them do it," reasoned Susan.

An hour sped on, then Mrs. Gray insisted that it was time to go. So the gentlemen saw the ladies home, and started for home themselves. But before they parted, Blodgett said:

"Julian, I want to ask you a favor. Will you grant it?"

"Sure, if I can," Julian replied.

"You can," Blodgett smiled. "Did you enjoy your dinner today?"

"Did I? Oh, boy!"

"Well, then, tell the boys at the bank you did, but don't say much else about today, will you? The fact is, Julian, that—that—Mrs. Gray has pleased me very much and I intend to ask her to marry me."

"Will she?"

"I don't know. I hope so," Blodgett replied. "Do you love her, Mr. Blodgett?"

"That's a sudden question, my lad. I've watched her at the bank and she always impressed me as a very refined and cultured gentlewoman. And today, I saw that she was truly a home woman. And when we were all together in my home today, something happened that I thought would never happen. Love came to me again, Julian. Not the love that you will experience most any time now, for that is past and gone with me even as it is past and gone with Mrs. Gray. A new love that craves the companionship of a good woman. That is the love I feel for her. But until I can offer myself to her, for elderly people must conduct such things with dignity, you will say nothing and tell pretty Susan to do the same? For if Mrs. Gray would not care for me, no one need know, and we can go on as before. Otherwise, the office force would gossip about it, and that would be intolerable for Mrs. Gray and probably force her to change her position, a thing she cannot well do. Will you promise me this?"

"I sure will," Julian said heartily. The confession seemed to place a new dignity upon him. "But I know you'll win because everyone likes you."

Then they shook on it, as men do, and coming to the parting of their way, each went to his respective home.

Julian's mother welcomed him as mothers do, and he went to bed. As he undressed, he thought of Blodgett going back to his lonesome home and Mrs. Gray in the bleak-looking boarding-house.

"Well," he consoled himself, "I guess she'll marry him and then they'll both be happy," and thus comfortably settling the matter, he fell asleep.

The next day, Blodgett was around the bank and Mrs. Gray was at her statements, and everything seemed ordinary and regular enough. Julian, though, felt there was a difference, and wondered if he imagined he saw a soft light in Mrs. Gray's eyes and if he imagined that Blodgett went to her desk oftener than usual.

But he discovered that it was not imagination for on the following Christmas Eve, Blodgett took him aside, just as if he were a big brother, confided to him that he and Mrs. Gray were to be married the next morning, and that he wanted him and Susan to "stand up" for them. There would be no fuss nor dressing up, just a quiet little ceremony as befitted two older people, and who better could they want but the two who had made the Thanksgiving party?

The Berry Family

How Many Do You Know?

1. A comparative of age.
2. Probably the most common color or hue among horses.
3. The bridal month.
4. A fowl whose down is much prized.
5. Which did Mark Twain make famous?
6. Which is extremely popular during the Thanksgiving and Christmas Seasons?
7. An emblem or characteristic of morning.
8. A game played by two persons, each having twelve men.
9. A kind of coarse file.
10. An important by-product of grain threshing.
11. Ethiopian.
12. A vehicle for conveying children to a consolidated school.
13. Broken or crumbling bits of earth, peat, or the like; a failure; to cogitate or ponder.
14. A rude light made with tallow and a wick.
15. The wool bearer.
16. What is the appellation sometimes applied to Monday?
17. Labor performed for another.
18. What general of the Civil War had a name beginning with "John A." and was known as "Black Jack"?
19. A bank of sand at the mouth of a river, or a division of music.
20. To thrust or prod with something more or less pointed.

ANSWERS.

1.	Elderberry.	11.	Blackberry.
2.	Bayberry.	12.	Hackberry.
3.	Juneberry.	13.	Mulberry.
4.	Gooseberry.	14.	Candleberry.
5.	Huckleberry.	15.	Sheepberry.
6.	Cranberry.	16.	Blueberry.
7.	Dewberry.	17.	Serviceberry.
8.	Checkerberry.	18.	Loganberry.
9.	Raspberry.	19.	Barberry.
10.	Strawberry.	20.	Pokeberry.

28 Steel Engraved Christmas CARDS AND ENVELOPES

Highest Grade Cards Made — All In Colors

Given For One Subscription

IN this assortment of high-grade Xmas Cards, Folders and Envelopes we offer our readers the very best there is to be had. As you perhaps know, the art of steel engraving is the most difficult and most expensive process in the whole world of printing. All the Cards and Folders in this assortment are steel engraved in handsome colors on the very finest, double-weight, linen-finish cardboard, and the illustrations and verses are all different and of the highest order.

The assortment contains Two Greeting or Presentation Cards, 4x5 inches, with envelopes; One Greeting or Remembrance Card, 3½x4¼ inches, with envelope; One Six-Page Folder with Silk Ribbon Binder, 2⅝x4 inches, with envelope, and Nine, all different, Christmas Greeting Presentation or Remembrance Cards, 2⅝x4 inches, all with envelopes.

We anticipate a big demand for these high-grade Christmas Cards, therefore please send in your order at once as our supply is limited. Remember, you could not buy better cards than these at any price, anywhere—this we guarantee. We will send you this fine assortment of Christmas Cards, Folders, etc., with envelopes to match—28 pieces in all—packed in a neat box, upon the terms of the following free offer.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you this high-grade assortment of Steel Engraved Christmas Cards, Folders and Envelopes, exactly as described, free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 8651.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

What A Beautiful Christmas Doll For Some Little Girl In Your Home!

Won't She Fairly Shout With Joy When She Wakes Up And Finds This Big, Handsome, Sleeping Dolly Waiting For Her On Christmas Morning?

YES, Santa Claus will bring this big lifelike Doll to any little girl whose Papa, Mama, brother or sister will send in a club of only six one-year subscriptions to COMFORT. Not since before the war have we been able to offer such an expensive Doll. No city store will show a larger or handsomer Doll this season at anywhere near the price we paid for this one. We bought five thousand of them in one lot direct from the factory—that is how we secured them so cheaply. And just think—a club of only six subscriptions to COMFORT brings this beautiful Doll right to your door—yours to have and to own without one cent of expense. What a splendid Christmas present it will make for some little tot in your home!

Over One Foot And A Half Tall

Look At Her Beautiful Dress And Real Stockings And Slippers

She Can Open And Close Her Eyes. She Has Real Teeth, Long Golden Hair And Wears A Pretty Dress With Real Stockings And Slippers.

NOW let us tell you more about this Doll. She stands over a foot and a half tall. The body, arms and legs are made by a new improved process which renders them practically indestructible. The head is unbreakable and head, arms and legs are movable. And if you could only see her hair. It is a light golden color, thick, long and luxuriant, falling far below her waist. Her eyes are as blue as the sky and she can open and shut them and go to sleep like a real baby whenever you want her to. Her rosebud lips are parted in a winsome smile revealing her pretty white teeth in a truly lifelike manner.

She is fully dressed from head to feet in the latest style with cute short sleeves, handsome figured lace trimmed waist and short pleated skirt and she wears real stockings and slippers with silveroid buckles. You can undress and dress this Doll as often as you please and you can take off her stockings and slippers and put them on again just as you do your own.

Fathers and Mothers—just look at this beautiful Doll as she stands smiling and waiting for someone to pick her up, hug her and kiss her and take her out to play. Don't you think your little girl would just love to have her for her very own? Of course she would—and you should take advantage of this offer at once. Remember we have but five thousand of these Dolls on hand and when they are gone this offer will be withdrawn.

FOR A CLUB OF ONLY SIX!

YOU can surely find six neighbors and friends who will be glad to subscribe to COMFORT at the present bargain rate of 50 cents a year. Send us their names and addresses and the money collected ($3.00 in all) and we will send you this big, beautiful Sleeping Doll, fully dressed and otherwise exactly as described above, packed in a strong box so that it cannot possibly get broken, free by parcel post prepaid. There will be no expense to you whatever. Your Mail Carrier will deliver the Doll right to your door without charge. This Doll is Reward No. 7806 and please mention this number when ordering.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Stocking Full of Fine Christmas Presents

For A Club Of Only Two!

BIG Christmas Stockings brimful of presents for the little folks and older children as well. COMFORT is going to play Santa Claus this year and distribute hundreds of these Christmas stockings among its readers who have little ones for whom Christmas Trees and Santa Claus Gifts must be provided at all cost. The contents of the stockings vary a little but the general assortment remains practically the same and you may be sure of receiving as many presents as are herewith illustrated. Each stocking contains just the gifts that delight the hearts of boys and girls—horns, dolls, whistles, musical fifes, toy dishes, jumping jacks, balls, animals, games and other pleasing holiday novelties. The stockings are a foot and a quarter long, and all the presents are regular size, much larger than they appear to be in the accompanying illustration. We will send you one of these Christmas Stockings free upon the terms of the following offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you one of these Big Christmas Stockings full of Santa Claus Gifts free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 1012.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Gold Bracelet

Adjustable—Guaranteed For Ten Years

THIS style of Bracelet has always been a great favorite because it is adjustable. It can be made to fit the arm of either woman or growing child. It is made of rolled gold, absolutely guaranteed for ten years, is very light and dainty, measuring only 3-16 of an inch in width. It positively will not tarnish or change color as do the cheap Bracelets, but, being genuine rolled gold, it will always retain its bright, handsome appearance.

By purchasing these Bracelets in large quantities, direct from the factory, we are enabled to offer it for a ridiculously small club of subscriptions. Just read our free offer.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this guaranteed, rolled gold Bracelet, free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9852.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

SELF-FILLING

Fountain Pen

For A Club Of Three

HERE is a fountain pen that we can positively guarantee. Perhaps you have had some experience with fountain pens which never would write well and continually leaked ink all over your fingers. If so you will certainly appreciate this opportunity to secure a fountain pen that has none of these defects. Our illustration is of course greatly reduced in size. The pen offered you here is 6½ inches long, made entirely of hard rubber, finely finished, and the pen point is genuine 14-K gold. The feeding device is perfect, permitting a uniform flow of ink and it will not leak. Also please notice that this is a self-filling pen. You can fill this fountain pen in less than 10 seconds by pressing down the spring on the side, then placing the pen point in a bottle of ink, after which you release the spring and the pen is instantly filled with ink to its full capacity. If given proper care this pen should last anybody for years. If you will accept the following special offer we will send you one of these self-filling fountain pens with a positive guarantee that if it fails to prove satisfactory in any way you may return it to us and we will replace it with a new pen free of charge.

Club Offer. For a club of only three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this guaranteed self-filling fountain pen free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8873.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Silver Bonbon Dish

Genuine Gold Lined

THIS beautiful dish can be used for a variety of purposes—for candy, nuts, salted peanuts, popcorn, etc. It is much larger than it appears in the above illustration, measuring over five inches in width and two inches deep. It is heavily silver plated outside and gold lined. Needless to say, it makes a handsome ornament for the sideboard and will last a lifetime.

We will send you this handsome Silver Bonbon Dish free upon the terms of the following special offer.

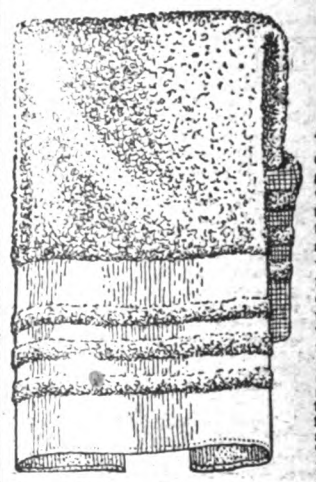
Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this Silver Plated, Gold Lined Bonbon Dish free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9942.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Crystal Beads

Topaz Amethyst — Emerald Sapphire

Given For A Club Of Three!



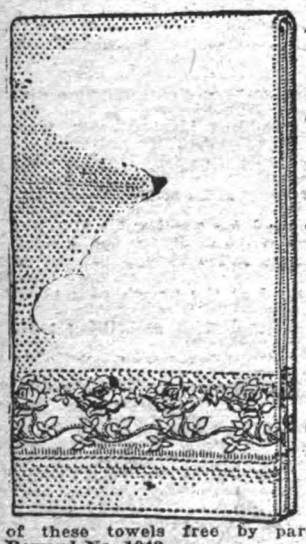
THESE Crystal Beads are the latest thing out and so beautiful are they we could not refrain from buying a quantity to give as club rewards to our young lady readers. The Necklace is 24 inches in length, with a strong, durable gold-plated clasp; the beads are graduated, the largest ones measuring ⅞x⅝ inches and the smallest ⅜x¼ inches in size. They are real cut glass—not pressed glass—and their flashing prismatic colors are a delight to the eye.

For summer wear, with low-neck dresses, nothing could be more stylish than one of these handsome new necklaces and we are delighted to think that we are able to make this offer. Be sure to state color desired when ordering. You can have your choice of Topaz, Amethyst, Emerald and Sapphire.

Given To You! For only three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you one of these handsome and stylish Crystal Bead Necklaces free by parcel post prepaid. Please be sure to mention color wanted. Reward No. 9033.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Two Turkish Towels



Good Size Soft And Fleecy

AFTER bathing there is nothing quite as fine as a good rub down with a Turkish towel, in fact it is the best towel for all purposes, whether for the bathroom, guestroom or everyday family use. They absorb the water much more readily than other towels and the soft fleece-like surface imparts to the body a delightful feeling of warmth and well-being. They are also fine for baby's toilet as they will not hurt the tender skin. The towels offered here are 15 inches wide and 32 inches long which is a good convenient size for all-round family use, and are of good weight, well made and finished. We will make you a present of two of these towels upon the terms of the following offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you one pair (2) of these fine Turkish Towels free by parcel post, prepaid. Premium No. 9912.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Pair Huck Towels

For A Club Of Two

New large, pure white towels of excellent quality. Size 15x30 inches, full bleached and white as snow; these beautiful towels are a satisfaction to the eye. Not only do they make delightful toilet towels but are adapted to use as standard or bureau covers, tray cloths, etc., etc. We can positively guarantee entire satisfaction as regards their laundering qualities.

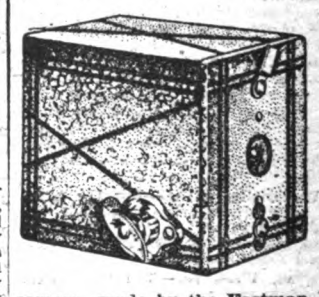
Club Offer! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you one pair (2) of these towels free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 1042.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

31-Piece Violet Decorated Dinner Set

THIS OFFER NOT GOOD OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

Reward No. 75010



For A Club Of Only Ten We Will Give Any Woman This Beautiful High-Grade Dinner Set.

THIS splendid set of dishes is full size for family use and consists of 6 Plates, 6 Cups, 6 Saucers, 6 Cereal or Fruit Dishes, 6 Individual Butters and large Meat Platter all handsomely decorated with clusters of purple wood violets surrounded with rich green foliage and bordered with lovely tracings of gold. Unlike the ordinary dishes that are usually offered as premiums, every piece in this magnificent set is (with the exception of the decorations) snowy white in color, dainty in design, light in weight and finished with a Haviland glaze which gives it that smooth, velvety appearance so much admired by every woman. The decorations will last a lifetime because, being burned into the ware and underneath the glaze it positively will not wash, rub or wear off. Our illustration does not give you any idea of the real beauty of these dishes because it fails to show up the pleasing color combination of purple, green and gold which is so finely set off by the gleaming white of the ware itself. This is by far the handsomest, daintiest dinner set we have ever offered and we are positive that it will more than please every woman who secures one of them on the terms of our very liberal offer. No matter where you live (if it is not outside the United States), we will ship you this set by express or freight direct from the pottery in Ohio.

Given To You! For a club of only ten one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this handsome 31-piece Violet Decorated Dinner Set carefully packed to prevent breakage, charges collect. Reward No. 75010.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Premo Camera

Reward No. 7944

Films And Instruction Book Free

THIS is not a toy but a genuine "Premo" camera, made by the Eastman Kodak Co., therefore you can depend upon it to produce the most pleasing and satisfactory results. It takes a picture 1¼ by 1¾ inches, is fitted with the best quality Meniscus lens and an automatic shutter adapted for snapshots and time exposures. The pictures may be taken either the long way or the short way of the camera. It uses the regulation roll film cartridge containing six exposures, and this may be put in the camera and taken out again in broad daylight, so that you don't have to go into a dark room every time you want to load the camera. Anybody can make good pictures with this camera. Being small and compact, it is just the thing to carry with you to "snap" pictures of your friends, sports, etc., with. And remember, we send you not only the camera itself but also include One Six Exposure Roll Film Cartridge and Instruction Book, all packed together in a strong box and sent to you Free by Parcel Post, prepaid, on the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For a club of four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you by parcel post, prepaid, this Premo Camera with one Roll Film Cartridge containing six exposures and complete Instruction Book. Reward No. 7944.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint— a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SLEEPING DOLL FREE

WITH REAL HAIR.

Beautiful Imported Sleeping Doll, full shaped body, bisque head, lovely rosy smiling face, and beautiful bright eyes that open and close. She is over a foot tall, has movable arms and legs, wears handsome hat and pretty dress and shoes and stockings that take off. We give this beautiful Sleeping Doll for selling only 15 packages Colored Postcards at 10c a package.
COLUMBIA NOVELTY CO., Dept. 54, East Boston, Mass.

10 YEAR WATCH FREE

Ring, Chain and Scarf Pin

American Watch—Guaranteed for 10 years, neat model, fancy back; also fine Chain, Lover's Knot Scarf Pin and Ring set with fine stones. We give all 4 pieces for selling only 20 pkgs. of fancy Post Cards—easiest of all to sell—at 15c a package. ALL SENT POSTPAID. Order post cards today.
SUN MFG. CO. DEPT. 925 CHICAGO

BIG CAMERA GIVEN

Genuine Eastman takes large high class pictures 2¼x3¼, the best made, given for selling two lots of 20 Art & Religious Pictures at 10c each. Order 20, when sold send the $2.00 and choose Camera or other valuable prize from big list sent with pictures. RAY ART CO. Dept. 78, Chicago.

FREE RIFLE and 500 BUCK SHOTS

Boys! Become an expert marksman! Rifle fully guaranteed. Sent prepaid for selling only 25 large colored pictures OR 25 pkgs. Fancy Post Cards at 10c each. Order choice.
Sent Charges Prepaid. GATES MFG. CO. Dept. 425 CHICAGO

Conducted by Cousin Marion

In writing this department always sign your true name and give your address; if not, your letter will receive no attention. Name will not be published.

H-M-M—let's see, it's most Thanksgiving and high time I was thinking about my dinner on that festive day. I've about decided to visit one of you girls—to be sure, you haven't invited me yet, but that's a mere trifle. Trouble is, I can't decide where to go so I'll make a list of names and say "Eeney, meeney, miney, mo," and visit the one that is "it." I'll bring Aloysious with me. No, he is not my son—the very idea!—but my pet parrot, and a very clever bird. And remember, I shall be much disappointed if the girl I visit hasn't helped to prepare the dinner and made the pies and pudding. I'm old-fashioned and haven't much use for the girl who doesn't know how to cook. If I'm unable to carry out this wonderful idea I'll think of you and wish that all happiness be yours—now and forever.

ELINOR, Miss.—"A polite man is one who listens with interest to things he knows all about, when they are told him by a person who knows nothing about them," and that applies to women as well as men. It was hardly tactful of you to correct your friend, particularly in public and in such a manner as to make him feel embarrassed. It's only human nature to resent such an occurrence and this unfortunate experience should teach you to be more careful in the future. The only thing you can do is to apologize and if, in the future, you must make corrections, do it in private and in such a way as not to offend even the most sensitive.

MRS. G. H., Washington.—Why ask me if you should tell your neighbor that his wife goes out with other men while he is at work? Isn't the fact that you have two eyes and but one mouth sufficient answer? I reckon if the Lord had meant for us to tell all we saw He would have given us two mouths.

BOX 47, Wisconsin.—The nationality of the young man in question isn't nearly so important as the fact that you would have to live with his stepmother if you marry him. Thoreau says, "I would rather sit on a pumpkin and have it all to myself, than to be crowded on a velvet cushion," and I heartily agree with him—not that I'd care to sit on a pumpkin—they're much nicer made into Thanksgiving pies. Besides, I think it would be rather a silly procedure for a person of my age, and I'd need a strong, healthy pumpkin, preferably one of concrete. But I'm wandering from my subject as I have a sad habit of doing. The point I'm trying to locate is that it would be better to wait until he could provide a home for you; not necessarily a velvet-cushion home but just a plain gingham home. You should wait at least a year longer anyway. As for his nationality, have him become naturalized if he hasn't already done so. I wouldn't marry a prince if it meant giving up my rights as an American citizen—even though I'm not sure what they are.

GOLDEN CURLS, Tenn.—Don't fool yourself; the boy you describe isn't too timid to ask you for a "date" if he wanted one, or it. Perhaps he is rather vain—some boys are—and likes to have girls ask him for his company, or, as you say, maybe he doesn't care enough about you. In either case, you couldn't think of taking the initiative. Just let him alone and don't waste too much time or thought on him.

LYDIA, N. Mex.—If you dislike a certain person then that is the person of whom you ought never to speak. The girl who never "knocks" her friends, girls in particular, is the girl men admire. That's worth remembering, no matter what you know about another girl and how much you want to tell it. It is better to refrain from gossip because of nobleness of spirit, and all that, but the chief thing is to refrain from it regardless of the reason.

DUDELUM, N. Mex.—I don't see how you can dance without putting your arm around your partner but you needn't overdo it. Be reasonable. (2) Of course it would be proper to tell a girl that her petticoat showed below her skirt. I didn't know girls wore petticoats nowadays.

FRANCES, Tenn.—I would not—most emphatically not. You are years and years too young to think of marriage, anyway.

MAID OF ATHENS, Georgia.—If you bob your hair it won't be long before you will be crying, "Give, oh give me back my hair, ' and nature gives it back very slowly, about half an inch a month, I believe, and bobbed hair in the intermediate stage is a pitiful sight. However, like the little girl who had a little curl, when bobbed hair looks good it looks very, very good and when it looks bad it is horrid. Make sure it will be becoming to your special type before taking the fatal snip.

HAPPY MISSOURI GIRL.—It is most ungentlemanly of your friend to keep your ring after you have asked for it but what can you expect from a cigarette fiend? Evidently he thinks, in giving you up instead of tobacco, that a woman is only a woman but a good cigar—ette is a smoke, though that's taking fearful liberties with Kipling and I seldom take liberties with strange men.

BETTY, Ark.—Begging your pardon, but you aren't a "decided blonde" else you wouldn't be writing to me. You are undecided. There's no accounting for tastes, but between a young man with no money and but little education and another fellow, "handsome, well educated, worlds of money, and noble and upright," I'd choose the latter, even if he does sound like a piano. Why marry either just now? Wait two or three years and by that time you may think differently about the matter, or your parents may change their views. Lots of things can happen in a year or two.

WORRIED, N. J.—Religious differences often cause unhappiness, particularly marriages between Catholics and Protestants. If your objection, and that of your parents, is based upon a book you read, then you are being very unfair and you shouldn't judge his religion by it any more than you would want him to condemn your religious belief by newspaper stories, false or true, about your ministers. I'm not taking sides but I like for people to be fair.

ALBERTA, Illinois.—The man who is engaged to a good girl and who admits that he loves her because she is "straight and decent" should keep away from girls that are not. It was quite proper for him, as your fiance, to kiss you good night but, in view of his behavior, you are justified in forbidding him that privilege. Coming from the class of girls he associates with, his kisses must seem tainted and polluted. For your own good and future happiness, you should stop and consider well before marrying him. It may hurt, terribly, if you give him up now, but it is much better to be hurt now and get over it after a while, as you will, than to put yourself in a position where you will be unhappy all the rest of your life, for unless he changes greatly, your lot as his wife doesn't promise to be a happy one.

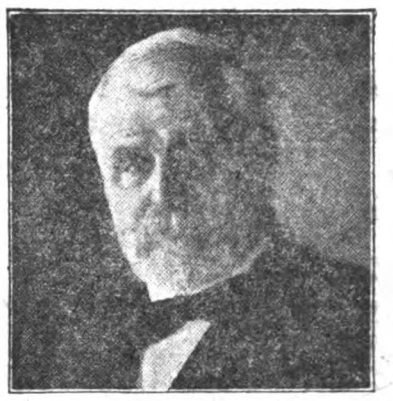
BLUE EYES, Crooksville.—It is easy enough to understand how such a conceited tightwad would make an impression on you though it is sad to think about him when there are so many nice persons and things to think about. Next time, and every time, he tries to make an hour-ahead-of-time date with you, tell him you are engaged for the evening—if you had known earlier, etc., and if he takes you only for rides, tell him you are sorry that you can't go but that you want to see a certain play—or whatever is the favorite amusement in Crooksville—and that you are going with a girl friend. Don't have any time left for him until he asks for it as he should. You shouldn't feel so flattered because he tells the fellows he cares for you. He really shouldn't discuss you at all.

RED WING, N. Car.—Words are useless if he still persists in calling on you after you have told him to stay away, have left the room when he called and refused to speak to him. He isn't what you'd call sensitive, is he? A brick, well aimed, is what he needs.

BROWN EYES, Alabama.—Of course he's a nice boy "except he's lazy." Omy gosh, aren't girls funny! Don't worry, you'd not only be "willing" to do all you could toward making a living, but "obliged" to as well. You might be able to take good care of him and reasonably good care of yourself but do you think you could care for five or six children? Even lazy husbands have been known to have large families.

B. H., Arkansas.—A lollypop is about the "least expensive present" I know of and it possesses lasting qualities and endurance not to be surpassed by more expensive gifts. Just what do you mean by "inexpensive"? That could mean anything from five cents to five hundred or five thousand dollars, according to amount of money one has. To me, just now, a nine-cent present would be frightfully expensive. Books from fifty cents up and fountain pens from $1.50 to $5.00 make good presents. There are ever so many things from which to select. Where's your mail-order catalogue?

RUTH, So. Carolina.—If you wait until you find an "agreeable way" to reduce, you'll find yourself weighing much more than 180 pounds. There is no agreeable way; it's all self-denial and exercise plus a knowledge of foods. I'm glad you are not frivolous. That would be fatal. A frivolous fat girl is a pitiful sight—just like an elephant trying to be frisky. Reduce and see if you aren't more popular. Fat girls may be wonderful dancers, but the slim girls get the partners.



All this talk about reducing and diet makes me hungry. I think I'll go make a cup o' tea for myself.
COUSIN MARION.

NOT MORE THAN ONE FREE TRIAL BOTTLE TO ANY FAMILY

I will send anyone anywhere one free Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin—What is Your Address?

THERE is someone in every family who is constipated, bilious, dyspeptic. They need my Syrup Pepsin and will be better off for using it. It may be a woman, an old man, a tiny baby. Syrup Pepsin is as effective for grownups as it is safe for babies. Thousands of mothers can testify to that.

Perhaps you have reached the stage where you take pills every night and think there is nothing else for you to do. Don't believe it! No matter how chronically constipated or dyspeptic you are, Syrup Pepsin will regulate you. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that acts on the stomach and intestines, and in a short time trains the digestive organs to do their work naturally and without help.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL
"As I Am To-day"

YES, I TAKE MY OWN MEDICINE!

I know what old people suffer with their bowels for I have been a family physician in my county since 1875, and I am old myself, past 82 years of age; born 1839, and still strong. I don't know of a remedy that is better for old people than my Syrup Pepsin, and I'll tell you why: It is mild and gentle in action; it doesn't gripe, and it doesn't lose its effect when you take it regularly. I know this by using it myself, by prescribing it since 1875 and by manufacturing it since 1892. You can form your own opinion by sending for a free trial bottle.

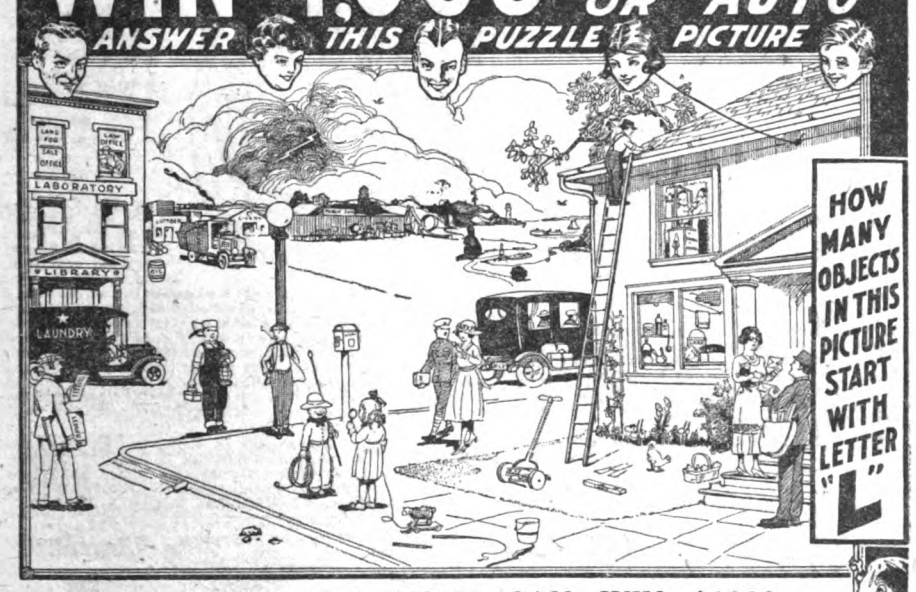
WHO NEEDS SYRUP PEPSIN

I want to send a free trial bottle of my Syrup Pepsin to anyone who suffers from one or more of the following: Constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, headache, belching, bad taste, bad breath, dizziness, drowsiness and the many other symptoms of sluggish bowels. If you have children who suffer in this way write for them.

SEND FOR A FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

In spite of the fact that my Syrup Pepsin is on sale in every drug store, I want you to become acquainted with it at my expense, and then, if you find it as I claim, buy it of your nearest dealer at a price that will stand you about a cent a dose. One such bottle will last an average family many months. Just now send me your name and address in any way most convenient to yourself, by filling out the coupon below, by postal or letter. I have given many thousands of these bottles away and I know you will appreciate it as keenly as others have. Address me today.

Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 553 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.
I want to try your Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Kindly send a free trial bottle to the address below, all charges prepaid.



Your name.....

St. or R. F. D,.....

Town and State .....

WIN $1,000.00 OR BUICK AUTO

ANSWER THIS PUZZLE PICTURE

Fun For All-- YOU CAN WIN $1000 Costs Nothing.

MOTHER, DAD, Sister and Brother, all join in and find the objects in Puzzle Picture starting with the letter "L," like Ladder, Lady, Lamp, Etc. Nothing is hidden, everything is visible. $1,000 In Cash or a new Buick "4" Touring Car (1922 model) may be won by the person sending in the nearest correct list of L-words, second nearest wins second prize, etc.

Free Buick or $1000 Can Be Yours

It is free, no costs, no obligations. This is merely a campaign to further advertise The New Universities Dictionary. As a reward for boosting our Dictionary we are making a Special Offer whereby you can win a bigger prize by sending in a Dictionary order. This is optional,—you can win a prize without a Dictionary order.

—— RULES ——

1. Anyone not connected with this Company may submit an answer.
2. The answer having the largest, nearest correct list of objects shown in the picture beginning with "L" will be awarded first prize, etc. Handwriting, etc., will not count. In case of a tie, duplicate prizes will be awarded.
3. Words found in the English Dictionary can only be counted. Do not use obsolete, compound or hyphenated words. An object can be named only once; where plural is used, singular cannot be counted and vice versa. Words of same spelling can be used only once. Number each word, starting, 1, 2, 3, etc.
4. Three prominent disinterested business men will act as Judges: Fred Spafford, V. Pres. First Nat'l Bank; B. K. Wood, Principal Office Training School; Frank Conkey, Sec'y Western Grain Co. All contestants agree to accept the decision of the Judges as final and conclusive.
5. All answers must be mailed by Dec. 15th, 1921. The winners and correct list of words will be mailed to persons sending in a Dictionary order.

Here's the Plan

This is the plan—If your answer is awarded first prize and you have sent in $3 for one Dictionary you will win $300 instead of $30, but if you have sent in $5 for two Dictionaries you will win $1,000 or the Buick instead of $30.

Colorado Woman Wins $1,000

In our mid-summer advertising campaign, Mrs. Ella Phillips, of Clifton, Colorado, won first prize. Having sent in a $5 Dictionary order, she won $1,000. In the same Puzzle Picture Game 16-yr. old Virginia Johnson, Barlow, Ky., won $500. You may be the next winner. Try your "luck", it doesn't cost anything.

$2000 IN PRIZES

	If No Dictionary Is Ordered	If One Dictionary Is Ordered	If Two Dictionaries Are Ordered
1st Prize..	$30	$300	$1,000
2nd Prize.	15	150	500
3rd Prize..	8	75	200
4th Prize..	5	30	100
5th Prize..	4	15	50
6th to 10th	3	10	25
11th to 15th	2	5	10
16th to 25th	1	2	5

Address your answer to
THE HENBER COMPANY, Dept. 60, Minneapolis, Minn.

Deformities of the Back

Thousands of Remarkable Cases

An old lady, 72 years of age, who suffered for many years and was absolutely helpless, found relief. A man who was helpless, unable to rise from his chair, was riding horseback and playing tennis within a year. A little child, paralyzed, was playing about the house after wearing a Philo Burt Appliance three weeks. We have successfully treated more than 45,000 cases the past 19 years.

30 Days' Trial Free

We will prove its value in your own case. There is no reason why you should not accept our offer. The photographs show how light, cool, elastic and easily adjusted the Philo Burt Appliance is—how different from the old torturous plaster, leather or steel jackets.

Every sufferer with a weakened or deformed spine owes it to himself to investigate thoroughly. Price within reach of all.

Send For Our Free Book.

If you will describe the case it will aid us in giving you definite information at once.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO.
334-II Odd Fellows Temple
JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

54 Inch Rope Of Pearls

Reward No. 9882

For A Club Of Two!

THE dream of every woman and girl is to possess her own necklace of gleaming, iridescent pearls. There's a wonderful fascination about them—a beauty that appeals to every feminine heart.

Now your dream can come true—for we are giving away this handsome, full opera length rope of Parisian pearls. It is 54 inches long, all the pearls are of uniform size—¼ inch in diameter—of perfect finish and luster, far handsomer than the ordinary imitation pearl necklace sold at a high price. It can easily be wound twice around the neck, making the double rope as shown in our illustration.

By rare good luck we secured first choice of these necklaces from a large importer and at a price that enables us to give them for an unusually small club. Please read the following offer and learn how you can get a beautiful, 54-inch rope of pearls free of all cost.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this handsome, opera length Pearl Necklace free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9882.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

All Yours For Only One Subscription!

52 All Different Lovely Gold and Color Embossed Christmas Enclosure Cards, Folders, Cut Outs, Seals, Stickers, Tags, Etc., Etc.

Reward No. 7931

A Big Package of Beautiful Christmas Novelties, And An Exquisite Colored Christmas Calendar For 1922.

All the latest new style Christmas novelties, beautifully printed and embossed on superfine paper in gold, purple, crimson, holly-green and all the colors of the rainbow. The use of these dainty, appropriate emblems of holiday cheer is now almost universal—everyone realizes how much these refined little cards, tags, seals, stickers, etc., add to the value of the Christmas gift.

For the benefit of COMFORT readers we had this special assortment made up expressly for us by one of the largest and best known Christmas novelty manufacturers in America. And in order to give the greatest value possible we had them add to the assortment a most beautiful 1922 Christmas Calendar 4½ inches wide by 6½ inches long, lithographed in no less than five colors on heavy white coated specially prepared paper. This Calendar alone is worth all that we ask you to send us for the whole collection—and you will say so too when you see it.

Now let us tell you what this big assortment contains:

One Extra Large Colored and Holly Embossed "Christmas Stocking" Enclosure Card.

Five Large Elegantly Embossed and Colored Christmas Enclosure Cards.

Ten Medium Embossed and Colored Christmas Enclosure Cards.

Two Large Handsomely Colored and Decorated Christmas Tags.

Four Medium Colored and Decorated Christmas Tags.

One Extra Large Colored and Holly Embossed Christmas Book Mark.

One Beautiful Extra Large Colored and Embossed Christmas Novelty Cut-out Card.

Two Dainty Colored and Embossed Novelty Cut-out Christmas Folders.

Ten Beautifully Colored and Embossed Santa Claus, Evergreen, Poisettia, and Christmas Bells Gummed Seals.

One Special Large Oval Illustrated Gold Embossed and Colored Christmas Gummed Seal with the words, Do Not Open Until Christmas."

Five Novelty Santa Claus Cut-out Christmas Gummed Seals, Embossed in Colors.

Ten Cute Novelty Children Cut-out Christmas Gummed Seals.

One Artistic, Beautifully Embossed and Finished Christmas Calendar for 1922.

All the Enclosure Cards, Tags and Folders carry a cheery Christmas Greeting, such as "Merry Christmas," "With Best Christmas Wishes," "Christmas Greetings," "Merry Yuletide," "Christmas Joys," and others equally as pleasing and appropriate. These are to be tied to or enclosed inside your Christmas packages to bear a loving message with the gift. And all the gaily colored gummed Stamps and Seals you will use to seal and decorate the outside of your Christmas letters and packages as well. You will be surprised and delighted to see how much they add to the attractiveness of your gifts, to say nothing of the fun of "doing them up."

Don't forget that in addition to all of these lovely cards, seals, tags, stickers, etc., we are also going to send an exquisitely embossed and multi-colored Christmas Calendar for 1922, a large handsome holly decorated Book Mark and two large Christmas Novelty Cut-out Folders which are as unique as they are pleasing. When you first look at one of them it is to all appearances a handsome Christmas Post Card and the other a very attractive four-page Booklet, when presto—a flip of the finger, and the startling transformation takes place, causing the figures and designs to stand out in bold relief, and in a life-like manner that is truly wonderful. These cute novelties are something entirely new this season and they make very attractive center-table or mantlepiece ornaments as they are large and stand without support.

We will send you this package of beautiful Christmas Novelties, including the large Handsome Christmas Calendar upon the terms of the following very liberal

FREE OFFER. For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you this big package of beautiful Christmas Novelties free by mail postpaid. Reward No. 7931.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Writing And Drawing Outfit

Reward No. 9972

For Home And School

For A Club Of Two!

HERE is something that is needed in every home and by every schoolboy and schoolgirl—a big value-assortment of almost everything needed for writing and drawing. Our illustration is, of course, greatly reduced in size. The Case, which is made of fine leatherette, is 10½ inches long and 2½ inches wide. It is of the folding style, with a snap fastener, so that it can conveniently be carried in the pocket or in the children's lunch basket. Inside the Case there are three high-grade pencils with erasers, one good quality penholder with pen, one twin pencil (in reality two pencils in a combination holder), one pencil sharpener, one large rubber eraser, one 10-inch ruler and an aluminum collapsible drinking cup with cover.

This Outfit is manufactured by the American Lead Pencil Company, which is sufficient guarantee of its fine quality, and we know that it will please our readers, especially those who have children going to school, and of course it is just as handy in the home, because all the pencils, penholder, etc., are high grade and just what grown people like to use. If you will accept the following special offer we will send you one of these fine Outfits, free.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this complete Writing and Drawing Outfit, exactly as above described, free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9972.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Sugar, Creamer And Tray

MADE of "crushed" silver—the very latest idea. Sugar, Creamer and Tray are full standard size. The Tray is quadruple silver plated and both Sugar and Creamer are quadruple silver plated outside and gold lined inside. A very useful set and a beautiful ornament for the dining table or sideboard.

CLUB OFFER. We will send you this Crushed Silver Set free and prepaid for four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each. Reward No. 7904.

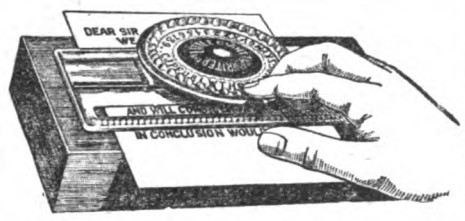
Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

She Is Looking For A Mother

"Peggy" The New Winter Doll

Do You Want Her?

PEGGY first saw the light of day in New York but she didn't like the big city with its noise and confusion and was mighty glad to come to Maine on a brief vacation before looking for a permanent home somewhere in the country.



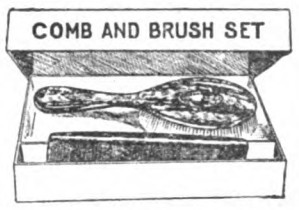
She doesn't care where she lives so long as it is in some cozy little town or on a nice, big farm, and provided she can find some little girl who will be a kind mother to her. She just loves the horses and cows and doggies and kitties and—yes, even the little "piggies" make her laugh until she can hardly stand up.

Peggy says that life on the farm is the only life for her, so we want to give her to some little girl who lives on a farm, where she can romp and play to her heart's content and be happy all day long. Please remember, however, that we have but a limited number of these Dolls on hand and if you want one your order should be sent in at once.

A New York manufacturer who wanted to keep his help busy during the dull season sold us these Dolls at about one-half the regular wholesale price, so we are enabled to give them away for almost nothing.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you "Peggy" free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8621.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.



Little Giant Typewriter

A REAL machine that writes very distinctly. Has every letter in the alphabet, all the numerals from 1 to 10 and punctuation marks. Uses any size letter paper up to 5 inches wide. For correspondence, making out invoices, statements, addressing envelopes, etc., this machine will do the work well. It is very easy to operate, in fact, a child can write on it after a little practice.

Given To You! For three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Typewriter free and prepaid. Reward No. 8853.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

2-Piece Toilet Set

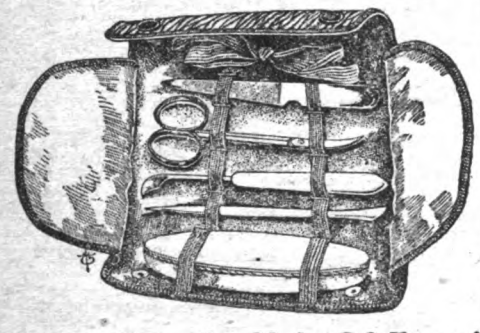
THIS is a good grade Toilet Set, consisting of comb and brush. The comb is seven inches long, with coarse and fine teeth, and comes in the new popular "Malachite" green finish. The brush is nine inches long, two and a half inches wide, with firm white bristles, and is finished in the same beautiful "Malachite" green, with a silverine shield on the back. We have given away thousands of these sets and it never fails to please.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Comb and Brush Set free and prepaid. Reward No. 9982.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Gent's Watch and Chain

Reward No. 7696



For A Club Of Six!

A WATCH that any man or boy may feel proud to carry, and an excellent timekeeper. It has a handsome polished nickel case; the movement is American made, stem wind and stem set, the dial is pure white with large plain easily read figures. We have already given away thousands of these watches and they never fail to please and satisfy. Now is the time for you to secure one of these guaranteed watches before the price of them goes up still further as it is pretty sure to do in the near future. We will send you this watch exactly as described, together with a chain, if you will accept the following

Club Offer. For a club of only six one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this guaranteed watch, also a handsome chain free by Parcel Post, prepaid. Reward No. 7696. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

French Ivory Manicure Set

In A Roll-Up Leather Case

Given For A Club Of Four!

A PRACTICAL and beautiful Set, containing everything necessary for the proper care of the nails. It consists of a 5-inch flexible polished steel nail file, a pair of 3½-inch polished steel curved nail scissors, a 4-inch cuticle knife with French Ivory handle, a 4-inch French Ivory nail stick, and a 4½-inch nail polisher or buffer with French Ivory Top. All these articles are neatly contained in a moire-lined, genuine leather case, measuring 5½ inches wide and 6 inches from end to end when opened. The case rolls up as shown in illustration, and fastens with two snap clasps. In this form it resembles a miniature pocketbook, and is just as convenient to carry, as it measures only 5½x2 inches and only 1 inch in thickness.

Although we offer this Manicure Set for an unusually small club, please understand that each and every piece is strictly high grade and regulation size. We know that every woman and girl who accepts this offer and earns one of these splendid Sets will be more than delighted with it. It is free on the terms of the following offer.

Given To You! For four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this splendid French Ivory Manicure Set in a roll-up leather case free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8124.

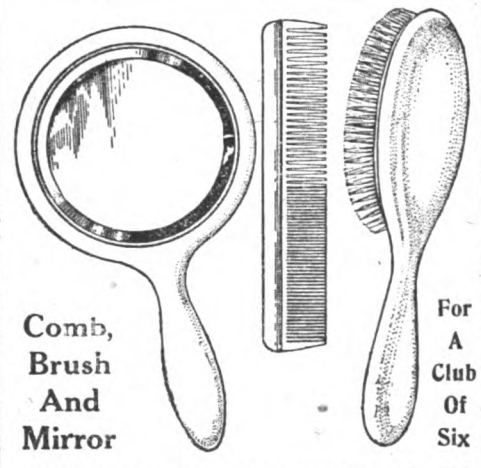
Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Ladies' Wrist Watch

With Silk Ribbon Bracelet

For A Club Of Only Ten!

WE have long searched the market for a suitable wrist watch for our girl readers and at last we have found it.



The above illustration really fails to do the watch justice. We know you will instantly fall in love with it. It is the popular octagon shape, only 5-16 of an inch thick and one inch in diameter. The case is silver, the movement strictly high grade, stem wind and set, and will keep accurate time. The dial is pure white with Arabic numerals. The bracelet is made of the finest black silk ribbon with a genuine rolled-gold catch and slide.

If you want a dainty, stylish, up-to-date wrist watch that you will be proud to show your friends, here is your opportunity to secure one absolutely free. You can easily secure the small club mentioned below and as soon as you have done so this beautiful, guaranteed wrist watch is yours without one cent of cost.

Given To You! For a club of only ten one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this Silver Wrist Watch with Ribbon Bracelet exactly as described above, absolutely free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 75110.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Ivory White Toilet Set

Comb, Brush And Mirror

For A Club Of Six

PURE white, with a fine smooth finish, this handsome Comb, Brush and Mirror Set equals in appearance the finest French Ivory. The Comb is 7½ inches long, very light and dainty, with both coarse and fine teeth. The Brush is 10 inches long and 2½ inches wide, with medium-length, finest, stiff bristles. The Mirror, which measures 10x5½ inches, is made of heavy, flawless, beveled French glass, 4½ inches in diameter.

No lady could wish for a finer Toilet Set than this one. It has the air of refinement found in the highest grade Ivory Sets, it is just as durable and can be cleaned as often as desired without injury to its smooth ivory white finish.

We will give you, free, this fine Ivory White Comb, Brush and Mirror Set in a fitted box upon the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For six one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this Comb, Brush and Mirror Set in a fitted box, free, by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 7796.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Genuine Gold Filled

Guaranteed For 5 Years

Gold Birthstone Rings

THE most popular ladies' rings worn today are these beautiful birthstone rings. Not only is it considered lucky to wear one of them but they are now and always will be exceedingly stylish. We are able to illustrate only three of the rings but there are twelve in all—a different stone for each month of the year, and of course you should wear the stone that is symbolical of the month you were born. The following is a list of the twelve rings, names of the stones and the month to which they apply:

No. 8411, January, Garnet. No. 8421, February, Amethyst. No. 8431, March, Bloodstone. No. 8441, April, Diamond. No. 8451, May, Emerald. No. 8461, June, Agate. No. 8471, July, Ruby. No. 8481, August, Sardonyx. No. 8491, September, Sapphire. No. 8501, October, Opal. No. 8511, November, Topaz. No. 8521, December, Turquoise.

Each ring is guaranteed genuine gold filled, which looks exactly like solid gold and will wear for years. In fact we absolutely guarantee each ring for at least five years. The rings themselves are perfectly plain, the stones are solitaires and perfect imitations of the real gems. The setting of each ring is the ever popular "Tiffany" style. As a Christmas, Birthday or all-the-year-round gift for wife, mother, sweetheart or sister, nothing could be more appropriate and acceptable than one of these beautiful guaranteed rings set with the birthstone of the person to whom it is given. We will send you one of these rings free upon the terms of the following offer:

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you one of these beautiful gold-filled Rings by parcel post, prepaid. Please be sure to give size and number of ring wanted.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

ASPIRIN

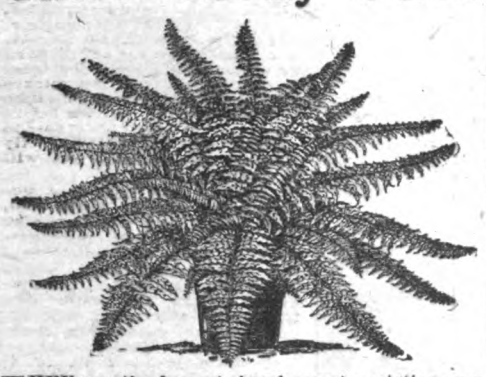
Name "Bayer" on Genuine

Take Aspirin only as told in each package of genuine Bayer Tablets of Aspirin. Then you will be following the directions and dosage worked out by physicians during 21 years, and proved safe by millions. Take no chances with substitutes. If you see the Bayer Cross on tablets, you can take them without fear for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago and for Pain. Handy tin boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

Sweet Grass Basket

For Your Sewing And Fancy Work

WHERE is the woman who does not "just love" these beautiful Sewing Baskets made of sweet grass? Their delightful fragrance which is practically everlasting is like that of flowers; they are handsome in appearance and very strong and serviceable, being hand-woven by the St. Regis Indians of Canada, who produce the finest hand-made baskets in the world.



Of ample size—eight inches in diameter and three inches deep—and with its close-fitting top, this sweet-grass Basket is just what you need in which to take along your sewing or fancy work when calling or visiting. And at home it holds your work, along with scissors, buttons, thread and other necessities, so that you always know just where to look for them. And the Basket itself is such a beautiful ornament for any room.

The Indians sell these Baskets for $2.00 and $3.00 apiece at summer resorts, but by buying in large quantities they let us have them at a special low price. Therefore, we are able to offer the Basket herewith illustrated and described for a very small club of subscriptions as you will note by reading the following bargain offer.

Given To You! For only four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this fragrant, sweet-grass Sewing Basket free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 8084.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Three Lovely Ferns

THEY are the largest, handsomest varieties ever grown for house culture—the Roosevelt, the Boston or "Fountain" fern, and the Whitmani or "Ostrich Plume" Fern. We guarantee these ferns to be strong, healthy and well rooted, and that they will reach you in perfect condition, ready to pot. If any of them fail to grow, we will cheerfully replace them free of charge. We are able to illustrate but one variety, "The Roosevelt," but remember you get all three ferns free on this offer.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you the above described collection of three beautiful ferns free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 8581.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Eveready Flashlight

THIS is the "Eveready" Daylo, 6½ inches long, 1½ inches in diameter, equipped with a powerful battery that will last for many weeks. It is always ready for use—a simple movement of the finger turns the light on or off as desired. In the night it shows the way around the house without fuss or bother—it lights up the darkest rooms, attics or basements. It can be used in the shed or barn, around hay, powder or gasolene without the slightest danger of fire. Outdoors, neither wind nor rain can put it out. When riding or walking after dark, it throws a brilliant light far in advance, showing up every object long before you reach it. This flashlight is so useful you should not think of getting along without one. Safe, convenient, always ready when you want it, it is the best insurance against fire and accident in the world.

CLUB OFFER. We will send you this Eveready Flashlight complete with battery, all ready for business, for four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each. Reward No. 7984.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's Home Lawyer

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from our eminent legal adviser on all questions of law except divorce matters.

Address Home Lawyer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

A. V. D., Washington.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that in conveying or mortgaging the homestead property, the wife must sign and acknowledge the deed or mortgage; that a husband or wife may convey directly to the other his or her community real property, and that a husband or wife may make and execute powers of attorney for conveyance of his or her separate estate, without the other joining in the execution thereof, and that either the husband or wife may make and execute a power of attorney to the other to convey community property.

MRS. I. L. J., North Dakota.—We do not think the Federal Government has any law providing support for women who are mothers; we think, however, your state has a law providing support for the children of widowed or destitute mothers under certain conditions; we think application for such support should be made to your County Court.

MRS. J. B., Virginia.—If the property you mention did not belong to your mother at the time of her death, and the administrator of the estate refuses to turn same over to the proper owner, it will be necessary for such owner to bring a proceeding to compel him to do so.

MRS. F. A. D., Tennessee.—Under the laws of Missouri, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a man, leaving no will, and leaving no widow, child, nor descendant, and no parent, his estate would go to his brothers and sisters, the descendants of any deceased brother or sister taking their parent's share; the heirs of the half blood taking only half the shares of the heirs of the whole blood.

Y. G., Kansas.—Under the laws of Kentucky, we think that property coming to a minor by the terms of a will or other instrument, should be paid to and be administered by the properly appointed general guardian of such minor during minority.

MRS. E. H., Pennsylvania.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a man, leaving no will, and leaving no widow, and leaving one child as his only heir at law and next of kin, his whole estate, after payment of debts and expenses, would go to such child, but that he has the legal right to disinherit such child, by will if he so elects.

MRS. J. R. S., Mississippi.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, his surviving widow, in addition to her homestead and exemption rights, is entitled to receive a child's part of his real and personal estate, provided he leaves also children. This would apply to a widow who was a second or third wife in the same manner as though she had been his first and only wife.

MRS. J. K., New Jersey.—We think that in case a witness to a will predeceases the testator, it becomes necessary to prove the handwriting of such witness.

MRS. E. H., Missouri.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the signature of the wife is necessary to the conveyance or mortgage of the real estate of the husband in order to bar her claims for dower in such property in case she survives him, except in partition and creditors' actions; and that any conveyance or mortgage of the property made by him alone would be subject to her inchoate right of dower in the property.

MRS. E. J. W., Oklahoma.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that both husband and wife must join in the deed of conveyance of homestead property.

E. B., West Virginia.—We think all the states of the Union have laws regulating the ages at which marriages may be contracted.

MRS. D. E. M., North Carolina.—We do not think you can remove the house you mention if the same is constructed in such a manner as to become affixed to the freehold.

MRS. W. W. D., Indiana.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that you will have no interest in your deceased husband's mother's estate, unless some provision is made for you by will, but that your husband's children will be entitled to their deceased father's share unless cut off by will.

MRS. A. D., North Carolina.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, his surviving widow is entitled to receive dower of a one-third interest for life in his real estate, and one-third of the personal estate absolutely, provided she does not leave more than two children; if more than two children, she receives dower and a child's part of the personal estate.

MRS. H. B., Indiana.—Under the laws of your state, we do not think the consent of parents is necessary for the marriage of females over 18 years of age.

MRS. A. J. G., Wisconsin.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving no child nor descendant, his widow, in addition to certain small allowances and homestead rights, if any, is entitled to dower, of a one-third interest for life in his real estate, and one-third of the personal estate absolutely; we do not think this share can be diminished by will. We do not think an illegitimate son has any intestacy, rights in his father's estate.

F. P. H. B., Nebraska.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving no child nor descendants, but leaving parents, brothers or sisters or their descendants, his widow, in addition to certain small allowances, would receive one-half of his real and personal estate, the balance going to his relatives, depending upon who is left.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

of Rotan, but I go to town to school. I have three sisters and two brothers who have graduated from the Rotan High School, and if nothing happens to prevent I shall finish there in the next two years. I intend to be valedictorian of my class, but as several of my classmates have the same ambition, there is not much telling what the outcome will be.

We have been having some fine weather. Usually during both autumn and spring we have some horrible sandstorms, but we have been lucky this year. Uncle Lisha, I wish you could see one of our sandstorms—not that I wish you any bad luck, but I would like to have you know what a real sandstorm is. During some of our worst storms, the prairie dogs change their place of habitation and begin digging homes in the air. But it is surely hot out here; just now the temperature is 110 degrees in the shade, but of course you don't have to stay in the shade unless you want to.

As the powder puff and its users are being so thoroughly cussed and discussed, I might as well give my opinion on the subject: I believe that girls should try to look pretty if they can, and if the powder puff can help them, why not let them use it? As for myself, I have to use one to take the shine off my nose so that the people around me will not be blinded by the glare. I have read in novels about ruby lips and arched eyebrows, and I am beginning to understand where they come from and how they are made. How marvelous! I have seen some lips that were very artistically arranged, but I have also seen others that were rather spotted and smeared.

Perhaps you would like to know what we do for amusement out here in the wild and woolly West. When we are not working in the field, we play tennis, fish and swim. How many of you cousins can swim? Don't you just love it? I don't believe I could ever be satisfied far from a river. There is nothing so refreshing as taking a plunge in the water after a day of hard work.

It is time I must be going, but first I want to ask you cousins to write to me, and any of you come to see me when you can.

By-By, ILA EASON.

It isn't so awful to believe in boys, Ila, if you don't believe too much in what they tell you. Many a long-legged eighteen-year-old Texan can buzz more fairy tales in a girl's ear in five minutes than could rightly be believed in fifteen years. But I see that you know how to keep the young romancers in their places—even when this place is occasionally by your side.

If I lived on a farm of 640 acres, Ila, I wouldn't go to any town to find a school; I'd have a school right on the farm. Surely there is room on one or two of the many acres. Then if you had the school right at home, you would have no trouble in arranging things so that the valedictory honors would be yours without competition from rank outsiders who had the privilege of attending your school. June is long past now, Ila, but I hope you had the pleasure of being valedictorian, and that there were plenty of those useful boys about to come in handy with plentiful applause at the right time.

Ila, how could I ever see one of your famous and delightful sandstorms if I had to be up in the air digging sand out of my eyes? No, Ila, I have no regret that I have missed seeing one of your sand exhibits and have failed to go floating about above Rotan with the migrating prairie dogs. Billy and I have lots of sand at Coney Island and Brighton Beach, but we keep it right in its place and don't allow it to go sifting around the country. But I can understand now why Texans are always said to be full of grit.

You don't give an attractive picture of your famous state, Ila. Your letter makes me think of the story I once heard of the New Yorker who was being shown about Texas by a proud inhabitant. The critical Easterner failed to find much to admire. Finally he did get his eye on a handsome bird of many-colored plumage. "That's a fine looking bird," he said to his guide. "What do you call it?"

"I don't rightly know," answered the Texan. "Some folks call it the 'bird of Paradise.'"

"Well," said the New Yorker, gloomily, "he is surely a long ways from home just now."

But I'll say right here, Ila, that no such stories, or any of your tales of heat and sandstorms, can convince me that Texas is a bad place to live. If it were there could not be so many happy cousins sending in breezy letters from that mightiest division of Uncle Sam's big country. Our League has many, many Texas cousins, and I'm sure not all of 'em had to rub the sand out of their eyes to see to get in!

I am glad you are thoughtful of others, Ila, and so put enough powder on your sand-scarred nose that your headlight is not dangerously glaring. At the theater the other night I heard a young man say to the girl with him: "Do put a little more powder on your nose; it's shining right in my eye." We should always think of others' comfort, Ila; and I'm sure even Gus would object to being dazzled by some little turned-up nose that gleamed too brightly because all powder puffs had been laid aside at his decree. We're all with you, Ila, on the idea that girls should look as pretty as they can. Just how pretty this can be, only a Texas boy is capable of telling, perhaps. I'm sure many of the cousins will write to you, Ila, and even come down and have a swim with you so that they can wash the visiting Texas sand out of their eyes.

DOOLEY, MONTANA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

This is the first copy of COMFORT I have received for about seven years. I left home that long ago and just came back about two years ago when I married. I am now twenty-two years of age. My wife and I decided we'd like to live in Montana, so we moved out here and are now making our home on a farm. Any of the young fellows coming out here to see the "wild and woolly West" will be sadly disappointed as it doesn't exist any more. There are still lots of cattle and sheep ranches and lots of cowboys, but they are not the moving picture gunmen. I was born and raised on an Indian Reservation in North Dakota. This was called the Turtle Mountain Indian Reservation. So my wife and I are American Indians. I don't suppose you hear from Indians very often. Well, as this is my first letter I'll close for this time.

Your nephew, MARCIAL DAVIS.

Marcial, you are right about my not hearing from Indians very often. Why, I never had a letter from an Indian before in my life! All the Indians we see in Greater New York are the ones that once a year, perhaps, perform in the tanbark arena of Madison Square Garden at twelve to twenty bits a throw. None of these chaps have ever written a letter to me, although I have spent as much as sixty hard-earned bits to watch them gallop their ponies about the ring, at the same time yelling loud enough to be heard from Madison Square to Turtle Mountain. Somehow I imagine you must be different from those Indians, Marcial. Certainly your letter was a well-written well-behaved document and did not utter a single war-whoop as I took it out of the envelope. I suppose the secret is that the wild and woolly Indians are gone together with the wild and woolly cowboys of the lost wild and woolly West. Nothing is left to us but the moving picture screen and the exploits of William S. Hart and Tom Mix. I went on a trip out West this summer, Marcial, and was brought by a friend to where I expected to find a frontier vil-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 38.)

This Big Lovely Doll Will Be Given Away

Write Aunt Alice right away and tell her that you want a nice beautiful Doll like this one. A big Doll over 15 inches tall with real curly hair and pretty blue eyes—with jointed hips and shoulders—wearing a beautiful dress neatly trimmed with lace collar and cuffs, a little cap and knitted socks and buckle slippers.

This is not a cloth doll to be stuffed, neither is it a doll stuffed with cheap excelsior or saw dust—but a doll with unbreakable head and stuffed with expensive Spanish cork. It is a doll any little girl would love to have and play with. One you would enjoy making pretty dreses for and taking care of.

Aunt Alice has a doll for every little girl so be sure and write TODAY. Write and tell her your name and address and ask her to send you her big Doll Offer. Hurry and be the first in your neighborhood to get a doll. Use this coupon.

AUNT ALICE, 70 Capper Building, Topeka, Kan.

Dear Aunt Alice:—I want a nice big Doll like the one shown above. Tell me all about your Doll offer.

My Name .....

Street or R. F. D. .....

Town..... State.....

RITA or, the OUTCAST SISTER

By LIBBIE SPRAGUE PHILLIPS

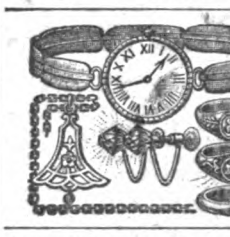
SPECIAL SALE PRICE with a six (6) months' subscription to THE ILLUSTRATED COMPANION ONLY 25 CENTS.

This Book contains one of this noted author's best novels.

Pressed close against the window pane was a wan, white face.

The pathos of this story sweeps all before it. It touches the heart of humanity everywhere. Even the man with a heart of stone learns from this story that deep down under the cold, hard strata of stone, he has in his heart a deep well of human sympathy for the erring one; that he has also a heart capable of love and admiration for the good and noble character of Luella, the gentle, loving, self-sacrificing sister. Righteous indignation is aroused toward Silas Lockwood, her relentless and unnatural father. The heart's emotions like a great ocean billow, rolls on from the beginning to end of the book; when you lay it down and say blessed is God who rules over all for the good of all. Thousands will want to read this book and pass it on to their friends. Libbie Sprague Phillips writes exclusively for THE ILLUSTRATED COMPANION; has done so for 10 years. One minister has furnished it with sermons for 13 years; other writers have contributed regularly for years. THE ILLUSTRATED COMPANION is 36 years old. The years of continued service of its writers show that our magazine is one of fixed and standard worth. We know you will enjoy reading it. THIS OFFER of magazine 6 months and book, for ... cents is made to get new trial subscribers. Book without paper, 10c. Address F. B. WARNER CO., Dept. C. T., 96 Chambers St., New York

53 Pc. School Outfit FREE



Big Outfit consists of large metal trimmed School Case, Famous Donkey Game, Nail Puzzle, Ring Puzzle, 25 fine assorted Post Cards, Box 8 colored Wax Crayons, Composition Book, Writing Tablet, three Pencils (eraser tips) Pencil Clip, Ink and Pencil Eraser, Ruler, Penholder, 6 Pens, Ink Tablets for 1 pt. Ink, 6 Blotters, Chamois Penwiper—Entire Outfit given for selling only 20 pkgs. fancy Post Cards at 15c. Order Now. SUN MFG. CO. DEPT 225 CHICAGO

EARN LACE CURTAINS LATEST DESIGNS

Fine lacey Nottingham Curtains—new Blue Bird and floral basket design—latest style. Yours for selling only 12 boxes of Mentho-Nova at 25c. Return the $3.00 and curtains are yours prepaid, or choice of Dishes, Community Silver, Rugs, Silk Hosiery, Waists, Petticoats, etc., all shown in our 24-page book. Big Cash Commission. Order now. U.S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. 750 Greenville Pa.

ALL THIS FREE

Gold-plated Lavalliere and Chain, pair Earbobs, Gold-plated Expansion Bracelet with Im. Watch, guaranteed quality and 3 Gold-plated Rings. ALL FREE for selling only 15 pieces Jewelry at 10 cents each.

EAGLE WATCH CO., Dept. 15, East Boston, Mass.

Large New Model Movie Machine

REALLY GIVEN AWAY

Have your own Movie Pictures at home. Easy to operate and fully guaranteed. Given complete with Film, Generator and complete instructions for selling only 24 Pkg. Bluette, our Famous Wash Bluing at 15c or 36 pkg. Sachet Perfume at 10c. Order choice. Both in Big Demand and Easy to Sell.

Chicago Bluing Works
1920 Sunnyside Avenue, Dept. 601, CHICAGO

PHONOGRAPH and RECORD FREE

Boys! Girls! This wonderful New Model Talking Machine and popular Record is yours. A real Phonograph with high grade reproducer. Plays loud and clear all size records up to 12 inches. No motor to get out of order. Given for selling only 25 large colored pictures OR 25 pkgs. Fancy Post Cards at 10c each. Order your choice today.

Sent Charges Prepaid. GATES MFG. CO. Dept 625 CHICAGO

FREE BOYS AIR RIFLE

This fine Rifle for selling only 15 packages Colored Post Cards at 10cts. a pckg. Write for Postcards today. Columbia Novelty Co., Dept. 31, East Boston, Mass.

FREE BIG CAMERA

GENUINE EASTMAN PREMO

Takes large clear snapshots or time pictures 2¼ x 3¼ on film. Easy to use. Given for selling only 25 and 10 beautiful Art and Religious pictures at 10c. Order pictures today. You can't fail.

GAIR MFG. CO. 1926 Sunnyside Ave. Dept. 301 CHICAGO

WRIST WATCH GIVEN

Dandy Wrist Watch guaranteed 5 years given for selling two lots of 20 pictures at 10 cts. each. Order 20, when sold send the $2.00 and choose wrist watch or other valuable prize according to big list sent with pictures. RAY ART CO. Dept. 18, Chicago

Dialogs, Monologs, Musical Comedies and Revues, Minstrel Opening, Choruses, Darky Plays. Catalog Free.

PLAYS

Vaudeville Acts, How to Stage a Play, Make-up Goods

T. S. DENISON & CO., 623 So. Wabash, Dept. 6 CHICAGO

GIVEN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE

Fine moving picture machine with supply of films. Easy to operate, by oil or electricity. Free for selling only 12 boxes of Mentho-Nova. Sell at 25c a box, return the $3 and receive this dandy premium. Satisfaction guaranteed. Order now. Hundreds of other premiums and big Cash Commission.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. 850, Greenville, Pa.

Pre-paid

10 YEAR GUARANTEE Watch and Ring GIVEN

We positively give a genuine Stem Wind, Stem Set Watch, Beautifully Engraved Case, guaranteed time-keeper, for selling only 25 of our Large, Beautifully Colored Art and Religious Pictures at 10c each. Order 25 pictures. We trust you. When sold, return money collected, and this Watch and Handsome Stone Set Ring are yours. It's easy our way.

OAIR MFG. CO. 1920 Sunnyside Ave. Dept. 101 CHICAGO

10-Year Guarantee

Watch & Ring REALLY GIVEN AWAY

This stem wind and set, Handsome Engraved Back, guar. timekeeper and fine ring given for selling only 16 pks. Bluette, our famous wash bluing at 15c or 24 pks. Sachet Perfume at 10c. Order choice.

Chicago Bluing Works 1920 Sunnyside, Dept. 201, Chicago

FREE

Sell 24 Art Pictures at 10c. When sold send $2.40 and we'll send stem wind watch, or keep $1.00. Rex Co., V-11, Chicago

Don't Wear a Truss

We Guarantee Your Comfort

with every Brooks' Appliance. New discovery. Wonderful. No obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushions. Binds and draws the broken parts together as you would a broken limb. No salves. No plasters. No lies. Durable, cheap. Sent on trial to prove it. Full information and booklet free.

C. E. BROOKS

167 R State St., Marshall, Mich.

The Bee Cell Supporter

A BOON TO WOMANKIND

Made from the purest, softest rubber. Six cups or faces render misplacement absolutely impossible. Endorsed by the medical profession. Send us $2.50 and we will mail you one postpaid in plain package. Money back if not entirely satisfactory. Write for descriptive circular. It's FREE.

The Bee Cell Co., Dept. 168 White Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

STAMMER

If you stammer attend no stammering school until you get my large FREE book entitled "STAMMERING, Its Origin and The Advanced Natural Method of Cure," bound in cloth and stamped in pure gold. Ask for special tuition rate and a FREE copy of "The Natural Speech Magazine." Largest, best equipped and most successful school in the world for the cure of stammering. No sing-song or time-beat. School open all year. Now is the best time to enroll. Lee Wells Millard, President.

The North-Western School, 2338 Grand Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

You can be quickly cured, if you

STAMMER

Send 10 cents for 288-page book on Stammering and Stuttering, "Its Cause and Cure." It tells how I cured myself after stammering 20 yrs. B. N. Bogue, 1634 Bogue Bldg., 1147 N. Ill. St., Indianapolis.

Our Scientific Method will stop that

STAMMER

Send for free 200 page book. It tells how to permanently stop stammering or stuttering in a few weeks' time. A natural guaranteed method.

The Lewis School for Stammerers
12 Lewis Bldg., 71-77 Adelaide St., Detroit, Mich.

Wearing Fibre Arms and Legs Gust Earns $20 a Week.

Gust Bloomquist froze his hands and feet. All were amputated. By aid of Trautman limbs, not friends and relatives, he makes his own way. Send for Gust's picture and catalog on arms, legs and braces. Ray Trautman, Minneapolis Artificial Limb Co., 657 Dean Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

"FIBRE-LITE" LIMBS

Easy Payments — Do Nature's Work. AGENTS WANTED who wear Leg. Good Pay. FREE Fibre Sample. DESCRIBE STUMP TO WORMAN CO., 252-C Hennepin, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

LOOK YOUR BEST. Make sure of smooth white arms, face and neck in spite of sallowness, blotches, freckles, blackheads etc. If you want to be charming and attractive—Don't pay 50c but send 10c at once for sealed Package, which will transform your appearance instantly. Warranted. TOILET COMPOUND CO. Box 1927A, Boston, Mass.

BIG EASTMAN CAMERA REALLY GIVEN AWAY

Easy to take Large, Clear Pictures 2¼ x 3¼. Snapshots or Time Exposures. Fully Guaranteed. Free for selling only 24 Pks Bluette, our Famous Wash Bluing at 15c or 36 Pks Sachet Perfume at 10c. Order choice. Both Easy to Sell. Chicago Bluing Wks. 1920 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. 401. Chicago, Ill.

Gate Top Mesh Purse

THIS is the new "Gate Top" mesh purse with a ten-inch wrist chain, handsome, stylish, and perfectly safe for the carrying of money and other valuables. A slight pull with the forefinger of each hand instantly opens the purse, a gentle pressure with thumb and finger closes it. Our illustration shows the purse closed. When open the top is as large as the bottom, or in other words, two inches in diameter. When closed it leaves an opening only three-fourths of an inch wide over which the brightly polished German silver cover snaps down tightly so that the contents of the purse cannot possibly become lost. This dainty purse is now extremely fashionable so we have purchased a quantity for the benefit of those of our lady and girl readers who like to be up-to-date in these little accessories. You can have one of them free by taking advantage of the following

Reward No. 7833

Club Offer. For three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this handsome and stylish Gate Top mesh purse free by Parcel Post prepaid. Reward No. 7833.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 37.)

lage. Well, I was greeted by a finely-built Main Street, filled with trolleys, electric lights and expensive automobiles of the sort I am sure I will never own. I came to the conclusion that anything really wild and woolly must be sought in the Ramapo Hills only a few miles from New York.

But your letter has made me very proud, Marcial. It will be a great satisfaction for me to mention carelessly to my friends: "I had a letter the other day from my nephew, an Indian out in Montana." It will be fun to watch them jump at this remark. Did you ever stop to think, Marcial, that when we talk about 100 per cent. Americans, you and your wife are the only sort of Uncle Sam's inhabitants who fill this description completely? Yes; you are the real, simonpure Americans, and the land your ancestors roamed over many years agone did not have to come to them through grants from French and British monarchs. Your letter was too short, Marcial, for the many things you might have told us of your life on the Reservation and of what you did during the seven years you were "out in the world." Come again; your letter was good medicine!

League Shut-in and Mercy Work for November

"Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these you have done it unto Me."

Written references from doctor and postmaster must positively accompany all appeals from shut-ins. Every month brings to me many letters which disregard this simple and necessary rule. Appeals unaccompanied by the references required will be destroyed.

Charles Kerr, Buffalo, Sangamon Co., Ill. Sixty-three years of age and a totally disabled cripple from an accident of five years past. Asks any possible cheer and help. Mrs. Louisa Spears, Boons Camp, Ky. Sixty-eight and hardly able to work to support her husband and invalid daughter. A worthy case and well recommended. Mrs. John Estabrook, St. Johnsbury, Vt. Confined to house and bed for eight years. Asks quilt pieces and a dime shower. Sallie R. Ward, Stevenson, Ala. A needy crippled woman who asks cheer and second-hand clothing. Mrs. Alonzo Kellow, Diercks, Howard Co., Ark. A widow with four children, lately left in destitute circumstances by her husband's death. Money and second-hand clothing will help her along. Miss Rosa E. Joyce, Spencer, Va., and Cora A. Willson, Price, N. C., both send letters of sincere gratitude for the cheer and aid which they have received from COMFORT readers.

Cousins, hanging over the shut-ins, the needy and the crippled are the coming months of winter. A season of holidays, joy and health to those of us who are prosperous and well, but a time which must surely increase the need, the pain and the sorrow of those whose names find a place in our list this month. Give them a real share in your own abundant happiness and set up a genuine COMFORT's Thanksgiving in their darkened and hungry hearts.

Lovingly,

Uncle Lisha

Comfort's League of Cousins

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of COMFORT'S immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers.

Membership is restricted to COMFORT subscribers and costs fifty-five cents, only five cents more than the regular subscription to COMFORT which is included. The fifty-five cents makes you a member of the League and gives you an attractive League button with the letters "C. L. O. C.," a handsome certificate of membership with your name engrossed thereon, and the privilege of having your name in the letter list, also a paid-in-advance subscription to COMFORT. You continue a League member as long as you keep up your subscription to COMFORT. There are no annual dues, so after you have once joined all you have to do to keep in good standing is to keep your subscription to COMFORT paid up.

How to become a Member

Send fifty-five cents to COMFORT'S Subscription Department, Augusta, Maine, with your request to be admitted into COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS, and you will at once receive the League button and your membership certificate and number; you will also receive COMFORT for one year if you are a new subscriber; but if you are already a subscriber your subscription will be renewed or extended one full year beyond date of expiration.

The League numbering over forty thousand members, undoubtedly is the greatest society of young people on earth.

Address all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and they will promptly reach the head of the department for which they are intended.

Poems Requested

The following poems have been requested by readers of COMFORT and sent for publication.

Donegal Bay

"As I sit by the window high up in my room,
'Midst the smoke of the city, its noise and its gloom,
Down the dead years, asthore, I am drifting this day
To that old sunlit harbor of Donegal Bay.

"The light touch of your hand and the curve of your cheek
And my heart throbbing back to the soft words you speak,
With the lift of our boat to the waves' lilting play
And the bright sunlight dancing on Donegal Bay.

"The flight of the wild gulls and wind whistling free,
The wide, full-swelling sail and the swing of the sea,
And the salt, stinging kiss of the fast flying spray,
With the sun laughing down on Donegal Bay.

"The wide waters around us, and gleaming on high
The white clouds and the blue shining arch of the sky;
Oh, 'twas Junetime and lovetime, now vanished away,
But the sun is still glinting on Donegal Bay.

"Just a lad and a lass, sure the tale's nothing new!
But the black sorrow's on me, I'm longing for you
And the tones of a voice that is silent today,
Though the sun jewels sparkle on Donegal Bay."

—George T. Pardy.

Thanksgiving with the Old Folks

"Thanksgiving with the old folks on the farm!
Oh that's what gives the day a subtle charm;
Jest to watch old mother sittin'
In the chimney-seat a-knittin'—
Allus knitting socks to keep the babies warm.

"Knittin' socks an' darnin' stockin's all the day,
Jest as if we still were children out at play;
With her kind old eyes a-blinkin',
'N' not ever even thinkin'
That her babies, too, are growin' old and gray!

"Then to meetin' at the warnin' of the bell,
From the little old white church down in the dell;
Tho' the settin's far from easy,
An' the organ's weak and wheezy,
Yet there's somethin' seems to tell ye all is well!

"Ah, 'tis thoughts of home that keeps us safe from harm,
An' gives Thanksgivin' day a subtle charm;
For so long as mother's livin',
There's a reason for Thanksgivin',
An' we'll spend it with the old folks on the farm!"

The First Thanksgiving Day, 1621

"And now," said the Governor, gazing abroad o'er neatly piled-up store
Of the sheaves that dotted the clearings and covered the meadows o'er,
" 'Tis meet that we render praises because of this yield of grain;
'Tis meet that the Lord of the harvest be thanked for his sun and rain.

"And, therefore, I, William Bradford (by the grace of God today,
And the franchise of this good people), Governor of Plymouth, say—
Through virtue of vested power—ye shall gather with one accord,
And hold, in the month of November, thanksgiving unto the Lord.

"He hath granted us peace and plenty, and the quiet we've sought so long;
He hath thwarted the wily savage, and kept him from doing us wrong;
And unto our feast the sachem shall be bidden, that he may know
We worship his own Great Spirit who maketh the harvests grow.

"So shoulder your matchlocks, masters; there is hunting of all degrees;
And, fishermen, take your tackle, and scour for spoil the seas;
And maidens and dames of Plymouth, your delicate crafts employ
To honor our first Thanksgiving and make it a feast of joy!

"We fail of the fruits and dainties so close to our hands in Devon;
Ah, they are the lightest losses we suffer for sake of Heaven!
But see in our open clearing how golden the melons lie;
Enrich them with sweets and spices, and give us the pumpkin pie!"

So, bravely the preparations went on for the Autumn feast;
The deer and the bear were slaughtered; wild game from the greatest to least
Was heaped in the colony cabins; brown home-brew served for wine;
And the plum and the grape of the forest, for orange and peach and pine.

And when Massasoit, the sachem, sat down with his hundred braves,
And ate of the varied riches of garden and woods and waves,
And looked on the granaried harvest—with a blow on his brawny chest,
He muttered, "The good Great Spirit loves his white children best!"

And then, as the feast was ended, with gravely official air,
The Governor drew his broadsword from out of its scabbard there,
And smiting the trencher near him, he cried in heroic way,
"Hail, Pie of the Pumpkin! I dub thee Prince of Thanksgiving Day!"

—By Margaret J. Preston.

Whispering Hope

"Soft as the voice of an angel
Breathing a lesson unheard,
Hope with gentle persuasion,
Whispers a comforting word.
'Wait till the darkness is over;
Wait till the tempest is done,
Hope for the sunshine tomorrow,
After the shower has gone.'

Refrain:

"Whispering Hope, Whispering Hope,
O, how welcome thy voice,
Making my heart
In its sorrow rejoice.

"If in the dusk of the twilight
Dim be the region afar,
Will not the deepening darkness
Brightened a glimmering star?
Then when the night is upon us,
Why should the heart sink away?
After the midnight is over,
Watch for the breaking of day."

"Life is too short for any bitter feeling;
Time is the best avenger if we wait.
The years speed by, and on their wings bear healing,—
We have no room for anything like hate.
This solemn truth the low mounds seem revealing
That thick and fast about our feet are stealing,—
Life is too short."

Faith in God is nothing without fellowship with man.

Learn to stop grumbling. If you cannot see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself.

Give COMFORT To Your Friends As A Christmas Present!

WHY not! In these days of high prices where could you find a better, more inexpensive present than a one-year's subscription to COMFORT?

It is the one gift that pleases everybody—a gift that will become a cheery, welcome reminder of you month after month for an entire year—and at so little expense you will not notice it at all. Simply send us 50 cents and the name and address of the friend you wish to remember written on the coupon below and we will enter the subscription for one full year to commence with our Christmas number and with it we will also mail a beautiful Christmas Presentation Card so that both paper and card will reach your friend at about the same time. The card is beautifully colored and embossed with a dainty appropriate Christmas design and verse on one side and on the other side is a specially printed announcement of the gift and a space left for your name as the giver which we will fill in ourselves before the card is mailed.

Isn't this a splendid idea? Surely among all your friends there is someone who will appreciate and enjoy such an interesting magazine as COMFORT and who will think of you gratefully every time the carrier leaves it at the door.

Better send us your friend's name and the money now—it's none too early to avoid the Christmas rush—and you will have at least one present less to think about because we will attend to all the details. After you mail the coupon and money you can dismiss the matter from your mind as we will take good care of your order and mail both the paper and the handsome Christmas Presentation Card properly filled out with your name as the giver at precisely the right time.

"COMFORT FOR CHRISTMAS" COUPON

Publisher COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Dear Sir: As a Christmas present from me please send COMFORT for one year to the following address, also the Christmas Presentation Card properly filled out with my name. I enclose 50 cents to pay for same.

My Friend's Name.....

Street & No......R. F. D. No......Box No......

Post Office.....State.....

(Be Sure To Write Your Own Name And Address Below)

My Name Is.....

Street & No......R. F. D. No......Box No......

Post Office.....State.....

☞ If you wish to make a present of COMFORT to more than one friend write the full names and addresses on a separate sheet of paper and pin this coupon to it. BE SURE TO ENCLOSE 50 CENTS FOR EACH NAME SENT.

You Can Make The Most Beautiful Purses, Bags, Chains, Necklaces, Belts, Etc. With The

Kanibas Bead Loom

Thousands of Beads and Complete Outfit

Full Instructions Show You How—You Cannot Possibly Fail

For a Club of 8

BEADWORK is all the rage again. And here is a wonderful yet simple Bead Loom with which any woman or girl can take up this fascinating work at home and easily make the handsomest bags, chains, necklaces, purses, bracelets, belts, collars and cuffs, dress trimmings, shirtwaist sets, slippers, watch cases, fob chains, card cases, pocketbooks,—in fact there is no limit to the number and variety of exquisitely colored bead work articles that can be woven on this Loom.

Anybody can use the "Kanibas" Bead Loom—it is very easy to understand as everything is fully explained in the instruction book sent with the outfit.

Everything you need to work with is included free with the Loom, so you can begin making the articles at once.

In the outfit you will receive one "Kanibas" Bead Loom, five packages of beads in assorted colors of black, white, blue, green, pink, etc., one dozen special bead needles (very long and slender with an unusually long eye), one spool of specially prepared waxed bead thread, and a 44-page instruction book containing more than seventy-five photographs and designs of popular bead work, together with easy, detailed instructions on just what color of beads to use and how to work them.

This book shows how to make different styles of bags, chains, necklaces, purses, belts, collars and cuffs, shirtwaist sets, slippers, watch cases, fob chains, card cases, pocketbooks, dress trimmings, any letter in the alphabet, any numeral, etc., etc.,—giving full directions for all designs. The popular secret order emblems can be worked with great effect in beads for fob chains, bracelets, card cases, etc., and this book illustrates designs for Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Columbus, Elks, Royal Arcanum, also Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and others.

Any woman or girl will be delighted with this practical Loom Outfit because she can make so many pretty things not only for her own use but to give away as presents and to sell. While the beads themselves cost but little, the finished work brings a high price so that there are big profits in the business, if one desires to sell the articles after they are made.

Special Club Offer. For eight one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you the "Kanibas" Bead Loom and Outfit free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 7598.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities

Pithy Little Advertisements that are Interesting, Instructive and Profitable to Read, for they put you wise to the newest and best in the market and keep you in touch with the world's progress.

AGENTS WANTED

Agents—$6 to $12 a day easy; 300 light-weight, fast selling popular priced necessities; Food Flavors, Perfumes, Soaps, Toilet Preparations etc. Agents Outfit Free; write today, quick, new American Products Co., 5087 American Bldg. Cincinnati, Ohio.

We Start You In Business, furnishing everything; men and women, $30 to $100 weekly operating our "New System Candy Factories" home anywhere. Booklet free. William Ragsdale, East Orange, N. J.

Crew Managers—Agents. Opaline paintings are a knock-out. Make old territory new. Seasoned picture men double their sale. Beginners make $1.00 an hour and more with rigs. Greatest hit ever made. Samples and expense money furnished. Write today. Consolidated Portrait Co., Desk A-14, 1839 W. Adams St., Chicago.

Agents—Write for big soap offer. Quick Seller, Big Money Maker. Ko-Ko-Co, 121 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

We Start You without a Dollar, Soaps, Extracts, Perfumes—Toilet Goods. Experience unnecessary. Carnation Co., 121 Olive, St. Louis.

Agents—Make a Dollar an Hour. Sell Mendets, a patent patch for instantly mending leaks in all utensils. Sample package free. Collette Mfg. Co., Dept. 622-B, Amsterdam, N.Y.

Sell Necessities. Everybody needs and buys the "Business Guide." Bryant cleared $250.00 in July. Send for sample. It's Free. Nichols Co., Dept. 6B, Naperville, Ill.

Large Shirt Manufacturer wants Agents to sell complete line of shirts direct to wearer. Exclusive patterns. Big values. Free samples. Madison Mills, 503 Broadway, New York.

Agents: $30 a week selling guaranteed hosiery for men, women and children. Must wear 12 months or replaced free. All styles and colors, including finest line of silk hose. Mrs. McClure makes over $3000 a year. Mrs. Schurman averages $60 a month working spare time. Geo. Noble made $35 in one day. Write for sample outfit. Thomas Mfg. Co., Class 512, Dayton, Ohio.

Agents! 1921's Greatest Sensation. 11-piece toilet article set selling like blazes at $1.75 with $1.00 dressmaker's shears free to each customer. Get lined up for Christmas rush. E. M. Davis Co., Dept. 295, Chicago.

250% Profit. Quick Seller. Klean-Rite Magic Washing Compound. Washes Clothes Without Rubbing. Sells 25c. You make 15c. Samples Free. Rastever Products Co., 1943-M Irving Park, Chicago.

Agents:—$100 Weekly. Automobile owners wild with enthusiasm. Marvelous invention doubles power, mileage, efficiency. Saves cost first day. Sensational sales everywhere. Territory going like wildfire. $36 sample outfit and Ford Car free. Write quick. Ovex Co., Dept. 113, Louisville, Ky.

Agents—New auto specialty. Full sized sample absolutely free. Easy to get orders. Neff made over $60 first week. Write quick. B. Farrill, Sales Dept. 292, Station A, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Make $100 Weekly Selling Rolly's Wash-day Wonder New Chemical Dirt Solvent. Harmless. Cleans without rubbing. Want Agents and crew managers. Free Samples. Rolly Chemical Co., 13, Hastings, Nebraska.

Agents: New 2 in 1 Reversible Double-duty raincoat. One side rich tan dress coat, other side storm overcoat. Two coats for the price of one. Saves $20. Positively guaranteed waterproof or money back. Commission paid same day you take orders. No capital required. Sample furnished. Great seller. Real money for agents. Parker Mfg. Co., 417 Rue St., Dayton, Ohio.

Gold Sign Letters for stores and office windows. Photo Pillow Tops, Portraits, Frames, Sheet Pictures, Medallions, Waterproof Aprons, Novelties. Samples, catalogue free. Thirty days credit. Jas. C. Hadley Co., Desk A-6, Chicago, Ill.

We Want Men and Women Who Are Desirous of Making $25.00 to $200.00 Per Week Clear Profit in a business of their own. Mitchell's Magic Marvel Washing Compound washes clothes spotlessly clean in 10 to 15 minutes. One hundred other uses in every home. Nothing else like it. Nature's mightiest cleanser. Contains no lye, lime, acid or wax. Fastest selling article ever sold through agents. Free Samples make sales easy. Enormous repeat orders. 300% profit. Exclusive territory. We guarantee sale of every package. No capital or experience required. Baker, Ohio, made $600 last month. You can do as well. Send for Free Sample and proof. L. Mitchell & Co., Desk 288, 1308-1314 E. 61st, Chicago, Ill.

Agents—Everybody uses extracts. Sell Duo double strength Extracts and complete line Household Necessities. Products used constantly. Big repeaters. Write today. Duo Co., Dept. E 41, Attica, N. Y.

Sell Auto Tires. $75 weekly. Guarantee with each Tire. 30x3½ costs $7.65. No capital or experience required. Big opportunity to establish permanent, profitable business. Samples furnished Free. Bedford Tire Factory, Dept. E, 2161 So. Mich Blvd., Chicago.

Agents—Steady Income. Large manufacturer of Handkerchiefs and Dress Goods, etc., wishes representative in each locality. Big profits, honest goods. Whole or spare time. Credit given. Send for particulars. Freeport Mfg. Co., 69 Main St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED

Newest Thing Out—Lithogram Initials for automobiles, motorcycles, canoes, golf sticks, tennis racquets, etc. Anyone can apply them in a jiffy. Sell to everybody. Set costs 15c; brings $1.50. Fast sales and big daily profits for agents. Write for catalog. Lithogram Company, Desk 12, East Orange, N. J.

Make $25 to $50 Week representing Clows' Famous Philadelphia Hosiery, direct from mill—for men, women, children. Every pair guaranteed. Prices that win. Free book "How to Start" tells the story. George Clows Company, Desk 14, Philadelphia, Pa.

Agents! A sale in every home for our beautiful Dress Goods, Silks and General Yard Goods. Quick sales! Big profits! Large book of 1000 sample fabrics Free to agents. Write today. National Importing & Mfg. Co., Dept. 24X, 573 Broadway, New York.

Be successful Agent! Free sample outfit—worth $2.25. "Quality" beauty preparations. Make big money. Extensive line. Established 50 years. Lyman Co., 200 Logansport, Ind.

General Agents. Something new. Whirlwind seller. "Repeat" washing powder. Washes clothes without rubbing. Women throw away washboards. Big profits. Exclusive territory. Write today free package. Kittredge Co., 2 Putnam St., Tunkhannock, Pa.

Sell washing tablets that are different. They work quicker, sell easier and at a greater profit. Get our proposition. Newton & Co., 4 Main St., Newark, New York.

$60 Weekly—Selling Electric Insoles for cold and sweaty feet. Particulars free. Nealeigh & Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

Agents—New Invention. Harper's Tem-Dee brush set and fibre broom. It sweeps, washes and dries upstairs windows, scrubs and mops floors and does 5 other things. Big profits; easy seller. Free trial offer. Harper Brush Works, Dept. A, Fairfield, Iowa.

Agents Canvassers:—Hard times cause many crimes. Hence the unprecedented demand for the inexpensive safety window catch we manufacture. Without an equal. Attached instantly without tools. Sells to housewives at sight. Sure repeater. Burg-La-Proof Window Catch Mfg. Co., Everett, Mass.

Fords run 24 miles per gallon on cheapest gasoline, using our new carburetor. Increased power; styles for all motors; attach yourself. Money back guarantee; 30 days trial. Big profits to agents. Air Friction Carburetor Co., 2307 Madison St., Dayton, Ohio.

Bees pay if kept right. Be a progressive beekeeper. We can show you how. Send $1.00 today for Bee Primer, 9 months subscription to American Bee Journal and catalogues of bee supplies. American Bee Journal, Box 41, Hamilton, Ill.

Sales Agents. Men or women. Year round position. No layoffs. Take orders for Jennings New Guaranteed Hosiery. Must wear and give satisfaction or replaced free. Write for outfit. Jennings Mfg. Co., Dept. 123, Dayton, Ohio.

Wonderful Seller. 96c profit every dollar sales. Deliver on spot. License unnecessary. Sample Free. Mission Bead Factory C, 2421 Smith St., Detroit, Mich.

We Pay $36 a Week and expenses and give a Ford Auto to men to introduce poultry and stock compounds. Imperial Co., D 1, Parsons, Kan.

FEMALE HELP WANTED

$6-$18 a dozen decorating pillow tops at home; pleasant work; experience unnecessary; particulars for stamp. Tapestry Paint Co., 104, LaGrange, Ind.

At Once—Five bright capable ladies to travel, demonstrate and sell dealers: $40.00 to $75.00 per week, railroad fare paid. Write at once. Goodrich Drug Co., Dept. 52, Omaha, Nebr.

Women Wanted. $95 month. Government positions. List free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. S 9, Rochester, N. Y.

Be Dress Designers. $35 week. Learn while earning. Sample lessons free. Franklin Institute, Dept. S 501, Rochester, N. Y.

STAMPING NAMES

Stamp Names on key checks. Make $19 per 100. Send 25c for sample and inst. Either Sex. C. Keytag Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

OLD COINS

Get Large Old U.S. Copper Cent nearly as large as half Dollar, curious and interesting and large 50 page Illus. Coin Catalog for Ten Cents—a "get-acquainted offer." Send for one. Some $26,000 of coins in stock. Get on list for catalog free to customers. E. Max Mehl, Numismatist, Mehl Bldg., Dept. F, Ft. Worth, Texas.

MOTION PICTURE PLAYS

Photoplay Ideas Wanted By 48 Companies. $25-$200 paid. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Producers League, 221, St. Louis.

MAGAZINES

Ambitious Writers send today for Free copy, America's leading magazine for writers of Photoplays, Stories, Poems, Songs. Instructive, helpful. Writer's Digest, 609 Butler Bldg., Cincinnati.

6 Different, Interesting, Clever Publications, prepaid to any address only 25c. Publications price $1.00. All current issues. Satisfaction guaranteed. Walhamore Company, Lafayette Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

MISCELLANEOUS

Economy Store, 1020 Vine St., Cincinnati, O. Greatest Dry Goods Bargains on Earth. Agents and Storekeepers supplied.

Switches' made from combings. The new way. Write me. Mrs. E. Vandervoort, Davenport, Iowa.

Hemstitching and picoting attachment works on any sewing machine, easily adjusted. Price $2.50 with full instructions. Oriental Novelty Co., Box 11, Corpus Christi, Texas.

Dressmaking Taught by Mail. Entire cutting course of 14 lessons $12.00. Crescent System, 3616 Parnell Av., Chicago, Ill.

Rose Beads. Beautiful. All the rage. Easy to make. Send stamp for full information. C. B. Shorey, Fairfield, Maine.

SALESMEN WANTED

Salesmen: Make extra money easily. Sell our Accident & Sickness policies in your spare time. $5000 death, $25 weekly benefit for $10 yearly. Address Underwriters, Dept. F-25, Newark, N. J.

FARMS FOR SALE

Stuart's New Catalog Farms! 31 States $15 to $200 Acre. Choice assortment 1180 dairy, truck, fruit, poultry, general farms in country's best farming sections (many fully equipped) assuring steady jobs, pleasant homes, bright futures. Get your free copy now. Stuart Farm Agency, 150 BG Nassau St., New York City.

The State Land Settlement Board of California has a number of desirable irrigated farms of twenty and forty acres in San Joaquin Valley for sale to home seekers on 5½ years' time. 5 per cent interest annually. Your opportunity to acquire a farm in wonderful California. All deciduous fruits profitably grown; alfalfa is a paying crop. Ideal conditions for stock and poultry. Good schools and unsurpassed roads. Fruit associations market your crops, relieving you of marketing problems. You can farm all year in California. Go this fall and see. State Board's booklet, also Santa Fe folder describing San Joaquin Valley, mailed free on request. C. L. Seagraves, Gen. Colonization Ag't, Santa Fe Ry., 913 Ry. Ex., Chicago.

Productive Lands. Crop Payment or easy terms—along the Northern Pacific Ry., in Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon. Free literature. Say what state interests you. H. W. Byerly, 14 Northern Pacific Ry., St. Paul, Minn.

Want to hear from owner having farm for sale; give particulars and lowest price. John J. Black, Comfort St., Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin.

HELP—MALE & FEMALE

Earn $25 Weekly, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Press Syndicate, 451, St. Louis, Mo.

Government Positions Are Fine: $1400, $1600, $1800 at start, up to $2200 and $2600. Exams everywhere. Write Today for full information. Patterson Civil Service School, Box K, Rochester, N. Y.

Clerks, 18 upward, for Postal Mail Service. $120 month. Experience unnecessary. For free particulars of examinations, write J. Leonard (former Civil Service examiner) 7 Equitable Bldg., Washington, D. C.

HELP WANTED

Wanted: Hundreds men—boys over 17. Government Railway Mail Clerks. Steady work. $135-$190 month. List positions free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. S 12, Rochester, N. Y.

Men, Women, age 17 to 65, needed by U. S. Govt. for Railway Mail, Postmaster, Clerk, and other departments. Experience unnecessary. Write for full information, Chicago Civil Service College, Dept. K, Chicago, Ill.

MICH. FARM LANDS FOR SALE

Clay Loam Lands: 20, 40, 80 ac. tracts in clover district of Mich.; rich clay loam soil. $20 to $35 per ac. Small pmt. down; bal. long time. Write for Free booklet of facts. Swigart Land Co., C-1946, First Nat'l Bk. Bldg., Chgo.

PATENT ATTORNEYS

Patents—Write for free Guide Book, and Evidence of Conception Blank. Send model or sketch and description for free opinion of its patentable nature. Highest References. Prompt Service. Reasonable Terms. Victor J. Evans & Co., 641 Ninth, Washington, D. C.

Inventors—Desiring to secure patent should write for our book, "How To Get Your Patent." Send model or sketch and description for opinion of its patentable nature. Randolph & Co., Dept. 112, Washington, D. C.

Patents—Send for free book. Contains valuable information for inventors. Send sketch of your invention for Free Opinion of its patentable nature. Prompt service. (Twenty years' experience). Talbert & Talbert, 402 Talbert Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Patents Promptly procured. Moderate Fees. Best References. Send Sketch or Model. George P. Kimmel, Master of Patent Law, 27-M, Loan & Trust Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Inventors. Before disclosing your idea to others write for our "Evidence of Disclosure" form. Send sketch or model of your invention for examination and advice. Ask for free book "How to obtain a Patent." Avoid dangerous delays. Write today. Merton-Roberts & Co., 111 Mather Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Patents Secured. Prompt service. Avoid dangerous delays. Send for our "Record of Invention" form and Free Book telling How to Obtain a Patent. Send sketch or model for examination. Preliminary advice without charge. Highest references. Write Today. J. L. Jackson & Co., 107 Ouray Bldg., Washington, D. C.

MALE HELP WANTED

All men, women, boys, girls, over 16, willing to accept Government Positions, $123, write immediately, Ozment, 104, St. Louis.

$40 week. Become Automobile Experts. Learn while earning. Sample lessons free. Franklin Institute, Dept. S 410, Rochester, N. Y.

Be an Expert Penman; Wonderful Device guides your hand; corrects your writing in few days. Complete Outline Free. Write C. J. Ozment, 53, St. Louis, Mo.

Wanted—1500 Railway Traffic Inspectors; no experience; train for this profession thru spare-time home-study; easy terms; $110 to $200 monthly and expenses guaranteed, or money back. Outdoors; local or traveling; under big men who reward ability. Get Free Booklet G-6 Stand. Business Training Inst., Buffalo, N. Y.

Government needs Railway Mail Clerks, $133-$192 month. Write for free specimen questions. Columbus Institute, Columbus, Ohio.

Firemen, Brakemen, Baggagemen, $140—$200, Colored Porters by Railroads everywhere. Experience unnecessary. 628 Ry. Bureau, East St. Louis, Ills.

Firemen, Brakemen, for railroads nearest their homes—Everywhere, beginners $150, later $250 monthly (which position?). Railway Association, Desk M 17, Brooklyn, N. Y.

DANCING

Learn to Dance remarkable new way. In a few hours—at home—in private—you can easily master Fox Trot, One Step, Two Step, Waltz and latest popular dances by my wonderful, New Diagram Method. Write today for Free details and Special Low Offer. Wm. Chandler Peak, M. B., Studio D, 4767 Broadway, Chicago, Illinois.

MOTION PICTURE PLAYS

Earn $50 weekly spare time writing photoplays; experience unnecessary; particulars 2c stamp. Playwriters Co., 1314, St. Louis, Mo.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Ladies earn money crocheting, sewing, tatting, making aprons and caps from our patterns. Apron and cap sets made $30.00 per doz. No canvassing. Send 25c for the patterns—returned if desired. Kenwood Pattern Co., 6238 S. Park Ave., Chicago.

Buy Moulton's Rust and Ink Soap. Best on market. Large tubes 25c. Agents wanted. Write F. Moulton, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

REAL ESTATE

Real Estate. New Plan to Learn Real Estate business. Wonderful money making system. Write Casto Realty System, Columbus, O.

FARM WANTED

Wanted To hear from owner of good farm for sale. State cash price, full description. D. F. Bush, Minneapolis, Minn.

PHOTOPLAYS, STORIES

Wanted—Men and women ambitious to make money writing Stories and Movie Plays. Send for wonderful Free Book that tells how. Address Authors' Press, Dept. 51, Auburn, N. Y.

PHOTO FINISHING

Special Trial Offer. Your next Kodak film developed 5c. Prints 3c each. Mosser & Son, 2122 St. James Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Kodak Films or rolls developed any size 4c each; glossy prints any size 4c each. Satisfaction or money back. Cameron Photo Co., C5416 Burch Ave., Cincinnati.

World's Finest Kodak photo newart style. Entirely different, never seen before. Roll developed, prints 3c each. Malden Art Co., 5 Cin., O.

Mail Us 50c with any size film for development and six velvet prints. Or send 6 negatives any size and 25c for 6 prints. Roanoke Photo Finishing Co., 228 Bell Ave., Roanoke, Va.

MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS

$35.00 Profit Nightly. Small capital starts you. No experience needed. Our machines are used, endorsed by Govt. institutions. Catalog free. Atlas Moving Picture, 671 Morton Bldg., Chicago.

America's Greatest Fortunes have been made in the moving picture business. Small investment needed. We furnish complete theatre equipment. Easy payments. Openings everywhere. Catalog free. Dept. 220, Monarch Theatre Supply Co., 724 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

INVENTIONS

Inventions Wanted. Cash or royalty for ideas. Adam Fisher Mfg. Co., 61, St. Louis, Mo.

HONEY FOR SALE

For Sale Select quality Clover and Basswood honey. 1921 crop. Sample 15c. Price List free. Alellaven Honey Co. Dept. 21, Eau Claire, Wis.

For Sale: Purest Quality Honey from many flowers. Sample 15 cents. Price list free. Alellaven Honey Co. Dept. 21, Eau Claire, Wis.

Honey and Cheese of Superior Quality packed in family size packages, write today for Free price list. E. F. Sass, Monroe, Wis.

AUTOMOBILES

Automobile Owners, Garagemen, Mechanics, Repairmen, send for free copy of our current issue. It contains helpful, instructive information on overhauling, ignition troubles, wiring, carburetors, storage batteries, etc. Over 120 pages, illustrated. Send for free copy today. Automobile Digest, 236 Butler Bldg., Cincinnati.

HOME WEAVING

Looms—Only $9.90—Big Money in Weaving Rugs, Carpets, portieres, etc., at home; from rags and waste material. Weavers are rushed with orders. Send for free loom book, it tells all about the weaving business and our wonderful $9.90 and other low-priced, easily-operated looms. Union Loom Works, 272 Factory St., Boonville, N. Y.

FOR PHOTOGRAPHERS

Have You a Camera? Write for Free sample of our big magazine, showing how to make better pictures and earn money. American Photography 230 Camera House, Boston, 17, Mass.

MAIL ORDER BUSINESS

Make $25,000 with small Mail Order Business. Sample article & plan 25c. Free Booklet. Tells How For Stamp. A. C. Scott, Cohoes, N. Y.

BOOKS

Free Book. Prophet Elijah must first come said Jesus. Convincing Bible Evidence. Send at once. C. Megiddo Mission, Rochester, N. Y.

STORY WRITERS WANTED

Authors:—Stories, poems, photo plays etc. are wanted for publication. Submit Mss. Literary Bureau, C4, Hannibal, Mo.

PRINTING & ENGRAVING

Multigraphing at low prices. Sales letters. Addressing. Circular mailing. Mailing lists, any class. Miller, Box 41, Berwick, Pa.

America's New War Policy

Establishing a new precedent, President Harding has promulgated a military policy for the United States, in interpreting, according to law, the Act of June 4th, 1920, providing for the peace time organization of National Defense.

In a recent memorium to General Pershing, Chief of Staff, Secretary of War Weeks, outlines the President's interpretation of the relation of the Regular Army to the National Guard and Organized Reserves.

Secretary Weeks says in part: "Whereas in the past the necessary citizen forces have been completely extemporized or materially reorganized upon the occurrence of an emergency, the new law provides that they shall be located territorily, that their officers and men shall be assigned to local units, and that as funds become available provisions shall be made for the training of these officers and men. In other words the war force required for immediate mobilization in the event of emergency is to be constituted in time of peace and filled as far as practicable through the enrollment or enlistment of qualified volunteers. Under such a system it is reasonable to expect that the units of the National Guard will be maintained at sufficient strength to be effective as a first reinforcement for the Regular Army, and that the units of the Organized Reserve will at least include a corps of officers, non-commissioned and specialists, organized and trained to receive and train the recruits in an emergency demanding large forces

It is with the requirements of this larger war establishment in view that the peace organization of the Regular Army must be determined.

The Mount Vernon Shrine

There has been a tempest in a teapot again, growing out of the fact that some of the visitors to Mount Vernon, the home of Washington, have complained to Congress against a charge of an admission fee of twenty-five cents to enter the grounds. Senator Capper of Kansas, is the prime mover in the plan for the Government to take over the shrine and provide free admission to visitors. Sentimental enthusiasts rail about the alleged injustice inflicted upon the public because the home of Washington is under private ownership. This private ownership rests on what is known as the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, which is composed of a group of regents from States throughout the nation, who make it their duty to manage the property, which was turned over to them after having been purchased by public subscription shortly after the Civil War. When the property was first acquired it was run down and gone to seed. The Washington family furniture had all disappeared, since Martha Washington in her will scattered it to the four winds. The ladies have placed Mount Vernon in the best condition of any public building in the United States, and the admission fee has been used for the upkeep of the property and for the repurchasing of most of the old furniture. Some of these pieces have only been secured by paying big prices. A lot of pieces are still being negotiated for, and in case the Government should become owner of Mount Vernon the prices upon these articles would soar sky-high. A great many of the best informed people are inclined to believe that the private management of Mount Vernon has proved itself so much more effective than has been secured in any instance of Government ownership that there is no justification in the attempt to change the control of the property.

Efficiency

Patient—"I didn't expect you this morning, doctor."

Dr. Pillsbury Mann—"I was in the neighborhood."

Patient—"Ah I see. Thought you'd kill two birds with one stone."—Exchange.

No Use for Them

Mistress—"Didn't the ladies who called leave cards?"

Maid—"They wanted to, ma'am; but I told 'em yez had plenty of your own and better ones, too."—Yonkers Herald.

Soft Boiled

Yeast—"I see what you ate for your breakfast, this morning."

Crimsonbeak—"How so?"

"Why, you've got eggs all over your shirt front."

"Then you only see what I didn't eat."—Yonkers Statesman.

Very Obliging

"Officer, is there a good restaurant in this neighborhood?"

"Yes, ma'am, just around the corner."

"Is there a saloon attached to it?"

"No, but they'll send out and get you anything you like, ma'am."—New York Herald.

Of Course

Naybor—"Is that a new henhouse you're building?"

Mr. Snappy—"No, this is an old one I'm building to take the place of the new one I tore down last week."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Cut Price NOW!

6-Piece Set
Fumed Solid Oak

A Room Full of Furniture

$1.00 Down

Send only $1.00 and we will ship you this handsome 6-Piece Library Set. Only $1.00 down—then $2.70 a month — only $29.95 in all. A positively staggering value on this special reduced price offer. Send the coupon below and have this massive set sent on approval. Then see for yourself what a beautiful set it is. If you do not like it, return it in 30 days and we will return your money together with any freight charges you paid. All you have to do is to send the coupon with $1.00.

Cut Price Now!

Special Reduced Price Offer

Act Now

Prices down, at last. Rock-bottom prices for you. You can now get this wonderful 6-piece library set direct from our own factory at the lowest price since before the war —and for only $1.00 down, almost a year to pay! This set is such a wonderful bargain at this special reduced price, that we have reserved the limited number we have on hand for new customers only. The set is not shown in our regular catalog. We haven't enough to supply everyone. First come, first served. Order your set on this low price offer now. Remember, thirty days' trial in your own home. Costs you nothing if you are not entirely pleased. Send at once!

6 Pieces

Richly upholstered. This superb six-piece library set is made of selected solid oak throughout, finished in rich dull waxed, brown fumed oak. Large arm rocker and arm chair are 36 inches high, seats 19x17½ inches. Sewing rocker and reception chair are 35 inches high, seats 17x17 inches. All four pieces are padded, seats and backs upholstered in brown imitation Spanish leather. Library table has 23¼x34 inch top, with roomy magazine shelf below and two large beautifully designed book racks, one at each end. Jardiniere stand measures 17½ inches high, with 12 inch top. Clip the coupon below and send it to us with $1.00, and we will ship you the entire six pieces, subject to your approval. No C. O. D. Shipped knocked down to reduce your freight charges considerably. Easy to set up. Shipping weight about 175 lbs.

Order by No. B6697A. Send $1.00 cash with order, $2 70 monthly. Price $29.95. No discount for cash. Pieces not sold separately.

STRAUS & SCHRAM,
Dept. 3048, West 35th Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

Enclosed and $1.00. Ship special advertised 6-piece Fumed Oak Library Suite. I am to have 30 days' free trial. If I keep the suite, I will pay you $2.70 monthly. If not satisfied, I am to return the suite within 30 days and you are to refund my money and any freight charges I paid.

☐ 6-Piece Library Set No. B6697A, $29.95.

Name.....

Street R.F.D. or Box No......

Shipping Point.....

Post Office..... State.....

If you ONLY want Catalog put X in proper box below:

☐ Men's, Women's and Children's Clothing ☐ Furniture, Stoves and Jewelry

Send Coupon

along with $1.00 to us now. Have this fine library set shipped on 30 days' trial. We will also send our big Bargain Catalog listing thousands of amazing bargains. Only a small first payment and the balance in monthly payments for anything you want. Send the coupon today —now. Don't delay.

Easy Payments!

Open an account with us. We trust honest people anywhere in the United States. Send for this wonderful bargain shown above, or choose from our big catalog. One price to all, cash credit. No discount for cash. Not one penny extra for credit. Do not ask for special cash price. We cannot offer any discount from these sensational prices. No C. O. D.

30 Days' Trial

Our guarantee protects you. If not perfectly satisfied, return the article at our expense within 30 days and get your money back —also any freight charges you paid. Could any offer be fairer?

Free Bargain Catalog

Send for it. Shows thousands of bargains in furniture, jewelry, carpets, rugs, curtains, silverware, stoves, porch and lawn furniture, talking machines, women's, men's and children's wearing apparel. Send the coupon today.

Straus & Schram, Dept. 3048 West 35th St., Chicago, Ill.

VOL. XXXIV
NO. 2

CHRISTMAS NUMBER

COMFORT

The Key to Happiness and Success in over a Million and a Quarter Homes

Published at Augusta Maine

DECEMBER
1921

See Story "The Lady of the Rainbow House" on Page 10

Copyright 1921 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Incorporated.

Table of Contents on Page 8.

COMFORT EDITORIAL

THOUGHTS THAT BREATHE AND WORDS THAT BURN

How the American People Have Made Known that They Never Will Tolerate another Railroad Strike

IT has since come to pass, as predicted in our last month's editorial (written early in October), that the then threatened nation-wide railroad labor strike would not be tolerated by the long-suffering public. What cowed the railroad labor unions and forced the union chiefs at the last moment to revoke their strike orders was fear of a well-nigh unanimously indignant people expressing their resentment, not only in words, but more effectively by active preparations throughout the land to help the Government to carry out its announced determination to keep the trains running and break the strike.

Strike against the Government, the Law and the People

In case of a railroad labor strike the public is inevitably involved as an involuntary and innocent third party that is always made the goat and suffers most severely, and the growing tendency of the railroad labor unions to make merciless use of this power to distress the public as a club to enforce their demands for shorter hours and higher pay has attained the proportions of an insufferable tyranny. Prior to 1916 the people here and there, now and then, had been tormented by a labor tie-up of one or another railroad at a time, and thus had formed some conception of the dire calamity with which they would be afflicted by a complete paralysis of all the railroads in the country. Up to that time each railroad had dealt with its own employees in regard to wages, hours of labor and working rules, which seems to be the rational and proper course, as cost of living, going wages and working conditions vary so greatly in different sections of the country. But in the summer of 1916 the railroad labor unions demanded an eight-hour work day and uniform rate of extra pay for overtime to apply on all railroads, and, on the refusal of the railroad managers to agree to their terms, ordered a nation-wide railroad strike to take effect on or about September first. All the Government's efforts to effect a settlement by compromise or mediation, or even to obtain a postponement, having failed, the nation stood aghast at the impending catastrophe due to befall it in less than a week. It was at this extremely critical juncture that Congress, terrified by the situation, on President Wilson's urgent recommendation yielded abject submission to the threat of the railroad labor unions by hastily enacting the so-called Adamson law and thereby granted all the demands of the would-be strikers barely in time to avert the strike.

President Wilson coupled his recommendation with a promise to the country that at an early date he would propose to Congress the passage of a law that would eliminate the possibility of a future recurrence of the menace of tying up the railroads by a strike. But the Presidential election was then pending, and that was shortly followed by the events that drew us into the World War during which the Government took entire control of the railroads. And so the matter hung until nearly two years ago when Congress created the Railroad Labor Board of nine members to be appointed by the President, three of them to represent the railroad interests, three to represent the labor interests and three to represent the interests of the public. For the purpose of preventing railroad labor strikes the Board was given the powers of a special court to decide all questions and disputes as to wages, hours of labor and working rules and regulations affecting railroad employees.

The members of the Railroad Labor Board were appointed by President Wilson, and the first duty they had to perform was to pass upon the petition of the employees of all the railroads for a general raise of wages. After lengthy hearings of all parties interested the Board, in July, 1920, granted a general wage increase that averaged twenty-one per cent., and back pay at the same rate from the first day of the previous May. This added six hundred and twenty-six million dollars a year to the wages of the employees and necessitated a corresponding increase in the freight rates that the public has to pay. But the freight rates are too high, so high as to be almost, if not quite, prohibitive on some classes of products; and yet most of the railroads are losing money at that, and the Government is loaning them money to buy much needed equipment.

Last June, after extended hearings on petition of the railroads, the Railroad Labor Board ordered a twelve per cent. reduction of wages, effective with the beginning of last July. This cuts off a little more than half the wage increase granted by the same Board in July of the previous year. It is against this last decision of the Railroad Labor Board that the members of the five big railroad labor unions voted almost unanimously to authorize their chiefs to call a nation-wide strike if they thought best to do so, for these officials have discretionary power not to order a strike even after a strike vote of the members; in fact these labor bosses are shown to have pretty nearly autocratic power to order and settle strikes as they see fit. But the chiefs seem to have thought the proposed strike advisable, and so on the fifteenth of October they ordered the strike to begin on Sunday, October 30. Doubtless it was the previous success of their policy of intimidation, whereby they scared Congress and the President into giving them the Adamson law, that infatuated them to resort to the same threat of frightfulness in their most recent attempt to coerce the Government and override the law.

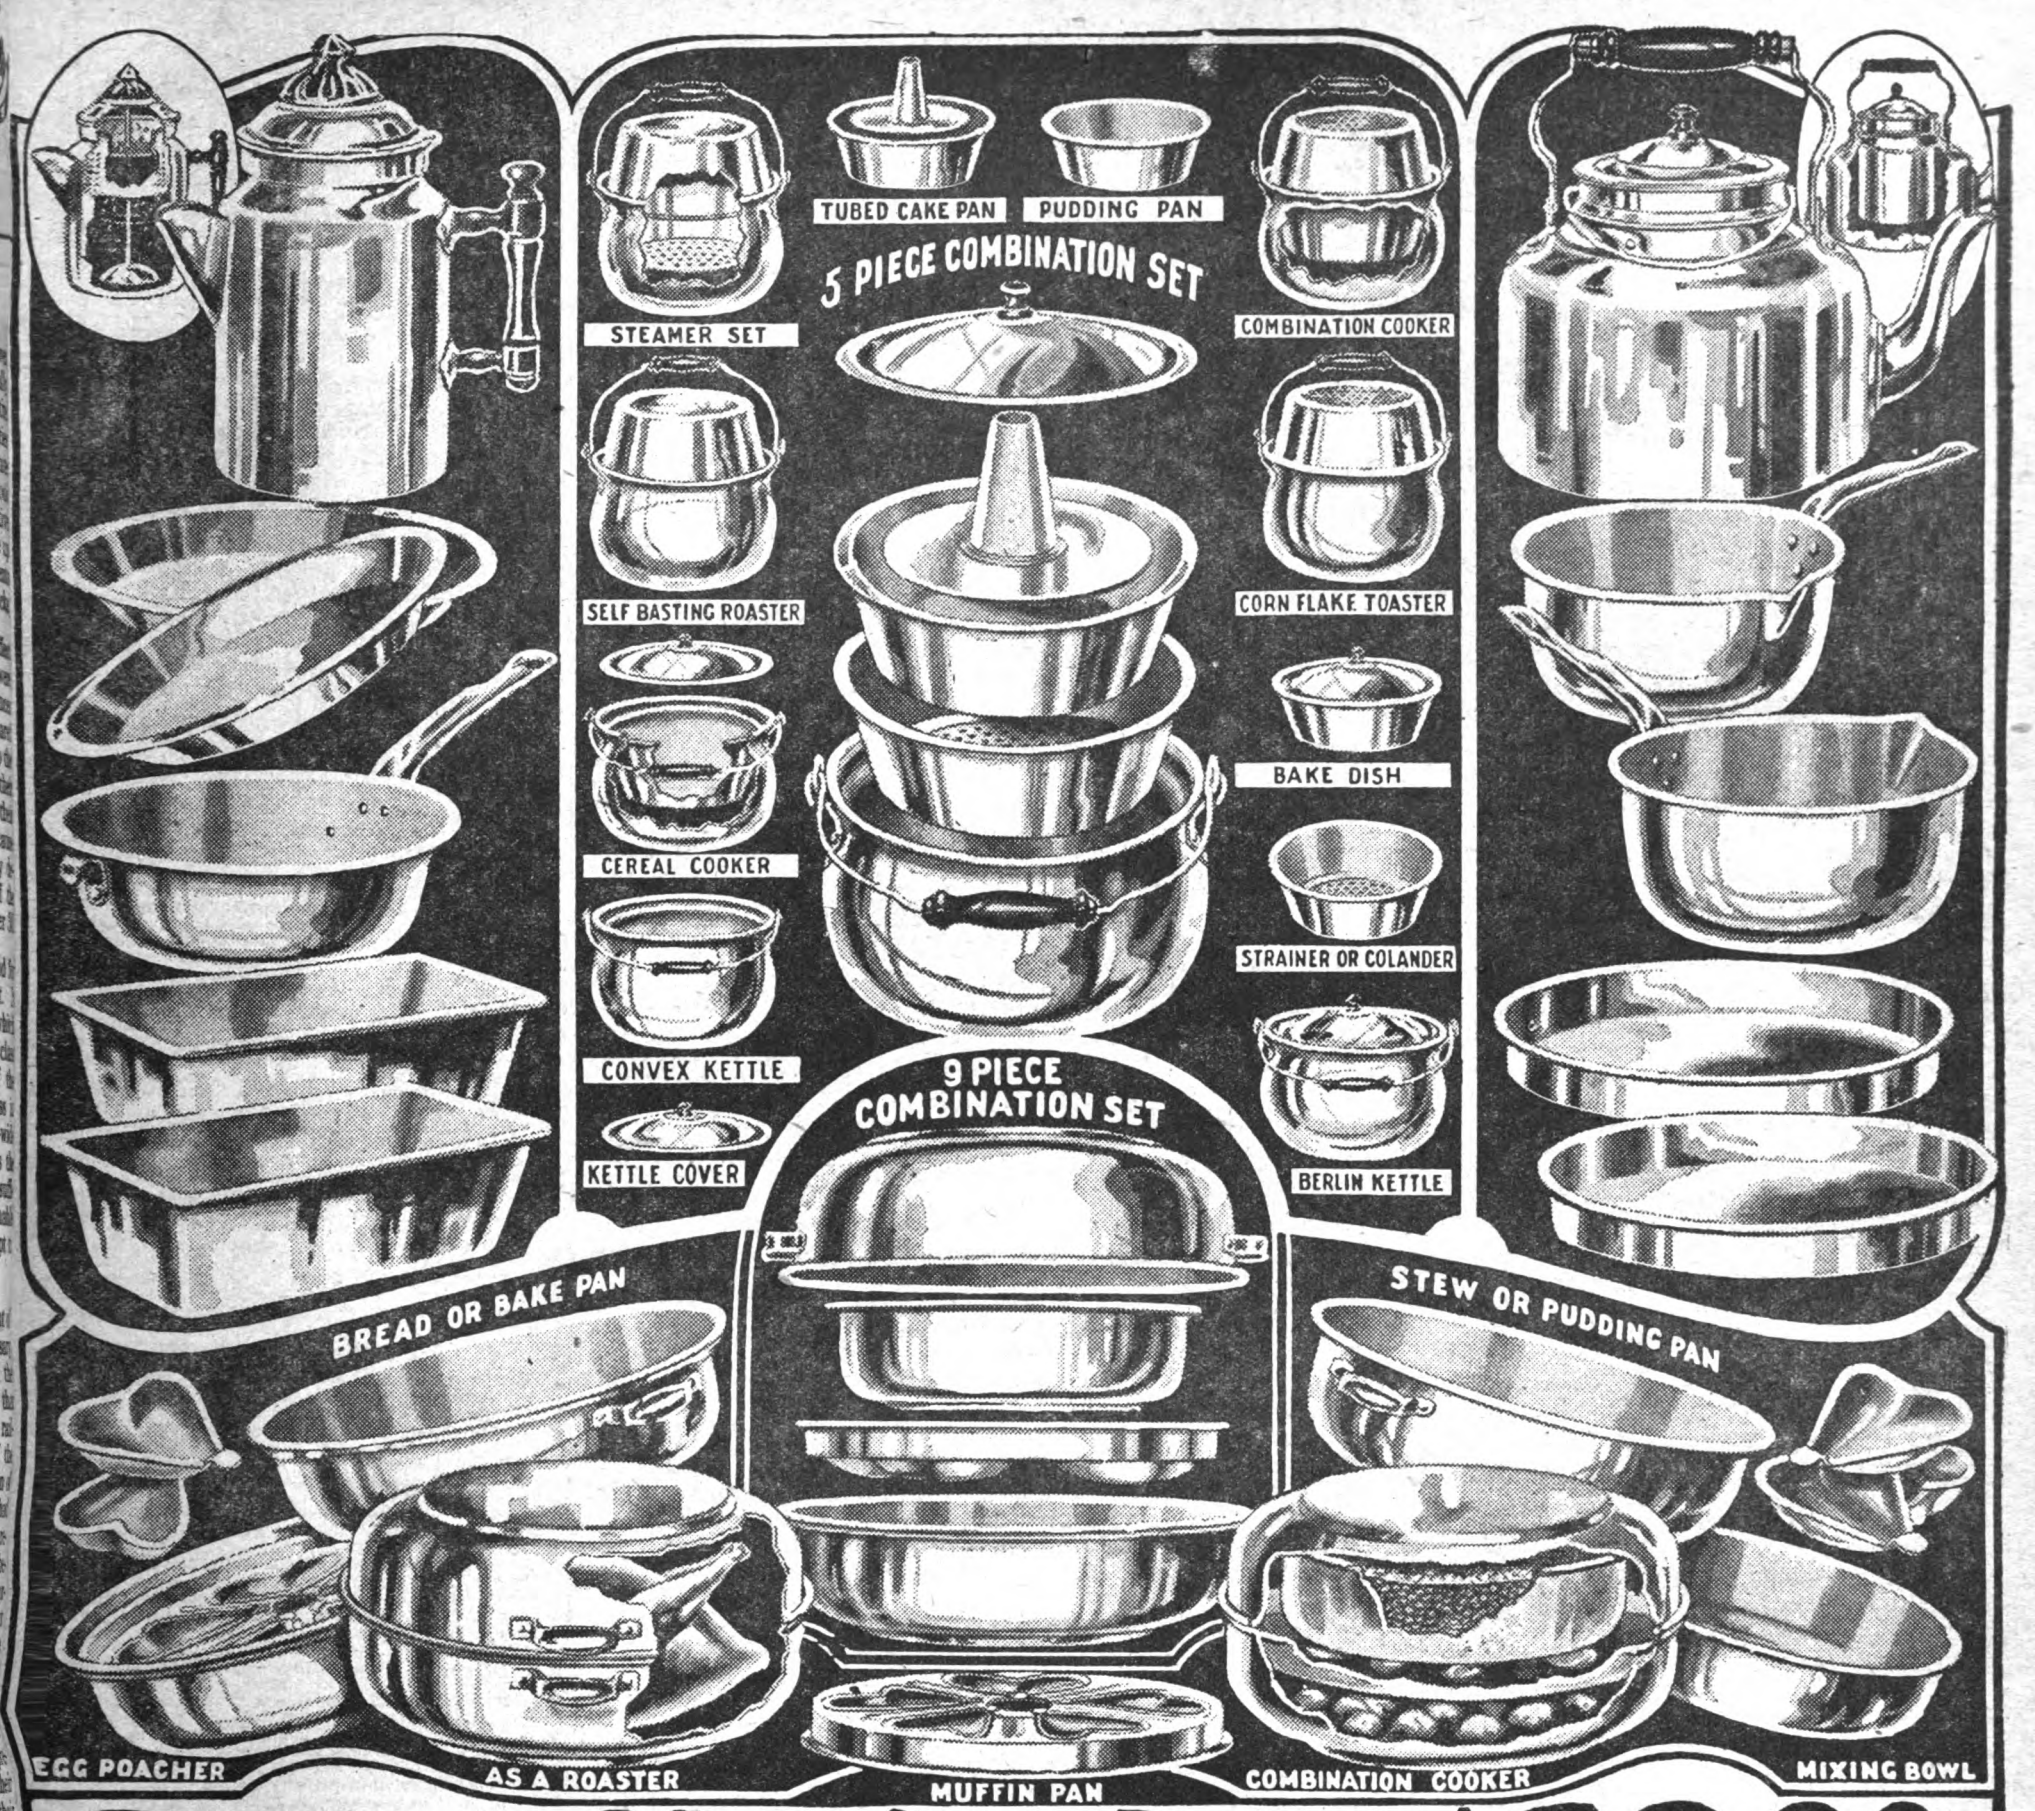
Up to the time of the establishment of the Railroad Labor Board the railroad labor unions, when criticised for their readiness to inflict suffering on the public by strikes, have defended their course on the ground that, as there was no Government tribunal for them to appeal to for authoritative settlement of disputes between them and their employers, the strike was the only available method of protecting their interests as wage earners. But they did not, because they could not, urge that excuse for their October strike order; and they did not offer any excuse for it, because there was none. Their attitude was audaciously and insolently defiant; contemptuously defiant of law and of the carefully considered decision of the able and honorable tribunal charged with the duty of administering the law in their case; defiant of the Government, and casting a dare in the face of the President who was in duty bound to exert his utmost endeavors to enforce obedience to the Board's decision and mitigate, so far as possible, the evil consequences of the strike order; defiant of public opinion in their overconfidence that the people would become panic-stricken as they faced or began to feel the horrible effect of the strike and would press the Government to yield as it did in 1916. But they were utterly wrong in their psychological deductions; for their policy of frightfulness in this instance, like that of Germany in the war, produced an effect exactly opposite to that intended.

The Government showed no sign of surrender or compromise. On the contrary President Harding, after the Railroad Labor Board's rational appeal to the union chiefs to revoke their strike order had been scornfully turned down, began to take vigorous measures to meet the emergency; he let it be known that the War Department was making a canvass of the regular army to ascertain how many of the enlisted men had had railroad experience, from which it was inferred that he intended to use them in place of the strikers to run the trains; it was announced that the Department of Justice through the Attorney General and the U. S. District Attorneys throughout the country was prepared to invoke the power of the Federal Courts when and where necessary to protect the rights and interests of the Government and the people during the strike. Editorial comment everywhere was almost unanimous in denouncing the threatened strike and commending the action of the Government. The people the country over rallied to the support of the President, individually and in bodies offering their services—the entire student body of several colleges and universities volunteering to take the places of strikers. State and city executives and citizen associations took action to organize the resources of their respective communities to combat the malign effort to tie up transportation, and for this purpose arrangements were made for an extensive use of auto-trucks.

As the day for the strike to go into effect drew near the railroad labor union chiefs were dismayed by these and other convincing evidences that the Government and the nation were prepared and resolutely determined to fight the strike to the bitter end, and sullenly they acknowledge their defeat. Knowing that further persistence on their part would be of no avail to them or their cause but only add to the public resentment, they decided Thursday night, October 27, to call off the strike which had been ordered to begin October 30.

It was a great victory for the people and for the cause of law, order and good government. It stands as a warning that there is a limit at which the people will rise against the tyranny of class rule; it wipes out the national disgrace of the humiliating surrender of a former Congress in 1916 through fear of a like threat of a nation-wide tie-up of the railroads, and it should impress the present Congress with the necessity of putting sufficient teeth into the transportation law to enable the Government to nip in the bud any attempt to bring on or promote a railroad strike.

In order to form an appreciative judgment of the controversy we are discussing it is necessary to understand clearly and keep in mind that the point of transcendent importance is the fact that this threatened strike was not against the railroads nor against any decision or action of the railroad managers, but was against the action of the United States Railroad Labor Board which had been invested with the dignity, power and responsibility of a court to decide all disputes between the railroads and their employees in accordance with the dictates of reason by meting out even-handed justice to all parties, including the public; that it was an attempt by a threat of forcible resistence to compel this tribunal to reverse a judicial decision rendered after a public hearing at which the railroad labor unions had been represented by their officials, their counsel and their witnesses, and through them had presented their evidence and arguments. Of this there is positive proof from the mouths of the union chiefs who issued the strike order, for when the U. S. Railroad Labor Board stooped to the limit of decent condescension by sending for them and trying to persuade them to revoke the strike order their arrogant reply was that they could not call off the strike unless a "satisfactory settlement" was reached, and they explained that the settlement which they demanded must include a revocation of the Board's twelve per cent. wage cut decision of last June. Nevertheless, a few days later, when they discovered that the Board could not be browbeaten and that its position had the solid support of the Government and the people, they did call off the strike.



Some are inclined to question the constitutional power of Congress to prohibit strikes and require labor disputes to be settled by the judgment of a Goverment board or court of arbitration. That depends entirely on the nature of the employment. If, as is undeniably true in regard to railroads, the employment is of such a nature that a strike would or might injuriously affect the general welfare, then in such case Congress would have the right to legislate by virture of the clause of the Constitution which confers on the Federal Government the power "to promote the general welfare." And this is of reason, common sense and necessity as well as being good law

COMFORT'S EDITOR.

COMFORT, PUBLISHED MONTHLY BY W. H. GANNETT, PUB., INC., AT AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Subscription price in United States and United States Possessions 50c a year; Canadian subscriptions 65c a year, foreign countries $1.00 a year. No premiums or prizes will be given on Canadian or foreign subscriptions. Please send your renewal just as soon as your subscription expires. We can not send you even one copy of COMFORT, after expiration, until your subscription is Renewed. If you do not get your magazine by the 25th of the month write us and we will send you another copy free. Please notify us immediately in case you move, so that we can change your address and see that you do not miss a single copy. Remember that we must have your former address, as well as your new address to make the change. Be sure to send both. We do not supply back numbers.

Entered at the post office at Augusta, Maine as second-class mail matter. Copyright, 1921 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

Price Slashed to $13.90

Complete Set Genuine Lifetime Ware

$1.00 Down

Madam: Here's an opportunity you haven't had in years—yes, years—even before the war. A complete set of genuine "Lifetime Ware Aluminum", each utensil stamped with the manufacturer's brand genuine, heavy gauge, extra hard, pressed sheet seamless aluminum—and at a price less than is asked by others today for thin, ordinary aluminum ware. We, ourselves, had to charge $23.90 for a set like this only a few months ago; but now on a special factory offer we have smashed the price to $13.90 (on easy monthly payments), lower than pre-war prices on aluminum ware of this grade. This is an exclusive offer to Straus & Schram customers by a special arrangement with the factory. We had the cash; they needed business to keep their employes working—that's why we are able to make you this amazing, price smashing offer.

Notice Be careful in buying aluminum-ware. Some sets offered for sale are made of cheap, soft aluminum which bends easily, dents with every fall or knock and is not durable. Insist upon genuine, heavy gauge, hard sheet aluminum. The set offered here is made of genuine pure sheet aluminum, heavy, extra hard, Guaranteed "Lifetime Ware."

LIFETIME WARE DIAMOND BRAND SANITARY BRIGHT DURABLE PURE ALUMINUM

Everything in the Kitchen of Pure Aluminum—28 Pieces

Combination tea kettle and double boiler (3 pieces) 5 quart size, 8¼ inch inside, with a double boiler, 2 quart capacity; one Colonial design coffee percolator (2 pieces), 8 cup size with welded spout, dome cover, fully polished; one roaster consisting of 9 pieces, measures 10½ inches wide and 6 inches high. These 9 pieces have dozens of different uses, some shown in illustration, including bread or bake pan (7 pint capacity); stew or pudding pan (7 pint capacity); pudding pan or mixing bowl (4 pint capacity); egg poacher (5 eggs at a time); muffin pan; biscuit baker with custard cups or jelly molds; deep locking self basting roaster, double boiler cereal cooker or triple steamer. The outfit also includes 2 bread pans, 1 lip stew pan (1 quart capacity), 1 lip stew pan (1½ quart capacity). Two inch pie plates; two 9½-inch extra deep cake pans; 1 colander with 9 inch top, 5⅛ inch bottom and 2¼ inch depth (can also be used as a steamer.) 5 piece combination set, having 12 different uses as shown in illustration, consists of 6 quart convex kettle with cover; 2 quart cake and pudding pan with cake tube; strainer or colander. Shipping weight about 15 lbs. All pieces except the pie plates and bread pans) are highly polished, made of genuine pure sheet aluminum, extra hard, absolutely guaranteed the famous "Lifetime Ware".

Order by No. A6729A. Send $1.00 with order, $1.50 monthly. Price, 28 pieces, $13.90.

30 Days' Trial Easy Payments

Only $1.00 down brings the set to your home for 30 days' trial. See how it cooks and bakes better than any other kitchen ware, heats quickly, will not crack, chip or peel, polish can't wear off. If not perfectly satisfied, return the set at our expense within 30 days and we will refund your $1.00, plus any express charges you pay.

But if you are pleased—delighted with this wonderful set, start making small payments of $1.50 per month until you have paid $13.90 in all. We trust honest people anywhere in the United States. No discount for cash; nothing extra for credit. No C. O. D.

Send NOW!

Only $1.00 with the coupon brings this 28-piece "Lifetime Ware" Aluminnm set on 30 days' trial. Money refunded if not satisfied. Don't miss this slashed price offer. Send coupon now.

Free Bargain Catalog
Shows thousands of bargains in furniture, jewelry, carpets, rugs, curtains, silverware, stoves, talking machines, porch and lawn furniture, women's, men's and children's wearing apparel. Send coupon today.

Straus & Schram, Dept. 3049 West 35th Street Chicago, Illinois

STRAUS & SCHRAM, Dept. 3049 W. 35th Street Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed find $1.00. Ship special advertised 28 piece "Lifetime Ware" Aluminum Kitchen Set. I am to have 30 days' trial. If I keep the set, I will pay you $1.50 monthly. If not satisfied, I am to return the set within 30 days and you are to refund my money and any freight or express charges I paid.

☐ 28 Piece Aluminum Kitchen Set No. A6729A, $13.90.

Name.....

Street, R.F.D. or Box No......

Shipping Point.....

Post Office..... State.....

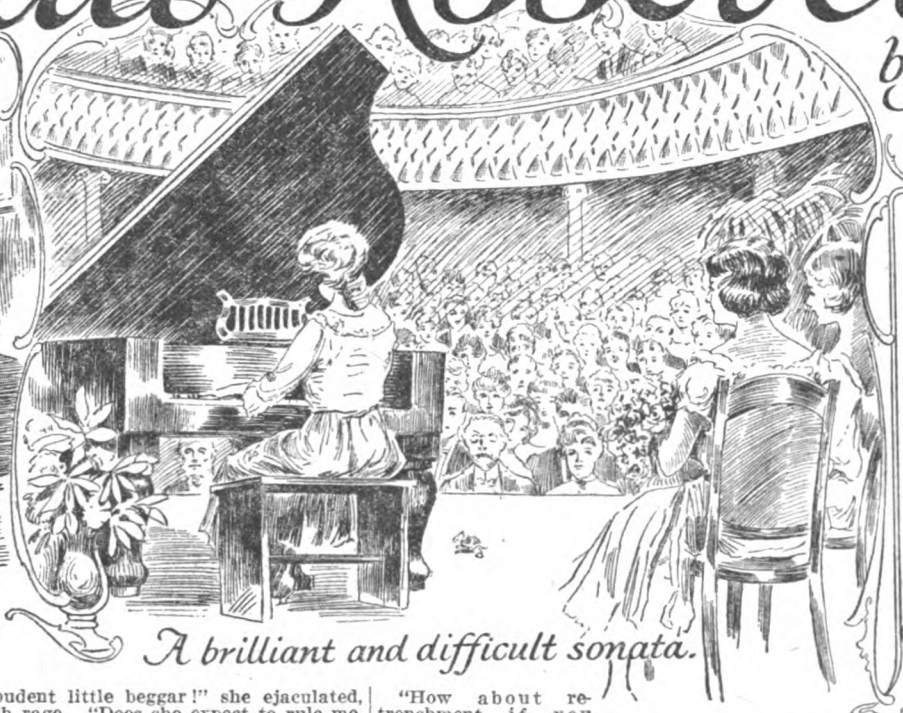
If You Only Want Catalog, Put X in Proper Box Below:



☐ Furniture, Stoves and Jewelry ☐ Men's, Women's and Children's Clothing

Stella Rosevelt

by Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

"No, sir; I shall go just as I am. This is the best I have."

A brilliant and difficult sonata.

Star looked after him with a glorified face.

Copyright, 1883, 1902 and 1903 by Street & Smith.
Renewal granted to Mrs. Georgie Sheldown Downs, for 28 years from March 20, 1911.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A terrible storm at sea and from a steamer running between Liverpool and New York only five escape seasickness. Among them is Stella Rosevelt Gladstone, an orphan and on her way to some distant relatives in New York. She is befriended by an elderly man, Jacob Rosevelt, who is startled when he learns her mother called her "Star," her grandmother giving her the name. A fire breaks out and she saves valuable papers. The boats are rapidly filled. Stella refuses to go unless room is made for Mr. Rosevelt, who the next day suffers from an ill turn and is carefully nursed by Stella. The sixth day they are rescued. Mr. Rosevelt is told of the care Stella gave him during his illness and while thanking her a young man approaches and Mr. Rosevelt introduces Archibald Sherbrooke, whose home is in Derbyshire where Star's father preached. Star's shawl becomes loosened and not finding the pin, Mr. Sherbrooke draws one, an exquisitely carved stone, from his necktie, and Stella pins the shawl and then tells the story of the wreck and her endeavor to save Mr. Rosevelt's life. Arriving in New York, Mr. Sherbrooke regrets the loss of her address—he would call before his return to England. He hopes they will meet again and will she always consider him her friend. He places a card in her hand with his address upon it. Stella, remembering the pin, passes it to him. He begs her to keep it as a souvenir. Wishing she had something to give, he will accept a lock of her hair. Stella is met by Mrs. Blunt, Mrs. Richards' housekeeper, who hurries her away, much to Mr. Rosevelt's disappointment. Stella receives a cool reception from her aunt who had written she would befriend and educate Stella until able to care for herself and learns she is to take the place of Maggie Flynn and to be degraded to the level of a common servant. Resenting it, she asks her aunt if her father, from what she wrote him, had any idea she was to come into the family as a servant. Mrs. Richards does not relent, and insists she fills Maggie Flynn's place or none. Stella appeals to Mr. Richards, giving him the letter written by her father to Mrs. Richards and her reply. Stella's father is anxious to provide a home and begs Mrs. Richards to have the care and education of his daughter, since she once professed friendship for Stella's mother in saving her life from drowning. Stella has one hundred pounds. Could she not use it and then teach, relieving Mrs. Richards of all responsibility?

CHAPTER VII.

A CONSULTATION.

"WHAT have you been doing today?" Mr. Richards asked in cold, stern tones, after what seemed an interminable pause.

Stella began to feel almost faint. That hard face, in which displeasure was the chief expression, did not look very promising for her cause; but she replied:

"I have done all the chamber work, swept and dusted five rooms, and waited upon Mrs. Richards."

"You are not accustomed to such work," he said, glancing at her delicate hands.

"Not to any such extent, sir. Mamma used to require me to take care of the music-room, besides my own, at home, for we could keep only one servant, and I know how to sweep, and dust, and make beds," Star concluded, with a slight smile.

"I should say that you know a good many things for so young a lady," Mr. Richards said, kindly for he saw that she was nervous over what she had been telling him. Then he added, more gravely: "I will consult Mrs. Richards, and I think that we can arrange for you to pursue your education as you desire."

Star flushed.

She knew well enough that a mere consultation with Mrs. Richards would not secure much for her, and that she would be very angry with her for having appealed to her husband, and she made up her mind on the spot to make a bold stroke for her freedom.

So meeting his eyes in a frank, fearless way, yet speaking with the utmost respect, she said:

"I feel confident from the conversation which I had with Mrs. Richards this morning, that she will be very unwilling to make any change in her arrangements, so I will be perfectly frank and say to you, that much as I should dislike to take any radical steps in opposition to her, or my father's desire that I should remain with her, yet I cannot consent to remain here as a common servant, with no privileges or time to myself. I presume Mrs. Richards will say that, as she has been appointed my guardian, I shall have to do just as she desires. But I have read somewhere that when an orphan in this country reaches a certain age, he has the privilege of choosing a guardian for himself. Rather than be subjected to the fate of becoming a second Maggie Flynn," Star continued, her voice gathering firmness, "I shall exercise that privilege. Thank you for listening so kindly to my troubles, and I trust I have not wearied you. Good night."

Without waiting for him to reply, she inclined her head in a graceful bow, and quietly glided from the room.

"By George!" exploded Mr. Richards, staring blankly after her retreating form, "that is what I call spirit. Make a common servant of such a girl as that, indeed! My lady and I will talk this matter over, and see—what we shall see."

Half an hour later he sought an interview with his wife, and there followed "a consultation" in earnest.

Mrs. Richards was dumbfounded upon being informed of the decided stand which her spirited little ward had taken, and her indignation in consequence knew no bounds.

"The impudent little beggar!" she ejaculated, crimson with rage. "Does she expect to rule me, or balk me like this? She will find herself greatly mistaken. I will give her a dose in the morning—'such a dose,' as Mrs. Flintwinch was wont to remark to his beloved Affery."

"Ellen, you will do no such thing," her husband returned, firmly. "Have you forgotten Mr. Gladstone's letter to you and your reply to him? When you wrote accepting the guardianship of his daughter, you did so in a way to lead him to believe that you would do your best for her."

"And so I am doing my best for her," interrupted his wife. "You have talked of nothing but retrenchment for the last six months, and I have tried to retrench. I knew the coming of this girl would make an extra mouth to feed, so I made up my mind to make her useful, and save something if I could."

"Well, the child says she is willing to be useful, but you are not fulfilling your agreement by making a drudge of her. Mr. Gladstone understood that you would give careful attention to her education, which he evidently has conducted upon the most thorough principles, and he expected that you would fill so far as possible his place toward her."

"How do you know what I wrote to him? You did not see my letter?" demanded Mrs. Richards, angrily.

"I have seen it tonight. The girl has it, and showed it to me; and now I want you to live up to your promises," replied her husband gravely.

"She ought to be thankful that she has a roof to shelter her. Do you suppose I am going to allow her to interfere with Josephine's rights?"

"Certainly not; but this girl is exceedingly bright and pretty; let them become mates and share alike, and I'll wager that Star will never abuse your indulgence," Mr. Richards said, generously.

"And who may 'Star' be?" demanded his wife, scornfully.

"Why, Stella, of course—Star was the name, I suppose, by which she was known at home. Now, I insist," he continued, with decision, "that this child be given a fair chance."

"Can't help it," he retorted, coolly. "I'll not have that girl made a common drudge of in this house while I am master here. How you could meditate such a thing for a moment is more than I can understand. Where is the gratitude for the life which her mother saved for you so many years ago?"

Mrs. Richards started slightly. She had not intended that her husband should ever know of the debt which she owed Star's mother.

"I suppose she had to twit you of that in order to gain her point and make you her champion," she said, sarcastically.

"No, indeed. I asked her what her father meant by his allusion to the service rendered you, and to which he referred in his letter, and she told me, of course, though in a very modest way, that her mother once saved you from drowning. Now I want you to change your tactics. I want you to allow her to be one of the family."

"I will never do that, Mr. Richards, and it is useless for you to suggest it," Mrs. Richards interrupted, hotly. "I could never endure the sight of the girl at my table after this, and Josephine, I know, would not consent to it. Any one can see by the course she has pursued tonight that she is full of art and intrigue, and would not hesitate to interfere with Josie's plans and prospects."

"Oh, ho! you're afraid she will outshine Jo, are you?" laughed her husband, good-naturedly.

"I will never put Stella Gladstone on an equal footing with my daughter, so you can cease arguing upon that point," reiterated Mrs. Richards, with a positiveness that was not to be mistaken.

"If you insist," she continued, after a minute's thought, "upon her being allowed to pursue her education, since she makes such a parade of being a bookworm, let her; I will not interfere. But I insist, on the other hand, that she make herself useful. She must work about the house before and after school, and do something in return for her support—more than this I will not concede;" and Mr. Richards, having gained this point, considered that he had won quite a victory for his wife's pretty ward.

"Very well," he said; "I presume she will be satisfied with this arrangement. She said she was willing to work if she might only be allowed to study."

"Satisfied or not, it is all the concession that I shall make; and mark my words, George, I shall not love her any better for this interference on your part," his wife said, hotly.

"Fie, Ellen! I thought you had a warmer heart; and it would not sound well outside if it should become known that you were making a servant of a relative. It would make quite a stir let me tell you, if she should appeal to the courts to have a new guardian appointed," Mr. Richards returned, in a conciliatory tone.

Thus the matter was settled to Star's great joy. Mr. Richards made arrangements at once for her to enter a select school for young ladies, and she began her attendance there the following Monday.

She left home at a quarter to nine in the morning, and did not return until half-past four in the afternoon, taking a luncheon and spending the morning in the schoolroom.

By staying at noon thus Star gained an hour's practice on one of the pianos, with no one to interrupt her, and this was a season of unalloyed delight to her. Nothing had been said to her about continuing her music—Mrs. Richards had vetoed all accomplishments on account of the extra expense—but she could not give it up, so pursued a course of faithful practice by herself.

All her duties were faithfully performed; beds had never been so well made before, rooms were never so carefully swept and dusted, or so tastefully arranged; and yet one would scarcely have mistrusted her presence in the house, everything was done so quietly and unobtrusively.

Saturdays Miss Baker's weary face would brighten as Star sat and chatted in a merry, entertaining way, whiling away the long hours, her busy fingers often lightening her labors when there was no sewing to be done for herself, until she began to love the sweet young girl with a deep, warm affection, and to look forward to those weekly diversions almost as if they had been angel's visits.

Star was very tasteful, also, and often suggested changes in trimming and the arrangement of drapery, thus making great improvement in her work, while, in spite of Mrs. Richards' commands that "everything for Miss Gladstone be as plain as respectability would allow," she took pains to fit the young girl's figure with great nicety, and added many graceful touches to her otherwise simple dresses.

All winter long Star pursued this busy life, and one morning she might have been seen stealing forth from that elegant mansion a half hour before the regular time, her eyes gleaming, yet somewhat anxious, and carrying in her hands a goodly-sized package wrapped in brown paper.

She took an opposite direction from the usual route to school, and walked hurriedly toward the business portion of the city.

At the end of twenty minutes she stopped before the door of a large and handsome store, where for a moment she seemed to hesitate as if uncertain what to do next.

At last, with fluctuating color and trembling hand, she turned the handle and entered.

A little while passed, and then she came forth again, while now she appeared pale and agitated.

As the door closed after her, she stood still for a moment upon the sidewalk, seeming lost in troubled thought; then a tremulous sigh, which was almost a sob, broke from her lips, and she turned and walked toward her school.

CHAPTER VIII.

RETRENCHMENT.

Winter passed, spring came and went, and the commencement exercises of the seminary where Star was attending drew nigh.

The faculty, as was their custom, sent forth cards of invitation to its patrons, requesting them to be present and see for themselves what their children had accomplished during the year.

It chanced this time to fall upon Star's birthday, although no one was aware of that fact save herself; but to her it was destined to prove an eventful occasion, and one long to be remembered.

Mr. Richards received and opened his invitation with his other letters on that very morning, and after glancing over it, passed it to his wife.

She merely looked at it, yawned, and then laid it indifferently one side.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 12.)

Christmas Toasts

TO those who are racking their brains for appropriate thoughts prettily expressed to serve as a toast at a Christmas social function, or as a happy greeting, or to accompany a Christmas gift, the following sentiments may be useful.

Drink to this holiday with only Christmas spirit in the cup.

Some have presents of jewels and gold,
Some have presents of houses and land,
I drink to the one who gave riches untold,
I drink to the lady who gave me her hand.

Here's hoping that we do not have our holiday spoiled by getting what we deserve instead of what we want.

Here's to the couple wed on Christmas Day,
A happy groom and bride,
For when we look at them we say,
"Behold the Christmas-tied!"

A toast to those who, in our youth,
Bedecked our little trees with toys,
And thus prepared that wondrous gift—
Our memories of childhood joys!

Here's to the girl who hangs up her stocking—
A trap set for presents by this little elf—
And Santa can never (pray don't think this shocking),
Fill it as daintily as she does herself!

This Department is conducted solely for the use of COMFORT sisters, whereby they may give expression to their ideas relative to the home and home surroundings, and to all matters pertaining to themselves and families; as well as opening a way for personal correspondence between each other.

Our object is to extend a helping hand to COMFORT subscribers; to become coworkers with all who seek friendship, encouragement, sympathy or assistance through the interchange of ideas.

Any abuse of this privilege, such as inviting correspondence for the purpose of offering an article for sale, or undertaking to charge a sum of money for ideas, recipes or information mentioned in any letter appearing in this department, if reported, will result in the offender being denied the use of these columns.

Do not ask us to publish letters requesting money contributions or donations of any sort. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate, it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

Please write only on one side of the paper, and recipes on a separate sheet.

Always give your correct and full name and address, very plainly written; otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Address MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON, CARE COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

SUNNY Wright, of Valley, Washington, whose poem, "A Little Home—Out West" (September), received such complimentary notice from the readers, has favored us with some verses to accompany Christmas gifts, the inexpensive kind, the kind that you and I can afford. These verses are appreciated not only for their actual worth but for the kindly spirit that prompted a busy woman to aid us in the difficulties attendant upon us at Christmas time. For that matter, all the letters are as much appreciated and each has a helpful message, even if not in poetry.

I wish it were possible for me to find words to tell you in an understanding way of how your letters make me feel, as I read all of them and copy some for publication. It isn't the regular Merry-Christmas feeling but something deeper and bigger, too big for me to express, and just as though I knew and loved every one of you, as I really do, and not just those whose letters appear in print. The writer of every unpublished letter is just as real to me as someone more fortunate. Believe this and think that your effort wasn't entirely wasted, for by writing you have made one friend, if only a humble one, who sympathizes with you in your sorrow and rejoices with you in your happiness, not only at Christmas but at all times.—Ed.

Little Verses to Accompany Christmas Gifts

Poppy Seeds

Within the poppy's silken heart,
There lies a fairy wish for you,
May poppies bring you happy dreams,
And all your dearest dreams come true.

A beautiful gift is made by pressing large, perfect pansies and lining a tray with pale blue silk, satin or velvet; scatter over it a dozen or so of yellow and purple pansies and replace glass. Either a serving tray or a smaller pin tray for the dresser may be made this way and sent with the following verse:

Dear royal pansies with their hearts o' gold,
All laden with the breath of summer hours.
And oh, the many secrets sweet they hold
For one who reads the language of the flowers.

So, from my piney hills, I send you, dear,
A thousand tender thoughts enwrapt in these,
Their mission be to brighten, bless and cheer,
Pray take them for your very own Heart's ease.

Sent with a rose cutting or a bouquet.

Sunshine and roses for you, dear,
And love that is lasting and true.
If I had my way,
All the whole earth would be
Only sunshine and roses for you.
or,
Lavender and heliotrope,
And rare old-fahioned flowers.
May all their sweetness speak of me
Throughout the summer hours.

A collection of flower seeds.

May every flower that blooms for you
A message of my friendship bring.
And may our friendship thrive and grow
Like flowers in the spring.
or,
Dear friend, I cannot come to you,
To spend my Christmas hours,
But wishes fond and glad and true,
I speak them all with flowers.

With a nightgown yoke or a little bed jacket for the invalid or especially for the prospective mother:

Within each dainty fold I've pressed
A charming fairy wish for you.
May each night bring you perfect rest
And all your happy dreams come true.

Just a little verse for a gift of any sort.

A little gift is all that I can spare,
But with it goes a wish that's fond and true.
May health and peace and plenty be your share,
And fellowship of friends both old and new.

To the absent boy or girl, a little book of kodak snapshots of Mother, Father, the old home, a friend or two and the bridge across the stream or the little old schoolhouse, colored with watercolors and this little verse tucked within:

How precious to the home and heart
Are all the long-missed faces,
How lovely down the lane of years
Shine out the old home places.
And so we send this little gift,
To cheer you and remind you,
Where e'er you roam, you'll find no home
Or friends like those you left behind.

And here's my last innovation. I have hunted up all my silk scraps and begged others from my friends. I took an old four-in-hand tie of Hubby's and ripped it up and am making silk ties for Christmas gifts, using the old one for a pattern. This verse will be my peace offering to go along:

There are ties that make us happy,
There are ties that make us mad,
There are ties that seem to mock the sunset,
There are ties both harmless, good and bad.
There are ties that cost a lot of dollars,
They were made for millionaires, perhaps,
But the tie to test your fond affection,
Is this tie that I've made from scraps.

SUNNY WRIGHT, Valley, Wash.

WINFIELD, R. R. 5, KANS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

For the first time ever I will write a letter to you. First because I have always wanted to and secondly, because I must. The "must" is for this reason. Some time ago I requested, through COMFORT, someone living where red haws grew to write to me. Well, I certainly know now where they grow—everywhere and all over, for I have had letters from most every state in the Union and they are still coming. I have received so many that I feel I can never answer them all personally so I take this method of thanking one and all for their kindness in replying to my request.

I used to live where the red haws grow and I only wanted a few so my boy could see and taste them, never dreaming I would be swamped with kindness—and red haws—to such an extent. My husband laughed at me as day after day I would bring from the mail box, ten to fifteen letters. He said "COMFORT surely is a go getter paper."

I hope this letter gets into print at the earliest possible date for until it does I will feel like a slacker for not answering the letters I received. It would take several dollars worth of postage and ever so many days of writing to do that and I have so much work to do that I can hardly keep up my regular correspondence.

I wish I could help all who wrote me for clothes and other things but I am one of the needy kind myself. Will the lady from Oklahoma who wrote me about climate, etc., with view of locating here if the climate would benefit her husband who has asthma, write me again. I lost your address.

With love to the sisters and Mrs. Wilkinson, I remain,
A faithful admirer of all,
MRS. JESSIE HEFFNER.

IOWA.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

I don't know what one must do or must not do in order to become a sister but if I knew I'd surely do it.

"A Happy Mother" in September issue, mentions a certain minister placing the blame of race suicide on the women being given the vote. I would ask for nothing more than to see that minister and ask him a few questions. First I should ask him why the intelligent American mothers be compelled to stand aside and not vote while all kinds of foreigners are allowed to take out naturalization papers and then vote for our law makers? Second, why are the men considered more competent to vote than the women? I know a great many men that have a very limited education and not an overdose of brains and I know other men with college educations that are afflicted the same way. You can educate a fool but you can't make him think. Third, whose life trembles in the balance when a life comes into this world, and why should she not have something to say about the lawmakers? I would like to hear him answer these questions.

By birth, choice and study I am a Democrat, teeth and toenails, but I voted the Prohibition ticket. My reason for doing so was that I thought it right. Right is right and wrong is wrong and I could not vote for the man the Democrats had placed at the head of their ticket.

I am the mother of five children, ranging in age from fourteen to five years. LITTLE MOTHER.

SAVAGETON, WYO.

DEAR COMFORT FOLKS:

COMFORT is just like a nice warm fire on a raw, chilly day. There's something about it I cannot describe but all of you know what I mean. Every letter is so different that it's just like meeting and knowing that many new friends.

I have a "Little Home Out West" though very different from Sunny's. I have fixed up the inside as attractively as I know how. It is a soddy 14 feet wide and 28 feet long with five windows, which give plenty of light. The windows are placed two panes side by side and are trimmed with Dutch curtains and I have sixteen nice geraniums and a lovely hanging basket of Wandering Jew. The geraniums I raised from seed as we are forty miles from town and traveled here in a wagon. I was afraid to bring the starts so far. Then too, I am a stranger and I didn't like to ask for starts from people whom I did not know.

We have had a dry year here, as usual, but our corn did well and so did our potatoes and beans. This is our third year here and it is our first abundant crop but perseverance wins in the end I am told.

I have helped clear sagebrush, build barbed wire fences, cut and shocked corn, gone to the timber for wood, poles and posts, and am gaining in weight every day. I am four feet ten inches tall and weighed 183 pounds the last time I was weighed but I think husband stepped on the scales. I am twenty-three years old and have a big healthy boy six years old, in the second grade. It gets lonesome here so far from town; last winter I pieced two quilts, in basket pattern, and crocheted two round rag rugs for my little home.

We have our 640 acres all fenced now, a good well of soft water near the door and a good cow which supplies milk and butter for us. If it hadn't been for our good health and bulldog grit we never would be here now and have a home all our own with a cow, pigs and chickens. The first two years we lived in a dugout, hauled alkali water three miles and were getting more disgusted every day, but finally a few neighbors came and told us to give up digging wells where we were and go down the draw and sink an auger hole, which we did, about half a mile south of our dugout, and found water at sixteen feet, fine water, too. We now have twelve near neighbors, a new schoolhouse will be built this fall as the men are going to haul the lumber free of charge this week.

To my dear COMFORT sisters, I say "stick to it" for when things look the very blackest and you are ready to quit, right then is the time to brace up and do your best for there is the turning point. God gives us these black nights so we may better appreciate the golden days.

Love to one and all, and before I close will say to you who live in a tiny flat and those who live on farms, will be glad to hear from you.

Sincerely, MRS. WALTER S. HAGGERTY.

Mrs. Haggerty.—That's the nicest compliment COMFORT ever received. I wish I could think of some clever way to tell you how much I admire you. You don't need this verse but it may help some other sister to "stick to it" when things look black.

"Charge not thyself with the weight of a year,
Child of the Master, faithful and dear;
Choose not the cross for the coming week,
For that is more than He bids thee seek.

"Bend not thine arms for tomorrow's load,
Thou mayest leave that to thy Gracious God;
Daily only He saith to thee,
'Take up thy cross and follow Me.'"

WARRENSBURG, MO.

COMFORT SISTERS:

After reading the last issue of COMFORT I feel that I must write a letter even if no one ever reads it but myself and Mrs. Wilkinson.

Happy Mother, my house is not always spick and span either and we get along just as well, and better I think, as some of our neighbors who are so neat. Neither do I wash my supper dishes for husband is away all day and we spend the evening visiting. We are alone and no longer younger so we try to make each other enjoy what little time there is left to us. We never have money troubles. My John knows that I do the best I can about saving and I know he does so everything is all right. We have a cozy little suburban home and I raise lots of nice chickens. Don't be shocked sisters, but I wear unionalls while doing my outdoor work. I like to crochet and have used several of the designs given in COMFORT. John never reads anything but Uncle Charlie's Corner. We loved Uncle Charlie and I know we will love Uncle Lisha. I read the sisters' letters first of all when my paper comes. Let's have a sisters' badge by all means.

J. B.

Why is it that the writer of a letter like the above asks that her name be withheld? In the case of a sorrow, tragedy or some secret revealed, the need of secrecy can be readily understood but it seems rather too bad not to give the name and address when there is apparently no reason for withholding it.—Ed.

KANSAS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND OTHERS:

This is my first attempt to write to our column although I have been a reader for many years and nearly always read the sisters' letters the first thing. But after reading the letter from Molly-Joe I thought I'd take a chance with the waste-basket. I'm not much of a letter writer but could not resist giving a little advice whether the others think I am right or not.

Molly-Joe, you ought to get married. I want to tell you my own experience and you and the sisters are to be the judges. When I was eighteen I wanted to finish my education and become a teacher. But instead I stayed at home, cooked, washed, ironed and did most of the housework for a large family. I then met a young man and we both were very much in love and wanted to marry but my family opposed the idea, as I was needed at home so I gave up again. My sweetheart later married another. It has always been give up and stay at home and my home life was far from pleasant the most of the time. I stayed there until I was thirty-four years old, then married a widower whom I did not love, just to have a home in my old days, as my parents had died. But let me say here that I wasn't married long until I loved my husband dearly and we are very happy. But I have no children and I am so very sorry I did not marry ten years earlier. I do not believe in girls marrying before they are twenty, neither do I believe in waiting until after thirty as all are not as lucky as I was. Another thing, Molly-Joe, if you are not acquainted with some desirable young man, go out and get acquainted. I don't mean to be forward or bold but in your quiet way meet young folks. I was always taught that it was wrong for a girl to want to get married but now I think differently. I think God intended marriage and children and a woman has as much right to look for a husband as a man for a wife. I have been in your place Molly-Joe, and now I am in the place of your stepmother so I think I am capable of giving a little advice on both sides. Have you ever thought that perhaps the new mother would be just as glad of the change as you? I never have any words whatever with my "steps" but nevertheless I'll be glad when they have homes of their own and my husband and I will be alone. In your frame of mind you probably imagine things so if I were you I would try it away from home for a while anyway. Perhaps you won't be missed as much as you think and perhaps you'll be glad to go back. But anyway, try it.

I have the best husband in the world, and after all I was paid for waiting. Whatever you do, ask God's blessing and try to do right.

Best wishes to all. AUNT SALLY-LOU.

Aunt Sally-Lou.—I like your name ever so much. You have given us something to talk about for the rest of the winter and it will be interesting to read what the sisters have to say about it.—Ed.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I wonder—ever eighteen miles from town, snowbound, and no prospects of getting through by Christmas, with most of the Christmas trimmings still unbought?

After an afternoon spent watching the snow pile higher and higher, a well-stocked pantry and cellar seemed the only consolation for two little tots waiting for Santa Claus.

Finally, after a rummage, a set of blocks, two rubber balls, some little toy books and cards put away when toys were more plentiful; these with a couple of home-made balls and rag dogs were the toys. Right there I decided never to wait until the middle of December before getting toys.

Some new towels and a tablecloth, still unhemmed; a couple of blue handkerchiefs and some new socks for Daddy were placed beside the toys and the dear little boys were as pleased with Mother's and Daddy's gifts as they were with their own.

Daddy brought in a large branch from the cedar windbreak and set it up. We all helped Santa that Christmas Eve and the little ones put on the old trimmings that had been saved from year to year. They enjoyed that more than they would have a finished tree they had no part in.

There was no candy so this had to be made. I had never tried that before but had cookbooks and magazines and we must have candy. I made fondant by working powdered sugar into a little cream and cut it into small portions. I made tiny flat cakes, flavored with each of my extracts of one portion. From another I made little balls, working in lots of shredded cocoanut and into others walnut meats while plain vanilla balls were rolled in chopped nut meats. Those walnuts sure paid for the trouble of gathering and were all the nuts we had.

The fondant was placed on waxed paper on a board and left for a couple of days, when some of it was dipped in melted chocolate. With a plate of fudge, two big dishes of rosy-cheeked apples, one of popcorn balls and one of cracked walnuts we had as nice a Christmas as ever before.

A very Merry Christmas and Prosperous New Year to all. A MICHIGAN SISTER.

BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT FRIENDS:

I have been a silent reader of this wonderful corner for a long time and must bubble over just this once if Mrs. Wilkinson will be kind enough to move the waste-paper basket out of sight while I exchange greetings with the COMFORT sisters.

KENNETH EARLE WELDON.

I live in the sunny South and have read COMFORT since a small child but have never seen a letter from this part of the state. I was reared in the hills of north Alabama. After graduating from New Market Training School in 1915 I taught school two years in the rural districts then was married to the principal where I taught. We came to Birmingham, which is called the "Magic City"—quite a busy, restless place, however; we are out in one of the suburbs where there is sufficient breathing space and room for children to play.

My husband is a mail carrier. We do not own a home of our own but hope to in the future. We are both interested in music and good literature. I think every home should have some kind of musical instrument, especially where there are children. I like the piano or violin in preference to the Grafanola to develop musical talents.

We have a dear little boy three years old named Kenneth Earle, who is the sunshine of our home. He has a remarkable memory, having mastered the whole of the alphabet when only twenty-three months old. He takes special pleasure in learning to spell and sing. He has learned all the keys and can play three scales on the piano. His father is his teacher and he thinks "Daddy" the grandest in the world—they are pals.

Having read so many interesting and helpful letters I would like to send in suggestions which might be helpful to others but my time and COMFORT's space is limited and this time I am sending in a picture of Kenneth Earle and hope to see it in COMFORT.

Good luck to your corner and best wishes to Mrs. Wilkinson and all COMFORT readers.

MRS. NANNIE KENNEDY WELDON.

CALIFORNIA.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

Have just finished reading COMFORT and more especially the Sisters' Corner, as I think that the very best portion of our paper. The September issue contained many interesting topics but to me the most vital one was Motherhood and Race Suicide, as written by A Happy Mother.

I do not think that giving women the vote is in any way responsible for the condition for one has but to study the women who are executives and officials to see that they are usually mothers of at least a moderately sized family. Now may I quote from Bernard Macfadden, whom I think to be a very fine ideal American? The following extracts are from his Encyclopedia of Physical Culture.

"We may see how criminal is that prudish and false sense of modesty which actuates the coming mother in remaining at home, and how damnable that prurient, boldly staring, shickering and generally cheap and vulgar attitude of the public which causes the sensitive woman to shrink from exposure even when she herself is free from any impure or prudish views of her condition."

I agree with Happy Mother when she says that "boys and girls should be told of the pains and joys of motherhood, and to keep their lives pure for the saks of their offspring." Would suggest that wherever possible, par-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 16.)

Comfort Sisters' Recipes

LET the children attend to the Christmas decorations and the making of the Christmas candies. They may need a certain amount of supervision in this but the gathering and hanging of Christmas greens can be made such a joyous occasion that they won't realize they are being supervised. A few simple recipes and a little watching will insure the success of the candies and if a few playmates, not too many, are invited to "help" it will add to the general good time.—Ed.

Miss Lollypop

The small miss carrying her basket of goodies will give you a happy surprise when you turn her around, for she is merely a paper doll covering for one of those toothsome modern lollypops, or "suckers" if called by the name us grownups all knew when as children we adored sucking hard candies from a stick.

But her real mission lies in the pennant stretched across her basket, which says "Christmas Cheer" and suggests the contents are not for herself alone. An American Christmas is typically a "home day," and only enjoyed to its fullest when, as we gather in supreme enjoyment of the blessings about us, we have first extended Christmas cheer beyond our own doors. Sometimes the silver lining is absent from the purse, and to those who carry such let us send from our abundance, in His name.

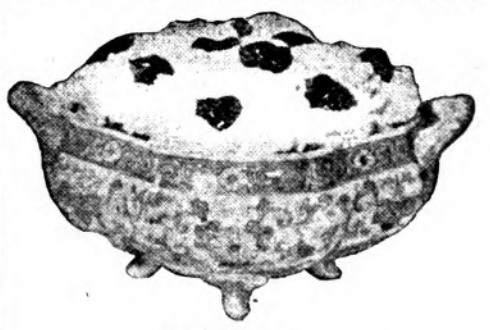
If you would make one of these lollypop surprises to accompany your gifts, for each place at your table, or as a part of your entertainment, have the children make the dolls, using their school paints.

To shape the candy, while soft roll a small piece into a ball, flatten until about one-third of an inch thick, and press a small round stick about half way up through it, then cover with a paraffin paper large enough to nearly also cover the stick. Tie just below the candy, which must be a little smaller than the doll's head, so that it and the paper will not show.

CANDY FOR LOLLYPOP.—Two cups of sugar, one cup of corn syrup, one tablespoon of butter and one-fourth cup of vinegar boiled without stirring after the sugar is dissolved until a little dropped in cold water will become quite hard. Add one teaspoon of vanilla or lemon just before taking from the fire. Pour into greased tin, and keep working edges into center as it hardens. Shape as soon as it can be handled.

ROAST TURKEY.—After turkey has been prepared and washed, rub the entire surface with butter, salt, pepper and flour. Fill with stuffing made by crumbling three-quarters of a loaf of stale bread, moisten with half a cup of melted butter and season to taste with salt, pepper, slices of onion and sage. Place in hot oven until it begins to brown, then decrease the heat. Baste frequently, using a cup of boiling water to which two tablespoons of bacon fat has been added. Add more water as fat forms in pan.

PLUM PUDDING.—One cup bread-crumbs, one cup flour, one cup brown sugar, one-half cup butter, one cup milk, three eggs, one cup seeded raisins, one-half cup chopped citron peel, one-half cup preserved ginger, one cup chopped walnuts, one teaspoon each cinnamon and cloves, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder and one-quarter cup fruit juice. Mix flour with bread-crumbs, add butter, sugar, salt, baking powder, spices, nuts, fruit, milk, eggs and fruit juice. Pour into mould and steam steadily for four hours.



HARD SAUCE.—Beat white of one egg, cream one-half cup butter, add the egg and enough powdered sugar to make it quite stiff, flavor with vanilla. Water will do but the egg makes it more creamy.

PUDDING SAUCE.—One-half pint maple syrup, three tablespoons hot water, butter size of a walnut, thicken with tablespoon corn-starch; boil, flavor with cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg and one-half teaspoon vinegar.

This cake was always made at Christmas time in my family and can be made several days before needed as it keeps for an indefinite period. Put one-half pound of salt pork through a meat chopper and over this pour two-thirds of a cup of boiling water; add one-quarter cup of sugar, two cups of raisins, three well-beaten eggs and one cup of molasses in which two teaspoons of soda have been dissolved. Two teaspoons of cinnamon and one of cloves gives the desired spiciness and may be added with the three cups of flour and one-half teaspoon of salt. Bake in a moderate oven.—OLD SUBSCRIBER, Kansas.

TOMATO SOUP, WITH ONIONS.—Slice two onions and fry them in butter until brown; remove them and fry one dozen tomatoes, or equal quantity of canned tomatoes just sufficient to heat them through, then put them into a stew-pan with their gravy and the onions; add a head of celery and a carrot sliced; stew gently for half an hour, add three pints of gravy; stew an hour and a half; pulp the whole of the vegetables through a sieve; season with white pepper, salt and cayenne. Serve with toasted bread.

APPLE PUDDING.—Two cups of baked tart apples put through a sieve to remove cores and peelings. Heat the strained apples, and add one-third cup of butter. Beat six egg yolks, add two cups of sugar, one quart of milk, one teaspoon of vanilla and a few gratings of nutmeg. Beat hard and stir in the hot apple. Bake thirty-five minutes in a quick oven. Beat the egg whites until frothy, add six tablespoons of sugar (powdered preferable) and beat until very stiff. Spread over the baked pudding, return to the oven and brown. To be served, cool with cream and sugar.

APPLE PUDDING.

BAKED HADDOCK.—Choose a nice fish of about six pounds, which trim and scrape nicely, fill with a stuffing of veal, chopped ham and bread-crumbs, sew up with strong thread, and shape the fish round, putting its tail into its mouth, or, if two are required, lay them along the dish reversed—that is, tail to head; rub over with plenty of butter, or a batter of eggs and flour, and then sprinkle with bread-crumbs. Let the oven be pretty hot when put in. In about an hour the fish will be ready.

SAUSAGE ROLL.—Make dough as for baking-powder biscuit. Roll and cut into pieces four inches wide and twice as long. Take fine sausage, put three or more pieces in the dough and roll up. Press the ends together and bake half an hour.

Love Will Find The Way

by Wenona Gilman

The girl had thrown herself face downward upon the couch.

"It is to speak to you of my—Mother"

"What do you mean?" he demanded angrily. "There are some things which—"

Copyright, 1898, by George Monroe.
Serial Rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Junius Beckwith, a Westpointer, Anne Gordon, wealthy, Marian Reade, companion, friend and protegee of Anne Gordon, occupy a box at the Metropolitan Opera House. The curtain falls and Beckwith admits that "Lucia di Lammermore" has a depressing influence upon him and he cannot think of insanity without repulsion, no matter what the cause may be, and a marriage with either tainted, should be made a crime punishable by law. The next morning is Marian's birthday and deciding to go home, Anne Gordon, with a premonition that she ought to stay, exacts a promise, if any trouble comes, Marian will let her know first. Marian walks away and turning the corner meets June Beckwith and they go to the park. Remembering it is her birthday, he offers his love as a gift and asks her to be his wife. Happy in her love for June, Marian reaches home. Janet Reade, her grandmother, tells her that her mother is not dead but the inmate of a madhouse. What can she say to June? Hearing a voice, she answers to her father's call. He gives her a curious Venetian ring for a birthday gift, and questioning him where he got it he evades the answer and queries what Anne Gordon gives her. Showing the watch, her father berates Marian's friend. She might have given one thousand dollars, which he needs and will have. Marian, under the horror of all she hears, forgets all her grandmother told her, even forgets June Beckwith. Later in the night, recalling her promise to Anne Gordon, she goes to her home. A light flashed from a window opposite shows a rope hung from Anne Gordon's window, and in the window her father's face. Reaching home, Marian meets her father, tells him where he has been, and for no honest purpose, and demands that he return all he has stolen. He refuses, and only after her earnest pleading does he ask what she will do for him. Little dreaming the price she must pay, she asks for nothing but to serve him and she seals the promise upon her mother's Bible. Left alone, Paul Reade decides to keep one ring. Marian writes June she does not love him and that her soul is withered as much as the flower she encloses. Her father assures her he has obtained a position in the brokerage business and rented a house down town. June is stunned upon receiving Marian's letter and welcomes his friend, Fred Underwood, who tells him Paul Reade is a most unscrupulous villain and the house he has rented is a decoy for gamblers, that Marian is not as innocent as she appears. June cannot believe it, and Underwood will prove it to him if he cares to go. June calling upon Anne, she tells of Paul Reade's sudden wealth, and June, knowing where it comes from, as a friend, forbids Anne to go to Marian Reade's home. Going to the reception, Underwood requests Paul Reade to introduce Marian. In the meanwhile June appears with a message from Miss Gordon. He invites Marian for a waltz which she ends with Dick Gresham, the most notorious gambler in New York. The evening ended, Marian faces her father and asks who were those people. She receives no satisfaction from his answer—he expects her to receive them with courtesy, she has sworn to obey him. Anne begs Marian to divulge the secret that troubles her and she denies she has one. Anne cries she knows and pleads with Marian to share with her the home and she will do all she can to save her the humiliation she must have. So long as Marian believed Anne did not know her father was a thief she could bear it, but now it is madness, and clasping Anne in a wild embrace, she leaves her.

CHAPTER XIII.

JUNIUS BECKWITH'S BITTERNESS.

MISS Gordon was not in a condition to descend to the drawing-room when Junius Beckwith was announced that afternoon. Her eyes were red with weeping, she still wore the same charming tea-gown that she had worn when Marian came to luncheon—which, by the way, was never eaten—but June was such an old friend that she sent for him to come at once to her boudoir.

There were tears still in her eyes—almost hysterical tears—when he entered the room and took her hand—tears that were in strange contrast to his cynical smile.

"Well, she has been here?" he drawled, with an affectation of indifference that he was striving valiantly to make himself believe was genuine.

He forgot that he had not spoken to her. He forgot that he had not asked after her health, or in any way interested himself in her, and she, stanch and loyal as she always was, forgot it, too.

"Yes," she answered in a choked voice.

"And—she knows."

He did not speak the words as a question but as an assertion. He turned away, trying with all his might to drown the groan that he felt rising in his throat. She caught his hand and spoke to him with an eagerness that he had never heard her use before, something so entirely different from her usual calm, debonair manner, that he could scarcely believe that it was Anne Gordon who spoke.

"You must not condemn her too much!" she cried. "Oh, June, it was pitiful to see her. I never saw a girl suffer as she did. The fault is not hers, but her father's. You must not condemn her—indeed, you must not! If you could but have heard what she said, you would have pitied her as I did—as I do!"

For a brief moment there was something like hope in his eyes, but it quickly vanished, and the old cynical smile returned.

"You offered her a home here with you, did you not?" he asked, with a slight sneer.

"Yes."

"And she declined it?"

"Yes. She felt that she could not leave her father to the terrible fate that was in store for him. She felt that she could not abandon him when he needed her prayers, her sympathy, her affection the most."

"She told you that?"

"She did."

He laughed—a disagreeable, slightly boisterous laugh.

"Upon my word," he exclaimed, with a sneer, "she is a clever actress! Why, my dear girl, she enjoys it. Listen. I went to that ball last night. She was there in decollete gown, and the waltz that she began with me, she ended in the arms of Dick Gresham, the most noted profligate in all New York."

"Oh, June!"

"It is true, I tell you. I would not have believed it from the lips of my dearest friend. She is eternally lost. I had a thousand times rather have seen her dead, Anne!"

The name was uttered almost as a cry, for the girl had thrown herself face downward upon the couch and was weeping as he had never heard any one weep before. He looked at the back of her head for a moment in a sort of dismay, and then a curious, desperate passion seemed to take possession of him. All the fury of his nature seemed to be aroused against the girl whom he still loved, in spite of all the harm that he believed of her, and all the sympathy of his soul aroused for this woman who wept for her.

He knelt beside Anne Gordon and took her in his arms.

"Hush!" he cried, almost fiercely. "She is not worth one of the tears that are falling from your sweet eyes. She is not worth a breath of regret that could issue from your pure lips. Don't do that. Every sob that you utter seems to strangle me. Oh, Anne, Anne, if I had never loved you before, I should love you now!"

She did not hear the anguish of his tone, she did not understand that its desperation, its reckless agony were the result of love for another woman, and that he loved her because she pitied that other. She only heard those words—those sweet words that she had listened for so long and so patiently:

"If I had never loved you before, I should love you now."

She turned her tear-wet face, and allowed it to touch his cheek. She did not look into his eyes or she might have seen the expression of consternation and horror that he could not control at her words, which were:

"I have listened for those sweet words half my life, June, but I never expected to have them spoken when my heart was so full of sorrow as now. You must not think I do not appreciate them, dear, that I do not love you in return, for I do with all my soul, and the greatest consolation that could have come to me in losing Marian is the knowledge that I have not mistaken you, that you loved me."

Her manner was beautiful and womanly, so full of tenderness that it cut him to the soul. There was no mistaking what she meant. There was no terrible outbreak of passion in the words, but there was the undying devotion of a whole life in them that could not be mistaken. He looked at her for one long, silent minute in dumb anguish.

Could he tell her that she was mistaken? Could he be so cruel as to undeceive her at that moment when her suffering seemed almost as great as his own? But he could not make her his wife. That thought was horrible to him. What should he say to her?

He tried to moisten his stiff, parched lips. He strove to think of some words of explanation, but it was worse than impossible. His brain was singularly alive to the torture of it all, but apparently dead to every other thought.

She wept on quietly for a little while, then lifted herself from his arms with a little smile that contained no mirth.

"I am ashamed to have received the happiness that you have given me in this way, June," she said, with sweet simplicity. "Will you forgive me, dear?"

And then reaction came. Why should he not make her his wife? he asked of himself fiercely. She loved him; she was the one pure woman in all the world outside of his own mother. Why should he not find that happiness with her that he had lost with Marian Reade? Why should Anne Gordon's life be made miserable simply because his could not be happy?

That wild feeling that characterizes the action of a hysterical woman seemed to take possession of him. He caught her face between his hands, and looked into her eyes. His hot breath upon her cheek seemed to scorch her, but his lips did not meet hers; his expression almost frightened her, and yet she did not doubt him.

"And you are willing to be my wife, Anne; you are willing to risk the happiness of your whole future life in my hands?" he cried, in that hurried, husky tone that will not bear description.

"The only happiness that could ever come to me, June, would be through you," she answered simply.

She had never looked so beautiful as when she said those words. The trace of tears were still upon her face, but that seemed to increase her loveliness. Another man would have been proud of the treasure he had won; but June Beckwith saw nothing of her beauty, thought nothing of her womanliness and worth beyond the fact of her perfect purity. That one thing had arisen to immeasurable dimensions in his eyes.

"I will try to be worthy of you, Anne," he said hoarsely. "I will try never to betray the confidence you have reposed in me. Whatever happens, I will be a true and loyal husband to you, dear."

He strangled the groan that he felt struggling from his heart. He knew that he could not trust himself there longer, and taking her face again between his hands, he forced his voice to be calm, as he almost whispered:

"I must leave you now, dear. But I leave you as my promised wife, Anne."

He did not kiss her face. He felt that it would have been the vilest treachery to her. She was his promised wife; and yet his lips had never touched hers, his arm had never encircled her waist after the pledge had been given.

She watched him go with a smile in her eyes and in her heart; but that first leave-taking lived in her soul afterward as a resurrection from the dead.

CHAPTER XIV.

PAUL READE'S TERRIBLE FRIGHT.

"Father!"

Paul Reade turned from a desk beside which he was writing a letter, and looked up at his daughter.

The old, familiar childish "papa" was dead between them forever; but if Paul Reade observed it, he made no comment. Perhaps he forgot to think of it at all in noticing the curious expression of his daughter's face.

It was the day after her visit to Anne Gordon. The evening before had been passed in entertaining some of those new friends who seemed to be ever at her father's elbow now, and he half-feared that she had come with some intention of refusing to mix again with the strange gathering with which he had surrounded her.

"What is it?" he asked, half-turning again to his work.

"I want to talk to you for a moment," she exclaimed desperately. "It seems impossible to get a word with you, now that you are so completely taken up with these new friends that you have formed. Can't you give me one minute?"

There was unconscious bitterness in her tone, and he looked the annoyance that he felt as he laid down his pen and turned round in the revolving-chair.

"Well!" he exclaimed. "Is it to enter a complaint against my new friends? You know you promised——"

"Never mind that," she interrupted miserably. "I know what I promised, and it is not to speak of your friends that I have come."

An expression of relief crossed his countenance. She had seated herself in a chair where the light fell full upon her face, leaving his back to the light and his face in shadow. She could not see him clearly; but it is doubtful if it would have made any difference to her if she could not have seen him at all, with the request that she had to make.

"Then what have you come for?" he asked, a trifle more kindly.

"It is to speak to you of my—mother."

There was a long pause before the word was spoken. Somehow it seemed to her that she could not bring herself to utter that sacred name in his presence, and yet, anything was better than further reference to that subject in her grandmother's hearing.

He started slightly, and a cloud crossed his face. It was the first time in months—even years—since he had heard that word from her lips. He strove to steady his voice as he answered her, but it was husky and strained as he replied:

"What of her, little one?"

"I have come to tell you that I know the secret that you have kept from me all these long, cruel years, and I have come to beg of you to let me see her."

Her hands were folded between her knees in a despairing attitude. Her face was white and miserable as death. She was thinking only of her own suffering and of that unhappy mother; but, wretched as she was, she could not have mistaken the expression of absolute terror upon her father's countenance if she had been able to see his face.

A look that was green in its intensity spread from brow to throat; a glitter like that of a rabid dog gleamed in his eyes; his teeth set, and his lips drew into a tense, straight line. The words that came through them were slow and stammering, like those of the man who speaks while suffering from paralysis.

"Who—told you—that?" he gasped.

"Grandma."

He could not reply for a moment, under the intensity of his exceeding relief. A slow, deep sigh welled up from his very soul. His hands and teeth relaxed, and for a moment it seemed to him that he was going to faint from the relief he experienced in the lifting of that awful pressure. The color rushed back into his cheeks; the light faded from his eyes until they were like those of a dead fish. But he pulled himself together by a powerful effort, and there was a hypocritical quiver in his voice as he said:

"I am sorry she told you, my darling—very sorry. I never meant that you should know the awful fate that had overtaken your poor mother. Oh, pretty one, if you but knew what I have suffered!"

He took out his handkerchief and applied it to his eyes. Marian shivered. She hated herself in that she could feel no pity for him; but her whole heart seemed dead to every sensation.

"It is better that I should know—much better," she answered dully. "It ought to have been told me years ago. I might have been spared so much if—— But that is past, and the past is dead; don't let us speak of it. I know now, and—well, the knowledge has not killed me. I want to see her, father. You will take me to her, will you not?"

"No, no, child; don't ask that. I could not!"

Another fear had come to him. This was a contingency that he had not anticipated. He was trembling slightly, and she felt it as she arose and knelt at his side.

"Father," she cried, "you will not refuse me this! Remember that I have never seen her face since my babyhood. Oh, father, I must see her! All these years she has lived there, surrounded only by mad people. She hears nothing but their cries, sees nothing but their shame and anguish, knows nothing but their wild ravings. What hope could there be for one under circumstances like those? She may have lucid moments. She may have in those moments longings to see the child that she knew but in infancy. The touch of my hand might soothe some wild delirium to restfulness; the sound of her baby's voice might bring back some long-forgotten memory. Oh, father, whatever misfortune has happened to her, she is still my mother, and I must see her—I must!"

He covered his face with his handkerchief, that she might not see the expression of his cowardly, guilty countenance.

"I can't consent!" he cried hoarsely.

"You have not the right to refuse!" she exclaimed. "No matter what may be her condition, you have not the right to refuse a daughter the privilege of seeing her mother's face. Oh, father, tell me that you will not!"

"I must, for your own sake."

He arose suddenly and stepped by her. Something in his tone or manner, she knew not what, startled her. She sprang up, and brushing the hair, that had become disarranged, from her brow, she faced him.

"Don't say that!" she panted, striving to look into his face. "Don't say that! Reverse your conditions, and think of her keeping me from you all your silent, deserted life. Would it not be cruel?"

"No; it would be right."

"It would not! You shall not make me the selfish thing that you are striving to do! It is my duty to see her. No matter how much I should shrink from it, there is no law of creation that does not cry out to me wherein my duty lies. I tell you, father, that in spite even of my oath of obedience, there is just one thing I will not do—I will not allow you to keep me from my mother!"

"And how will you find her?"

"How? I have not thought; but there are those who will help me. There must have been some sort of commitment papers. I will have the records examined. I know the year. The difficulty will be small. I shall find her. But I hope you will not force me to this extremity."

Paul Reade was ghastly under the hideous fear upon him. His hands and lips twitched as if he were threatened with a fit. He could have strangled the girl as she stood there before him, and yet he knew that his nerveless fingers would have dropped from her throat the same moment that they touched it. There was a wild, uncanny horror in his eyes; and then, suddenly, as if by magic, a thought came to him.

He could scarcely repress the fiendish laugh that arose to his lips. His hands dropped behind him; his eyes glittered like those of a serpent.

"So be it!" he cried hoarsely. "You shall see her. You will have but yourself to blame that the horror of it will linger with you to your dying day. Remember that I tried to save you from it."

"And you will take me?"

"I will take you."

"Thank you, father."

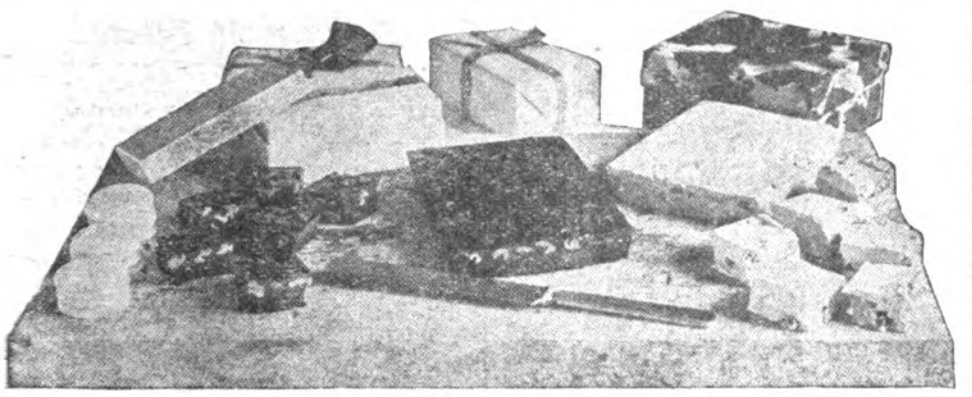
"Thank me when you have returned—not now. Now go to your room and rest. There will be guests for you to entertain tonight."

"You will take me tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow or the day following. It will be soon enough."

His mood was terrible to her, and she left him, satisfied with the promise. The door had scarcely closed upon her when he turned the key hurriedly in the lock.

"Gad!" he exclaimed, with a note of relief, half-falling into a chair. "I would not go through with that fright again for—— Curse it all! I should have had the nerve to put an end to it all years ago; but I was too great a coward—too great a coward! I could not do it, and I can't do it now. I am chained to that fate as the criminal is to the ball and chain that proclaim him convict. Perhaps that is my punishment, for it is hell! I thought I had got rid of that memory for a time; but it comes upon me at every turn, like a specter that will not be laid. But I will get the best of them all yet. There is a way out of this difficulty, and an easy way. I must see Ezra Morris, and at once!"



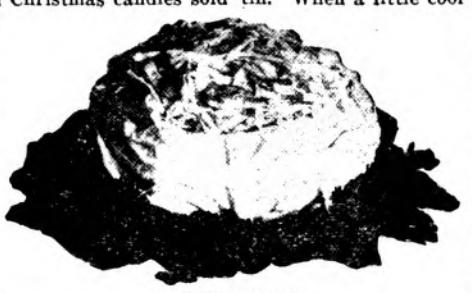
CHAPTER XV.

A STRANGE REQUEST.

Paul Reade did not wait to complete the letter that he had been writing, but taking his hat he hurried to one of the most notorious pool-rooms that the city contains.

More than one of his old friends put out a hand to welcome him, but he passed them by as quickly as possible, and knocked for admission on a private door. A husky voice bid him enter, and he let himself into a room where a man was seated near a window reading a paper. He smiled as he recognized Reade, and laid aside the paper as he pointed to a chair.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)



HOW TO MAKE YOUR CHRISTMAS CANDIES

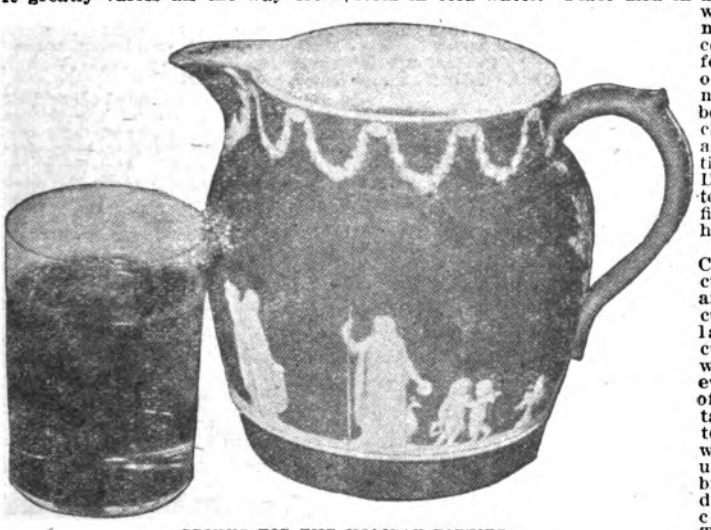
By Violet Marsh

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

THAT there will be candy for the holidays, and for Christmas especially, is an assured thing in most homes, yet many mothers have reason to dread this joyous indulgence because of the various phases of indigestion which follow in its wake. Sugar in itself is an important food element, and is classified as energy food, but it must not be taken in quantities in excessive proportion to other foods. Candy, even if it is of a rich variety, may safely be taken in place of a sweet dessert, or, if the meal is without meat or eggs, a somewhat larger amount of good candy is not unwholesome.

Now comes the question, what is good candy? One would hardly class as high-grade goods the highly-colored, sugar-lacking varieties so extensively sold over the counters to children. Nor are we satisfied with the hard Christmas candies sold in bulk at a comparatively low price, unless it is a case of can't afford any better.

CABBAGE SALAD.

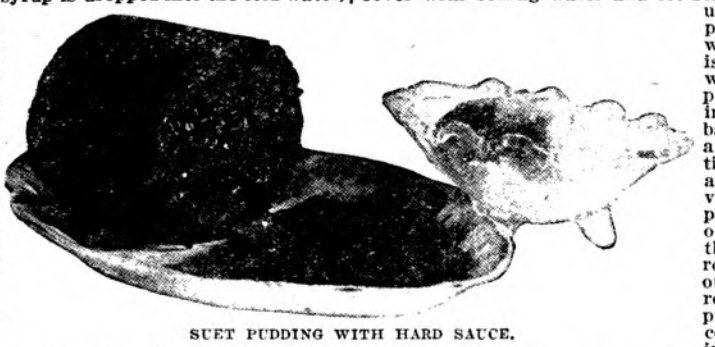


The really fine, high-grade candies are too high-priced for the ordinary purse, but fortunately delicious, wholesome candies can be made at home and with very little expense; so the most satisfactory course is to make our own candies, in our own kitchens. When once the knack of making a few simple candies is acquired, and it is not at all difficult, it will be discovered how inferior is most store candy.

Young people enjoy candy making and should be assisted to an opportunity for learning and practicing this useful branch of culinary art. When the boys and girls can make an assortment of tempting sweets, they have in a large measure solved the problem of friendship presents, for a box of home-made candy is a very acceptable gift, and particularly so at Christmas time.

In packing candy into a box, place it evenly and closely in layers, with paraffin paper between cut to exactly fit the box. If there are several kinds, have some of each in each layer, covering the top with the fitted paper. Wrap the boxes, tie with ribbon, or band with narrow strips of colored paper with ends pasted together and concealed beneath paper bows or rosettes.

Making Candy Smooth and Creamy



Taking fudge as an example, you have no doubt observed that it greatly varies all the way from being "sandy" to creamy in texture. In cooking cane-sugar, it changes into another sugar of much smaller crystals, a process called "inversion" by professional candymakers. However, all the cane-sugar does not change by cooking, so that, in order to make sure that the mixture contains enough inverted sugar to produce a smooth candy, pure glucose is added, or else honey or corn-syrup, both of which are largely glucose. Invert sugar is composed of glucose and fructose. Still another process by which cane-sugar is sufficiently inverted to insure smoothness, is by the addition of vinegar, lemon juice or cream of tartar. This explains why a pinch of cream of tartar is always added to the syrup of boiled frosting.

DRINKS FOR THE HOLIDAY PARTIES.

The use of corn-syrup in candies is very satisfactory. Only a small amount is necessary to produce a fine-grained candy, while a larger proportion gives a caramel consistency. The same results are obtained through the use of acids.

Another key to success in candy making lies in understanding the right length of time for cooking. Often recipes give a period of so many degrees F. for time of cooking, but unless one owns a candy thermometer, these directions cannot be exactly applied. However, we will proceed without the thermometer and use in its place an ounce of judgment and a glass of cold water. When a little of the boiling syrup is dropped into the cold water, and can quickly be shaped into a soft ball, a temperature of 240 degrees is reached; the hard-ball stage is 260 degrees, and when cooked too brittle it is 300. With a little experience, the home candy maker will find this cold water test satisfactory.

SUET PUDDING WITH HARD SAUCE.

In cooling candies to be pulled, pour into oiled tins or plates, and keep working the hardened edges into the center until cool enough to handle. Molasses contains a large amount of glucose, and when pure and free from chemicals makes a wholesome candy that children may freely eat.

Use candied fruits, nuts, dates, prunes, figs and peanut butter in making your candy, and serve it as a part or the whole of a dessert. Chocolate is a nutritious and useful material for giving flavor and richness to a great variety of candies.

Never Failing Candy Recipes

VANILLA CARAMELS.—Mix together two scant tablespoons each of sifted flour and corn-starch and work into it two slightly rounded tablespoons of butter very lightly salted, until the mixture is even and creamy. Set to one side until needed. Put one cup of light cream into a sauce-pan with one cup of granulated sugar, stir and slowly heat until the sugar is dissolved, then slowly add one-third cup of dark corn syrup, bring to a boil and cook without stirring until a little in cold water forms a soft ball. Now gradually add the butter mixture and cook again until you again have a firm soft ball in cold water. Add one teaspoon of vanilla and pour into an oiled tin. When a little cool lightly mark into squares, and cut as soon as the candy is firm. Two tablespoons of peanut butter beaten in after the caramel is removed from fire makes a pleasant variety.

DIVINITY FUDGE.—Two cups of granulated sugar, one-half cup of corn-syrup, and one-half cup of boiling water slowly heated and stirred until the sugar dissolves. Boil without stirring until a little tried in cold water becomes brittle. Add one teaspoon vanilla. Have ready the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff, and pour into them in a fine stream the boiling hot syrup, beating continuously. Add one-half cup of clean seedless raisins and beat the whole until it has considerably cooled and the raisins do not settle. Pour into oiled tin and cut into squares when cool.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE.—Two cups of granulated sugar, one cup of rich milk, one-third cup of butter, and either one-third cup of glucose, or corn syrup slowly heated until the sugar dissolves, then boil until a little tested in cold water forms into a very soft ball. Stir continuously while the candy is boiling. Add one teaspoon of vanilla and beat about three minutes, then add two squares of grated unsweetened chocolate and continue beating until creamy. Be sure not to beat it so long that it will not quickly spread in the tin. Cut into squares when nearly cold.

CREAM PEPPERMINTS.—Two cups of sugar, one-fourth cup of glucose, and one-half cup of hot water. Stir until the sugar is dissolved and then cook without stirring until a very soft ball will form in cold water. Place dish in a pan of cold water but do not stir. When cold add a few drops of oil of peppermint, checkerberry, orange, clove or lemon and beat until creamy. Drop on buttered or paraffin paper to harden.

MOLASSES CHIPS.—Two cups of sugar, one-half cup of molasses, one cup of hot water, one even teaspoon of cream of tartar, and butter size of a walnut. Boil until slightly brittle when dropped in cold water. Turn into a buttered tin to cool, working the edges into the center until you can work it with the hands. As the candy is worked, keep pouring on a few drops of vanilla until one teaspoon is used. When worked sufficiently the candy will be smooth and lighter in color. Pull into a broad thin belt, and cut into chips.

RAISIN SQUARES.—Two cups of brown sugar, one-half cup of rich milk, one-fourth cup of butter and four tablespoons of molasses cooked together until a little cooked in cold water makes a soft ball, which will require about fifteen minutes after the mixture begins to boil. Stir continually. Now add two squares of bitter chocolate and when thoroughly beaten in, add one cup of seedless raisins and beat until creamy. Care must be taken not to beat too long, as the mixture must be soft enough to pour smoothly into tins. When firm and nearly cool, cut into squares.

STUFFED PRUNES.—Wash prunes in cold water. Cover with boiling water and let stand ten minutes, then pour off the water until it is about half way over the prunes. Put into a deep baking dish and cover tightly. Bake all day at a very low temperature, without sugar. If the oven is required for other cooking, remove the prunes and continue cooking them at another time when the heat is low. The prunes will take up all the water. Stone the prunes and fill them with chopped sour pickle and chopped nuts mixed with a little mayonnaise, or with chopped citron, nuts and raisins.

When raw cold winds blow

DRINK

Baker's Cocoa

It imparts a cheering warmth, valuable nutrition and has a most delicious flavor. The very odor of a steaming cup is appetizing and attractive. It is absolutely pure and of high grade.

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

MADE ONLY BY

WALTER BAKER & CO., LTD.

Established 1780

DORCHESTER, MASSACHUSETTS

Booklet of Choice Recipes sent free

Drinks for the Holiday Parties

Jellies may be melted and made into delicious drinks. Raspberry or loganberry jelly is combined with lemon juice, and sugar to taste. Pour boiling water over the jelly and slowly melt without cooking. When cold, dilute to taste.

A can of strawberries is strained and added to pineapple juice. Cut the pineapple into shreds, add water and simmer, then strain. Dilute and sweeten to taste. A small amount of lemon juice will bring out the flavor.

Bottled lime and grape juice make a delicious combination. Dilute and sweeten.

Sweet cider is the national Christmas dinner drink.

Dishes for Christmas Week

CHICKEN PIE.—Disjoint and cut into small serving pieces a fowl weighing about four and a half pounds. Clean the liver, gizzard and heart, and put all together in a kettle that closely covers and pour over one quart of boiling water. Add one slice of onion, one heaping teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of pepper and a small pinch or leaf of sage. When the meat commences to boil, skim carefully and thicken the water with two tablespoons of butter mixed with three tablespoons of dry flour. Cover the stew-pan and set where the contents will just bubble for two hours. Cook longer if the meat is not then tender. Invert a cup in the center of a deep baking dish that will hold about two quarts, surround with the chicken and gravy and let stand until cold. Cover with a crust made as follows: One and one-half cup of sifted flour, one-fourth teaspoon of baking powder, and one-third cup of butter and lard mixed. Work the shortening into the flour, and use just enough cold water to hold the flour together. Turn it onto a floured board, slightly shape with the hands and roll to fit the baking dish. Cover the meat with the crust, cut three small places over the cup to let the steam escape and bake one hour in a moderately hot oven. If the gravy is not thick enough when the meat is nearly done, add a little more flour before it is put into the baking dish.

ROAST DUCK WITH APPLES.—Singe, draw and wipe inside and out. Lay in a granite baking pan and surround with whole cored apples. Put into a hot oven and quickly brown, then reduce the heat and cook until done. Baste frequently. If a stuffing is desired, make as follows: Mix two cups of mashed potato with one-half cup of rich milk, add a little scraped onion, two tablespoons of butter, salt and pepper, one-fourth teaspoon of poultry dressing and the beaten yolks of two eggs.

JUGGED RABBIT.—Skin two rabbits, draw and wash carefully, cut into serving pieces and roll in flour. Put half a cup of butter into a frying pan, carefully brown the meat on both sides, and remove it to a deep stew-pan. Into the frying pan put three cups of boiling water, and unless enough butter and flour remained from frying the meat to slightly thicken the water, stir in one rounding tablespoon of flour wet with cold water and cook ten minutes. Pour the thickened water over the meat in the stew-pan, add one whole onion, one bay leaf, three whole cloves, five whole allspice, one scant tablespoon of salt, and fourth of a teaspoon of pepper. Cover closely and simmer an hour and a half. Add one tablespoon of lemon juice before serving.

CABBAGE SALAD.—Select a head of cabbage that is hard and rather flat. Trim off the outside leaves until the perfect ones are reached. Cut away the bottom of the cabbage until it will set evenly on a plate. Scoop out the inside, leaving just enough to form a wall. You now have a shell from which the salad is served. Shred the cabbage, and let it stand in cold water one hour. Drain in a colander 15 minutes, tossing frequently. Mix with the following dressing, fill the shell and serve on a bed of carrot tops or parsley: Boil one-half cup of vinegar, two teaspoons of sugar, one-half teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of mustard, and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Rub one-fourth cup of butter to a cream with one teaspoon of flour, pour the seasoning on it, cook five minutes and pour over one well-beaten egg. Use cold.

SUET PUDDING.—One cup of molasses, one cup of sweet milk, one cup of chopped suet, one cup of raisins, one scant teaspoon of cloves, one teaspoon of cinnamon, one teaspoon of soda, one-half teaspoon of salt and two and three-fourths cups of sifted flour. Sift flour, spices, soda and salt together twice. Thoroughly beat the suet into the molasses, then the milk and flour alternately, and lastly the raisins. Steam two and one-half hours in two closely-covered pound coffee cans.

HARD SAUCE.—Thoroughly cream one-half cup of butter, then gradually cream in one and one-half cup of powdered sugar. When light and fluffy, add a little over one-fourth of a cup of orange juice, the juice of half a lemon and two-thirds teaspoon of nutmeg. Beat hard until very light.

PLAIN PLUM PUDDING.—One-half cup of molasses, one-fourth cup of sugar, one tablespoon of melted butter, one teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon of cinnamon and one-half teaspoon of salt, all beaten together. Add alternately one cup of milk with two and one-fourth cups of flour, and lastly two-thirds cup of raisins. Steam four hours. Serve with lemon sauce.

LEMON SAUCE.—Mix one and one-half cup of sugar with two tablespoons of flour, and cream it with three-fourths cup of butter. Gradually pour over it two cups of boiling water, and when stirred smoothly cook ten minutes. Add one lemon cut in very thin slices, cover and let stand ten minutes before serving.

BRAMBLES.—One cup of sugar, one beaten egg, the grated rind and pulp of one lemon, one cup of seeded raisins and a teaspoon of butter. Stir and cook in double boiler until thick. Make a rich pastry roll and cut into small rounds, cover one-half with the above mixture, wet the edges and turn over the other half. Prick several times with a fork and bake in a hot oven until the pastry is thoroughly cooked.

MOCK CHERRY PIE.—Line a medium deep plate with pastry and sprinkle it well with flour. Make a filling as follows: One heaping coffee cup of cranberries cut in halves, one-third cup of chopped raisins, one cup of water, one teaspoon of vanilla, and bits of butter. Mix thoroughly together three-fourths of a cup of sugar and one rounding tablespoon of flour and spread it over the top. One-fourth teaspoon of almond will add to the cherry flavor. Cover with pastry, and bake in a hot oven one-half hour, or longer if the crust is not done.

CARROT MARMALADE.—Fifteen small table carrots grated. Mix with an equal measure of sugar, and let stand over night. Add the juice of three lemons and the rind of one, and the juice of one orange. Slowly cook until it thickens and the carrot is tender.

MOLASSES COOKIES.—Heat one cup of molasses to the boiling point and pour into mixing bowl. Add one-half cup of chicken fat if you have it (or bacon fat and good lard combined makes an excellent molasses cookie shortening), one level teaspoon of salt, two level teaspoons of ginger, one-third teaspoon of cinnamon, and two slightly rounded teaspoons of soda stirred up with two tablespoons of water. Mix well together and beat in one and three-fourths cup of flour. Set away, chill before baking. Handle only a little of the dough at a time. Roll thin and bake in a hot oven. Keep in a tightly covered pail.

SOUR-MILK BISCUITS.—Two and one-half cups of sifted flour, sifted again with one scant teaspoon of salt, one even half teaspoon of soda, and one slightly rounding teaspoon of baking powder. Work in two tablespoons of shortening. Wet with about three-fourths cup of thick sour milk or buttermilk. Make into a ball without kneading, roll half an inch thick and cut into rounds. Bake until well done which will take about twelve minutes. The oven should be hot. If a drop biscuit is desired, use nearly a cup of milk and a pinch more of soda.

CHOCOLATE CAKE.—One cup of sugar, one cup of buttermilk, one-half cup of cocoa, four tablespoons melted butter, one teaspoon of soda, pinch of salt and one and one-half cups of flour. Mix well together and bake in small loaf pan.

APPLE TAPIOCA PUDDING.—One large cup of tapioca, three pints water, one cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon essence of lemon, three pints of pared and quartered apples. Wash the tapioca and soak over night in the water. Put the tapioca in double boiler and cook until it looks clear, it will take from twenty to thirty minutes. Put the apples, sugar, salt and lemon in a buttered dish and turn the tapioca over them and bake an hour and a quarter. Serve cold with sugar and cream or whipped cream.

BATTER PUDDING.—Four large tablespoons of flour, wet with a little of the milk till smooth, one pint of milk, two eggs beaten with the flour, salt. Stir in the milk, and bake immediately, serve warm.

SAUCE.—Piece of butter size of an egg, one tablespoon flour, cream butter and flour together, add one cup of best brown sugar and boiling water enough to make it thin, cook a few minutes, flavor with vanilla, serve hot.

COTTAGE PUDDING.—One cup sugar, one egg, one cup milk, one teaspoon soda, one-half cup butter, two teaspoons cream tartar, two cups flour. Bake and eat with sauce.

Cubby Bear as Santa Claus

By Lena B. Ellingwood

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

CUBBY Bear and Squilly Porcupine were having a game of tag on a bright December morning. The air was crisp and cold, but Cubby wore his red mittens and ear-muffs, and his fur coat kept him warm. Out of breath with running, they stopped to rest a few moments, leaning against a tree.

"Hark!" said Squilly. "I hear voices—not the voices of animals, but of children, I think."

"Yes," said Cubby, "I hear them. They are coming this way; we must hide."

They pushed their way in among some bushes, and peered out.

Three children, two little girls and a boy, well wrapped up, were coming through the forest, looking this way and that, as though in search of something.

"Oh, here is the very one we want!" cried the boy, running to a little spruce tree and laying his hand on one of its branches. "It's a beauty, just right for our Christmas tree. We'll bring papa to cut it down!"

"But we must mark it some way, so we can find it again," said the girl. "I know—I'll tie my scarf on it." So saying, she took off the scarf, a pretty blue one, and fastened it on a branch of the spruce.

Then they went away, never dreaming that Cubby Bear and Squilly Porcupine had been so near them.

"Why do you suppose they left that pretty scarf here?" asked Cubby. "Was it for a present for us, do you think? You know Christmas is coming just the day after tomorrow."

"More likely they are going to cut down our little spruce tree for their Christmas tree," said Squilly, rather sulkily. "I don't see why they can't be satisfied to leave our forest to us! They have no right to come here. They wouldn't like it if we went and took their things!"

"Could you understand what they said?" asked Cubby.

"Why, n-no, not very much of it," said Squilly.

"If they want the tree for a Christmas tree, I am willing to give it to them," said Cubby, feeling very generous. "And oh, Squilly! what fun it would be to hang some presents on it for them. How surprised they would be!"

"Yes, yes!" cried a little voice from a tree near by. Cubby looked up, and there was little Chickadee Chirrupee.

"I will help," said Chickadee, "and so, I am sure, will Redtop Woodpecker and Billy Bluejay. It will be a nice way to thank the children for the birds' feeding-table they keep covered with crumbs and grain all winter!"

Chickadee flew here and there, calling the birds and animals together, and soon an eager group surrounded the spruce tree. They all examined the blue scarf with interest, and laughed at Racky Coon's antics when he tied the scarf over his head and capered around with it on.

"What can we give the children for their Christmas presents?" asked Little Chickadee.

"I have some red beads made of dried bittersweet berries," said Mollie Muskrat. "I will go home and get them."

"I have some pretty fir cones which I will hang on the tree," said Wise Owl.

Most of them had something to give, and Racky Coon and Cubby Bear made a pretty Christmas wreath of pine tassels.

"If I should sit on a branch and let them carry me home, they would think I was the prettiest present they had," said vain Billy Bluejay.

Cubby Bear ran home to see if Mamma Bruin would give something for the tree, and was hurrying back again, when he heard a sound which startled him. He did not know what it could be, and stopped to listen.

Then he met Redtop Woodpecker, who flew down on the snow in front of him.

"Oh, Cubby Bear!" cried Redtop. "Racky Coon and Squilly Porcupine and Chirpy Chipmunk and I were in the tree, hanging on the presents, when we heard a blow on the tree trunk, and the tree shook so Squilly nearly fell. Looking down through the branches, we saw that the children had come back, and a man with them. The man was cutting down the tree, and his axe is making the noise you hear! Chirpy Chipmunk gave a tremendous jump, and just managed to catch the branch of another tree. I flew, of course, but Racky and Squilly are in the tree, and the man will catch them!"

"Oh, what can we do to save them?" asked Cubby, all in a tremble at thought of his friends' danger.

"Nothing, nothing!" answered Redtop, in distress.

"I know," declared Cubby boldly.

"Oh, what?" asked Redtop.

"I will go and show myself to the man," said Cubby, "and if he chases me, then Racky and Squilly can come down from the tree, and run off where they will be safe."

"You would not dare," said Redtop. "The man would catch you!"

Cubby marched firmly along, determined to rescue his friends, though his heart beat fast with fright. Redtop flew along to see what happened.

SOON AN EAGER GROUP SURROUNDED THE SPRUCE TREE.

The little spruce tree was cut nearly half through when Cubby came within sight of it, and the sharp axe was swung high for another blow.

The children saw Cubby first, and, screaming, "Look, papa! a bear, a bear!" started to run away from Cubby.

The man turned, and flourishing the axe, came running toward him.

Cubby Bear ran, going deeper into the forest, taking care not to lead the man near the homes of any of his friends.

As he had expected, the man followed. The children, too, with their father between them and the bear, ran after.

Poor Cubby Bear! Never in all his life had he been so frightened. Fear lent wings to his paws.

On, and on, and on he went, through the snow, sometimes slipping as he turned to avoid running into a tree, dashing through thickets of snow-covered bushes, never daring to stop, never looking behind.

On, and on, and on, strengthened for his mad flight by the thought that Racky and Squilly were safe. He stepped into a little hollow and fell, but scrambled to his feet and stumbled on.

He was tired with running, his breath came in gasps, tears of weariness rolled from his eyes and dropped unheeded to the ground.

"I cannot run any more," he moaned, and sank down in a tired little heap, hiding his face in his paws. What would happen to him now?

Gaining courage after a little to look up, he found there was nobody in sight. The man and children had been left far behind.

After resting a while, he got up, and looked about him. There was nothing to be seen but trees and snow, trees and snow, look where he would. No paths, no familiar landmarks. Snow was falling, for the weather had changed, and the bright morning had turned into a cloudy afternoon. Cubby brushed the light flakes from his coat.

"They will cover my tracks," he thought, "and I shall never find my way back."

Poor Cubby! It was likely to be a lonely Christmas.

As he sat there, a forlorn little wanderer, he heard soft animal voices, and looked up, feeling more hopeful.

A beautiful head, with stately horns and soft brown eyes, came in sight.

"A deer!" thought Cubby. "Oh, will he be friendly?"

Another deer and another followed the first, and the last one bounded forward, saying:

"Why, this is Cubby Bear, the good little bear who crowned my little fawn Queen of the May last spring!"

Cubby was glad to see Mrs. Deer, and they all shook his paw in kindly fashion.

"How came you to be so far from home?" asked Mrs. Deer.

Cubby told his little story, all about the Christmas tree, and of how he had run until he could no longer stand up.

"And now I fear I am lost," he ended. "I hope you can tell me which way to go."

"It is too far to go back tonight," they told him. "Come home with us, and stay until tomorrow."

The deers' winter home was a clear space in the forest, where many hoofs had stamped the snow hard and smooth. In summer the members of the herd roamed at will, but in winter they stayed together.

Cubby was afraid at first, in such a crowd of large animals, with their horns and hoofs and long legs. He was amazed to see so many of them together. Some of them had large horns, but none of them as large as those of his friend Mr. Bighorn Moose. Mrs. Deer took Cubby to the little fawn who had worn the May Queen's crown, and then he suddenly felt less lonely.

In the morning he was given a bunch of little twigs for his breakfast. He was too polite to say so, but he did not like the deers' food, and ate little, though he was very hungry.

"Tomorrow is Christmas Day," a large deer told him, "and you have come just in time to help us play our Christmas games."

"Our cousins, the reindeer, work for Santa Claus," said Mrs. Deer, "and have taken him in his sleigh everywhere with Christmas gifts. One time when they were going through this forest, they gave us a bell from their harness. We have always treasured it carefully, and every Christmas eight of us are harnessed up together, and play that Santa Claus is driving us."

"Cubby Bear shall be Santa Claus and drive, this year," said the little fawn.

"Yes, yes! we will make a little sled for Cubby Bear to ride on, and we will carry him home!" cried several of the deer, who were listening.

They brought out a great pile of the feathery trailing evergreen, which they had gathered before snow fell. This they twisted and tied together, to make the harness, enough for eight deer.

It was a fine, bright, cold morning, and the deer yard was a lively scene. Many were busy with the harness, making a merry game of it, and others were capering and frolicking about.

When all was ready, Cubby took his place on the little sled, or drag, made by fastening little poles together, took the evergreen reins in his paws, and said good by.

"We are all going with you," they told him gaily.

Such a ride, such a ride! Cubby will never forget it, if he lives to be as old as Grandma Bear.

Away through the forest they dashed, on swift feet, making little of the distance which Cubby had so wearily traveled the day before. The snow sparkled like diamonds in the bright sunshine.

Reaching his own Pleasant Forest, Cubby's friends and playmates, drawn together by the unusual sound of the racing hoofs and the tinkling bell, stood in a wondering crowd while the gay cavalcade dashed along. Was it Santa Claus, coming with gifts?

Graceful deer bounded along, by twos and threes the advance guard of the procession, then the eight deer resplendent in their evergreen harness, proud of their tinkling bell, drawing the little sled; on the sled, Cubby Bear, balancing himself carefully, proudly holding the reins over his lively steeds, his eyes sparkling with joy; and behind the sled, a pressing crowd of deer, of all ages and sizes, swelling the number and adding life and movement to the grand cavalcade.

Up to Mamma Bruin's little house they swept, and stopped at her door.

How the little woods people cheered.

They gave three cheers for Christmas, three for the "reindeer" tea, three for the entire crowd of deer, three for the Santa Claus bell, and three times three for their hero friend, Cubby Bear, who, risking his life to save his friends, had left his home, running away in fear and trembling—brought back now in such triumphal splendor as the Pleasant Forest had never known before.

CONTENTS

	Page
Editorial	2
Stella Rosevelt (continued)	4
Christmas Toasts	4
Comfort Sisters' Corner and Recipes	5
Love Will Find the Way (continued)	6
How to Make Your Christmas Candles	7
Cubby Bear as Santa Claus	8
Crumbs of Comfort	8
Comfort's League of Cousins	9
The Lady of the Rainbow House	10
Brainograms	10
The Pretty Girls' Club	11
The Christmas Key	14
Practical and Attractive Gifts for Christmas Cheer	16
Mother and Baby	17
Wool Embroideries and Other Fancies	18
Five Christmas Gifts Your Friends Will Like	20
Our Neighbor's Boy	21
Dry Cleaning Danger	21
Talks with Girls	22
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps	23
Poultry Farming for Women	24
The Modern Farmer	25
Paper Chain for Christmas Tree	26
The Quest of Otter Pelts	27
Manners and Looks	28
Home Lawyer	28
Information Bureau	31
Veterinary Information	33
Holly and Mistletoe	33
Family Doctor	34
Poems Requested	34
The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities	35
Three Wheel Chairs in November	35

All Subscriptions Cut Off At Expiration

All subscriptions will be cut short off on date of expiration, unless the subscription is renewed and paid for. Not even one copy can be sent, after expiration, until the subscription is renewed. If the number over your name on the wrapper on this paper is 398, or any less number, it means that this is the last copy of COMFORT you will receive until you renew. Renew today.

JANUARY COMFORT

Our inspiring New Year Number will contain a lot of entertaining and instructive reading matter to make stormy days and winter evenings pass pleasantly and profitably. The following are some of the Special Features for January

"Her New Year Resolution" A wonderfully fine story of the inspirational kind and teaches a lesson that will help the reader to begin the new year right.

"Something New for the Church Fair" A new form of entertainment to draw a crowd and raise money at a fair for the church, the Grange or any other society.

"A New Year Eve Interlude" A real thriller that tells of a wild adventure that ran dangerously close to a moral tragedy.

"Making Good Health a Habit" Interesting and instructive account of how the girls are taught at the Health Centers to take care of their health.

"Winter Cooking" How to cook and serve in a variety of tasty styles the farm products stored for winter use.

"Cubby Bear's Birthday" Cubby Bear has a birthday party but bad Foxy Reynard nearly spoils Cubby's enjoyment of it.

If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 398 it means that your subscription expires with this present issue and that you will not receive January COMFORT unless you renew your subscription at once—we can not send you a single copy, after expiration, until you have renewed. Don't miss January COMFORT.

Save money by renewing and extending your subscription two or three years. Use coupon below and do it today.

Please send bills or silver carefully wrapped in paper and securely sealed, or post-office money order. If obliged to send postage-stamps, send two-cent stamps.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: 50 cents a year, $1.00 for three years, 75 cents for a TWO-YEAR renewal, in U. S. and Cuba. (In Canada 65 cents a year.)

SUBSCRIPTION COUPON FOR RENEWAL OR EXTENSION

Publisher of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

I enclose ..... cents for renewal and extension of my subscription _____ full years from date of expiration.

*Date*_____ *Name*_____

*Post Office*_____ *Street and No.*_____

*R. F. D. No.*_____ *Box No.*_____ *State*_____

December, 1921.

Crumbs of Comfort

Truth can stand alone.

The years are preachers.

Himself a man cannot escape.

Sincerity is the child of courage.

The world is made new every morning.

Let yesterday cover yesterday's errors.

Insincerity is always a sign of weakness.

God is your partner; make your plans large.

Nourish your mind with the richest thoughts.

There are more echoes than voices in literature.

All of a man's worth or poverty is within himself.

The world's teachers must first be God's learners.

Hope builds upon nothing but can tower to the skies.

Do not seek how to spend your time, but how to use it.

The contest is often worth more to us than the victory.

What you are in yourself is what no one can give or take away.

Home is civilization's greatest gifts and is worthy of all efforts.

Time is a stream in which there is no mooring for the ship of days.

Truth is the root and human sympathy is the flower of daily living.

To know what is right and fear to do it is the greatest cowardice of life.

The man who loves truth and obeys duty is the one who prevails and whose work endures.

In the study of books we learn how things ought to be; in the study of men we learn how things are.

We look too much to systems and forms, and too little to the men who must carry out all organization.

Books minister to our knowledge, to our guidance and to our delight, according to their truth, their uprightness and their art.

A large variety of performance with the hand, a large variety of performance with the tongue—these create brains and give their possessor a mastery of the world we live in.

There are in the world three kinds of things: those worth having, those not worth having, and those most worth having. We should stop and think which of the three we are striving to attain.

LEAGUE RULES: To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged. To be kind to dumb animals. To love our country and protect its flag.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE LISHA

COMFORT for one year and admittance to the League of Cousins for only 55 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome.
ADDRESS all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. See Instructions at the close of this Department.

AS you sit up here on my lap to listen a while, the year is drawing to a close—the first happy year of my new Uncleship, during which I have had a chance to learn to know so many of the biggest and happiest Family, and gain the fine acquaintanceship with heads and hearts which your letters have brought to me. Much as I used to see and hear of Uncle Charlie's work during my visits to his household, the true vastness of his accomplishment I could never have realized until it came as a trust to me from his folded hands. As I sit here for hours at a time, reading your letters—merry ones, sad ones, letters of news, letters of questions—I grow to feel myself a center of just such a great circle of cousins and comrades as many of you like to imagine you enter each time that you write. And what a circle it is: I marvel as I think of it stretching thousands of miles, north and south, east and west, actually crossing seas and spanning continents. I read the letters feeling I am in touch with just so many loving hands held out from all directions. How many letters there are that I wish I might print which must, in the end, fail to find place in our League's space in COMFORT each month! There are so many I always want to share with you and not keep just for myself. Even Billy grunts many a grudging word of praise and a choking, whisker-hidden chuckle as he scans the letters with a tentative sniff and a nibble here and there.

"Gosh, Uncle Lisha," he said to me yesterday afternoon. "These kids do write great letters, some of 'em! And they're such newsy ones, too. I begin to feel as if I were a sort of walking atlas of every state in the Union. There is certainly a lot of facts to digest in these letters, Uncle."

"Don't worry, Bill," I replied. "You never seem to have much difficulty in matters of digestion. Facts and tacks are about the same thing to your able stomach. But you're right, Billy, old boy, about the information and inspiration to be gained from these letters we receive each month. They reflect the spirit of youth throughout our country as nothing else can. It's a privilege, Bill, to be able to listen to these voices and to make our words heard in reply to some of the best of the grave and gay messages we have sent us. Of course, many of the cousins don't really love you as much as they might, Billy; and so it's all the nicer of you to praise them. Some of the Family, I fear, do not appreciate your ability as an intelligent—and tasteful—critic."

"Uncle Lisha," said Billy, with one of his widest grins—which remind me often of the famous smile of the Cheshire Cat in Alice in Wonderland—"you and all the cousins will have to admit that whatever my faults as a critic, no one could have a more consuming interest in the League than myself."

"Well, no one is going to doubt your ability as a consumer, Bill," I said. "That's one thing sure; although I believe most of the cousins would be just as well pleased if the affection you talk about was not quite so devouring. But to speak seriously, Billy; I have been thinking today of how much happier the coming Christmas is going to be to you and me than the one we celebrated so quietly a year ago. Then we were saddened by having parted with Uncle Charlie for the last time. Then I felt a little frightened and burdened by the responsibility he gave to me of carrying on his work. But now, during the past twelve months, the League has been the best answer to our sorrow and doubt. For I have found out, Billy, that when my friend passed on to me the trust that I received so doubtingly, he was in reality giving me what was the greatest Christmas gift in the world. And so, at the end of a year, in seeing the work go on and the big Family held tightly together and growing, I know that my sadness of last season at Uncle Charlie's passing will be swallowed up this Christmas in the joy of a truer appreciation of what Uncle Charlie really gave me when he pressed upon me this heritage of love. I have the joy, also of feeling what his happiness must be in seeing, as he hoped, his cherished League still welded together strong and true in a spirit that speaks to me every month in all the letters I read.

"Billy, no one could fail to be proud, and at the same time humble, in reading the letters of love and support that have come to me as Uncle Charlie's successor. They are all a part of the gift he gave us last year, Bill, and it's all going to make this Christmas a happy one for us—happy to know that we have in our hands such a gift of love and loyalty which we must work hard to return as best we may."

"Uncle Lisha," said Billy soberly and a little pompously, raising one foreleg in an earnest gesture, "you can count upon me to stand by you in the future just as I have since last December. Uncle Charlie did give us a big and happy task, but I do not think—speaking for myself, at least—that I have bitten off more than I can chew, particularly now when my new pivot teeth are working so nicely. As to what you say about the cousins not liking me, Uncle; I believe the fairest-minded of 'em realize the necessary part I play in helping you with what I might call my good taste. However, Uncle, I do not complain; I am used to being misunderstood,"—here Bill drooped his left ear mournfully—"but I hope that I may not go down in history as a Goat entirely different in heart and character from what you and my best friends know me to be—for your remarks often strangely interpret me to the cousins. I wish you would strive to be more serious, Uncle Lisha. You should read that great man, Macaulay, and model yourself, as I have done, upon his strong and mannered style. I am never flippant, Uncle Lisha, and for that reason you and the cousins can all the more depend upon and enjoy everything I say and write." After which rather astoundingly self-satisfied speech, Billy trotted off downtown to buy a present he has been planning to drop in the stocking of Mrs. Webster's sick youngster on Christmas Eve. He is a good-hearted Bill, but does insist upon taking himself seriously when he is the least encouraged.

And so I shall be happy indeed this holiday season. I send every wish of love and joy to every one of you—in all of which I know Billy joins me. Be happy on the 25th of December and make others so in all ways you may. It is fit that Christmas should mean much to our League—we who are a society of young people, for the day celebrates the birth of a Child; we whose League's spirit of joy and love is but the same that came to earth when unto it a Son was born whose love conquered all barriers and burst all tombs. To our own unrestful country, and in bickering and suffering Europe, any message of "peace on earth, good will to men" comes but faintly and brokenly today, perhaps. Yet the much-needed words are both message and miracle. They are release and remedy. They are more fundamental than any political policy; greater than any greed of government; surer than any conference toward disarmament. Christ who was born in Bethlehem said: "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another." Let us, whose League is the embodiment of this command, pray on Christmas Day that the whole earth may yet become obedient followers of a Child; that this divine law may be fulfilled, and that at some not far-off season the Kingdom of Heaven may come to reign in peace and goodwill above all schemes of men and kingdoms of our war-wasted, stumbling world.

May God love and bless and keep you all at this Christmas season.

And now for the letters:

CAROLSIDE, ALTA, CANADA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

I never had the slightest idea of writing to you until tonight, but I feel sure that you don't mind hearing from an Old Scissorbill from the North Pole. You will be surprised when you hear the balling out you are going to get. I have been after my wife to ball you out, but you see she hasn't any education. However, she's been taking the COMFORT for many years. Well, it is up to me to do the balling out as I got my education in Minnesota before there were any schools there; before teachers were ever heard of; before Mrs. Bolton, the lady that told of her northland home and the Lake of the Woods, ever came to Roosevelt, Minnesota. Oh, yes, I forgot myself, about balling you out: Well, after living ten years out here in the high winds on the ridge where the buffalo hair blows in your eyes and you never see a cubby bear, you'd forget you were living. But, anyway, say, Uncle Lisha, if you're the man that works at the pump handle, if you will look up the list of names of your subscribers, you will find where you are sending two COMFORTS to my loving wife; one comes to McNally, Alta, Canada, and the other to Carolside, Alta. Now McNally post office is no more on the map, so please don't send the COMFORT to my wife at McNally. Carolside will do. Now I will give you a description of myself, for of course all old Scissorbills are not like me. I am rather long, with a bulge in the middle like a lamp globe. My neck is long and crooked, with a swelling in the front that looks like a snake swallowing a frog. My head is turned sideways, like a hen trying to look in a jug. My legs are long, with knots on them like a scrub oak tree. The reason I am like this is because I have lived in Canada so long that the sun and hot winds have warped me a bit. If there is anything about this part of the world you or any of the cousins want to know, let me hear from you, for I can tell all there is. Well, dear Uncle Lisha, do excuse me, and don't send any more COMFORTS to McNally, Alta, Canada, as that office has dried up and blown away. Shall I come again? No.

God bless you all. I remain as ever,
Yours truly,
MRS. A. R. WALKER'S HUSBAND,
THE OLD SCISSORBILL.

Just as soon as I got your letter and your balling out, Old Scissorbill, I sent Billy to the telegraph office hippety-hop, so that no more copies of COMFORT would be wasted on the desert air of poor dried-up McNally. Bill was glad to go, because he was much concerned by your letter and wanted me to tell him how many COMFORTS I thought might have piled up unused at McNally, being blown about the fence corners and the wide prairie. But I reassured Billy, and told him I felt sure you had gathered all the extra copies in and had them safely stacked on the shelf back of the kitchen stove. I told him I thought the reason you really wanted the extra copy stopped, was to have but one COMFORT in the house each month, so that you and Mrs. Walker could have a little excitement seeing who would read it first.

Well, Old Scissorbill, you seem to have made a good job of securing an education in the early days of Minnesota, even without any teachers or schools. You don't say how you did the trick, but I have a notion that life in those pioneer times was rather a hard school in itself and gave a pretty good sort of education to any man able to stand the lessons of hard knocks. It's because of the oldtimers in Minnesota that there are schools and teachers there today, and perhaps many a young cousin owes you a debt of gratitude unrealized by either of you.

After reading your description, Scissorbill, Sr., I tried to imagine what you really looked like, but I had to give up. I got stuck trying to figure out just how a hen holds her head when she looks in a jug, and thinking what she could see, anyhow, if she did look in. But I'm sure of one thing: No matter if the Canada winds have done their warpingest, they have failed to warp your sense of humor, nor has the hot sun succeeded in drying up your flow of fun. And that's description enough for the cousins and me. Alta is a big piece of Canada and there's lots we would all like to know about what is left that hasn't blown away—nor dried up. Now that you will have only one copy of COMFORT to read, you will have time to tell us about the joys of life at Carolside, or of school days in oldtime schoolless Minnesota. I'll do my best to see that Billy does not warp himself on your letter.

ETHER, NORTH CAROLINA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

Now please don't call Billy, because if you do, and he eats this letter, he will contract a serious case of "brain lesion" and COMFORT will miss a great "literary" contribution.

I am enclosing with this letter the yearly subscription price of COMFORT and the additional amount for admittance in the League of Cousins, and I want to tell you, Uncle Lisha, that I had a hard time raising that amount. I don't know how it is up there, but money has become so scarce down here in North Carolina that a man who can show a five-spot is looked upon as one of great wealth. North Carolina is famed for its moonshiners and just at present its whiskey is about the only thing there is any sale for; however, I always try to stay optimistic and not kick about hard times—so I will abruptly change the subject.

As great a literary genius as myself should be lazily basking in the sun of fame, along with Kipling, Harold Bell Wright and H. G. Wells, and I expect that after this letter is published I will receive offers of positions on the editorial staffs of several of the greatest magazines in America. Eh, Uncle Lisha? Before I proceed further I guess I had better enlighten you all as to who I am and what I look like. Well, I look like an ancient patriarch, but just the same I am far from being one. I have dark brown hair which hangs around my shoulders in lovely curls and makes a beautiful background for my extremely fair complexion. My eyes are dark blue and have wonderful penetrating powers. I am five feet, four inches tall, weigh 127 pounds, and my age is somewhere between twenty and thirty. I live in a cave on the side of a most beautiful mountain, and Nature and famous books are my only teachers. Now don't any of you city girls get the idea into your heads that I have hayseed in my hair, because I have existed in some of our country's greatest cities as well as in the backwoods of the great state of North Carolina. The wild animals of the woods are my friends, and every morning I feed the frisky squirrels, the sly fox, the raging wildcat and the frisky raccoon from my hand. My motto is: "Dum vivimus, vivamus," also, "Nemo me impune lacessit," and I am always the friend of the underdog and all those who have lost their grip on the things that make life worth living. I have never been able to find a girl who would consent to become the wife of a "cave man," so quite naturally I am a lonely bachelor, and any good cheer you girls can send me will be highly appreciated. No doubt this letter will sound like Sir Oracle to some, but I want you all to please understand that I am far from being an egotist. You know variety is the spice of life, and I always try to be original, sometimes even at the expense of modesty.

Now I suppose I have worried you all about long enough, so I will say "au revoir" for the present. If any of the girl cousins care to write, the missives will be welcomed by

Right sincerely yours,
CARL A. MANESS, Hermit of the Hills.

You and your typewriter, Carl, must find it rather damp living in a cave, but anyway you have no landlady but old Mother Nature, and the only bill she'll ever present will be one for rheumatism, perhaps. And as she's a good-natured soul, she may let you have this free. If living in a cave and letting your hair grow are what make a hermit, Carl, why there's a lot of amateur hermiting being done right here in Brooklyn. They call the caves "apartments," but most of 'em are as dark as your mountain den among the wildcats, and the rent is so high that the unfortunate caveholders have to cheat the barber the last of every week in order to save enough to pay the landlord on the first of the month.

I'm right sorry to hear that times are so hard in North Carolina, Carl, and the only marketable product is hard liquor. Up North we always think of "moonshining" as a profitable business, but if your commercial report is accurate, a man with a still might as well sell the whole whiskey works and get a job with the Internal Revenue department. I've always thought a reformed moonshiner would make the best sort of "revennoer," and I'm surprised Uncle Sam doesn't put some of these chaps on a "still hunt" for white liquor. But probably a moonshiner never reforms with his boots on.

Carl, authorities differ as to just how ready a girl is to fall for the sort of genus homo known as a "cave man." Perhaps you'll have a chance to find out by the number of letters you get and what these say. Most girls I know would insist that you get your hair cut at once, install a hot-air heater in the cave, and buy a few things like a kitchen cabinet, a vacuum cleaner and an electric washing machine. If you are not prepared to make these improvements to your mountain home and yourself, Carl, you had better not answer any letters or talk about being a "lonely bachelor."

Meat may be high in price, Carl, but it seems to me it would be cheaper and less painful to buy a few pounds of neck, shank and liver, rather than to keep on feeding all the playful animals you mention from your hand. Hands won't last forever, you know, and by and by you will only have a few fingers left. Unless you are very plump, I can't for the life of me see how you have enough meat on one of your fins to nourish those raging wildcats you have taken to board.

Carl, the next letter I get from you I expect to hear that you have been lured from your cave and found yourself a married man, with a close haircut, when you came out of the Ether. And I rather think you'd enjoy being a reformed hermit.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

Ask Us Now

This test will delight you

Again we offer, and urge you to accept, this new teeth-cleaning method.

Millions now employ it. Leading dentists, nearly all the world over, are urging its adoption. The results are visible in whiter teeth wherever you look today.

Bring them to your people.

The war on film

Dental science has declared a war on film. That is the cause of most tooth troubles. And brushing methods of the past did not effectively combat it.

Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Then night and day it may do serious damage.

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Very few people have escaped the troubles caused by film.

Two film combatants

Now two combatants have been found. Many careful tests have proved their efficiency.

A new-day tooth paste has been created, and these two film combatants are embodied in it. The paste is called Pepsodent.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

The scientific film combatant, which brings five desired effects. Approved by modern authorities and now advised by leading dentists everywhere. All druggists supply the large tubes.

Now every time you brush your teeth you can fight those film-coats in these effective ways.

Also starch and acids

Another tooth enemy is starch. It also clings to teeth, and in fermenting it forms acids.

To fight it Nature puts a starch digestant in saliva. She also puts alkalis there to neutralize the acids.

Pepsodent multiplies the salivary flow. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. It multiplies the alkalis. Thus these teeth protecting forces, twice a day, are much increased.

They must be done

These things must be done. Teeth with film or starch or acids are not white or clean or safe. You know yourself, no doubt, that old tooth-brushing methods are inadequate.

See what the new way does.

Make this pleasant ten-day test and watch your teeth improve.

A few days will tell

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Do this now. The effects will delight you and lead to constant delights. To all in your home they may bring new beauty, new protection for the teeth.

753

10-Day Tube Free

THE PEPSODENT COMPANY,
Dept. 371, 1104 S. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Mail 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

.....

.....

Only one tube to a family.

The Lady of the Rainbow House

By Augustin W. Breeden

See front cover illustration.

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"YES, Bobby, that is rainbow house yonder that I told you about. Isn't it pretty? Look at the flag on the little steeple at the corner. Sometimes that flag is fluttering there for two whole weeks, and then sometimes it is gone from there maybe two hours, maybe three days. I wonder why. Bobby, when there is a rainbow, that pretty house is nearly always right under the middle of it. Then one end of it is yonder in the laurels on the other side of Dead Man's Gulch, and the other end of it up in the cedars by Seven Falls. And Bobby, there is a pot of gold at each end of the rainbow, and the lady of Rainbow House goes out with a little basket and gathers up the gold just like Daddy goes around with his basket and gets the eggs of an evening." The speaker was a little cripple girl with eager blue eyes and hair like ashes of gold. Her right leg was drawn and twisted with bone tuberculosis, and her whole body was frail as a piece of rare china. She might be nine or ten, but she was not much taller than her seven-year-old brother Bobby, and didn't begin to weigh as much.

"Bobby," she continued, "that house yonder is half made of gold. Inside the picter frames are all made out of gold, and the curtains have got gold made into the cloth, and late in the afternoons sometimes the sinders shine like solid gold; and the lady has got gold and gold and gold. Daddy, show Bobby some of the gold pieces the lady gives you when you take her wild strawberries, her garden sass or honey from your bee-trees."

Rob Ray got slowly up from the splint-bottomed chair where he was seated shaving an axe handle into shape with a draw-knife, went into the little "one-pen" log hut, and came out a moment later with three shining gold pieces in his hand and dropped them one by one into Bobby's chubby palm.

The little cripple girl swung agilely around on her crutches and began to teach Bobby how to count the gold.

"Them's what she finds in the pots of gold at the ends of the rainbows, Bobby," she enthused. "Bobby, don't you wish you and I could maybe cross the old deep gulch the next time there is a rainbow and get a whole heap o' them?"

"You mustn't ever try it, Dorothy," said the father. "Dead Man's Gulch is deep and the sides are slippery. You mustn't ever go no furder than the spring. But ef Bobby is good like you've always been and won't go near the old bad gulch, some day I'll take 'im on my back like I tuck you and carry him to the purty house yonder, and he kin see the purty lady and all her dolls and things like you did."

"But, Daddy," said the sturdy youngster in a slow childish drawl, "why don't you go over across the gulch sometime and pick up a whole heap o' gold?"

"Because, Baby—because hit's on her land and not on ourn." Bob Ray laid down the axe handle he was working on and took up his basket and started down the steep mountainside toward his little garden patches, which with his chickens and his handle making were his sole sources of income since he had taken lung trouble and had to give up his work as carpenter down in the "low" country."

He had kept his little girl with him in the mountains for the past two years, because the doctor had said it would be good for her, and just the day before he and she had made a trip to the low country on a borrowed horse and brought up Bobby, who had till then been living with his aunty, the wife of the circuit rider.

"Bobby, you jest ought to see the inside of the Rainbow Lady's House," continued Dorothy. "Hit's full o' dolls, Bobby, jest chuck full o' dolls. She makes 'em—makes 'em out o' clay and then paints 'em and then bakes 'em in a oven so's they won't crumble; and she makes the purtiest picters you ever saw. Wait, Bobby, and I'll show you a doll she give me and a picter she made of me." Dorothy hobbled into the cabin and presently came forth with the drollest little boy doll one ever saw, a sort of Kewpie it was, but more comical than any Kewpie. He had on a striped bathing suit and was eying with a comical fright a red ladybug that was crawling upon his foot.

"He looks like you, Bobby," laughed the girl gleefully.

"No, he don't, Dodo," said the boy solemnly. "He looks like Fatty Armstrong down to Gentryville."

The girl unrolled the picture very tenderly. It was a beautiful likeness of her done in water-colors. There was her soft golden hair, her blue eyes full of childish wonder, her blue gingham slip-over, and her poor, twisted, useless foot. She was leaning forward on her crutches and looking eagerly at something very wonderful.

"Hit's jest like you," pronounced the boy solemnly.

"And in her house," continued the girl, "there is picters of jest ever'thing. One picter is as big as the side o' this cabin. Hit's a picter o' little girls my size and bigger dancin' round and round under the shade of some willer trees. Ef I could only dance like them little girls, Bobby, I'd dance and dance all the rest o' my life I'd be so happy."

"Is she a fairy lady?" asked Bobby in awe-struck tones. "Maybe ef she is, she kin make your laig well, Dodo. I wish she could."

"I wish she could, too," said Dorothy. She sat for a long moment looking longingly toward the charming grounds and the big rustic bungalow on the opposite mountainside.

That house of the "city woman" was the wonder of all the mountaineers thereabout. It stood on a little grassy plot of tableland, and below it there was a flashing waterfall, that looked to crippled Dorothy like molten gold in the evening sunset; and the grounds were a parkplace of cliffs and boulders and winding footpaths and charming grottoes and artificial lakes and arbors embowered in crimson ramblers and all the hundred and one wonders that wealth may evolve from a romantic natural spot when man sets his hands to it. It was indeed a fairylike place, that mountain retreat of the artist and doll designer, Mary Macpherson; and it was a fact that every rainbow visible from the side of the mountain where the Ray cabin stood arched itself above that house. No wonder then that the two children imagined that the mistress of Rainbow House might be a fairy.

Meanwhile the Rainbow Lady was by no means as happy as her small admirers fancied. It had been her lot, some six years before, to have married and lived a year with a man whose every instinct was bad and who had made her ashamed of the human race. It was little to her that she had at length secured a divorce and the right to resume her maiden name. Since that event she had lived here in her mountain retreat with her father in the house for protection. The experience had not left her the enthusiastic and carefree girl that she had always been before her marriage. She had longed for a happy home with a loving husband and with children of her own; and now all the babies she possessed were the ones her clever hands designed.

Then after three years of this sort of life, varied only with flying business trips to New York and one winter sojourn in Paris with her father, Dr. George Lingard had come into her life. There was something about Dr. Lingard that at once repelled and attracted her. He always spoke of himself as if he were the worst of men. He never by any chance admitted that he possessed a single good quality nor permitted her to meet any friend of his who would volunteer to speak well of him. He represented to her that he was a cold-blooded surgeon who had no interest in any member of the human race unless he could cut on them or administer a curative to them. Furthermore, he was an ardent vivisectionist and had once been written up in the New York dailies as a man who delighted to cut live lap-dogs to pieces. No one who knew the facts came forward with the information that vivisection of animals is the only possible means of acquiring the scientific knowledge requisite for the successful treatment of certain dread diseases, injuries and malformations that afflict humanity, nor with the explanation that the doctor's experiments were conducted so humanely that they were practically devoid of suffering to his animal subjects.

Dr. Lingard maintained a sanitarium, for consumptives up in Lost Cove, and it was stated that there was not a patient up there, from the young millionaire who paid very exorbitantly for his treatment to the little dying stenographer who had become the doctor's amanuensis while he was working on a book he was getting out, but what was very interesting as a human specimen. There were painters, inventors and musicians in his colony, and one rather famous young poet. Dr. Lingard divided his time between this mountain resort and his clinical practice in the city, and it was claimed by his detractors that he was piling up tens of thousands of dollars from his practice, and that the Bohemian crowd of New York knew him for one of the "sportiest" of its members.

Dr. Lingard on his days off, when he did not say ugly things about himself or equally ugly things about society in general, seemed to Mary Macpherson like a big, overgrown, enthusiastic boy; and for that reason the doll designer welcomed him to her bungalow whenever she was not too busy making dolls or drawing humorous pictures for magazine covers. At such times she flew a flag from the cupola of her studio to let him know that she was busy and that he could not come; and you may guess, since Mary was prettier and more charming than the best picture she had ever drawn, that the doctor watched from the sanitarium in Lost Cove for the disappearance of that flag and made haste to Rainbow House whenever it was not flying. He usually brought the poet with him to talk to her father while he took her for long walks or longer horseback rides through the passes of the mountains.

This poet was a curious fellow, a study in human ingratitude. Dr. Lingard had pulled him out of a gutter in New York and made the reviewers see the beauty of his style, and then he had adopted him and installed him in his sanitarium and kept him alive; and for this reason, and because the poet in his way was wildly in love with Mary Macpherson, he never by any chance lost an opportunity to speak darkly of the doctor and hint that his life would not bear examination.

So Mary Macpherson, while drawn toward Dr. Lingard with all her nature, still refused repeatedly his offers of marriage, because "a burnt child dreads the fire" and because, as she told her father, he was hard, cold, cynical, and a vivisectionist. The father knew better, but he also knew that as time went by his daughter would learn better and be all the happier for her long wait; and so he refrained from arguing the point with her.

And time went by rapidly, as it will when people are busy. The glory of summer turned to the glory of autumn, and the Great Smokies lost their colorful mantle of foliage and took on their winter robes of ice and snow. Mary Macpherson did not leave her mountain retreat that winter because she was busy designing dolls for a big New Jersey firm, and giving all the royalties in dolls and doll layettes to all the "kiddies" in all the hospitals of two continents. An inspired doll designer makes half as much money as Charlie Chaplin makes, and Mary Macpherson was busy making happy the inmates of many a hospital.

But she knew that life up at the sanitarium in Lost Cove would be dull indeed for those imprisoned up there, and so she and the doctor planned a Christmas jollification for them. There was to be a grand masquerade ball for Christmas Eve and a big turkey dinner on Christmas.

The week before the ball Mary was a very busy woman indeed. She was furnishing the costumes for a number of the inmates of the sanitarium whose names had been furnished her by Dr. Lingard; and she sent down to Morristown for a corps of dressmakers to help her. At least half the costumes were supplied from her house.

Needless to say the masquerade was a grand success. The doctor's little amanuensis was tricked out as Queen Louise of France. The poet was Don Cæsar de Bazan. Dr. Lingard was made up with a great blond wig and beard as a Norse Viking, a part to which he was well suited by his superior height and weight and kingly bearing, and Mary had a remarkable get-up as Queen Isabella of Spain.

Mary turned down the young millionaire, who was made up as an Arab shiek with crescent-shaped sword and all, and gave the fourth dance to the Norse Viking; also she whispered to him that she wanted to sit it out.

"Mary," he pleaded as soon as they had found a spot where they would not be overheard, "you are too beautiful tonight for anything. For the sixteenth time, Mary, will you be my wife?"

"Be your wife for the sixteenth time?" she smiled beneath her domino. "Oh, Son of Thor, how can I be your wife for the sixteenth time when I have not yet consented to be so for the first time?"

"You know what I mean, Mary. With that darned poet making sonnets about you and that young millionaire losing his head over you, I am afraid."

"Can a Viking be afraid?"

"No, perhaps not," replied George Lingard with a laugh, "but a Viking the size I am can easily pick up a daughter of royalty the size of you and carry her off bodily to his castle keep, and that is just what I shall do one of these days if you do not consent to become my wife."

"I would scratch like a cat," said the girl, laughing.

"But seriously, Mary," insisted the doctor, "either consent to become my wife or tell me honestly why you will not do so. If it is anything wrong I have done I will right it; if I am not what I ought to be I will reform. Mary, I love you with all my heart. Tell me what I must do or be to deserve you and I will do it and be it."

"No," said the girl with a slow shake of her head, "that kind of goodness is not worth anything. The man I love must be good and big and generous of his own free will."

The girl had a sudden inspiration; she would test this man's impulses, his generosity. "Let's change the subject, Dr. Lingard," she said. "I want to tell you about my friend, Bob Ray, the axe-handle maker. Bob had to give up his trade as a carpenter and come and live here in the mountains on account of his health. He lives across the gulch from my house in that little log shanty. He has two children, a perfect little cherub of a boy and a girl of ten with eyes like bluets and hair the color of newly-hackled flax and, oh, such a perfect little angel face. And they are very poor. I doubt if Santa will come to visit them at all this Christmas. Now isn't that sad?"

"It certainly is," said the doctor. "But let's don't change the subject, Mary. Let's talk about us. Mary, I see in you the making of a truly great artist. I want to take you to Paris—to Florence and Venice. I want to see you paint the greatest picture of any living woman painter."

"And the man coughs terribly," continued the girl.

"I will go and see him tomorrow and give him medicine and advice," said the doctor absently. "Meanwhile can you not bring yourself to say the word that will make me the happiest man alive?"

"The test is ended," said the girl sadly. "I gave you your chance to show yourself a human being, and not a knife-wielding automatum. I gave you your chance to suggest that we go and carry those children some beautiful presents; but it never occurred to you to do so. I believe you are just what my sonnet writer says about you, cold, harsh, indifferent to all but the most acute human suffering. But you shall go with me, anyway. I have with me some presents and goodies for the children and a cap and a pair of warm mittens for Rob."

"By all means," said the doctor; "and here is a twenty. Stuff this into one of the mittens. My sleigh is waiting to take you down."

The girl took the money doubtfully, almost gingerly, as if she thought it tainted. But after refreshments had been served and when everyone was hilariously happy, the two slipped out and got into the doctor's sleigh and started down the difficult mountain road.

The snow was still falling heavily as they left Lost Cove, but it had ceased and the moon broke forth just as the two got out of the sleigh and stepped across the little dooryard to the steps of Bob Ray's little cabin. Dr. Lingard still had on his Viking hair and beard and a great bear-skin overcoat; and the girl still wore a tiara of brilliants and her glittering court dress shown in peeps from beneath her furs. As she approached the cabin in her dainty slippers and with her arms full of toys the furs slipped from her shoulders for a moment. Then the big doctor came up and wrapped her more securely, and they put the presents on the doorstep and got into the sleigh and hurried away.

Mary Macpherson slept late next morning and dreamed that George Lingard had sailed for Europe without her and left her on the pier in New York feeling very lonely and disconsolate. But in the afternoon the sun came out warm and bright and the bitter north wind left off blowing, and for an hour she walked with Dr. Lingard through the newly-fallen snow. And then in the road high up the gulch where the trail from Bob Ray's cabin crosses toward Rainbow House they met a curious little party, Bob Ray carrying his little crippled girl upon his back and the sturdy seven-year-old trudging at his side.

"Miss Macpherson," he began awkwardly, "I want to thank you for——" but at a quick warning look from the girl and a shake of her head he cut his speech short.

"What did old Santa Claus bring you, my little man?" asked Mary, looking fondly at Bobby and then taking him up in her arms.

"'E bwought lots and lots of purties," said the child. "'E bwought me a soldier doll and a rocky-horse and a story book and lots and lots of candy and nuts and apples, and——"

The big doctor was looking intently at the twisted foot of the thin little girl.

"And oh, Miss Macpherson," she broke in eagerly, "I seed Santa Claus and the Christmas fairy with my own eyes. They—they comed in a big sleigh and I seed her plain in the moonlight. She had a crown of diamants on 'er head, and had on the purtiest spangly dress I ever seed; and ef I could 'a' got outside and ast her I know she would 'a' cured my foot and made me strong and soople like Bobby here and like the little dancin' children in the big picter at your house. But when I felt for my crutches so's I could go outside and ast 'er I couldn't find 'em; and then in jest a minute they was back in the sleigh and gone. And so"—with a sigh—"I reckon I'll jest have to hobble around the rest o' my life." The child's eyes suddenly overflowed with tears.

The big doctor took the little girl in his arms as if she were a baby.

"Child," he asked in a husky voice, "do you want the Christmas Fairy to send you to a place where they can make you strong and well like your little brother?"

"Is they a place where they kin do that?"

"Yes," said the doctor, "I know where the place is, and I know the Christmas Fairy. She is the prettiest and the sweetest and the hard—— the soft-heartedest fairy in all the world. And if you and your papa say the word I will take you to her house and I will bring a man there who can make you as strong and happy as any child in all these mountains."

"Oh, George," cried Mary with a little catch in her voice, "can the thing really be done?"

"It has been done a score of times. My san is full to overflowing, but if you can give me the room for her and for a certain nurse I know——"

"By all means, Dr. Lingard," cried the girl. Then she blushed furiously and went on, floundering like a man in a deep snowdrift: "and—and—oh, George, I am ready now to answer your question of last night—if—if you will ask it over again."

And that is how the lady of the House of the Rainbow proved a good fairy to little crippled Dorothy Ray and at the same time proved the good fairy to be one big, soft-hearted doctor who had always refrained from saying good things about himself or even permitting them to be said.

Brainograms.

How Many Birds Do You Know?

1. The talkative bird.
2. The wise bird.
3. Which a Catholic dignitary?
4. A feline.
5. A regal fellow.
6. An imitator.
7. Which grabs insects out of the air?
8. To burn fitfully.
9. A ten-dollar gold piece.
10. An advocate of corporal punishment.
11. To lose heart, cower or shrink.
12. A frolic, or adventure.
13. To deceive, or cheat.
14. To slay, and a doe.
15. A kind of a clock.
16. The color of the sky.
17. A common milk-giving animal.
18. Which bird connotes purity?
19. Which reminds one of a stove?
20. The cry of the cock when day dawns.

ANSWERS.

1.	Chat.	11.	Quail.
2.	Owl.	12.	Lark.
3.	Cardinal.	13.	Gull.
4.	Catbird.	14.	Killdeer
5.	Kingbird.	15.	Cuckoo.
6.	Mockingbird.	16.	Bluebird.
7.	Flycatcher.	17.	Cowbird.
8.	Flicker.	18.	Dove.
9.	Eagle.	19.	Ovenbird.
10.	Whip-poor-will.	20.	Crow.

Dont Send 1 Penny

Manchurian FOX SCARF

Delivery FREE

$4.45

Silk Lined

Just send your name and address and I will send this fur scarf to you. You don't pay one penny until the fur is delivered at your door by the postman. This is a wonderful opportunity of getting a $9.00 scarf for $4.45. Our price is amazingly low. Compare it with others and see for yourself.

A Fashion Necessity

Every stylish woman is wearing a fur scarf with her coat, suit, dress or waist. It is appropriate for every occasion. This scarf is made of Manchurian fox, which has long, soft, silky hair. This is not the genuine American fox, but will wear much better than the genuine. Scarf is a large animal shape with head at one end and tail and paws at the other. Lined throughout with all-silk lining. Also has silk ruffle around neck. Very large and graceful. Colors: Black, Luellie brown or taupe gray.

SEND NOW just your name and address—no money. When the fur scarf arrives pay the postman $4.45 for it. We have paid the delivery charges. Wear the scarf. If you don't find it all you expected, return it and we will cheerfully refund your money at once. This is our risk—not yours. Be sure to give color. Order by No. 17.

Walter Field Co. Dept. B5077 Chicago

LADIES' SWEATER BARGAIN

With or Without Belt

$5.00 Value NOW $2.49

This extra fine quality heavy weight ladies' sweater is now offered at less than pre-war prices.

Send No Money

Send your name and address, giving size and color wanted. We will send you sweater by mail postage paid. On delivery pay mailman our low bargain price of $2.49. Your money back if not pleased. Sweater is made of high grade yarn, large shawl collar, two knitted-in-pockets. Colors—Gray or Blue. Sizes—32 to 46. Good for either men or women. Why pay more for a sweater when you can get this guaranteed bargain for only $2.49. STATE WHETHER YOU WANT MEN'S OR WOMEN'S SWEATER. Order by Number 128 C64

HOWARD LUX CO., DEPT. 128 CLEVELAND, O.

Send No Money

7 JEWEL WATCH $6.75 POSTPAID

Bracelet & Chatelaine Pin

Season's Most Startling Watch Offer.

This beautiful high grade ladies' small size, 10 year guaranteed, seven jewel watch and bracelet ($15 value) now only $6.75. Stem wind and set—beautiful case, attractive gold dial, splendid movement, accurate timekeeper. Sent in velvet and silk lined case. Excellent gift. Send no money—just send name and address. Pay postman on delivery $6.75—our low advertising price. Satisfaction guaranteed. Write today.

Standard Jewelry Co., 3842 Lake St., Dept 33, Chicago

NEW WAY TO GET A PIANO or PLAYER PIANO

4 Weeks FREE

Now you can have wonderful music in your home at amazingly small expense. Our plan enables you to test a Wing Piano or player right in your own home 4 weeks free. We pay all freight charges. 38 styles to select from, each superior in tone, workmanship, and finish to pianos costing 25 to 50 per cent more. SOLD ONLY DIRECT FROM FACTORY. 40 years guarantee, backed by a firm with a 53-year-old reputation for high quality and fair dealing.

The Book of Complete Information About Pianos—FREE

Write today for this Book and names of satisfied owners near you. The N. Y. World says "Everyone should have this Book." No one should buy a piano before reading it. Piano experts use it as an authority. Write NOW for this valuable BOOK and our free trial offer on pianos.

WING & SON (Est. 1868)

Dept. 312 9th Avenue & 13th Street New York

TELL TOMORROW'S Weather

White's Weather Prophet forecasts the weather 8 to 24 hours in advance. Not a toy but a scientifically constructed instrument working automatically. Handsome, reliable and everlasting.

An Ideal Present

Made doubly interesting by the little figures of Hansel and Gretel and the Witch, who come in and out to tell you what the weather will be. Size 6 ½x7 ½: fully guaranteed. Postpaid to any address in U. S. or Canada on receipt of $1.25

Agents Wanted

DAVID WHITE, Dept. 60, 419 E. Water St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The Pretty Girls' Club

Conducted by Katherine Booth

Mistletoe Mirrors

THE time of the holly and the mistletoe is upon us, and with that in mind, girls, suppose we begin to cultivate our mistletoe mirrors!

Don't know what they are? Why, the sort of a mirror which will tell us how we will look under the mistletoe. In other words, a perfectly truthful mirror!

Is yours that kind, or does it hang in a corner of the room where the light is not so very good and where your skin appears at its very best and no lines show in your forehead, and there isn't the least suspicion of a double chin? If you have this kind of a mirror, the kind that makes you feel perfectly comfortable over your toilet, move it right into the very brightest light you can find and see if you can still feel as comfortable. If you can, my blessing upon you, child, for it is rare indeed that we can find content when looking in our mirrors in a strong light. And if you can't, then heed some of my admonitions, and get ready for mistletoe time.

The first thing a bright light shows up is blackheads, and enlarged pores. Most of us treat our skins so cavalierly that imperfections of this kind are universal. Too much hot water and soap will both enlarge the pores and fill them. As I have told you many times, use your hot water only at night, shaking a little soap in the bowl but not rubbing it on the face. And in the daytime use tepid water, rinsing in cool, then cold. Heat expands—which means enlarges your pores; cold contracts—and that is what makes a firm, smooth skin.

However, assuming that you, like the rest of the world, have maltreated your delicate facial skin, let us see what we can do about it. First, of course, we must get rid of the blackheads, for certainly we can never hope to look beautiful under the mistletoe with our faces dotted with lump little black spots. It is necessary, first of all, to open up the pores so that we may remove their contents. Steaming is not a good habit for the skin, as a regular thing, as it removes the oil and dries it, but when it is essential to open the pores a good steaming is the method to take.

Pick out a nice easy chair, one which permits you to lean your head back, then on a table at your side place a pitcher of boiling water and a bowl. Have ready four small Turkish towels or four large Turkish wash-cloths. Wash the face in warm water with a little soap added. Rinse in clear water as hot as you can bear it, and do not add the cold rinse usually recommended.

Now soak two cloths in a bowl of the hot water, folding them bandage fashion; if they are wash-cloths, fold them twice, lengthwise; if towels, use your judgment, remembering that one cloth is used to cover the upper part of the face from the hair to the end of the nose, and that the other is used for the lower part of the face, from below the nose over the chin. Squeeze the moisture out of them, and place them gently on the face, letting them down slowly so that the steam will not burn, but applying them to the skin as hot as it will stand.

Place the other two cloths in the bowl, adding more hot water if necessary, and as soon as the cloths on the face cool, replace them with hot cloths. Keep this up for ten minutes, at the end of which time the pores will be expanded. Now with a soft towel wrapped around the finger of the right hand, and with the finger of the left hand holding the skin firm, attack a blackhead. Press with the toweled forefinger against the left forefinger, with the skin between until the blackhead loosens and comes away. When you are more dexterous, you will be able to place one end of the towel around the right forefinger and the other end around the left forefinger, so that both are protected from contact with the skin, but just at first you will probably find it easier to use the towel only around the right finger. Go over the nose, chin and cheeks in this way, paying special attention to the creases at the side of the nose, where blackheads love to congregate. You may not get them all out the first time, but keep this up, from day to day, until you do. Touch the emptied pore with peroxide of hydrogen or alcohol as a blackhead comes away, both to sterilize it and to aid in closing it. When you are through, use cool water to rinse your face, and finally cold. With this treatment you can face the mistletoe with immunity.

Answers to Questions

HAZEL EYES.—Chest exercises may help your saggy breasts and correct posture will certainly do so. You must practice standing very erect, with your chest raised. If you slump a little at the waist, the breasts have an opportunity to hang, but if you drop your shoulders and elevate your chest, keeping your spine perfectly straight, your breasts are perforce obliged to elevate themselves also. Do not wear a high corset; your corset should not come more than two inches above your waist-line. I expect this seems odd to you; you probably think that with soft flabby breasts a high corset is needed to support them; but a high corset makes them more flabby and increases their apparent size. You should, however, wear a firm brassiere, fastened down by a strap in front and fitting you snugly. If your bust measure is forty, quite likely you can wear a thirty-eight brassiere; or if you must begin with a forty brassiere, you will find you can take some seams in it after wearing it a little, so that it will be very snug. Dash cold water on your breasts after bathing daily. First cool water,—or you can even begin with tepid water, then cool, and finally cold. This firms the skin. Do not massage the breasts; they are too delicate a portion of the body. Where they are undeveloped, it is all right to give them a gentle massage with cocoa butter; but the only massage which will reduce is a vigorous massage and must never be used on the breasts.

PRESSING OUT BLACKHEADS.

A NEW COMFORT READER.—For your dandruffy condition, I suggest an oil soak the night before shampooing. Use olive oil and a medicine dropper, and parting the hair first in one place and then another, run the medicine dropper along the parts until the whole scalp, but not the hair, has been oiled thoroughly. This will aid in loosening the dandruff. Tie the head up in a towel and go to bed, shampooing the hair the next morning. Use only a white soap shaved into boiling water until dissolved. Air the hair daily; let it hang at night.

MAUDE.—The face should be washed whenever it is soiled. Give it a good washing at night; in the morning a tepid rinse, followed by a cool douche; and during the day it may need nothing more than a wiping off with a little cold cream, using a soft cloth and being sure that you do not leave the skin greasy. Apply powder lightly after the cold cream treatment. Of course if the face has been exposed to dust or flying dirt and is really soiled, give it a washing and then apply cold cream afterward, but for ordinary occasions the cold cream rub during the day is enough, if your face is thoroughly washed at night and has a tepid rinse in the morning. I can't tell how long it would take to remove hair by the peroxide and ammonia treatment, for it differs with different people, with the strength of the hair, etc. The only way to find out is to try, applying one one day and the other the next, until the hair dries up and falls out. A large stomach usually means that too much food is taken at one time, stretching the stomach out of shape. Lessen the amount of food taken; you probably do not need nearly so much. When you lie down, lie on the left side; that helps to drain off any excess of gastric juices. Keep the bowels free; you say you are constipated; you probably eat too much heavy food; potatoes, cereals, etc., etc. Cut out potatoes for a time, and white bread. Also, of course, sweets, since you want to reduce. You can't reduce if you eat fat-producing foods. Eat lean meats, green vegetables, or non-fat-producing vegetables like tomatoes, spinach, string beans, onions, etc. And don't eat a great deal at a time. Eat plenty of fruit. For breakfast eat either grapefruit, orange, a baked apple without cream, a dish of stewed prunes without sugar, a soft-boiled egg or even two soft-boiled or poached eggs. If you are over weight, you really need nothing more. Don't drink coffee, tea, cocoa, milk. For your other two meals, select some lean meat, some vegetables, some fruit (but no preserves, of course). You can be beautifully nourished without eating fat-producing foods. And your stomach will not be large if you do not overload it. In the meantime, both for constipation and for reducing, practice the following exercises:

Standing erect, place the feet about twelve inches apart—even eighteen inches. Now raising the arms high above the head, palms together, throw them down and out without bending the elbows, and back between the knees. Do not bend the knees, the body bending only at the waist. Repeat ten or fifteen times. Now, standing erect, again heels together, toes out, raise arms as before, palms out, instead of touching, and without bending knees or elbows throw the arms out and down as if trying to touch the floor with the finger tips. Repeat fifteen times, reaching for the floor each time, no matter how far away the fingers seem to be. In time you will get so you can touch the floor. For a third exercise, lie on the bed in your nightclothes, and with the arms flat at the sides. Now raise the right leg without bending the knee, until it is as nearly as possible at right angles with the body; lower slowly; repeat. Practice next with the left leg, then with both legs together. Your weight should be about one hundred and thirty-five, depending upon the size of your bones. A small-boned person should weigh less, one of large prominent bones should weigh fully that.

L. E. D.—I could not tell you what occasions the unevenness of your breasts; this is a question for a physician to answer. It is possible you have an enlarged heart, since you say this is on the left side. Better ask a good doctor.

A STENOGRAPHER.—Probably your red nose comes from poor circulation, since you are considerably under weight. If you can get your weight where it should be, I feel sure you will have no more trouble with a red nose, unless you wear tight garters, corsets, collars, sleeves, belts. Of course you should never wear round garters, but always side garters, and it is not only healthful but fashionable to wear loose clothing. To gain in weight, I suggest the milk diet, since you say you can get plenty of milk. For one day before starting it, do not eat solid food, but only fruit—if obtainable—and eight or ten glasses of water. That night put six prunes to soak in a tumbler of warm water, after washing carefully. In the morning on rising drink the prune juice and eat the prunes, masticating thoroughly. Fifteen minutes later drink two glasses of water; and fifteen minutes later take one glass and a half of milk, chewing each mouthful before swallowing. Milk is almost entirely digested in the mouth and if gulped down will coagulate and lie heavy on the stomach. Thereafter take another glass and a half of milk every hour until about three-thirty, assuming that you have taken your first milk at seven-thirty. Between that hour and your evening meal, drink a little water, one or two glasses. For your meal eat sensible foods, some broiled meat, a baked potato, a vegetable, fruit, even if canned, so long as it is not a rich preserve. Or a baked custard or blanc mange or even ice cream. Drink a couple of glasses of water about an hour before retiring. After the first week, cut out the evening meal and drink two glasses of milk every hour from seven-thirty in the morning until six-thirty at night. Continue the prunes and water. Let the water you drink in the morning be hot. You should gain from two to four pounds a week. Weigh on the morning you start, and thereafter on the afternoon of the last day of each week.

B. M.—Epsom salts baths, if hot, help in reducing, but will not make any impression on one hundred and eight pounds, my dear. Food makes flesh; doing without food takes away flesh. That is all there is to it. I do not mean that you should starve yourself to death, but you will certainly have to eat less and eat altogether different foods if you really wish to reduce, and I am sure you do. The first thing you will have to do is to cut out all sweets, all milk, cream, butter, sugar, potatoes, rice, macaroni, fat meat, gravies, cake, pie, etc. This leaves you a lot of things to eat; eggs, either soft-boiled or poached or even scrambled, but no milk or butter in them; spinach, string beans, beets, onions, cabbage, tomatoes, turnips, squash; lean meat, chicken, turkey. You can have some very nice meals indeed. Breakfast, for you, should be fruit and soft-boiled eggs; that is plenty; you have enough flesh to feed yourself from that alone for a long time. Drink water during the day, but only a little at a time. For lunch, a dish of tomatoes, a baked apple without cream or sugar, or some spinach and some sliced oranges. For dinner, a small slice of rare roast beef or lamb or mutton, or a slice of chicken breast, a dish of string beans without butter, some grapefruit. You can evolve many menus from the foods at your disposal. Be sure not to eat much at any meal. When you begin to feel hungry, if you do, between meals, drink a little water. Don't eat anything between meals. It is a slow process, and probably, before, you have become discouraged before you could see any improvement; also probably the food was too tempting. But surely you can summon up enough resolution to get some of those pounds disposed of. Dieting will do it, and nothing else will, my dear. If you want to take Epsom salts baths, use a pound of salts to a bathtub of water, very hot, and lie in it for ten or fifteen minutes, rolling yourself up afterward in a warm blanket so that you will perspire heavily; that is the manner in which reduction comes from bathing—by perspiration.

MINNESOTA.—You did not give me a nom de plume, so I am inventing one for you. As to the nose, you should see a good surgeon. If it is broken, it can be set, or should have been set at the time. Only a surgeon can tell you what to do for this. When you get an opportunity, and can afford it, make up your mind to see the best surgeon obtainable, and have this remedied. The lines between your eyebrows may come from eyestrain. Do you wear glasses, or do you need to at least when reading or studying? Do you read in a poor light? Do you worry? Any of these things will cause wrinkles in your forehead. Cultivate the habit of mentally smoothing your brow, keeping the corners of your mouth turned up a trifle. You can massage them as well. If they are vertical, dip the fingers in cold cream, and with the first two fingers of each hand, rub across the lines, not along them. If they are horizontal, follow the same plan, which would mean rubbing up and down on the forehead, instead of from right to left as would be the case where the lines are vertical. The dark circles under your eyes are from something wrong with your health. Do you get enough sleep, nine or ten hours, I should say? Eat sensibly, sleep with fresh air in your room, exercise, and be careful about getting the ankles chilled. Practice deep breathing several times a day; wear loose clothing, as is now the fashion; get outdoor exercise whenever possible. Rouge is not a necessity and is in poor taste for a girl of your age; the daughters of the best families, the wealthy families, are very simple in their toilets, and it is a sign of good breeding for a young girl to be free from artificialities.

MICHIGAN.—Try the steaming process recommended by me this month, for getting rid of your blackheads and whiteheads. Then, you will need to be very untiring in the care of your skin thereafter. Massage the skin daily; that is, gently rub the facial skin, using an upward movement on the cheeks, rubbing both across and up and down on the forehead, chin and lips, and for the nose rubbing with the forefingers from the outer edge up to the ridge. This will stimulate the circulation and enable the pores to throw off their contents. Of course you take a daily body bath, as this is essential not only to cleanliness but to the activity of the skin. Always follow it with a brisk rub with a coarse towel for the body, and a softer towel for the face. Dash cold water on, finally for a facial douche. Try the following formula, if the whiteheads still persist: After the nightly bathing of the face with hot soapy water, and then the several rinses, massage a little boric powder into the skin, and finish by rubbing a tiny bit of cream over the face. Once every seven days after the nightly washing, steam it for ten minutes, then rinse face in hot water and cover with a thick coating of blackhead jelly, made by paring one cake of castile soap in three cups of water to which has been added one teaspoonful of powdered borax, and letting boil until it will jelly when cool. Let this remain on for 10 minutes, then wash off, and massage the face for several minutes with the fingers anointed with a tiny bit of cream. Omit the boric powder application this night.

STEAMING THE FACE.

Address all letters containing questions to
KATHERINE BOOTH, care COMFORT,
AUGUSTA, MAINE.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Advertisement.

"Danderine"

Grows Thick, Heavy Hair

35-cent Bottle Ends all Dandruff, Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.

Comb Away the Gray

A clear colorless liquid and a little comb will restore your hair to its original color in from 4 to 8 days. Free trial bottle proves it—mail coupon today.

Test as directed on single lock—note it is clean and dainty, how soft and fluffy it makes your hair. No streaking or discolofation, nothing to wash off or rub off—just your lovely, natural, youthful hair restored.

Fill out coupon carefully—enclose a lock in your letter if possible. Trial bottle and application comb come by return mail. Full sized bottle at your druggist or direct from us. Refuse cheap substitutes—which will spoil the future beauty of your hair.

Mary T. Goldman, 965 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Mary T. Goldman, 965 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.
Please send me your free trial bottle of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer with special comb. I am not obligated in any way by accepting this free offer. Natural color of my hair is black.... jet black.... dark brown....medium brown....light brown....
Name.....
Street..... Town.....
Co..... State.....

Alkali in Shampoos Bad for Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkili, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

Darken Your Gray Hair

DUBY'S HAIR HERBS

DUBY'S HAIR COLORING HERBS restore gray, streaked or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness, prevents the hair from falling out, promotes its growth, prevents dandruff, and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. It will not stain the scalp, is not sticky or dirty and is composed of roots, herbs, barks and flowers. Package makes one pint. It will produce the most luxuriant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair and bring back the color it originally was before it turned gray. Package postpaid for 35c. 4 for $1.00.
OZARK HERB CO., 3943A Wisconsin St., Los Angeles.

RUBS OUT WRINKLES

Don't let wrinkles and hideous crow feet destroy your beauty. They make you look years older than you really are. Under the magic urge of wrinkles disappear. Absorbed by the dry skin and shrunken tissues beneath, it fills hollows and replaces that aged, tired look with one of youthful freshness. You're a new woman and can see it! Send name, address and ten cents for Sample Box and Beauty Book. Agents Wanted.

PARISIAN FLESH FOOD

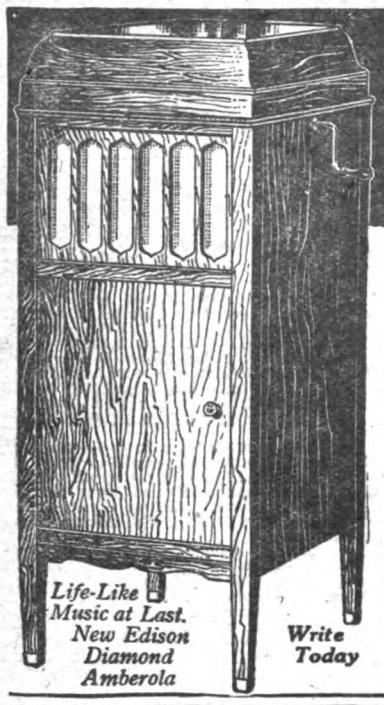
Mme. M. FOULAIRE, 81 ParisianBldg., CLEVELAND, O.

Kill The Hair Root

My method is the only way to prevent the hair from growing again. Easy, painless, harmless. No scars. Booklet free. Write today enclosing 3 stamps. We teach beauty culture.
D. J. MAHLER, 3482-X, Mahler Park, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

DESTROY HAIR ROOTS

NU-ART permanently devitalizes superfluous hair and roots. Unlike depilatories which leave the roots to thrive. No electricity nor caustics. Harmless and painless. Large package $1.00 at your dealer or direct by mail, plain wrapper, prepaid.
A marvelous discovery, guaranteed.
Nu-Art Laboratories, 71D, South Orange, N.J.



RESINOL

Soothing and Healing
Household Ointment
for Cuts, Burns, Scalds, etc.
Every home needs it

FOR SICK HEADACHES BEECHAM'S PILLS

Cuts---Burns---Bruises

and chapped skin, etc., are soothed, cooled and healed by SANA-BALM, the new great antiseptic balm. Simply send name and address and we will mail you FREE sample postage paid and you can buy it at any drug store afterwards. Accept this introductory offer today—a card will do.
Sana-Cutis Chemical Co., Box 691, Sedalia, Mo.

Mr. Edison's Wonderful New Amberola—

Only $1.00 Down

YES, the New Edison Amberola — Mr. Edison's great new phonograph with the Diamond stylus reproducer and your choice of all the brand New Diamond Amberol Records on trial. Only $1 down. Now, on this offer, you can have the finest, the best that money can but at a price very much less than that at which imitations of the genuine Edison Amberola are offered. Seize this opportunity. Write today.

Rock-Bottom Offer Direct! Let us send the New Edison Amberola to your home on this trial. Entertain your family and friends with your favorite records—everything from Grand Opera to the latest city song hits. Comic Vaudeville and roaring Minstrel Shows—then, if you choose, send the outfit back to us at our expense. But if you wish to keep Mr. Edison's superb new instrument, pay the balance on the easiest kind of monthly payments. Don't miss this offer.

Send for Free New Edison Catalog

Your name and address on a postal or letter is enough. No obligations in asking for the catalog. Find out about Mr. Edison's great new phonograph and our great special offer. Get the details of this offer while it lasts. Don't miss the opportunity.

Write Today

F. K. BABSON—Edison Phonograph Distributors
19th St. & Marshall Blvd., Dept. 3709, Chicago, Ill.

Betty Bead Necklaces

$1 Postpaid

We are making this special offer to enable all fashionable women to have at least one necklace of beautiful BETTY BEADS.

SIX STYLES—FOURTEEN COLORS—TO SELECT FROM

Colors: pearl and polished silver, bright and mat blue, light and dark coral, jade and dark green, shiny and mat black, lavender and pink iridescent, red and old ivory.

All necklaces are 54 in. long.

Select your favorite color and we will send necklace in most attractive style. Will refund your money if not absolutely satisfied.

A Betty Bead Necklace is an ideal Christmas Gift!

AGENTS make big money selling BETTY BEADS. Everybody wants them. Write today for selling plan.

BETTY PRODUCTS COMPANY
41 Edwards Street
Hartford Connecticut

Play the Hawaiian Guitar Just Like the Hawaiians!

Our method of teaching is so simple, plain and easy that you begin on a piece with your first lesson. In half an hour you can play it! We have reduced the necessary motions you learn to only four—and you acquire these in a few minutes. Then it is only a matter of practice to acquire the weird, fascinating tremolos, staccatos, slurs and other effects that make this instrument so delightful. The Hawaiian Guitar plays any kind of music, both the melody and the accompaniment.

Our complete course of 52 lessons includes FREE a beautiful Hawaiian Guitar, all the necessary picks and steel bar and 52 pieces of music. Special arrangements for lessons if you have your own guitar.

Send Coupon NOW Get Full Particulars FREE

First Hawaiian Conservatory of Music, Inc.
233 Broadway, Woolworth Bldg., New York
I am interested in the HAWAIIAN GUITAR. Please send complete information, special price offer, etc., etc.
Name .....
Address .....
Town..... County..... State.....
Print Name and Address Clearly 12 Com.

FRECKLES

Risk a dime to get rid of them. Send your name and 10c, stamps or coin, to pay postage, and we'll mail you an extra large jar of Harwood's Freckle Cream; price, $1.25. If the freckles disappear within a month remit the price; otherwise return the unused portion of the jar.
Harwood Laboratories 408 Fox St., Aurora, Ill.

FREE DIAMOND RING OFFER

Just to advertise our famous Hawaiian im. diamonds—the greatest discovery the world has ever known. We will send absolutely free this 14k gold f. ring, set with a 1-2k Hawaiian im. diamond—in beautiful ring box postage paid. Pay postmaster $1.48 C.O.D. charges to cover postage, boxing, advertising, handling, etc. If you can tell it from a real diamond return and money refunded. Only 10,000 given away. Send no money. Answer quick. Send size of finger.

KRAUTH & REED, Dept. 130
MASONIC TEMPLE CHICAGO

Dress Designing Lessons FREE

Women—Girls—15 or over, can easily learn Dress and Costume Designing during their spare moments IN TEN WEEKS

Dress and Costume Designers Frequently Earn
$45 to $100 a Week
Many Start Parlors In Their Own Homes.
Every woman who now does plain sewing should take up Designing.

Cut and Mail to FRANKLIN INSTITUTE,
Dept. T 645,
Rochester, N. Y.
Send me AT ONCE, free sample lessons in the subject here checked.
☐ Dress Designing ☐ Millinery
Name .....
Address.....

Hundreds Learn Millinery By Mail.

Stella Rosevelt

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4.)

Mr. Richards compressed his lips at this. It did not please him that all the young girl's interests should be thus slightingly ignored; but he said nothing, although his thoughts were busy during the remainder of the meal, and as soon as it was completed he repaired to his library and rang his bell.

"Send Miss Gladstone to me," he said to the servant who answered his summons.

As she entered the library, Mr. Richards looked up and smiled with pleasure.

"I have received a card for the closing exercises of your school today," he said, pleasantly. "I think I should like to attend, if I can make it convenient. How have you been progressing?"

"Professor Roberts has been kind enough to say that I have done very well. You know I did not enter until nearly the middle of the second term," Star modestly replied, while her cheeks glowed and her eyes shone with pleasure that he should manifest this interest in her welfare.

"Do you have any particular part in the exercises today?" he questioned.

"Yes, sir. I have a program here in my pocket; perhaps you would like to see it?" and she drew it forth, laying it upon the table before him.

He glanced over it, and, third upon the list, he saw:

"Music, instrumental, by Miss Stella Gladstone."

Farther down he read:

"Essay by Miss Stella Gladstone. Subject: 'Walls Must Get the Weather-stain Before They Grow the Ivy.'"

He looked up at her with some surprise.

"Did you choose the subject of your essay?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"Why did you take such a topic?"

"I do not know, sir," Star answered, thoughtfully. "I read the line somewhere one day; it haunted me continually, until I wrote out some thoughts upon it, as I often do upon different subjects."

Mr. Richards had been looking her over critically, as she was speaking.

She was clad in a gown of some light gray material, made very plainly, but fitting her graceful figure to perfection. Simple bands of linen were just visible at her throat and wrists, while a knot of pale blue ribbon fastened her collar.

She looked lovely. She would have been so in anything; but he saw that her toilet was hardly befitting the ward of his wife.

"Girls for commencement always have a new dress, don't they?" he asked. "Have you made any arrangements of the kind?"

"No, sir; I shall go just as I am. This is the best that I have," she returned, glancing down at her dress and flushing slightly.

"How much time have you before the exercises begin?" he inquired.

"An hour or more," she said, looking up at the clock on the mantel. "I am ready very early," she added, smiling, "for I wished to look over my essay before reading it."

Mr. Richards looked grave. He remembered how Josephine had been all "fuss and feathers" at every commencement, and here this lovely girl was going to appear before a crowded hall in a dress which his daughter would not have worn in her own private room.

"If you will step around to Hunt & Co.'s with me, you shall have one of those pretty summer silks that they are advertising so extensively. I should be gratified to have you as well dressed as your classmates, and I fear that your needs have been neglected in this respect," he remarked, with a slight frown.

Star flushed scarlet now.

She had wished—oh, so earnestly!—that morning that she could have something dainty to wear, and she had sighed regretfully as she thought of all her pretty clothes lying at the bottom of the ocean, and she had heard the girls talking of the new dresses which were being made for them.

"Thank you," she answered, quietly, while the color slowly receded from her brow and cheeks; "you are very kind to suggest it, but, if you please, I prefer to go as I am. I shall be gratified," she added, dropping the proud ring out of her voice, "if you feel sufficiently interested to attend the exercises today, and I will endeavor to show you that I have tried to improve the advantages that you have given me."

"I should be willing to take your word for it," Mr. Richards said, heartily, "but I will come and see for myself."

Star looked pleased at this assurance, and then, giving him a friendly little bow and smile, went away with a light heart.

"By George! she'll make a woman to be proud of, or—or 'I'm much mistaken,' as Mrs. Blunt would remark. She has spirit, too, and is bound to stand on her own merits. There are not many girls who would have refused the offer of a pretty new dress for such an occasion. I'll go over to the seminary and see what she has been doing."

When Mr. Richards entered the hall of the seminary, he found it crowded to overflowing with spectators, anxious friends, and fond parents.

Almost at the same moment a slight, willowy figure clad in light gray, with a fair, delicate face, deep blue eyes, scarlet lips, and a wealth of golden hair, glided noiselessly to the piano on the platform, sat down, and after running her fingers nimbly over the keys for a moment or two, dashed off into a brilliant and difficult sonata.

It was executed apparently without a mistake from beginning to end, and without notes, and when it was finished the fair performer retired from the instrument amid enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Richards was astounded.

He had expected some simple melody, passably performed, but he had not imagined that she was as proficient as this, and he could not understand how she had kept up her practice, with no instruction, and no permission to use the piano at home.

He was no less astounded during the reading of her essay.

When it was announced, she came quietly forward with graceful self-possession, and unfolding the roll of manuscript which she carried in her hand, read in sweet, yet clear tones, a production which held her listeners spellbound from beginning to end.

It seemed as if Star's efforts were more highly applauded than any other portion of the exercises. Even the valedictory, from a member of the senior class, although well written and to the point, was not listened to with such breathless attention.

At the conclusion of the program, the diplomas were awarded to the graduating class, and then the professor said he would read the names of those who had passed their examination and were to be promoted from the other classes. There were two young ladies, he said, who were entitled to a double promotion, having accomplished the work of a year in about six months, which was, to say the least, a very unusual and laudable circumstance.

The names of those entitled to this were Miss Stella Gladstone and Miss Grace Turnbull, and they would, upon the beginning of the fall term, take their places in the senior class.

As the people flocked by him out of the hall, Mr. Richards heard Star's praises on every side, and inwardly vowed that the girl should have every chance in the future.

He made his way toward the platform, intending to speak with and congratulate her upon her success; but just before he reached her another gentleman approached her, and after shaking hands in the most cordial manner with her, gave her a small package, and bending down, whispered a few words in her ear.

He could not understand the expression of mingled surprise and joy which for a moment absolutely glorified her fair face as she received the package; then the tears sprang to her eyes, as, with tremulous lips, she appeared to be thanking the giver.

The gentleman chatted a few moments longer with her, then put out his hand for the roll of manuscript which she still held, while he smilingly asked for it.

She hesitated about giving it to him, while a lovely color suffused her face; then, with a shy movement, she laid it in his palm.

He received it with a brilliant smile, bowed gracefully to her, and then left her.

Mr. Richards now approached her, and taking her hand, said, almost affectionately:

"Star, you have shone effulgently today, and I am proud of you."

It would not have been in human nature to have prevented the little gleam of triumph which flashed from her eyes at this tribute to her talents, but she said, gratefully:

"Thank you, sir; but I owe my success all to you."

"Not a bit of it," he returned, with some emotion; "you owe it to yourself alone; but I will take care that you do not thank me for nothing at the close of another year."

Star wondered what he meant, but she did not question him, and her heart was lighter than it had been before, since she had crossed the ocean, as he led her from the building and walked home with her.

"Who was that gentleman who came up and spoke to you at the close of the exercises?" he asked, just before they reached home.

Star glanced up with a start.

"His name is Appleton," she answered, and pretended not to notice that his eyes were resting curiously upon the package which he had given her.

When they entered the house, Star ascended to her own room, while Mr. Richards sought his wife.

He found her and Josephine together in the drawing-room, and, for a wonder, no callers with them.

He informed them where he had been, and also of the brilliant appearance which Star had made before the public.

Both mother and daughter sneered audibly at his account, and this aroused his indignation.

His eyes began to blaze, and his wife sobered instantly; she always recognized and dreaded this dangerous symptom.

"You are a couple of selfish, heartless women," he began; "and now, let me tell you, you have got to turn over a new leaf, or there will be trouble in the camp. That girl, whom you have so despised and tried to degrade ever since she came into the house, has wonderful talent—talent of which any one might be proud. She is rightly named, for she certainly shone like a star of the first magnitude today. Her essay was superior to anything produced there, and her performance upon the piano something wonderful for one so young and possessing so few advantages."

"Oh, papa, you don't mean that she can play the piano! I'm sure she has never touched this one since she came here, and no one can play well without constant practice," asserted Miss Josephine, with a toss of her dark head, for she was accounted a good musician.

"You don't believe what I tell you, then," her father said, frowning.

"Well, I think you must have overestimated her talent in that direction," the girl answered.

Mr. Richards did not reply, but walked to the bell rope and gave it a pull.

"Go and say to Miss Gladstone that I would like to see her in the drawing-room," he said to the servant who opened the door.

"Really, Mr. Richards," interrupted his wife, with severe dignity; but he stopped her short with a motion of his hand.

"Go!" he repeated to the servant, who had hesitated as she spoke, and then he turned again to her.

"I want you to understand," he said, "something of the wrong which you have been doing this child, and now I am going to ask her to play to you. I desire that you treat her civilly, too, when she comes down. She should have been received here as one of us—I regret that I did not insist upon it at the beginning—she should have been on an equal footing with Josie, enjoying the same advantages, and receiving sympathy and encouragement instead of—well, it's no use fretting over it now; but, by Jove! I'll make it up to her in the future. Hark! she is coming, and now I'll have no sneers or sour looks," he concluded, as the door handle turned.

Star entered at this moment, and seeing the whole family assembled, looked somewhat surprised, but Mr. Richards approached her, saying, quietly:

"I have sent for you to ask if you will play again for us what you played at the hall today?"

"Certainly; I shall be pleased to play for you if you desire it," she said, as she walked quietly and unassumingly to the piano and sat down.

"Play something, please," Mr. Richards said, when she had finished the sonata which she had played at school; and, without a word, her slender fingers went sweping through one of Mendelssohn's "Romances sans Paroles" in the most intoxicating manner imaginable, and her new admirer, with a look of pardonable triumph, thanked her most warmly when she concluded.

She quietly left the room, although she felt assured that a storm was ready to burst as soon as she should be beyond hearing; the very atmosphere was heavy with it.

She was right in her conjecture, for no sooner was the door closed behind her than Mrs. Richards' tongue loosed, and she broke forth in a torrent of wrath.

"Well, George Richards, I suppose you imagine that you have done something wonderful in bringing that girl here and showing her off to us; but you will find that you have made a mistake. It is very praiseworthy, indeed, to seek to humiliate one's own daughter, and I should suppose you would feel very proud of such an achievement. Where is your self-respect, that you bring a beggar in here and set her up as a reproach to your wife? I will not stand it, sir—I tell you I will not stand it! Things are come to a pretty pass, I should say, if our domestic peace is to be destroyed by that insignificant chit, and I was a fool ever to consent to her coming here."

Mr. Richards listened with quiet gravity to the tirade, and when she had concluded, he quietly remarked:

"Well, Ellen, now that you are through, we'll say that it's my turn. You might just as well make up your mind to be reasonable first as last, for mine is settled upon one thing—Star Gladstone has done the last day's work in this house that she ever will do! She is to have her time entirely to herself until she graduates, a year hence. I shall offer to allow her to pursue music, and painting if she desires, during the long vacation just at hand, giving her the best of masters which New York affords, and spare no reasonable expense to make her the accomplished woman that I think she is capable of becoming. You promised all this to her father; he sent her to you with the belief that she would enjoy these advantages until she was fitted to become a teacher, and she shall have them. Now, one thing more—and you know that when I get aroused to this pitch I mean what I say—if I find that you or Jo are making her unhappy at any time, I'll put her into the most genteel boarding house in the city, out of your reach. As for 'domestic peace,' about which you twit me, I believe I love my family better than the average of men, and am not in the habit of stirring up strife; so it will rest with you to keep the peace."

Mr. Richards did not wait for any rejoinder to this plain speaking, but left the room, and finding Star out upon the balcony leading from the dining-room, he told her that he had decided to let her take up music and painting during the vacation if she wished.

"Oh, sir, I ought to be the happiest girl in Brooklyn to have so much of good come to me on this, my seventeenth birthday!"

"Is this your birthday?" he asked.

"Yes, sir; and it is one which I shall always remember with great pleasure," she said, with a tremulous smile that he did not then understand. "I thank you," she added, "for allowing me to go on with my music, and I will be very faithful in improving my opportunity; but—I think, if you please, I will not mind about the painting at present. I am very fond of it, bu—I——"

"Very well; do as you choose," he said, as he saw she was somewhat embarrassed. "You are to have all the advantages you desire during the next year, and you are to do no more work of any kind in this house——"

"Oh, but I like to work about the house," she began, eagerly; but he stopped her authoritatively.

"No; I will not have it. You need all the time you can get for study and practice. Maggie Flynn, or some other Maggie, shall come back as chamber and waiting maid, and you are to remember it is my command that you do nothing of the kind. If you have any spare time, use it in making the pretty things which young ladies of your age like so much. Here is something to begin upon, and I will allow you the same amount every month!" and he tucked a bill of no mean denomination into her hand as he concluded.

He did not wait to hear her thanks, but turned abruptly away, feeling very tenderly toward this sweet young maiden, who had lived such an isolated, neglected life in the midst of that household of luxury.

Star looked after him with a glorified face.

"Oh, what a birthday!" she said, as she went upstairs and shut herself into her room.

She folded that precious bill—more money than she had ever possessed before at one time—for "pretty things," and laid it safely away in a drawer; then she took up a handsomely bound book that lay on her table.

"A red-letter day!" she murmured. "My success—my promotion—his kindness, and, above all, this beautiful book—it all seems to be too lovely to be real."

She raised the volume and softly touched her lips to it; then bowing her golden head, her heart overcharged with its unaccustomed weight of happiness, found relief in a shower of tears.

"The book" was the package, devoid of its wrapper, which the strange gentleman had given her in the presence of Mr. Richards.

* * * * * * *

The next morning's papers contained an interesting account of the commencement exercises of ——— Seminary, together with a copy in full of Miss Stella Gladstone's essay, and speaking in very flattering terms of its excellence as a literary production.

Another important event occurred that morning.

One of Mr. Richards' driving horses was sold, and his wife, upon learning of the circumstances, lifted up her hands and scornfully exclaimed:

"Retrenchment!"

CHAPTER IX.

CHANGE OF FORTUNE.

A few mornings after Star's emancipation from her duties as a servant, she encountered, as she was coming downstairs to her breakfast, Josephine, who was also on her way to the dining-room.

"Well, I suppose you feel mighty set up over the fine show you made of yourself the other day," that young lady remarked, sneeringly.

"I had no desire to make a 'show', as you express it," Star answered, courteously, and ignoring her companion's rudeness. "But it is always pleasant to receive thanks when one has tried to do one's best."

"Thanks!" was the scornful rejoinder. "You have been very sly about it all; and I should think you'd feel mean enough about wheedling papa into giving you music and painting lessons."

I have never asked Mr. Richards for either, and—I am not going to take painting lessons at all," Star said, with scarlet cheeks.

"You needn't try to make me think papa would ever have made such a row if you hadn't been at him and pretended to be so abused and ill-treated. But—where did you get that lovely cameo that you wore in that knot at your throat?" Josephine asked, her eyes having been sharp enough to detect the pretty trinket.

"It was given to me by a friend," the young girl answered, with trembling lips, for she was cut to the heart by the unjust accusations heaped upon her.

"Some one must have liked to fool away money pretty well, to give you an elegant trifle like that," the rude girl said, for she had known that it was valuable at a glance. "It doesn't correspond with the rest of your wardrobe," she continued, jeeringly; "you'd better give it to me."

Star looked up into the bold, handsome face beside her with astonishment.

"I cannot give it to you," she said, with compressed lips.

"Well, lend it to me, then."

She was loaded with jewelry, early as it was in the day. She wore a heavy gold chain, from which was suspended a blue enameled locket set with pearls and diamonds; heavy jewels hung in her ears, broad bands of gold clasped her wrists, while her fingers gleamed with numerous costly gems; and here she was coveting the single ornament which she had seen Star wear.

"I do not like to appear disobliging," she returned, "but there are reasons why I do not even like to lend it."

"What reasons, pray, can you have for refusing so simple a request?" Josephine persisted.

"I have told you—it is the gift of a friend. I do not like to part with it."

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 22.)

"—and now we're buying a house with the money I make at home"

Read this absorbing true-life story of a woman who found a pleasant way to make money at home. She tells here, in her own words, how she helped her husband in his struggle against failure, and how she earned for herself many of the little luxuries that had so long been denied her.

By Mrs. Josephine Kayser

THEY say that truth is stranger than fiction. Perhaps you will think so after you have read this story of my triumph over misfortune. But to me it is not strange at all, it is just a golden dream that has come true at last. Let me tell you all about it.

You see we had always been thrilled with the possibilities of life, my husband and I. I remember how we used to sit together in the long cool evenings and plan the wonderful things we were going to do—when he "made good." We dreamed of a cozy little home all our own, of pleasure trips and of certain luxuries that we both longed for but could not have.

At that time my husband was employed in a factory, doing work that he hated. I guess that's why he never made much money at it—he hated it so. He had always wanted to be an artist, ever since he was a little boy. You can just imagine how happy we both were when a friend of his offered him his first position as staff artist on a newspaper. At last he was going to make real money. At last we were going to have a home we could be proud of. I think I was the happiest woman in the world.

Husband Loses His Position

But my happiness did not last long. Something happened on the newspaper; I never did understand what. All I know is that there was a shifting of officials and through no fault of his own, my husband was released. Then followed days, and weeks, and months of utter despair, when he searched from one end of the city to another but could find no opening.

Slowly our little savings melted away, and just as slowly my husband's eager ambition died. I realized then for the first time what a bitter thing it was to taste a bit of success and then suddenly to be crushed back into the rut. And I realized with a pang that if my husband ever went back again to his monotonous grind at the factory, he would never have the courage again to attempt the better things I had always planned for him. No, no, I told myself desperately. He must not go back to the work he hates. He can not! He will not!

But how could I help him? What could I do to keep him ambitious, to help him remain at the work he loved and at which I knew he would "make good?" Wasn't there anything I could do? Oh, if I could only make money in some way, without leaving home. If I could only find some way to turn my spare time into dollars. If I could only do something instead of watching silently while he drifted back into the hateful routine of his former work!

Makes a Wonderful Discovery

I began to search all the magazines and newspapers for work that I could do at home. At first I could find nothing suitable to enable me to keep up my household duties, or profitable enough to be really worth while. But then something wonderful happened.

I was ironing my waist—the only pretty one I had at that time—and to avoid soiling it, I tore a few pages out of an old magazine on which to rub the bottom of the iron. I glanced down—and out of the torn leaves of the magazine, in big black letters, glared the words, "Make Money at Home!" I forgot my waist. I forgot the hot iron. I forgot everything except that one magical sentence—"Make Money at Home!" And before I realized it I had read clear through the announcement and discovered that here at last was just the way of making money at home that I had been looking for!

When my husband came home that evening, discouraged with his repeated failures, I showed him the announcement. He was too tired to read. "Let me read some of it to you," I begged. "Listen to this, 'you can turn your spare time at home into dollars. Make socks at home with the rapid Auto Knitter and sell them direct to the Auto Knitter Hosiery Company.'" Then I explained it all to him, told him how thousands of women were making money at home this easy pleasant way.

"Think of it!" I exclaimed. "No one need ever know that I am making money. With this remarkable knitting machine I can work whenever I please and as much as I please. The company guarantees to pay a fixed price for all standard socks I send them. It will be like having a little business of my own."

Although my husband was very skeptical at first, I would not let him discourage me. And when I wrote to the company that night for more information, I felt somehow that I had taken my first step toward a brighter, happier life.

The Auto Knitter Arrives

I'll never forget the day I received my Auto Knitter. Of course, it was just the least bit confusing at first, as everything new is, but with the help of the instruction book I had no trouble in learning how to run the machine. This instruction book, which came with the Auto Knitter, told plainly and clearly just how to set up the machine and how to use it.

It didn't take long before I was working the machine without any trouble whatever. Why, it was positively amazing to turn the crank and watch the stitches form quickly into a perfect sock! I had sent for the machine expecting to work on it, but I found it to be actually fascinating. I would enjoy making money this way.

As my husband watched me turn the crank of the Auto Knitter and saw the yarn transform quickly into a finished sock, he became just as interested as I. "Why go back to the factory when we can have one of our own," he laughed. For answer, my hand stole softly into his, and as I looked up into his eager face, I smiled happily for the first time in weeks.

A couple of days later I made my first pair of socks on the Auto Knitter. Secretly I was very proud of them, I had made them so quickly and easily. But I was just the least bit worried when I sent them to the company. Would they really pay a standard price for them as they said they would? Would I really have a ready market for all the socks I could turn out? I didn't have very long to wonder about it though, for soon I received a cordial letter from the company complimenting me on my work and offering to purchase all socks like the pair I sent them, that I made on the Auto Knitter.

Builds Up Successful Business

I was overjoyed. At last I had found a way to help my husband and to earn a little extra money for myself.

With the liberal quantity of yarn that the company sent me with my Auto Knitter, I began work in real earnest. I soon found that I could turn out a pair of perfect socks in less than a half-hour. Dividing my time fairly between household duties and my profitable new work, I quickly transformed the fleecy yarn into soft, warm, perfectly-knit socks, and with happy expectations, I sent my first shipment to the Auto Knitter Company.

Well, it wasn't long before I got my first check from the Auto Knitter Company. I wanted to laugh—and I wanted to cry. My first check! Earned it all myself! And with that check a new supply of yarn to start on a new shipment of socks. Why, it was wonderful to make money this way!

When Dreams Come True

I guess that's all to my story, except that with the aid of the money I made from my Auto Knitter we were able to move to the country and start a mushroom growing business The checks I received in return for the socks I made at home paid the overhead expenses while the business was new, but now it is very successful and we no longer have anything to worry about.

Yes, I still work on my knitting machine in my spare time, as I enjoy the work and it pays for many of the luxuries we formerly had to do without. But now I sell socks and stockings to people right here in our own neighborhood, in addition to the regular shipments to the company. And whenever I want a new dress or a new hat, all I have to do is spend a few pleasant spare hours at my Auto Knitter.

Now we are doing what we always dreamed of doing but what always seemed impossible: we are buying a house It is a cozy, pretty little house nestled down among the large hills, and to us it is like some hidden Paradise. I shall never forget the evening when we first moved into our new house "It is Ours, all Ours," my husband whispered, nestling closer to me. "Yes," I murmured back—and with a mischievous smile, added, "We knitted our way to success!"

Your Chance to Make Money at Home!

We are glad that Mrs. Kayser has given us permission to print her interesting story, because it proves better than anything we can say what wonderful things the remarkable Auto Knitter machine is doing for men and women all over the United States. It is helping men and women start successful businesses of their own: it is helping women earn money for the little luxuries that have been denied them: it is bringing bigger chances to the children in the home.

You can use more money—everyone can. If you act at once, we will show you how you can make extra money right at home, in your spare time. Extra money for the many little things you may now be denying yourself. The Auto Knitter Company will make a contract with you to pay you a liberal guaranteed wage, on a piecework basis, for all the standard socks, you can make at home on the Auto Knitter machine.

Remember that you can work as much as you want, or as little as you want For every shipment of standard socks large or small, you get your pay check promptly. And in addition to the pay check, you receive yarn to replace the amount used for the socks sent the company.

Let us send you more information about the Auto Knitter—it's free. You don't have to know how to knit in order to make money at home this pleasant way. It will give you, as it has given Mrs. Kayser, the opportunity to turn your spare time into dollars. Don't delay. Mail the coupon for information today, now You'll never regret it. Do it this very minute. The Auto Knitter Hosiery Company, Inc., Department 1012, 630-632 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Auto Knitter Hosiery Company, Inc.,
Dept. 1012, 630-632 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Send me full particulars about Making Money at Home with the Auto Knitter. I enclose 2 cents postage to cover cost of mailing, etc. It is understood that this does not obligate me in any way.

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State .....

Comfort, 12-21

The Christmas Key

By Joseph F. Novak

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"DADDY, when will mamma come?"

A spasm of pain passed over Alvord Locke's face as his wee daughter asked the question. But his voice was cheerful as he replied:

"Oh, sometime soon, if you are good—and I, too," he murmured in an undertone. "Oh, Beatrice, Beatrice!"

"Sing me 'The Night Before Christmas' before I go to bed," commanded his tiny tyrant, plumping down her book upon his open newspaper, utterly unconscious of the bitter memories that were rankling her father's bosom.

Alvord cast the paper from him, picked up the book, then drew the midget, nightie-clad, upon his knee. Then he laid his hand upon the fluff of her hair and looked keenly into her great eyes which sometimes, in superstitious moments, he thought seemed to look at him with something of heaven in them.

He gathered her close. "My God, if I should lose you, too, I——" The thought ended in a savage, defiant embrace as if he challenged the world to tear her from him.

Little Virginia looked up at him with a half-frightened, questioning look, but there was only her daddy's accustomed smile so the tiny segment of momentary terror, passed.

"So you want me to 'sing' 'The Night Before Christmas,' eh?" he queried. (Virgie called reading "singing".) "Great scott, kid! You ought to be in bed! Santa Claus may come around and find you up, and then what? He'd pass you by, sure's sunset, and then when you wake tomorrow morning, there'll be nothing on the tree, nothing in your stocking and nuttin' nowhere!" he grimaced, as he dug his chin into her plump shoulder which brought forth a delighted shriek. "How about it?" and he shook his disheveled hair from his eyes.

"Santa wouldn't forget me," Virginia replied confidently, "I saw him at the store and he said he wouldn't. Didn't he put my name in his big book? I saw him!"

"All right, then, since you've got such a stand-in with him, I guess you're safe. But you can't always tell. He's a busy fellow tonight, and it takes time to trim up a big tree like this," and Alvord surveyed the immense tree which he had set up in the music-room to await the magic touch of Santa's trimming wand.

Nothing, however, could shake Virginia's faith.

"He'll come, I know," she replied confidently. "And wouldn't it be nice, daddy, if he'd bring mamma?"

"It would be the loveliest thing that could happen, but Virgie, you won't be dreadfully disappointed if he doesn't?"

"N-no," she said wistfully, "but I wish he would."

"So do I," Alvord said, and cuddling her beside him on the overstuffed davenport, he picked up the book.

As he turned the pages of the picture book, Virgie exclaimed:

"Oh, there's Santa Claus! How I love him!" and as if she had not seen the picture hundreds of times before, Virgie, in her enthusiasm, kissed the merry, ruddy-faced patron saint of children.

"'Twas the night before Christmas,
When all through the house
Not a creature was stirring,
Not even a mouse....."

Alvord repeated the lines, so dear to every childish heart, by rote, for his thoughts were not on the printed page. No, his thoughts were of Beatrice and where she was at that moment.

This would be the third Christmas that she was away. After the quarrel which had ended in their separation, he had hoped she would return at Christmas time, that time when hearts are tenderest, most forgiving, that time when the glad tidings of "Peace On Earth, Good-Will Toward Men" exert their strongest influence.

She had not and there was no peace for him. Since Christmas time had come and gone twice, with no word, why expect her now? Of course she had not forgotten him—could anyone forget such an experience—but after the villain he had been, she, no doubt, congratulated herself upon being rid of him, a dreamer, who, while trying to follow the old ideals of marriage in modern times, had hit the rocks.

Thus his thoughts ran, though his lips were repeating the words of the poem until finally:

"But I heard him exclaim,
E'er he drove out of sight,
Merry Christmas to all,
And to all a goodnight."

Independently his voice operated of his thoughts.

"Now, mamma's good night kiss, and I want to sleep," said Virgie.

He arose and brought a beautifully framed picture. It was that of a woman with a high, intelligent brow, a wealth of dark hair and a perfect throat. She was dressed in a negligee of extravagant pattern and sat upon the davenport. It was the gown she had worn the first morning—and that first morning had been Christmas morning—in their beautiful home. Delighted with how splendidly she took hold of the reins, he had insisted that he take a picture of her. It was an excellent snap-shot, so he had had it enlarged and retouched. It was the picture of her that he loved best, and now he taught Virgie that it was mamma.

"Some day, mamma'll come and sit right here on the davenport and wait for me, won't she, papa?" Virgie commented, as she hugged the picture to her heart.

"Yes, just like in the picture," he replied with something of defiance, a tone he almost invariably assumed when he spoke of her return. Was it a challenge to his own unbelief?

"Oh, I'll know her and I'll just love her!" Virgie exclaimed. "Won't I, daddy? She'll come, won't she?"

"Yes, dear," and then: "Oh, God, give me the unquestioning faith of a child!"

They talked, as they always did, of what they would do when mamma came, until Virgie's sleep-charged eyes drooped and she was captured by the Sandman. So Alvord carried her up to his room and tucked her in her little bed, for, though she had a nursery, he would not allow her to sleep out of his immediate protection.

Mrs. Starrett, his housekeeper, was dozing in a rocking-chair, but roused herself as soon as he entered.

"You'll want nothing more tonight, sir?" she asked, when he had finished tucking Virgie in for the night.

"No, I think not. I'm going to trim the tree and so will stay up for a while, but I'll leave the door open and I'll hear her in case she rouses," he replied.

Mrs. Starrett bade him good night and went to her own room.

Alvord watched her until she disappeared.

"Well, God is good in that he has given me someone to take care of Virgie," he thought.

Bending down over the sleeping child, he kissed her lightly, then went downstairs, and drawing out the sundry large boxes filled with tree ornaments, he began trimming the tree.

Ah, the bitter-sweet of the task! The sparkling pageantry of the tree seemed a mockery to his own heavy heart, for never so poignantly did he realize his loss as at Christmas time.

His thoughts went back, as they always did, to their other Christmases together. That wonderful morning when they took possession of their beautiful home; then the following Christmas when, like children, they had trimmed up a tree and how tenderly they had laughed together when they said it looked lonesome without toys beneath it! Then that first Christmas when Virgie had come! And then those terrible days of misunderstanding, mistrust and doubt and then the finale. He saw now where he had blundered, saw where he had not gauged Beatrice's character and intelligence rightly.

He had thought himself considerate when he did not bother her with his business worries; he had thought himself a good husband in keeping the things that rankled him from her. He had wanted her to be without worry, without care. He forgot that she was a sympathetic, intelligent woman who would have been the better companion could she but know his trials and help lighten them with well-rendered sympathy. And through misunderstanding, they had drifted apart, and when in a moment of anger she had threatened to go, he bade her leave if she wished, but once gone, it was her act and she could never see their child again.

And when she had attempted to go to Virgie, he had stopped her by sheer brute force, and, broken, she had gone, while he, panting and in a temper akin to madness, stood victor—a victor thoroughly ashamed of his conquest.

Was it possible that he could have been so brutal? It had not only been possible, it had actually been.

Then came visions of those two past Christmases when he was alone with Virgie.

What was Beatrice doing tonight? At some gay party, no doubt, without a thought of him or the babe she had nurtured. Was she free? But hardly, for certainly he would have been served had she wanted to divorce him. Then in such case, she was still his, though it was only an empty bond that bound them.

His eyes wandered about the room, then they rested on the massive front door of the beautiful house.

What had she done with her key?

House keys are plentiful, but few women carried the key that Beatrice had carried. In his adoring love, Alvord had had a house key made for her, heavily plated in gold. And that Christmas morning, when they had taken possession of the house, he had presented the golden key to her as a talisman.

He believed she would return it and the fact that she did not kept him from actual despair. While she kept it, there must be some hope, some chance for him.

He had never ceased to love her, but wherein he had erred was in the fact that he felt her love had flown. Even his last words to her, shouted in a torrent of bitterness, betrayed that love and held a chance of forgiveness. How clearly he recalled them:

"You think I do not love you, but it is because I love you so well that I now feel so wronged. I may have been all wrong in my attitude but you never sought to understand me. Go if you like, but you will come back to me some day, and I will be waiting here, waiting with Virgie. You have the key to the house and no matter when you wish to return you will find us here waiting. The love I have given you is a love that a man can only once give, were he married a thousand times!"

That was the way he had spoken, nay, not spoken but yelled in a fierce passion of anger, for he found himself in a position that he could not combat.

It had ended, of course, and he had had plenty of time to think about it all. But where he had felt himself aggrieved, he found that he had been in the wrong, and after the way he had acted he felt he could not go to Beatrice, and thinking she was happier away from him, he punished himself in not seeking her out.

He had hoped to punish her by keeping Virgie. Had she sought to get the child from him, he felt there would be a fierce joy in combatting her, because he loved her and felt that the retention of Virgie would some day bring his lost love back to him.

Oh, I must not think or I'll go crazy!" he exclaimed aloud.

He turned to his task and continued trimming the tree until the giant was at last finished; then he turned on the electric lights. The colored globes glowed softly against the fresh green of the tree and reflected a million times in the glittering ornaments of the tree. The smell of the pine sent his mind wandering back to his boyhood, to those delightful days, gone forever.

"Oh, that those memories did not exist," he murmured, "and yet, there is joy in the pain of remembrance!"

He sat down upon the davenport and gazed upon his handiwork, then thinking to rest his eyes a moment, he closed them.

With a start, consciousness came to him. Had he slept long? Or was it a few minutes?

But what had roused him?

The grating of a key in the lock!

A burglar?

He raised his head on his elbow and listened attentively, then dragged his body over the soft upholstering of the davenport to where he could see the door without being seen, and watched.

The door opened slowly, as if the intruder half expected to be discovered. Indeed, from the hesitating way it swung in partially, then almost closed again, it seemed as if the intruder regretted the intention of entering. But with a final push, it opened, and the nocturnal visitor entered.

And now he doubted his senses—was he dreaming? Or was he really awake? For the thing he had always expected had happened.

Beatrice had returned.

With all his self-control, he crushed down the beating of his heart and lay as if asleep to see what she would do.

She came into the room, her head to one side, as if listening for sounds from above. Then apparently satisfied that she was not discovered, she placed the bundle which she had brought with her upon the floor and opened it.

He noted her forethought in wrapping the contents of the bundle in cloth to eliminate the rustling of paper, and this chilled him. Then hope, ever eternal, again sprang up. Mayhap she did not wish to be discovered until morning.

From the bundle she brought that girl-toy of the ages—a doll, together with a trunk containing, no doubt, her wardrobe. Then she set up the dearest porch swing and placed the doll in it.

Her offering complete, she examined all the toys that were awaiting Virginia to claim them. Then she rose from her knees and slowly went about the room, examining all the furnishings with wistful eyes. Most of them had been their joint selections.

"Oh, my God," she breathed, "why are some of us made with such stubborn tempers," and she hid her face in her hands.

All the while, Alvord lay upon the davenport, scarcely daring to breathe.

Beatrice now gathered her wrap closely about her as if to leave. Then again she stood, hesitant. Throwing off the wrap, she left the room and hurried upstairs.

He heard the soft swish of her garments as she went up the stairs and he listened, though it took all of his self-control not to rise up and go after her.

But he waited patiently and presently she came downstairs again. Evidently, though, she suspected that he must be in the house somewhere (not having found him in bed) for softly she began to search for him, and in a moment more she came to the davenport.

Again he tried to control his heart-beats and tried to make his breathing as regular as a sleeping person's should be.

And now he dared opening his eyes the merest slit. But Beatrice was standing, her eyes fixed upon her picture, and the prominent place it occupied.

As she gazed at the picture, which mutely told her of how tenderly she was remembered, there came to her eyes, the light he had once seen go out and which, in terror, he had wondered had gone forever.

It had returned.

And then——

Slowly, cautiously, she leaned down, her hands lightly touched his cheeks, and her lips met his.

It was all he wanted.

He opened his eyes and she, in sudden terror, tried to straighten up, but his arms did not allow her, and perforce, she sank upon his breast.

"Beatrice, darling, have you come home?"

"I—I—came to bring baby a present——"

"And a kiss for me?"

"Yes!" There was defiance in her tone.

"Then you have forgiven me for my brutality?" He made no effort to rise, it was too supremely ecstatic having her in his arms again.

"I forgave you a long time ago. Had I not, you would have long ago received the key," and she took it from her bosom where it hung by a fine gold chain. "I thought you would be happier without me and though I managed to keep up the fight until now, I finally had to give in. I learned, while I was away, to know and understand a business man better and what he has to contend with. I often wondered why men slaved so hard when they really didn't need the money. I know now that it was ambition to stand well with his fellow-men, to be looked up to, to be honored and known. And I know now at what a cost to the nerves it is! Oh, my dear, if you had only let me understand you and had let me sympathize with you——" she stopped.

"Yes," he answered, "if I had. But I had the old-fashioned ideas about those things, and I felt I had no right to trouble my wife with my cares. I, too, have learned and know now that the modern woman wants her husband's confidence and an insight into his affairs and thus can she better understand his moods and better sympathize with him when a fight or defeat in his world renders him morose or cross. Oh, I learned all this and would have asked you to come back but when I think of the brutality I displayed, I couldn't help but feel that you were glad to be rid of me and were happier alone."

"Never," Beatrice responded. "Alvord dear, when once a woman gives herself to what God intended she should be, a man's helpmate and a mother to his children, if she has true woman instinct, once that is experienced, no other vocation or avocation satisfies. I knew, after I had left you, that never could I give myself to a man as I had given myself to you, and when I thought over your final words, I knew that you had felt the same way when you said that you had given me a love that a man can give only once were he married a thousand times."

For a long while they talked, while outside, the wind swept around the house.

Suddenly there came a joyous call.

"Daddy! Daddy! Is it Christmas now?"

"Virgie, dear Virgie, will she know me?"

"Will she know you? Just a moment! Stay here!"

He hurried upstairs to Virgie's bed.

"It is Christmas now, Virgie, and Santa Claus has been here. But lie still a minute and then I'll take you downstairs."

Obediently she laid down again, while he hurried across the hall and to the room that Beatrice had used for her own, and going to a wardrobe, he took therefrom a soft housegown. Throwing it over his arm, he hastened downstairs.

"Put this on, Beatrice, dear, and sit right on the davenport there near the tree."

"Why, Alvord, this is——"

He kissed her. "Yes, I know. I kept it all along, and Virgie expects mamma to look just as she did in the picture, when Santa Claus brings you to her."

Again he hurried upstairs.

"All right, Virgie, now we'll go down. Santa has trimmed your tree and brought you all kinds of toys, and candy and what else, do you think?"

By this time, he had reached the parlor and set her down.

Virgie gave one quick look at the davenport and with a delighted shriek, she cried:

"Why—why, he brought mamma!" and with a whirlwind rush she flew into Beatrice's arms.

They made a happy group then as they sat there beneath the Christmas tree. Virginia couldn't caress her mamma enough, and while thus engaged, she suddenly noted the golden chain and drew from Beatrice's bosom the golden key.

"What is this, mamma?" she asked.

"It is a Christmas key, dear heart," she said softly. "It is the key with which Santa Claus unlocked the house and let me in—to you and to daddy."

Steer for Success

Success depends upon fundamental principles.
Confidence is the road to honor and success.
Success depends largely upon the first step.
Success for some starts at the gateway of Reform.
There are few rest-stations on the road to success.
Success isn't luck, it is the apex of hard work.
The man behind the gun on the sea of success is the man with mental caliber.
Don't rock the boat when on the sea of success. There are whirlpools of reverses.
Hardships often outnumber the honors conferred on the contestants on the road to success.
The man who succeeds is like a rubber ball; the harder he is hit the higher he rises.
Keep a steady gait. Don't worry because you can't get ahead of the world; be content to keep abreast.
If you want to succeed don't find fault with others. Instead of getting in, a knocker always gets left out.
Do not put off until tomorrow what should be done today. Tomorrow is the graveyard of progress and success.
The reason so many fail to climb the ladder of success, the lower rungs are so far apart they fall through in the attempt.
When speeding on the road to success, it is well to keep a firm grip on the steering gear when approaching the cross-roads of reverses.

Twelve Business Maxims

1. Have a definite aim.
2. Go straight to it.
3. Master all details.
4. At times be bold; always be prudent.
5. Make good use of other men's brains.
6. The minority often beats the majority in the end.
7. Listen well; answer cautiously; decide promptly.
8. Always know more than you are expected to know.
9. Treat failures as stepping stones to future success.
10. Remember that difficulties are only made to be overcome.
11. Never put your hand out further than you can draw it back.
12. Preserve, by all means in your power, "a sound mind in a sound body."

We Give 'em Away
To Credit Mail-Order Buyers
We will mail you, postpaid and absolutely free, a sugar-shell such as you would pay fifty to seventy-five cents for. Our object is to get acquainted and show you how you can save real money by getting your home-furnishings direct from the factory on monthly payments. Enclose this advt. and give the name of a mail-order house you have been dealing with,—this is important. To married women only. The sugar-shell will be either the Oneida Community Par Plate or nickel silver. A gift you'll be proud of all your life.
Quaker Valley Mfg. Co.
Silverware Dept. Aurora, Ill.

Thimble! Thimble! who's got my Thimble?

GET a Priscilla Sewing Rack and you will never lose it. Provide yourself a handy place for thread, scissors, thimbles, pins, etc. Attaches anywhere. Fine for Christmas gift. Needed by women who sew. Nickel-plated, packed in neat box. Send 50c for one, prepaid. Agents Wanted.
THE PRISCILLA NOVELTY CO.
2701 South Wells St. Dept. B Chicago, Ill.

Economy Match Lighter Lamp FREE

TO TRY FOR 15 DAYS
GIVES a brilliant, white light. Restful to eyes. Better than gas or electricity. Makes and burns its own gas, from common gasoline. Lights with a match. No torches. No wicks. No chimneys. An ideal light for homes, stores, halls and churches.
400 CANDLE POWER!
more light than 25 ordinary lamps. Costs less than 1-2c a night to operate. Write today for special Free Trial Offer. Agents wanted.
ECONOMY LAMP COMPANY
212 Economy Bldg. Kansas City, Mo.

Music Lessons UNDER MASTER TEACHERS At Home
Complete Conservatory Course by Mail
Wonderful home study music lessons under great American and European teachers. Endorsed by Paderewski. Master teachers guide and coach you. Lessons a marvel of simplicity and completeness.
Any Instrument Write naming course you are interested in: Piano, Harmony, Voice, Public School Music, Violin, Cornet, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo or Reed Organ—and we will send FREE CATALOG. SEND for it NOW!
University Extension Conservatory, 382 Siegel-Myers Bldg., Chicago

High School Course in 2 Years
You can complete this simplified High School Course at home inside of two years. Meets all requirements for entrance to college and the leading professions. This and thirty-six other practical courses are described in our Free Bulletin. Send for it TODAY.
AMERICAN SCHOOL,
Dept. H 917 Drexel Ave. & 58th St. CHICAGO

FREE THIS STARTLING OFFER
To advertise our Famous Egeria Gems, the wonderful discovery. We will send you this Ladies Solid Silver fancy Tiffany ring, set with carat Genuine Egeria Gem Imported from France. Has the brilliancy of a real diamond. Don't send a penny. Pay postman $2.48 C. O. D. charges to cover advertising, boxing, handling, etc., only 6000 given away. Act quick. Write to-day. Send finger size. Return in 5 days for money refund if you can tell it from a real diamond. Catalog on request.
Egeria Gem Co., W 113 Point St., Prov. R.I.

MUSIC TAUGHT In Your Home FREE

You can read Music like this quickly
Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, Etc. Beginner or advanced players. One lesson weekly. Illustrations make everything plain. Only expense about 2c per day to cover cost of postage and music used. Write for FREE booklet which explains everything in full.
AMERICAN SCHOOL OF MUSIC, 18 Lakeside Building, CHICAGO

For 57 years these little marchers have led band instrument buyers to better quality and value!
FREE—84-Page BAND CATALOG

Pictures, describes, prices everything for the band—from single instrument to complete equipment. Used by Army and Navy. Sold by leading music merchants everywhere. Free trial. Easy payments. State instrument interested in. Write for Book today!
LYON & HEALY, 68-76 Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO

Big Money
Made by agents selling our wonderful Facial Soap, Perfumes, Toilet Articles, Spices, Extracts, etc. Free cake of soap & agents terms mailed to any address.
Lacassian Co., Dept. 402, St. Louis, Mo.

We Pay $7 a Day

taking orders for new Guaranteed Hosiery for men, women, children. All styles and colors. Written guarantee with each pair to wear and satisfy or new hose free.
MEN OR WOMEN
Your reward positive. No lay-offs. Regular customers and repeat orders make you a steady income and a big paying business. Big money for spare time. No experience is necessary. Write for complete line of samples.
JENNINGS MFG. CO.
Hose-136 Dayton, Ohio

REMNANTS SILK, VELVET, GINGHAM, ETC.

WONDERFUL BARGAIN IN 4-POUND BUNDLES
of beautiful Silk Remnants for fancy work, quilts, portieres, pillows, etc. Send 10 cents for a big package of lovely silk, including free quilt designs and catalog describing our 4-pound silk, velvet, gingham, and other remnant bargain bundles; also instructions how to earn money at home by sewing.
AGENTS WANTED To sell our Remnant Bargain bundles.
UNION S. WORKS, 207 Factory St., BOONVILLE, N. Y.

Love Will Find the Way

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

"Hello, Reade!" he exclaimed familiarly. "It looks good to see you around again. How's business up your way?"

"Pretty fair, thank you, Morris," he answered, grasping the hand that was extended to him. "But it is not to speak of business that I have come to you today."

"What then?"

"I want you to do me a favor."

"What is it?"

Reade hesitated a moment. The fact was, that now that he had got there he did not know exactly how to broach the subject that he had come upon. He leaned forward, with his hands between his knees, and looked into his friend's face.

"Did you ever see the play of 'Jane'?" he asked slowly.

"What has the play of 'Jane' got to do with a favor?"

"Well, did you ever see it?"

"No."

"It is a peculiar subject. In it a fellow gets into a hole from which he finds it almost impossible to extricate himself without the assistance of a wife. He has not got any, and there is not time for him to get married. What do you suppose he does, Morris?"

"How should I know? What are you driving at?"

"Why, he borrows one!"

"Borrows a wife?"

"Yes."

"Some fellow must have been thunderingly accommodating."

"He only plays that she is his wife, of course. There is nothing really in it."

"What the deuce are you trying to come at, old man? You surely don't mean me to understand that you want to borrow my wife?"

Paul Reade half-rose from his chair. He leaned forward and looked in Ezra Morris' eyes with a curious, almost hypnotic stare.

"No," he answered, hoarsely, "not your wife—your mother."

Morris sprang from his chair. A quick flush leaped to his cheeks and an angry light into his eyes.

"What do you mean?" he demanded angrily. "There are some things which——"

"Hold on, old man," interrupted Reade, rising and laying his hand soothingly upon Morris' shoulder. "I meant no offense. I know the terrible misfortune that has happened to your mother, and if it were not for the fact that I am in one of the worst holes in which man ever found himself placed, I should never have mentioned her to you. Necessity makes us desperate sometimes, Ezra, and I frankly confess to you that I am in a desperate strait."

Very slowly the color receded from the face of Ezra Morris, and with a little sigh he seated himself again in his chair, his eyes still fixed upon Reade's countenance.

"I don't understand you," he said dully. Explain yourself."

"I surely need not explain to you, old friend, that our ways are not always ones that a person had best understand. We have both been in scrapes that we would rather not have our families or the police get on to. You know I don't mean anything personal or offensive, but simply that we can at least sympathize with each other. Well, Ezra, I am in just such a position as that now."

"Still I do not understand."

"And I cannot explain it to you fully. I thought you would be satisfied with what I have said, having been at some time in your life similarly circumstanced."

He looked at the man with an odd sort of expression, and Morris' eyes dropped.

"What is it you want me to do?" he asked.

"Lend me your mother for but a single hour."

"But how would it be possible for me to do that. You know her condition. She is hopelessly mad! You know that we are forced to keep her chained to the wall in a room that is built of stone. We dare not take her out of there even for a moment."

"I don't wish her to be taken out. I simply want to take some one there for the space of half an hour or less, without the person's knowing who your mother is."

"But——"

"I promise you that no harm shall come to her. I promise you that nothing shall be done further than the fact of my taking some one there to see her, who may speak to her and may not."

"But it is most dangerous for any one to go near her."

"So much the better. There will be no desire upon the part of the visitor to repeat the experiment."

"It seems a strange request, Reade, and frankly, I don't like it," answered Morris, after a few minutes of reflection. "If it is a woman that you are to take there, as I infer it is from the fact that you have mentioned no sex, I tell you that it is a dangerous thing to do. You know how nervous and excitable they are. This is no pleasant sight, Reade. The one decent point in my nature, I think, is love for my poor old mother. I have tried to make her surroundings as comfortable as I could, but it has all been most impossible. I will not have her confined in an asylum for the insane, but I have had a house built especially for her, and have attendants whom I know are kind and gentle with her as they can be under the circumstances; but even I cannot go there to see her. It makes me ill for days afterward. What, then, would it be to a sensitive woman?"

"I am not responsible for all that," answered Reade doggedly. "There is nothing that will extricate me from the worst hole in which I have ever been placed in my life but that. If you refuse, I don't know what I shall do."

"And if I consent?"

"Then I am saved."

There was a long silence between them. It was plain that Morris did not like to refuse the request of his friend; and yet, his whole soul seemed to rebel against it. He looked up and saw Reade's eyes fixed upon his. The expression was so eager, that he saw at once there really was some tremendous motive behind the request, and swallowing his repugnance, he said slowly:

"I suppose it can do no harm. I hate to have any one see her, Reade, and you must never ask me such a thing again, if I consent this time."

"I promise that I will not."

"All right, then."

"Thank you, Morris, a thousand times."

He took the man's hand in an earnest grasp, and picked up his hat.

"When do you want to go out?" Morris asked.

"Tomorrow, if that will suit you."

"As well then as any other time. I will send out word to have things in readiness to receive you."

"There will be no one there to give the thing away, will there?"

"No. I will attend to that. Let me impress upon you again, Reade, what you are likely to see there. The poor old soul is chained like a wild animal. The place is an isolated one, containing but two rooms, one for her, and one for the attendants. It is not far from Doctor Judson's private asylum, and it is to him and his assistants that she is intrusted. You will have to take a carriage to go. You know there is no railway. Do you know the way to Judson's asylum?"

"No. By the way, could you add to the favor?"

"What?"

"Send me the man who drives you out. Tell him where I wish to go, and there need then be no directions given. Will you do this also?"

"I may as well as to the other, I suppose."

"Thank you again, old man. I hope I shall have an opportunity some day to do you a favor of as great magnitude as this is to me."

"If the time comes when I need you, I will let you know."

CHAPTER XVI.

MARIAN VISITS THE ASYLUM.

Judson's asylum, notwithstanding the fact that it was for the insane, was not an unattractive place. The grounds were exquisitely kept; there was a corps of gardeners who knew their business; and the lawns and greenhouses were certainly things of beauty. But the singular attraction of Judson's asylum was the little house down by the lake among the trees.

It was built of stone, but there were vines climbing over it, and flowers peeping out here and there, that gave it a most picturesque and rural appearance. The grounds surrounding it were in even better condition than the ones about the larger building. One might have mistaken it for the home of one of the resident physicians, until the iron bars at doors and windows were seen, and then the truth was suspected.

It was always freely commented upon by visitors, and the explanation made:

"That? Oh, yes, that is a madhouse, and the very maddest of all our patients is in it. You have no doubt heard of the proverbial tenderness of a gambler's heart. Well, old Ezra Morris' mother is confined there. He won't have her in the asylum with the other patients, for fear their cries might disturb her. His love for his mother is the one passion of Ezra's heart, except the passion for gambling, and he had that little house built for her. It cost him a tidy pile, I can tell you; but he don't seem to care for that. We can pretty well tell when Ezra has struck it rich, because he always adds some little beauty to the place; but much good it does her. You never saw a patient like that one, and perhaps never will. She seems to have lost every attribute of the human, and there is nothing left but the animal. No, I can't take you in. He never lets any one see her unless by his special order."

And the visitor looked again with even increased interest at the little house and passed on.

And it was to this place that Paul Reade was taking his daughter, she laboring under the impression that it was to see her own mother that she was going.

He had signified his intention to her in the morning, and all the long hours she had sat waiting for him, with a curious intuition upon her that she could not fathom. A nervous chill shook her, but she attributed it to the fact that she was to see, for the first time in all these years, the woman who had given her birth. She shrunk from it with peculiar dread, but she nerved herself to the ordeal; and when the carriage was announced she rose in silence and pinned on her hat and veil.

It was a long, silent drive. More than once Paul Reade tried in a vague sort of way to break the oppression that hung over them, but it seemed impossible. Each shrank back in a corner of the carriage and remained there.

Marian looked up nervously as they turned into a shell-strewn drive through a large, wide gate, but she could find no voice to speak. She looked out and about her. She had never seen a more beautiful situation; and as she looked, a glimpse of the little lake came into view, with its picturesque shores and clear, limpid water.

A feeling of gratitude toward her father filled her heart. After all, he was not so bad as she had supposed, when he could choose a place like this for the tomb of that living corpse. She felt that in her inner soul she had misjudged him, and putting out her hand, she pressed his; but—she could not have told what it was. She was not in an analytical mood; but even had she been, there would have been no explanation to her of the sudden shrinking, the indrawing of her very soul, so to speak, that came over her. It was the psychic that had been rudely jostled by the touch of that human hand.

She fell away from him and closed her eyes, mentally fainting under the unacknowledged shock of it, and it was not until the carriage stopped that she opened them. She looked out eagerly.

There was the little stone structure with its vines and flowers. They were before the iron-crested door, but it was delicately covered by nature's draperies in a way that warmed her chilled sensibilities. It crept into her heart again and brought life.

It was her mother that she was to see; that mother who had sung her to sleep in infancy; that mother upon whose breast she had lain as a tiny child; that mother from whom she had nursed the germs of insanity!

As that thought came it brought a memory of June Beckwith as a natural sequence; but in that moment the memory seemed halo-crowned. Her soul was uplifted; she did not tremble with the passionate horror, as she had done before the further-away contemplation of insanity. A holy resignation soothed her like the balm of a religion.

She did not speak, but stepped quietly from the carriage when the door had been opened for her. Her father was beside her; she loosened her veil and allowed it to drop away from her face. She did not hear the key inserted in the lock, and she did not hear the door open; but she saw the interior of the hall as it stretched before her.

Her father entered and she followed him. She did not observe that he walked behind the attendant, but she saw him shiver slightly as the inner door was opened. And then——

She did not move, or shrink, or cry out. She was ike a piece of the granite in the stone wall. Her eyes were glued in fixed horror on the creature in the corner. She was chained like an animal. From out the shadows the eyes glittered, not like human things, but like a licking fire that touches highly-polished isinglass. The hair upon the head was like short gray bristles; the skin was wrinkled and shriveled like a parchment. The hands were long and thin, with nails growing from them like the huge claws of an animal.

And that was her mother! That creature, in whom not a vestige of the human was visible, was the mother whom she had loved! And then the apathy of her soul was changed to the wildest rebellion. The mental anguish was something that no human pen could describe. She stood there saying nothing, motionless, apparently insensible, but suffering the wildest agony of almost mental death.

And then, in its turn, remembrance of what she had believed to be her duty, came.

She had fondly believed that her love, her devotion might accomplish something; and more as one moves under the influence of a nightmare than from the effect of emotion, she started toward the creature in the corner. But she had taken less than half-a-dozen steps in the direction, when the hand of the guard was placed warningly upon her arm.

"Don't go near her, miss," he exclaimed, with gruff gentleness. "She would only fly at you, and perhaps hurt you before we could prevent it. She don't know nothing at all, and you couldn't make her understand nothing. She is just like a mad dog, just exactly, and has been for years and years. If you should speak to her, it would only send her into one of her violent fits. She ain't pleasant to look at now, but it's awful then."

Every word of the speech seemed to enter Marian's heart like the sear of a red-hot iron. They were spoken in a low tone; but they were trumpet-blasts to her. She stood there for a moment swaying, as if about to fall; then, with a little gasp, she flung out her arms to her father.

"Take me away," she whispered.

He slipped his arms about her and half-carried her from the building. She saw nothing, heard nothing, understood nothing. She sat bolt upright in the carriage when he had placed her inside, with her great eyes staring straight ahead, and was as dead as the plaster Venus they had passed in the park.

Paul Reade was frightened. He watched her in silence until the grounds of the asylum had been left far behind, and then, laying his hand upon hers, he said gently:

"Forgive me, dear; it was the only way."

She did not understand the subtle meaning underlying his words; but, somehow, she was grateful for the sound of a human voice. It seemed to thaw some of the ice that bound her heart—even his voice.

She did not turn her eyes upon him, she felt that she could not; but dully, stonily, she asked:

"Is she always like that?"

"Always."

"And there is no hope?"

"None. Don't let us speak of it, Marian. It can do no good. You see that she is well cared for, that she has all that money can do to make her comfortable; but it is all useless. She knows nothing of it; she has ceased to be human; the soul has gone. It is only the animated body that remains, the creature without the spirit. You can do nothing, Marian, and I have done all that I can."

"Thank you. I am afraid that I have misjudged you, but you will forgive me for that. You have done all, more than I could have asked under the circumstances. I am grateful that you have placed her—there, where the rest of the world, the curious, cannot look upon her misfortune. It—it—is—— Oh, Heaven, father, do you suppose that inheritance will ever come to me?"

He never forgot that cry to the day he died; and a terrible pallor overspread her face before he replied to her. There was a brief pause; and then he exclaimed, almost hoarsely:

"No! A thousand times no! It would be impossible! Don't ever let a thought like that enter your head. It is impossible, I tell you. Don't speak of it, don't think of it again!"

She did not reply. His words had not the power to lift the chest of torture that lay upon her soul. He watched her in a sort of terrified silence, and it was with a feeling almost like gratitude that he saw Dick Gresham come down the steps of their home to meet them when the carriage drew up.

"I have been waiting here for you for more than an hour," he exclaimed, looking sentimentally down upon Marian. "I have brought you a piece of news and I was determined that no one should forestall me in telling it."

She smiled into the false face, striving piteously to conceal her anguish.

"What is it?" she asked drearily, as he led her into the hall.

"A great piece of good news that will please you," he answered lightly, his eyes fixed hungrily upon her pale but glorious beauty, and lighted with a curious fire that she was too ill, mentally, to observe. "Your friend, Miss Gordon, is betrothed."

She stopped suddenly, and looked at him.

"To whom?" she asked, her lips stiffening unconsciously.

"To your friend, Junius Beckwith!"

There was no reply. As she looked at him, apparently without power to remove her eyes, a little shudder passed over her, and she fell there at his feet without a sound.

"You infernal idiot!" Paul Reade whispered. "What induced you to do such a thing?"

"It is much better. She will recover quicker," answered Gresham serenely. "Besides, I did not want her making a fool of herself. She is too sensational by half, my boy."

TO BE CONTINUED.

The under dog may be deserving of our sympathy, but don't forget that the small potatoes are always at the bottom of the heap.

Look for the "Wear-Ever" trade mark on the bottom of each utensil.

WEAR-EVER ALUMINUM TRADE MARK MADE IN U.S.A.

Get This $1.10 Seven-inch "Wear-Ever" Aluminum Fry Pan

When you see this "Wear-Ever" Fry Pan you will realize that aluminum utensils are not all the same.

If a "Wear-Ever" utensil that costs $1.00 were made only slightly less thick and of metal a very little softer—a difference in hardness and thickness you could not tell by looking at the utensil nor by feeling it—that $1.00 "Wear-Ever" utensil could be sold to you for less than 70c—a fact worth remembering if you are tempted to buy aluminum utensils simply because they are cheap.

If you also wish to give a friend a serviceable Christmas present, mail 60c for each pan desired (or 80c for pan and cover).

The Aluminum Cooking Utensil Co.
Dept. 70 New Kensington, Pa.

ONLY 60c With this Coupon

Send Coupon For This "Wear-Ever" Fry Pan TODAY

The Aluminum Cooking Utensil Co.,
Dept. 70, New Kensington, Pa. (or if you live in Canada)
Northern Aluminum Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.
Enclosed find 60c (in stamps or coin) for which send me prepaid seven-inch "Wear-Ever" aluminum fry pan. (Enclose 80c for fry pan and cover). Money to be refunded if not satisfactory. Offer expires Jan. 31, 1922. Good only in U. S. and Canada.

Name.....

Address.....

Films Developed and Printed 25¢ Per Roll Any Size

Send 25c per roll of six which we will develop, print and return same day received. 3 cents rebated on all blank, imperfect or non-printable films. Highest grade professional workmanship guaranteed. Perfect system insures against any possible loss of films.

8x10 Enlargement Free

Enclose any favorite old negative with your order and we will make you a handsome 8 x 10 enlargement free, if you send us name and address of another Kodaker.

20% Saved on All Photo Supplies

Your first 25c order brings coupons and membership privilege in our co-operative buying service, giving you 20% cash saving on cameras, films and all standard photo supplies. Money back guarantee.

Mail Order Film Service Box 379-A. Milwaukee, Wis.

YARN 100% VIRGIN WOOL

Beautiful sweaters, scarfs, shawls, jackets, hoods, gloves, stockings—dozens of lasting garments—for grown-ups and children cost ⅓ less when you make them from Homewool 100% Virgin Wool Yarns. Direct from mill to you at big savings. Big skeins. Easy to make up. Attractive colors. Send today for free sample cards and Homewool Catalog.

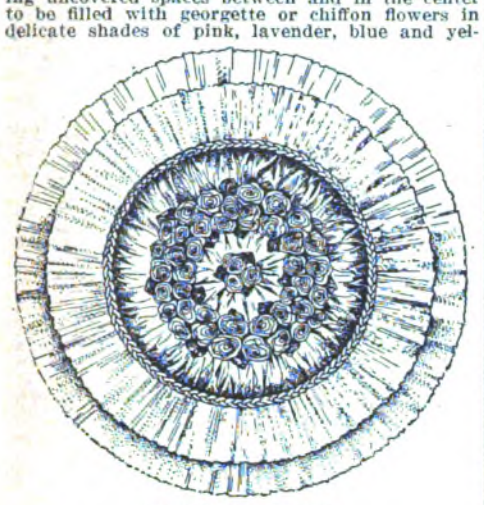
Home Woolen Mills, Estab. 1876
248 Main Street, Eaton Rapids, Mich.
Send for Catalog—it is FREE

"HOMEWOOL"

MORE MONEY FOR YOU THIS XMAS This Book Tells How!

"Showers of Gold" will tell you how you can greatly increase your earnings this Christmas—how you can establish yourself in a permanently profitable business—how you can become financially independent. Every ambitious man and woman should write for a copy.

HERCULES HOSIERY MILLS
Dept. C.
Tenth St. & Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.



Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we will be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Practical and Attractive Gifts for Christmas Cheer

Pincushion or Sachet

ALMOST too pretty for a pincushion is this attractive affair of lace and ribbon pictured below. A sachet seems a more satisfactory use for it. To make, cover a circle of heavy cloth, six inches in diameter, with rose colored ribbon, shirring it on as in illustration. Make two rows of this ribbon, leaving uncovered spaces between and in the center to be filled with georgette or chiffon flowers in delicate shades of pink, lavender, blue and yellow with leaves of light green ribbon. The roses are made by doubling lengthwise a piece of chiffon, three-quarters of an inch wide and six or seven inches long and rolling loosely and sewing securely on under side. Make enough of these, probably forty, and sew on in circle in clusters of three with two loops of green ribbon for each cluster. Finish with a double ruffle of lace, top ruffle being a little narrower than the bottom one, using a narrow piece of pink braid around edge. If you do not happen to have this on hand, you can make it by braiding strands of embroidery silk, as in illustration. If to be used as a sachet, line with layers of absorbent cotton, sprinkling each layer with some fragrant powder, and cover back with silk to match ribbon used on front.

DAINTY YET USEFUL.

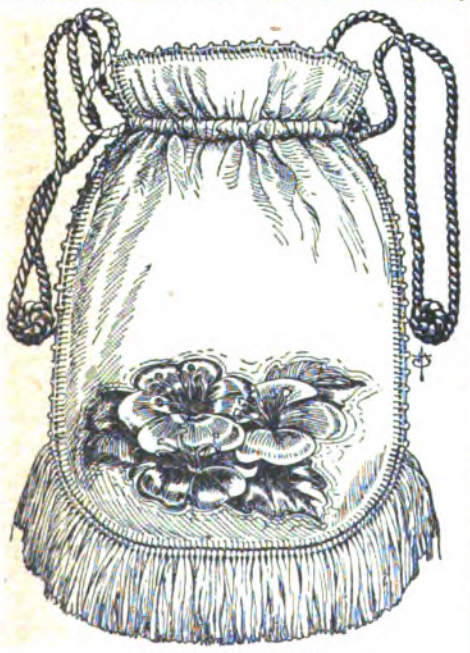
Couch Pillow

The cover to this pillow is made by applying a large patch of even checked material to a plain foundation, which extends far enough outside to make a plain border. As illustrated, one-fourth of the cover is shown. The finished patch measures 18 inches, is made of medium blue and white checked gingham, and sewed to the center of a finished 24-inch square of plain corn colored ging-



SIMPLE AND ATTRACTIVE.

ham. A velvet foundation with patch of checked silk is also suitable material. The edge of the gingham is cut out at even intervals which adds an unusual touch. The plain squares are ornamented with short lines of outlining which cross in each quarter of the white checks. This is done with embroidery cotton to match the foundation. In putting the cover together, a piping of checked material, cut bias, gives a pretty finish and helps hold the pillow in shape. It is well to do the embroidery before sewing the checked material to the plain.

Art Cloth Bag

Linen or any of the adaptable cottons other than art cloth may be used to make this bag. Cut the desired size in two parts, front and back. Decorate the front with stencil and embroidery combined, or with a patchwork design in three or more colors. The top side seams of the bag are left open as far as the run. A narrow hem is turned and held by working over the hem a row of d c with ch 2 between. Make one turn around the edge of both sides of the bag as deep as the two turns in hem, and then trim so that in crocheting the two sides together the hook will go through two thicknesses rather than four. Carefully baste together the two sides of bag and crochet over the edges with the same stitch used around the top. Next crochet around the entire bag, excepting the section to be fringed, with a picot edge made as follows: Ch 4, pass hook through the first ch and s c. Make s c around first row and p every fourth d. Fringe with crochet cotton. Take five lengths, with hook drag the loop made by doubling once through from the back into the spaces made by ch in first row, pass through the ten ends and draw firmly. Trim evenly when fringing is finished. Use twisted or crocheted cord to draw up the bag.

ARTISTIC IN DESIGN.

Crash and Enamel Cloth Bag

Use a strip of colored crash eighteen inches long by ten and one-half inches wide. Beginning three and one-half inches from one end, draw the threads in squares to a depth of four and one-half inches, and to within two inches from each edge. The design will readily be seen by referring to the picture. Buttonhole around the entire edge where the threads are cut off, and slightly draw together the remaining threads where they cross with a double cross-stitch, which gives the effect of Mexican work. One or both sides of the bag may be decorated in this way, or a coarse design in wool is pleasing. Bring the two ends of the crash together and sew up the two side seams, leaving the bottom whole. Sew a band of black enamel cloth to the top of bag as you would an outside facing. The top edge of bag and the edge of enamel cloth are seamed so that when the glossy side of the band is turned onto the outside it covers the seam at the edge. The lower edge of band is not turned under, and is sewed to the crash with a rather deep buttonhole stitch. The handles are of double enamel cloth with machine stitched edges. The decorations are of patchwork designs. The leaves and flowers may be cut from velvet and buttonholed or glued to the velvet. A circle on a circle, each a little smaller, and lightly tacked with bright wools makes a very attractive decoration.

ORNAMENTAL AND PRACTICAL.

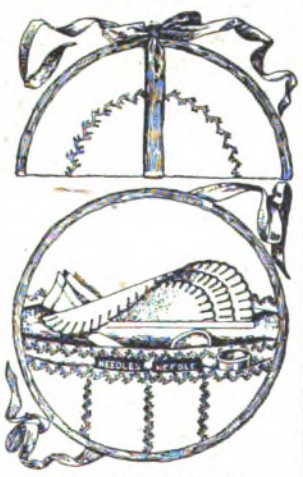
Bag with Stiffened Base

Crochet around bottom as follows: Ch. 4, join, and s c 8 times into the ring, join 1 c h, 2 s c into each st until point of beginning, join. Repeat until required size is made, keeping the work flat by adding a s c when necessary. When the bottom is finished, make the top by rows of s c, joining each row, and starting the next with 1 ch. To stiffen the crochet base, dip in thin boiled starch and stretch it onto a straight sided small tin pan, letting it remain over night where it will dry. Finish with two coats of varnish or shellac. Baskets may be made by this process.



DAINTY WORK BAG.

The top of bag is silk, though many other materials are suitable. The design shown in illustration can be readily copied. The dots are single beads, while the remainder of design is embroidered. The top of bag is finished with lace beading through which ribbon is run and finished with knotted ends.

Needlecase

Very practical and common sense, as compared with the lace and ribbon sachet pad described on this page, is the needlecase of white pique shown here. To be sure, the pink ribbon ties and stitchings of pink on front and back give it a rather frivolous air but not enough to detract from its practicability. The outer circle, or back, is six inches in diameter, lined with half-circle pockets of the same that reach nearly the center but far enough apart to permit attaching by the ends of a needlebook made of three half circles of soft flannel, each one smaller than the other. One pocket has a narrower covering stitched down to form little compartments for needles and thimble. After pockets are attached, the outer edge is bound with pink ribbon and a half-yard of the same is fastened to the center back to form a tie when case is closed.

FOR NEEDLES AND THIMBLE.

Bunny Bib Holder

A bib holder like the one shown in illustration will make the wearing of bibs a pleasure to the small son or daughter of the household.

The strap can be made of any soft material and when finished measures one-half inch wide and eight inches long, with tiny safety pins sewed into the turned-under ends. The bunny faces are made of button moulds covered with white flannel or white velvet, with eyes and nose marked in red ink while black is used for some very realistic "smellers." The following verse neatly printed on a card will be a source of interest as well:

FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Oh little children, eat your food
As neatly as you're able,
Lest little bunnies on the strap
See spots upon the table.

Bath Toy for Baby

An ordinary rubber sponge, four or five inches long, can be converted into an amusing bath toy by a few snips of the scissors, an elastic band and a few strips from a discarded bathing cap. The head is formed by winding an elastic band around sponge while the arms are made by cutting in on each side as indicated by dotted lines "A" and "A" on small diagram. Paste the pieces of bath cap on as shown in illustration, to form suit, cap, eyes and mouth—and don't forget the buttons. They are an absolute necessity.

IT WILL AMUSE BABY.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

ents should obtain the book "Four Epochs of Life" by Dr. Elizabeth Hamilton Muncie, and allow their children to read it, for it is such a wonderfully well written book on the subjects of sex and reproduction of life, that one can not help but have a sweet and beautiful understanding of all the laws of nature after reading it. Upon the same subject of teaching pure sex ideals to the children, let me again refer to Macfadden: "Let me urge you to be frank and fearless with your children in dealing with them upon this subject of sex. Teach them that the body is a beautiful thing, fashioned by the great Creative Intelligence for the use of the highest creatures he has made, and that it is to be reverenced as the temple of the human soul. Teach your growing boys and girls to look upon their bodies, and to enjoy the sight because of the perfection manifested in their creation. * * * Explain to them that while in the present condition of public morals and thought upon this subject, the body must always be covered in public, it is a hideous and repulsive lie that there is anything about the normal human body that is not sweet, pure and beautiful."

As this is beginning to be very lengthy I will bring it to a conclusion. In closing, would say, teach the children pure, high ideals from the cradle upward. In my study and work with others I have seen so much impurity of thought, venereal diseases, etc., that is directly traceable to wrong teachings in childhood that I cannot too strongly urge parental teachings of pure sex ideals. When this has been done and when we who are older, crush out every impure and obscene thought, we will begin to experience a much higher plane of life in which there will be no race suicide nor other abnormal things.

Yours, DR. DEFOLAR.

SO. BERKELEY, 3025 Adeline Street, CALIF.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

Everyone needs a vacation, but then, few people who do so can look back with pleasant memories and a full and contented realization that the time was well and profitably spent. This was how I felt after being a week at Moss Beach, California.

A short electric train ride brought us to the ferry over the Bay of San Francisco to the eternal fog-bound city of San Francisco, where a short street car ride brought us to the autos that were to take us to Moss Beach, some 30 odd miles over the mountains and through deep canyons, the home of myriads of wild life, including deer, raccoon, wild cat and colonies of cottontails that scurried away in droves as our machine sped by.

Up, up we went and at each turn and twist new vistas of unparalleled scenery burst into view, each one seeming to be surpassed by the other. Is it any wonder that you hear so often repeated, "California, I Love You!"

The fog-bound city of San Francisco was utterly lost to sight when we emerged into the bright sunlight and in less than two hours we had descended and arrived at our destination and our steps were turned to what was once a depot or railway station but now used and kept and run by a charming couple known as "Joe" and "Mary," who have just placed a large sign on the roof that appeals to all in a wonderful gastronomic way: "Home Cooking."

And "Mary" upholds the reputation of the sign above, and many times we proved it. Whether there is something in the atmosphere of Moss Beach to account for it, we must give that particular place the palm over all other places in California or elsewhere for genuine honest hospitality.

The lodging once arranged for, the beach is next sought, for no other beach within a hundred-mile radius offers such a wide range of marine objects of so much study in geology as this whole district does for over one mile.

The Caves, the Boiling Pot, the Reefs, the Canyons, the pure white sandy beach with its myriads of shells and shiny pearly pieces of the abalone shells that seem to dance in the sunlight in every handful.

We arose very early next morning to "catch the tide," and reached the reefs in good time to see one of the most beautiful and inspiring sights that our eyes had ever beheld about 100 yards from shore—the receding tide revolving the great, pale green anemones with their swaying tentacles and dark brown centers; the thousands of rich blue spiked sea urchins; all in a rich setting of seaweed that rivaled the rainbow in its hues and setting, the minute forms of sea life, each taking its own color and peculiarity, made us join hands and exclaim as we stood in wonderment by the rifts in the rocks, "My God, how wonderful Thou art."

There, drilling in the living rock, were the sea urchins, and many a sore on our fingers is proof of their tenacity as we tried to twist them out of their self-made caves. The anemones we fed with crushed mussels just to watch the pale green tentacles clutch and hold their food. The great leather clam or sea cradle, often stretching a foot in length, and which dispenses with the useless formality of a shell, and which, after an hour's boiling, would defy a cave man to dent it with his molars, had selected a spot close by and was obviously little aware that in a few days his backbone would form a necklace of pretty butterflies.

From watching the sea urchin I have learned the lesson more fully that God takes care of even the shell fish, causing them to drill themselves into the rocks until, when a certain size and age, they drill themselves out again and live in the deeper waters. How much more should we mortals trust Him who said, "Even the hairs of your head are numbered."

Contrary to what we would at first suppose, on seeing the vast quantity of living matter thrown up by the sea, that not one atom of it is wasted and this is proved by the fact of the many kinds of insects and shrimps that seem to wait for every piece as soon as the sea gives it up.

When the tide was in, and we could not get on the reefs, we went into a pavilion built on the sands and spent many pleasant hours listening to the music or studying the thousands of specimens with which the walls and ceiling are thickly studied. Many fine specimens of albalones, sea urchins, star fishes and fossils are found here, and the genial proprietor, Mr. Nye, who kindly explains his curios and knows everything worth knowing about Moss Beach, makes you realize that you are no stranger.

Some of the mornings when on the beach we had to gather dried seaweed and make a chimney of stones and sticks and good feeds we surely had, pork and beans with mussels fresh from the rocks, a plentiful supply of crackers and cheese, feet on the hot rocks, while you watch the curl of the smoke as it ascends to the cliff above, a sense of freedom comes over you as you look around and see no living soul in either direction for miles, you tune yourself up to the rhythm of the waves and with a heart of thankfulness to the God of Nature, the soul sings:

"Awake, my soul, and with the sun,
Thy daily stage of duty run.
Shake off dull sloth and early rise,
To pay thy morning sacrifice."

When we arrived, we were fortunate in seeing a whale and a baby white seal that had been washed up on the beach and we secured a souvenir of both, the buffer bones or ligaments that separate the vertebræ of the whale, and the teeth of the seal.

We needed a pack mule to bring home the specimens, and a very decided salt flavor permeates our whole home, while all the neighbors have secured their samples from us, and many resolves have been made to go there.

The return trip was made in good weather, and the air on the mountains so bracing and pure until we entered the fog belt of San Francisco and had passed through on our way home to Berkeley through the sunshiny city of Oakland, thankful to be home with our burdens and get hot water to boil our victims.

Your sincere sister, MRS. JAMES C. MARSH.

PEEBLE, N. Y.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I called on you two years ago but you were so busy I didn't stay long; at least, my letter wasn't printed.

I am 29 years old, tall, slender, with brown hair and a fair complexion.

I have a daughter nearly twelve years old who weighs 101 pounds. What can be done to reduce her weight? Can someone help me? She is a very hearty eater. Some say that it may not be natural fat but it is. She isn't what you would call "a sight" but just solid and chunky. She cries if anyone teases her about being fat. She is very musical and plays the piano and sings.

My husband is thirty-four years old, and is the village blacksmith. If the wife of a blacksmith reads this she can sympathize with me on wash days. I do all my own work and am not very strong. Have had nervous trouble for three years. I like to sew, crochet and am making a wild rose border for a lunch cloth and finishing up a basket yoke.

I want to tell you something about our big delegation that came to Cortland County in August. The New York Tribune sends children from New York City to the country for two weeks and pays expenses. Any one can take one or two, or more if they wish, for two weeks. Just let them know whether you want a boy or a girl and the age desired and you will get what you order. Six hundred and thirty-three were unloaded at Cortland. Friends of ours took a little nine-year-old girl and we took them to the train to get her. The crowd there was equal to a county fair. Each child wore two tags; one was the town where they were going and the other was their name and address and the name and address of the people to whom they were going. Each car had a lady attendant and there was a special train of seven coaches. They were unloaded in about an hour and each child was delivered to the place intended for it unless the people happened to be there to meet it. It was quite a sight. I never saw so many children in my life, some crying, some laughing and the others didn't know what to do. The girl our friends had was here the year before so she already knew where she was going. She didn't know which to kiss when she saw us, so clasped me around the neck with both arms, and I thought she would never let go. We bought her lots of new things last year and again this year. I didn't take any of the children myself for I live upstairs and in a dangerous place. I was afraid they might fall off the porch. If any of the sisters ever get the chance to take "Fresh Air Kids" as they are called, you will know that they are all right. They are inspected by doctors before leaving and are free from disease. When it came time for them to go home they didn't want to go and hid in the barns and meadows. The officers found them. Eleven of them came to Preble and a brighter bunch you never saw.

How many believe in Sunday baseball games? It seemed to be quite the thing here this summer.

I am to entertain our Sunday School Class (of which we are members) and will someone give me some ideas in the way of entertainment. We had a corn roast down on the shore of the lake and it was heaps of fun.

I have corresponded with a COMFORT sister for over three years. She lives in Akron, Ohio, and I hope to see her when I go to my home in Indiana for a visit. I enjoy the COMFORT magazine. Can anyone send me the words and music of the song or hymn, "They tell of a city with walls of jasper and streets of gold"? My sister always liked it and wanted it sung at her funeral but we couldn't find it. I am anxious for it to sing as a duet. I am an alto singer and my friend and I sing together at church and are always hunting for new songs.

Best wishes to all. MRS. JESSE GARDNER.

PITTSBURG, PA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I've always stayed outside and listened to your conversation without trying to enter, but when the plea came from Molly-Joe I said, "Here is your chance," for I've always been somewhat in love with Molly-Joe anyway. I'm not speaking from experience for I never had a stepmother but I think unless the brothers she speaks of are very young or the stepmother very unkind to them, her best plan would be to go away and do something for herself, and by so doing she might be helping all concerned more than by staying with them. No matter how good a stepmother she may have, one house was never built for two. Sometimes I believe we can allow people to lean too heavily upon us, so heavily that they fail to appreciate who is holding them up. Therefore I think it would be better if Molly-Joe would break away for a while at least. The breaking away will be hard, of course, especially if she has never been away from the loved ones much.

There are many opportunities for the kind of girl I take Molly-Joe to be. Let's hear what the other sisters think on the subject.

I have noticed a few letters are from wives of railroad men and if this doesn't land in the waste-basket perhaps I'll call again and tell of my home and the Smoky City.

FOREMAN'S WIFE.

NEBRASKA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND ALL:

Many times when reading the interesting letters of this corner I have been tempted to write but have always postponed it thinking that others would write more intelligently and beneficially than I. When I read Roy Smith's letter in the August number I was again moved to write and this time so strongly that I can't put it off as I have done before. I think Mr. Smith was entirely too harsh on our motion-picture plays and not once did he criticize the eyes that saw the pictures. I have traveled what some would call extensively and seen a large number of photoplays and everyone has been educational to me in some way. Yes, some showed semi-nude women and some two-thirds nude men, some entirely nude children but I don't feel that my mind has been poisoned nor that I am an immoral wretch because I have witnessed these pictures. If such sights cause evil thoughts in the minds of men or "small boys" then they must feel terribly wicked every time they go near a bathing beach. Such thoughts should be quelled and a good cure for persons affected

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 17.)

Through the columns of this department our Doctor's advice regarding maternity and child welfare will be given free in answer to questions by our subscribers. Address Mother and Baby Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and be sure to give your full name and address. Names will not be published.

What to Do if Baby Becomes Unconscious

THERE is nothing probably that will frighten a mother more than to find her baby unconscious, and what I mean by this is that the baby will not awaken nor respond to any efforts to arouse it.

This symptom may be a serious thing and where it is possible it is always best to send for a physician at once, then proceed to do the things for the baby that the mother can do before he arrives. First examine the mouth and throat to see if it has by any chance swallowed anything, try and reason out the chances of the baby's getting hold of any medicine or preparation of any kind that might poison it.

I speak of medicine, for a short time ago I was called to see an unconscious baby and for a little time the case was very confusing as to what caused the child's condition. Then I noted twitching of the muscles all over the body, which made me think of strychnine poisoning, and on questioning the mother found the baby had eaten a few pink tablets, that I found to be strychnine tablets.

In this case it was very important to know what caused the unconsciousness as then we could treat the case intelligently.

There are a few simple things a mother can do before the physician arrives in any case, that will not do any harm and usually do good.

The first of these is the warm bath. Remove baby's clothing carefully and put it into a warm bath. I do not mean a hot bath and wish to caution the mother about this as in several cases I have known mothers to lose their heads and scald baby quite seriously. Prepare the water, then dip your elbow into it and be sure it is not too warm. I should leave the baby in the water about ten minutes unless it becomes conscious before this time. Then take the baby into your lap and wrap it up in a warm blanket. If it is still unconscious, I should proceed to get an action from its bowels in some way, first trying a suppository of glycerine, gluten or soap and if any of these are not available give an enema of soap suds and warm water, never using more than one-half pint of water at a time. In using the suppository I wish to again caution you about losing your head, and being rough or careless.

We will now take up for consideration the things that will cause unconsciousness, taking them up in about the order of their frequency.

First, indigestion with its accompanying toxemia, and ptomaine poisoning are without doubt the most common causes of unconsciousness, and, in these cases, the warm bath followed with relieving of the bowels by suppositories or enema are the proper treatment and will rarely fail to relieve very soon.

Second in frequency is dentition or teething, and in healthy full-blooded babies it is not at all uncommon for them to become unconscious, or as the mother will tell you, "have a fit," especially when the large double teeth are coming. The baby's face will be red, with fever and rapid pulse, and it will be inclined to open its eyes and stare up toward the ceiling of the room. The treatment for this is the warm bath, bathing with lukewarm water, cold applications to the head, and as soon as the physician arrives have him lance the gums over offending tooth or teeth, uncovering the top of the tooth, as the bleeding will give relief to the head symptoms. This may seem to be rather heroic treatment, but it is not, as nature has got to push through this same tissue with this new tooth, which is a normal physiological happening.

As to the poisons that a child may get hold of and swallow, of course the proper treatment is to give the proper antidote, as, for example, if it is some acid one should give an alkali, lime-water; if an alkali, give an acid, diluted vinegar is a simple one available in most of homes. If the baby has taken opium or any of its preparations, try and get baby to vomit as soon as possible with lukewarm water with a little mustard in it, or tickle the back part of its throat as this will usually cause vomiting, then try and keep the baby awake until the doctor arrives—you might give a little coffee; then when the doctor arrives he will wash out the stomach and give the physiological antidote, permanganate of potassium.

In strychnine poisoning make the baby vomit, then put baby in a quiet place, holding it firmly, as the slightest draft or noise will often throw it into an unconscious or convulsive state. Be sure to get the doctor as soon as possible.

Aconite, I think, is another poison a mother should know something about as it is often used as a fever remedy and the baby may by mistake or carelessness get an overdose. In such case get the doctor as soon as possible, and while waiting for him keep the baby lying on its back with feet higher than its head, apply hot applications, and give stimulants such as coffee, aromatic spirits of ammonia, any kind of wine, whiskey or brandy in small doses if available.

Vapo Cresolene Est. 1879

The Vapor Treatment for Coughs and Colds

The time for Vapo-Cresolene is at the first indication of a cold or sore throat, which are so often the warnings of dangerous complications.

Simple to use; you just light the little lamp that vaporizes the Cresolene and place it near the bed at night.

The soothing antiseptic vapor is breathed all night, making breathing easy, relieving the cough and easing the sore throat and congested chest.

Cresolene is recommended for Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Influenza, Bronchitis, Coughs and Nasal Catarrh. Its germicidal qualities make it a protection when these diseases are epidemic. It gives great relief in Asthma.

Cresolene has been recommended and used for the past 42 years. The benefit derived from it is unquestionable.

Sold by druggists. Send for descriptive booklet 24. THE VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt St., New York or Leeming-Miles Bldg., Montreal, Canada.

The subject of our January talk will be Winter Coughs and Colds.

Questions and Answers

HIVES.—I am a young mother, with three-months'-old baby, and wish you would tell me what is best to give her as she has hives. MRS. A. B., Piney Flats, Tenn.

A.—The most common cause of hives in babies is indigestion, therefore the thing to do in the first place is to correct this. If you are nursing baby, get your own digestion normal, keep bowels regular and avoid foods that cause gas or distress. If it is a bottle baby, put one or two tablespoonfuls of lime-water in each four ounces of food, and keep baby's bowels regular by frequently giving in its milk one or two teaspoonfuls of milk of magnesia.

DANDRUFF AND EXCESSIVE FLOW OF MILK.—We have a baby three weeks old whose head is caked with dandruff. What can we do for it? (2) I also wish to know what can be done to prevent milk flowing from mother's breast when baby is not nursing.

MRS. A. M., Burgaw, N. C.

A.—Apply on baby's head a little olive oil or vaseline, gently washing once a day with borax or boric acid solution, four per cent., or as much powder as will dissolve in amount of water,—this is called a saturated solution. (2) For the excessive flow of milk, would suggest dry diet for mother, that is, drinking less liquids, and as the baby grows older he will without doubt take care of milk.

CONSTIPATED BABY.—I am writing for information as to what to do for my four-months'-old baby who is badly constipated. Have tried Castoria and olive oil without any good result. MRS. M. M., Bransom, Colo.

A.—If you are nursing the baby, get your bowels regular with Fluid Extract of Cascara Sagrada, in teaspoonful doses. If bottle baby, try giving one or two teaspoonful doses of milk of magnesia in its milk once or twice a day as needed.

PAINFUL, SCANTY URINATION.—I am six months pregnant and am writing for advice as to what to do for burning pain on urinating and cannot urinate much.

MRS. M. C., Farmington, Pa.

A.—Without doubt, you have a highly acid urine from eating too many acid fruits, grapes, apples, tomatoes, etc., etc., and I would suggest that you stop all acid fruits and vegetables, drink lots of milk, and two or three times a day drink a glass of water to which has been added a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Urinating in bathtub or while taking sitz bath will relieve painful urination. Put binder around lower abdomen; getting a little upward and inward pressure will help you in walking.

SORE NIPPLES.—I am an expectant mother and wish to know what I can do to harden nipples, as they are always so sore and cracked when baby arrives.

MRS. W., Bath, Mich.

A.—Avoid flattening nipples with tight corsets, harden them during pregnancy with tannin or alum, apply every day for week before baby arrives a saturated solution of borax, or equal parts of borax or vaseline.

BRONCHITIS.—My 19-months'-old girl has bronchial trouble and I am writing to know if there is anything I can do to give relief; also one side of nose runs and I should like to know if her tonsils cause either of these troubles, and is she too young to have them removed? MRS. E. D. R., Allen, Kans.

A.—For the bronchitis would give 20-drop doses of syrup of hydriodic acid, three times a day in a little water. Should have nose and throat examined, as any obstruction from adenoids or enlarged tonsils imposes on organs of respiration, and have operation if needed.

INDIGESTION.—My 15-months'-old bottle-fed baby cries a great deal and does not sleep over one-half hour at a time. Have tried all brands of milk and none seems to agree with him. Would you put him on solid food and what would you give him?

MRS. H. C. H., Great Falls, S. C.

A.—Yes, I would put him on solid food, cooked cereal, cream of wheat, oatmeal that has been cooked a long time, oatmeal gruels, baked potato, stale wheat bread toasted, orange juice, soft-boiled eggs every other day.

MALNUTRITION.—My 17-months'-old girl has but two teeth and weighs but 17 pounds. I feed her on modified milk and she seems healthy. When I set her on her feet she cries and sort of curls them up. She does not creep. Any information you can give me in regard to treating her will be appreciated.

MRS. J. F., Lothan, Montana.

A.—Would suggest your taking your little girl to a competent physician for a thorough examination at once, and until you do so should avoid trying to encourage her to walk or creep as there is some reason for this backwardness.

BABY'S BOWELS.—My six-weeks'-old baby's bowels have not been regular since he was born, move some days eight times, watery and full of curds. Can you tell me the cause of the curds?

MRS. N. W., Tanner, W. Va.

A.—If you are nursing baby, correct your own digestion, especially avoiding acids as this hyperacidity is the cause of the curds, also drink milk and vichy water, equal parts, or take three or four tablespoonfuls of lime-water a day. If baby is bottle fed, give baby tablespoonful of lime-water to four-ounce feeding, and occasionally give baby teaspoonful of castor oil.

PERIPHERAL VENOUS THROMBOSIS.—I am the mother of eight children and have had milk leg several times, and am now down with it for two months. What is the cause and remedy? (2) Please explain what a leak in the heart is and is there danger of sudden death?

MRS. E. M. R., Felton, Ga.

A.—The causes of peripheral venous thrombosis or milk leg is not definitely settled, but is without doubt caused by anything favoring blood coagulation, feebleness, debility, difficult labor, septic infection or any inflammation of pelvis following childbirth. Treatment: Elevate the limb, wet in hot flannel cloths, covering this with oiled silk or oilcloth and bandage on. Apply constantly hot flaxseed meal poultice with a little turpentine sprinkled on, and if painful sprinkle a little laudanum on poultice. (2) A leak in heart is supposed to mean that one of the valves does not close properly, and as a rule does not cause sudden death, as you usually get a compensating hypertrophy. One exception to this rule is that you may get sudden death if aortic valve is involved, and aortic regurgitation is the valvular heart trouble that causes the largest number of sudden deaths, but even with this many lead an active life without danger.

PILES.—I am three months pregnant and am badly troubled with the piles, although my bowels are not at all constipated. Can you tell me what to do for them?

MRS. R. A. B., Florence, S. D.

A.—If you have large external piles, I would suggest you have them removed under cocaine, a simple thing to do. If internal and external, I would advise you to use Iodex pile suppositories, and apply Ung. Iodex on outside. Iodex preparations can be obtained at most any drug store.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16.)

in this way would be to spend several years among the South Sea Islanders. I want to tell Mr. Smith that all the sin there is at a film show is in the minds of the spectators and not in the films. There is beauty in everything that God made. If you don't see godliness in a beautiful woman or a strong man, the devil has infused your mind with immoral thoughts and you are weak enough to listen to him. A man must be weak indeed if he feels degraded and poisoned because he has looked upon the picture of a scantily clothed woman and if a small boy feels the same way he has been taught to do so by his elders for a child does not have wicked thoughts until instilled by others.

There are various conditions and customs to be found in traveling over the world but not all can travel. To those who can't, these modes of life can be learned, to a certain extent, from the picture shows. To be really educated one must become acquainted with all phases of life and all classes of people—the lowly, the great middle class, the wealthy or society class. Mr. Smith states that it is a crime for little boys to look upon these pictures; if this is true then it is a crime for them to know that such conditions exist. Not so, the crime is in the fact that sinful conditions do exist. A child, in my estimation, should be taught to know and recognize all conditions of life, then to be able to pick out the pure from the impure and see and love the beautiful things of this world. One usually finds what one looks for and I am glad that I have learned to look for and to see the true and beautiful.

With best wishes to all,

Sincerely, M. M.

ATLANTA, GA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

If you'll allow me, I'll sit right over here with these happy mothers, discussing their children. I have two, a boy, ten years old, and a girl, three, and we are regular pals. We are not as fortunate as country folks, as we live in a crowded city, our lot being only 30x100 feet, so haven't very much room and freedom. But we make the most of it and are happy. I helped the children make a playhouse, under the back part of the house, which is high, with a wonderful store adjoining. Bubba is the store man and "Baby Dear" is "Mama." I run down to play with them, when I can spare the time. And when I have to leave them, "Mama" is delighted to give me permission to go upstairs. We sometimes have a tea-party, with milk for tea, and have doughnuts or tea cakes. I find that while they play they are learning to keep things neat and orderly. You'd be surprised to see how well Baby Dear can sweep.

I had my boy to help me with the dishes and house work as soon as he was old enough, till now, at ten years, I can depend on him to wash the dishes and clean the kitchen as well as I. I taught him to begin with, that anything worth doing is worth doing right. I had to send him back, just a few times, to do things over again to convince him of this. And I never allowed him to frown or grumble about his work, because I never allow anything to become monotonous with him. I keep him in good practice, so if any emergency arises I can depend on him. I have seen some children, when their mothers get sick, take possession of the whole place and make enough noise to give a well person nervous prostration. I don't believe in letting boys grow up until they are old enough to earn money, before training them to be energetic. By that time they are usually so lazy they are beyond redemption. Dish washing and house work may be only girls' work, in some mothers' eyes, but it's not in mine.

Let me tell some of the mothers how I wash my dishes and save some time, and I think of "Happy Homemaker" most every time I wash mine, with her "from twelve to forty men to cook for." I wash them in hot water and turn them in a pan with holes in the bottom, which sets in another pan, to dry. That leaves only the silver and frying pans to dry with the towel. They are as clean and glossy as can be, when left to dry this way. Of course a sink would be much better to set the pan in, and one can buy the wire baskets for the purpose at the stores, but my old pan answers the purpose fine.

Thanks, Mrs. McDonald, for your suggestion. I find Katherine Booth wonderful, and never noticed her department until I read your letter. I am afraid she will be working over time when a few more neglected sisters, like myself, take notice.

Another Broken Blossom, I find your method of punishment seems fine, but it won't work in my case, possibly because my boy is too old. It gave me a good idea, though. Whenever I have to punish him the second time for anything, I make him whip himself, telling him I am tired of whipping, so he will have to whip awhile. That is absolutely a sure cure in my case.

With love to all, and thanking you, Mrs. Wilkinson, I am, A GEORGIA MOTHER.

SALEM, R. R. 2, W. VA.

HELLO THERE, MRS. WILKINSON:

I am sending a picture of Bernice Lee Whiteman. I hope to see her smiling face in COMFORT. She is seventeen months old and can talk. I am twenty years old and have been married five years. We live in the country but have an automobile and go to town when we want to.

I read COMFORT and like it, especially the helps, but all of COMFORT helps. I have a lot of good books and magazines but COMFORT is my favorite.

BERNICE LEE WHITEMAN.

I told baby's Daddy that I was going to send her picture to COMFORT and he laughed. Guess he thinks the Sisters' Corner is not real but I know it is. I always turn to it first to see the kiddies and then to read the letters.

I may come again if baby and I are noticed this time.

MRS. DAISY WHITEMAN.

Mrs. Whiteman.—Such a happy, contagious smile couldn't possibly escape "notice." There must be something particularly joyous about sitting on a table with one's toes turned in, that we grown-ups have missed.—Ed.

HOPE, ARKANSAS.

HELLO, FOLKS:

Will you admit another boy into your circle? I hail from the State at which they all poke fun; nevertheless, it is in the front ranks in natural resources. It has the only diamond mines in the United States and many other minerals are mined. Its hot springs are wonderful in the restoration of health in many diseases and Arkansas has soil that will produce anything adapted to this climate. It has the largest peach orchard in the world and it raises many apples. There, haven't I tooted my horn enough to induce some of the boys and girls to come to Arkansas?

Sisters, is it not true that "youth lives in the future and age lives in the past"?

The older people of today say that the youth of today is not nearly so pure as forty or fifty years ago but I believe human nature is the same now as then. What do you think?

FREE 30 DAY TRIAL
SEND NO MONEY
EASY PAYMENTS IF IT SUITS YOU

JUST WRITE AND SAY YOU WANT TO TRY THE

Faultless Automatic Drop-Head, Steel Ball Bearing Sewing Machine

When it arrives use it free for one month. If then you are fully satisfied with it, send us $3.60—and pay $3.60 each month for 7 months—$28.80 in all. If it does not suit you, ship it back at our expense.

Genuine Oak Woodwork, beautifully finished; Iron Stand, enamelled glossy black; Head folds inside, leaving flat table top; Automatic Bobbin Winder; Self Threading Cylinder Shuttle; Adjustable Stitch; All up to date improvements. All tools and accessories free.

25 Year Guarantee NATIONAL FARM EQUIPMENT CO., Inc. DEPT. 38, 98 CHAMBERS ST., New York Over 100,000 In Use

Save $ on a Pound!

It will pay you to buy yarn direct from the mill. We sell direct

CONCORD YARNS
ALL-WOOL--Worsted

every year to knitters and save them money. Concord yarns are guaranteed dependable, uniform, fine quality and fast color.

4 oz. skein 50c.. 1 lb. $2.00

SEND FOR FREE SAMPLES.

Concord Worsted Mills
West Concord, N. H.

Woman Earns $50 a Week as NURSE

"I am head nurse in a little private home hospital where I am earning $50 a week," writes Miss Lillie D. Foster of Clover, California. She learned Nursing in her spare time at home through the famous Chicago system. Hundreds of other graduates are enjoying good salaries in this congenial, respected vocation.

Anyone can learn at home. We train beginners, practical nurses, mothers and religious workers by our fascinating, home-study method. Established over 22 years. Earn while learning.

FREE Write for illustrated Catalog. We will also send 32 sample Lesson pages and details of our Trial Study Plan with Money-Back Guarantee and Free Outfit.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2812 421 So. Ashland Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

WESTKO STONEWARE HOT WATER BOTTLE

The ideal hot water bottle and bed warmer. Makes comfortable nights in coldest weather. Holds heat 10 hours.

Preferred in hospitals and for aged. Splendid Xmas gift. No home should be without it. Send $2.50 to Western Stoneware Co., Monmouth, Ill., for Westko bottle, delivered parcel post prepaid anywhere in United States. In Canada $3.50.

"Mizpah" Baby Nipples

DO NOT COLLAPSE--PREVENT MUCH COLIC

FREE TO MOTHERS AND DOCTORS!

Valve (A-B) prevents vacuum. Inside ribs prevent collapsing when child bites nipple. Rim is made so nipple cannot be pulled off bottle. Guard your baby's health. Send no money! We send you a sample nipple free, postpaid, on request. Write now, to

THE WALTER F. WARE CO., Dept. A-5
Philadelphia, Pa.

A NEW CHAPTER IN HYGIENE

The importance of Calcium and Mineral Salts in plant and animal life and human nutrition fully explained in our book, "Calcium and Health" of greatest value to all interested in hygienic living. Send 10c in stamps. Emken Publishing Co., 31 E. 27th St., Dept.D, New York City

I am nineteen years old, five feet, ten inches tall, have light blue eyes, dark brown hair and a very brown complexion.

Would like to hear from young people of other states but cannot promise to answer all. I will do the best I can with the little time I have.

Best wishes, NARCUS COPELAND.

TEXAS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND READERS:

I have been a reader and subscriber of this wonderful magazine for a long time. I so much enjoyed Uncle Charlie's talks and know that he was a broad-minded, deep-thinking, clear-visioned man. I only wish there were more of his type. The new Uncle seems equal in value. I get something helpful from every letter.

Mrs. Pearl Vesey, as you have been heading south for some time, why not come on to East Texas? I would like to be your neighbor, you know how to get into the heart o' things.

Here comes a description of this spot. Texas is such a large affair that its formations and constructions are not all exactly alike. East Texas isn't at all like the west or north. It's just rugged, hilly, has little moats through which water flows in winter, in summer they are dry gulleys, but there has been plenteous rainfall the last three years and everything has been full. These hills are covered with trees, hickory, red oak, jack oak, pen oak, pines and in the lower portion there are sweet gum, willows, birch, and dogwood that blossoms early and the woodland is very lovely, dotted with white. Just now the leaves are all gone and the forest is brown hued, but the pines, cedars and holly liven things up and are very pretty. There is a great profusion of vines mingled with the trees in some parts of the forests, briars of every type, grapes, wild honeysuckle, red woodbine and a poison oak, which has beautiful blossoms and foliage, but is very poisonous. There are persimmons that ripen in autumn and are very palatable after frost has come. There is a great deal of Bermuda and Johnston grass in some of the lowlands. It is mowed and made into hay for stock. One gets two cuttings of the Bermuda and four to six of the Johnston grass. The farmers raise cotton, corn and tomatoes principally. Of course they have small orchards as well as raising different vegetables.

Our winter seasons have been very mild the past five years, no snow and sleet and a very small amount of ice. There has been some green grass the entire year. I want to live where there is some real winter, and play in the snow. I like to look at snow scenes. If any of the readers have a surplus of kodak views of real snow, will you send them to me? I will appreciate it very much if you will.

How many are members of the Order of Eastern Star? I am a member of a chapter in a small town nearby and like it very much. Would advise every one who can to join.

We live a long ways from our county seat and therefore I get lonesome as we don't go very much. I occupy my leisure time reading or doing some needlework. Zane Gray and Harold Bell Wright are very interesting writers although there are some of the latter's books that I am not keen on. A great many writers go to the West to get material for thrilling books. It must be the Garden of Inspiration.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 31.)

Wool Embroideries and Other Fancies

Simple Novelties

ABOUT this season of the year many of us are wondering what we can make up comparatively easy which will not look hurried and be both attractive and acceptable when finished. It is consoling to know that there are many useful little articles which are constantly needed, and which will be especially appreciated by the woman who has not much leisure. Among these are little chatelaines which are an assembling of all the necessary articles needed for different purposes. All the various implements grouped for sewing, darning, running lingerie ribbons and manicuring are but a few suggestions of what can be done in this way. A couple of such articles are here illustrated to give one an idea of their simplicity. The one in this column is especially useful as darnless stockings have not yet made their appearance, and instead of having to collect the various implements, running one's finger through the little ring is all that is necessary to have at hand everything which is required for mending.

DARNING SET.

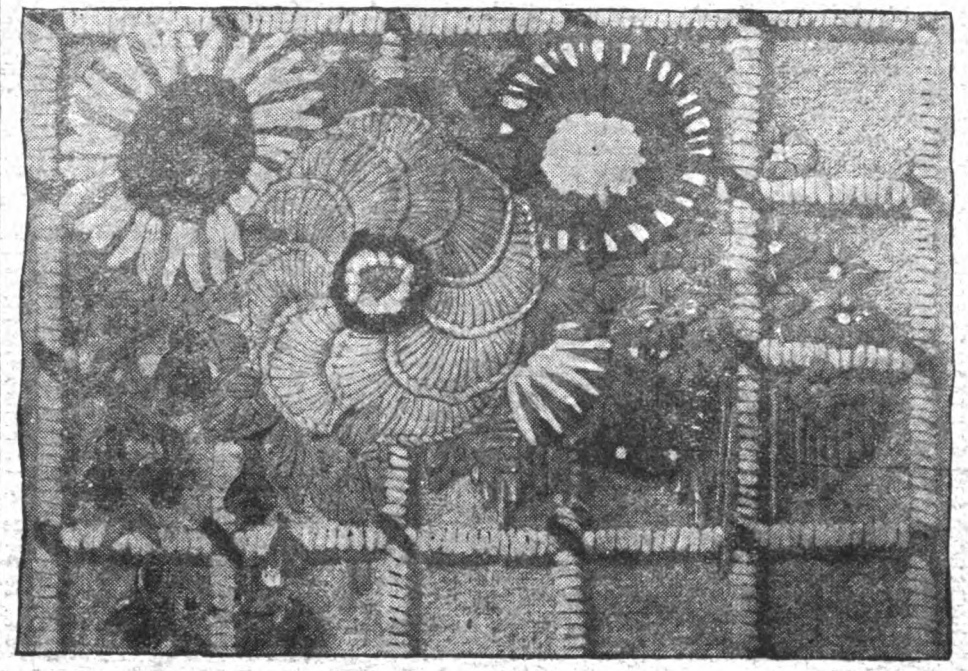
To make this one will require one good-sized ivory ring, two small emeries or a cushion and one emery, a darning egg, small pair of scissors, small needlebook and several balls of darning cotton. These may vary in number, be of either cotton or silk according to which would be most useful to the recipient, and of different colors. Black, white and brown is generally a very good selection.

Thread these by running two ribbons through each as shown and then tying to the ring. The other articles are also attached with ribbons, the whole resulting in a most attractive and useful little affair, which will be a valuable addition to any one's darning bag.

Bluebell Bag

This effective little handbag was fashioned of a piece of tea chest covering, measuring 12 1-2 by 15 inches. Double together and seam up at each end, making a bag 7 1-2 inches in depth. Buttonhole the top edge, which is turned inside and pressed down, with black Scotch or Germantown, and also use this to cover the two handles which should be of strong cord, or light weight rope.

To the front attach three bluebells and leaves made as follows: With blue wool ch 3, join 6 s c in ring, next round 2 s c in each st. Make



BLUEBELL BAG.

4 rounds of 1 st in each st, enlarging only once in each round. This makes a little wool thimble.

In the next 2 rounds enlarge twice, then 3 times in one round; continue in this way making extra stitches enough to make the work flare out in a bell shape. Finish each bell with a chain of two or three inches, and make yellow chains for the center of each, knotting the ends to form little balls.

WOOL TAPESTRY BAG.

WORK IN DETAIL OF WOOL TAPESTRY BAG.

For the leaves use any shade of green wool and begin with a ch 13 sts, 7 d c in 7 sts, 3 tr c in last 3 sts, ch 3, 1 sl st in first st of ch 3 tr c opposite trebles, 7 d c, join to first double.

Wool Tapestry Hand Bag

This handsomely embroidered bag is one of the latest things, much newer than the bead bags, quite as effective and much less expensive and difficult to make.

The colors used, if rich and artistically blended will result in a harmonious whole, which is very pleasing.

For the bag proper one will need two-thirds of a yard of coarse light grey all-wool flannel, satin or sateen of the same shade for lining and the wools for working.

The colors chosen will be given, but any colors which combine nicely may be employed.

The size of the bag should be planned and the embroidery finished, before the bag is made up.

For the barring off into inch squares canary yellow was used, quarter inch over and over stitch being employed; at the corner of each square, brown wool was used, one stitch only being taken as is shown in the detail. Two sides of each square was also outlined with this color, forcing the yellow to stand out in a striking way.

The bottom space which is an inch in width extending across the full size of the bag, is closely cross-stitched in old blue. In doing this to secure an even effect be sure that all the last or top stitches, the second half of the crosses lie in the same direction.

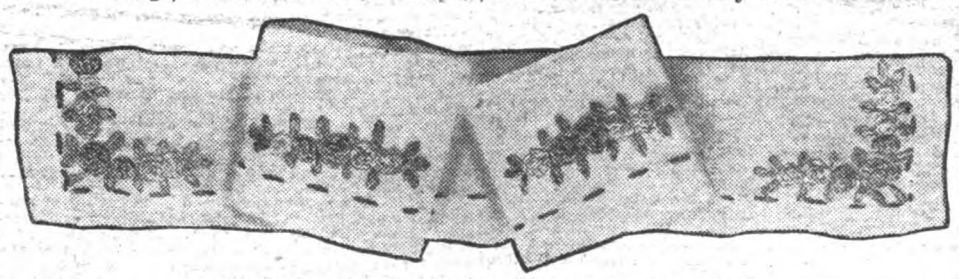
The flat flowers which decorate the top of the bag are shown clearly in the detail. Of these we will first mention the daisy like flower in the upper corner.

The center of this is an inch long oblong of heather brown French knots, surrounded with white loops held in place by lazy-daisy stitches of the same blue used in cross-stitching the bottom. Just below this are green leaves and fuchsia-like blossoms which have two lazy-daisy stitches of garnet wool, framed on either side with old rose stitches.

The second large flower is of bright orange, a buttonhole stitch being used for the petals around a center of white and then brown French knots.

Green wools of different shades are used to fill in the space between this and the astor-like flower above, which is worked with the same colors used in the fuchsias.

White cut wool forms the center. To make this, take stitches very closely together, leaving quarter inch loops which are afterwards cut and evened off. Next follow with old rose, taking stitches from the center outward and closely together. Surround this with several strands of white, buttonholing over them with the garnet. In the second square below a smaller aster is made in the same manner, omitting the white center. To the left of this appears a small corn flower worked with long stitches from a center outward, of two shades of old blue.



The small group of flowers from here over and into the second square to the right are forget-me-nots of different shades of blue with yellow centers. The lines below these are flat long stitches in sage green, which complete the design.

For cords, as wool would not be durable, fine brown silk cord was used, crocheted into a chain.

Rose Wool Collar

This illustration shows another of the curious combination due to the wrinkle of having wool worked into every thing possible.

The decoration of tiny roses and leaves on

A COLLAR SET WHICH IS ATTRACTIVE AND EASILY MADE.

shirt white organdie is certainly fascinating, and these little sets are really prettier than can be imagined unless seen.

They are used with good effect on woolen dresses which are otherwise plain or are equally pretty and appropriate on a gay little sweater.

In shape both the collar and cuffs are perfectly straight and the stitches employed are so simple, it seems hardly believable such wonders can be wrought so easily.

Cut a piece of organdy or even a fine dimity the right length and width by first drawing threads to insure evenness.

Turn inch hems and run with black wool, then put into narrow bands.

For the little roses one may use pink, old rose, lavendar, blue and yellow; for the leaves a soft green which is not too dark. In our illustration the center rose is a trifle larger than the others. In the center of each work three or four French knots, surrounding these with stitches about a quarter of an inch in length.

FANCY LUNCH BASKET.

Build the roses up, by working round and round. Take the first stitch, bringing the point of the needle out near the center of the distance covered. From here take second stitch forward around knots and bring point of needle out about the end of first stitch. A third stitch will probably complete the first round.

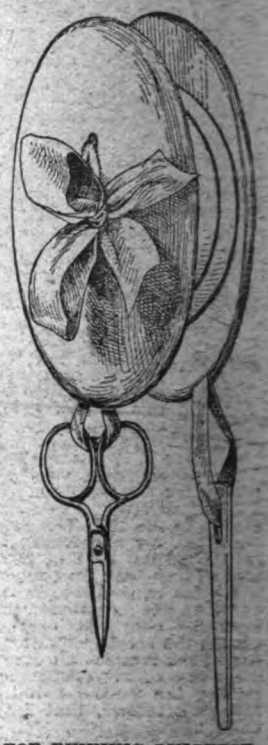

FIG. 2.

Continue until roses measure from a third to a half-inch in diameter. The leaves are simply lazy-daisy stitches.

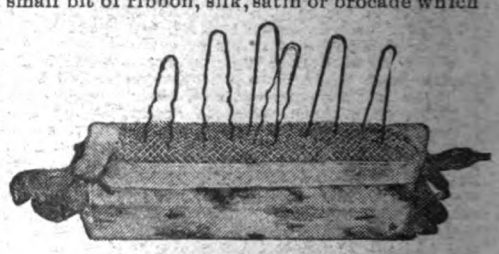
In the set shown, the center rose is old rose, with yellow, light blue and pink on either side. This work can be done so rapidly and is so attractive, once started one does not want to stop until it is completed.

Candle or Lamp Shields

Among the daintiest and loveliest little accessories which girls especially will appreciate and enjoy, are these little translucent shields. These beautiful little articles can be made at home for about a quarter of what they cost in the shops. A wire from a hat frame is the foundation, bent in a circle, oval or oblong as preferred. Over this sketch a piece of silk, remembering that all colors will look much lighter at night than in the daytime, and that pink or yellow will give a cheerful sunny effect, while blue gives always a somber tone. To the silk paste some delicately silhouetted figure, bird or flower. Any number of such designs can be cut from the monthly magazines. Cover all with a bit of white georgette or chiffon and bind the edge with a narrow gilt braid. A wire hairpin bent into shape will answer nicely for a hook to hold the shield in place.

FOR RUNNING LINGERIE.

The dancing nymph on the larger shield illustration was taken from one advertisement and the trees from another. The other shield gives one but little impression of its beauty. But a clear idea of another design is secured by simply rounding the corners in. The center, which shows up as black, is a deep yellow which surrounds a beautifully colored group of fruit. See Fig. 2.



Pine branches and cones, birds on boughs, and butterflies all work in effectively. In planning a shield consider the combination by both sun and artificial light so as to secure a result which will be as attractive by day as well as when lighted.

Hairpin Holder

This handy little holder is unusual and also serviceable. The illustration does not show how pretty it is in color, or give but a hint as to what the foundation really is. However, when completed you will almost hate to part with it and leave your hairpins free to stray all over your bureau. To make a half-dozen of these one would only have to spend a few dimes for a little narrow ribbon and—some small hand brushes; they are the foundation of this handy affair, but one would scarcely guess it when finished.

For other things necessary, one will need some fine white net, fold and cover the top of the brush with two thicknesses of this and then hold in place with a single piece of net which can cover the whole brush and be sewed in place.

Next cover the bottom of the brush with any small bit of ribbon, silk, satin or brocade which is pretty in coloring. At the top of this along each side carry a piece of gilt braid, or narrow ribbon, finishing the ends with full bows.

FOR INVISIBLE HAIRPINS.

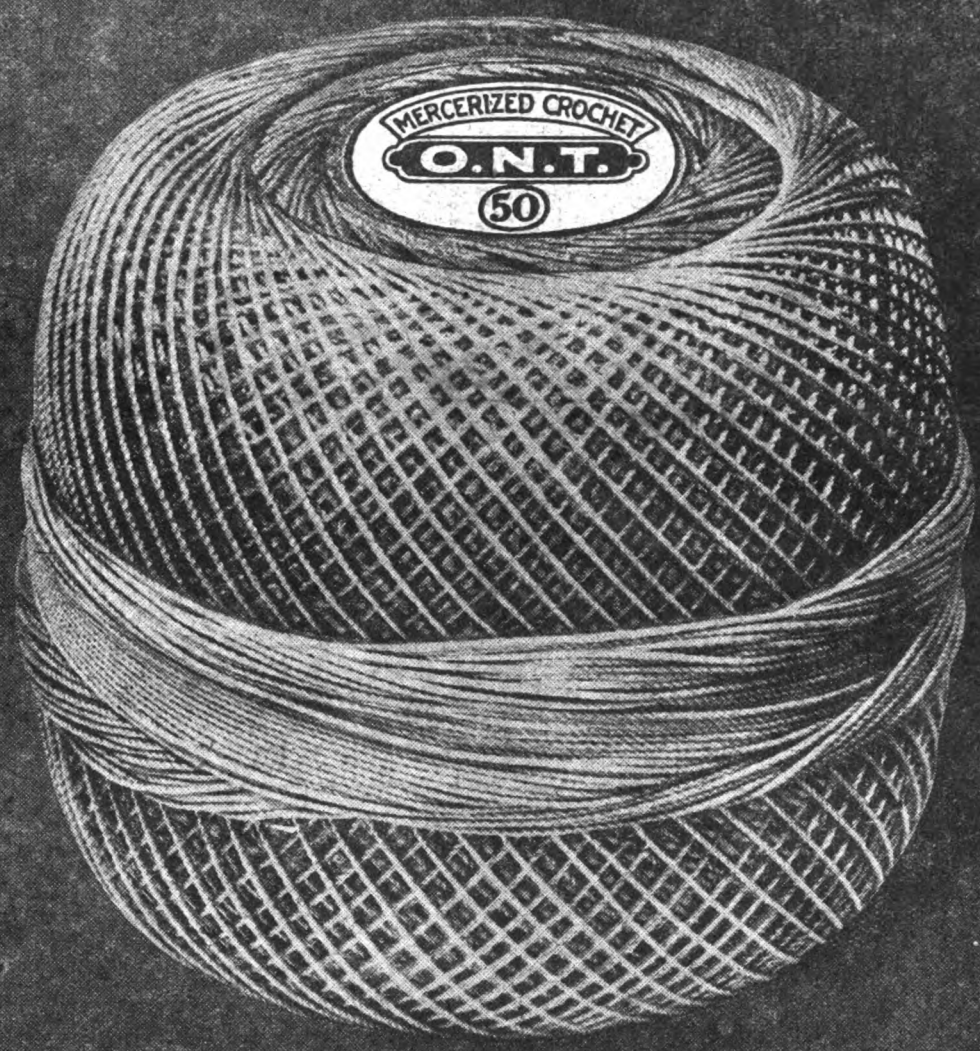
Fancy Lunch Basket

Many a business girl who uses one of the basket envelopes for this purpose would enjoy such a prettily covered one as our illustration shows.

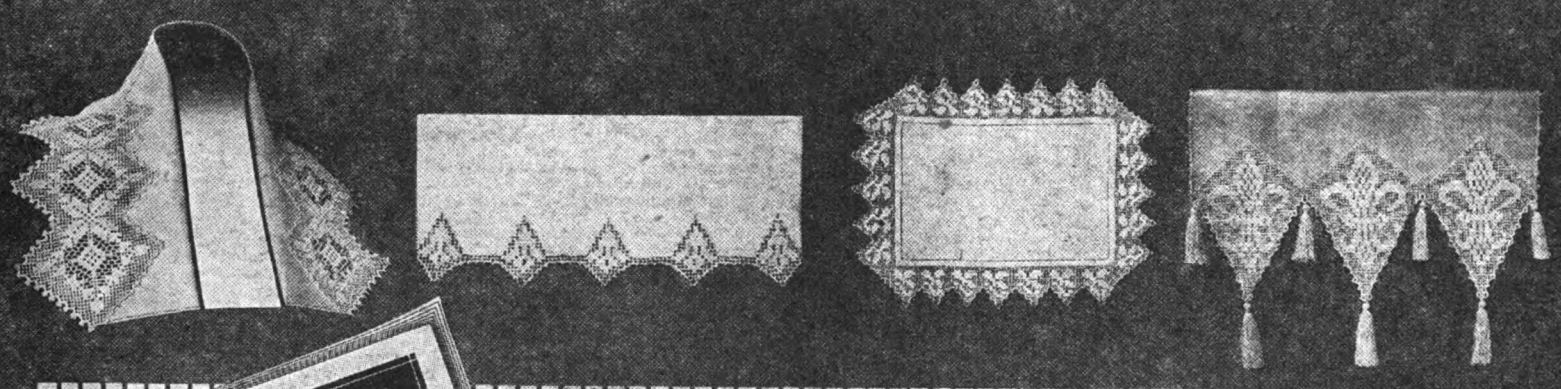
If the woven one cannot be secured the foundation can be made very easily of tea-chest covering. Two pieces 12 by 12 inches will be needed, seam up one so it will be an inch short. This will allow for covering, after which it will still slip into the larger one easily.

Any pretty cretonne is a suitable material, one rather dark in color combination being preferable as it will not soil so quickly.

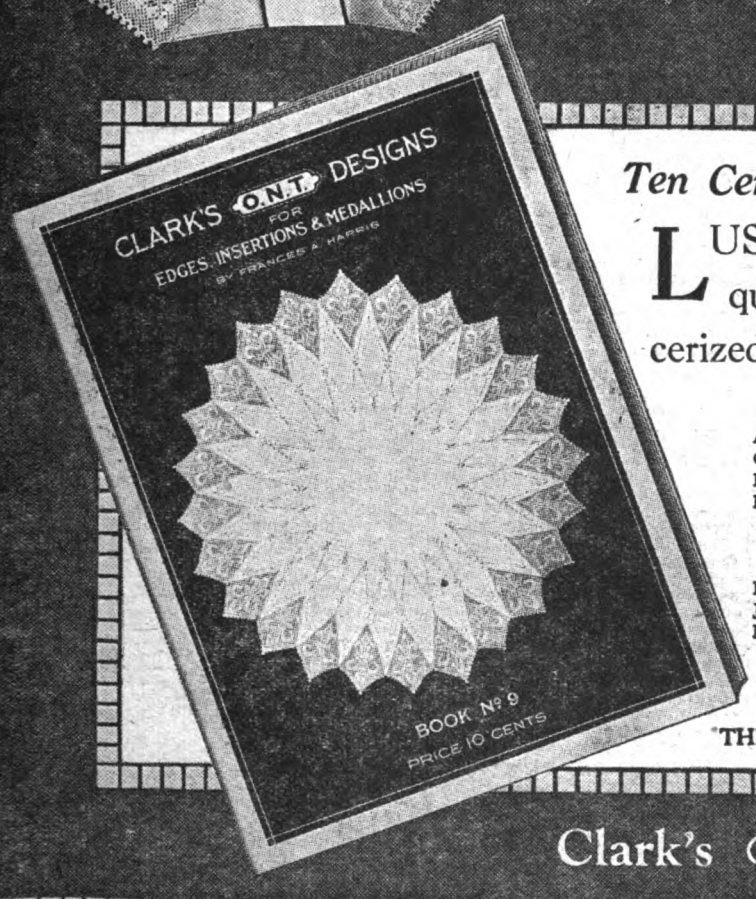


CANDLE OR LAMP SHIELD.

Decorate with two bands and gilt braid and bind the edge of the case with the same material.



A very simple arrangement for keeping the two parts closely together can be made on a cord and tassel and a couple of beads. For this one can use a cord of twisted wool, finished



(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

THIS IS THE BALL

THAT MAKES THESE BEAUTIFUL AND DURABLE ARTICLES

Ten Cents Will Bring You O. N. T. Book No. 9

LUSTRE, smoothness, and reliability are the qualities which have endeared O. N. T. Mercerized Crochet to needleworkers everywhere.

CONTENTS

Arachne Collar and Cuff Set	17	Nokomis Centerpiece	12, 19, 20
Cleopatra Stockings	14	Pillow Cases and Sheets	10, 11
Fern Collar and Cuff Set	6, 13	Rose Centerpiece	12, 14 15
Fleur de Lis Centerpiece	8, 12, 15	Rose Leaf Carriage Veil	8, 15
Pillow Cases and Sheet	8, 11	Doilies	8, 9
Scarf	8, 9	Trinity Collar and Cuff Set	17
Towel	7, 8	Design	16
Himalaya Collar and Cuffs	13, 20	Pillow Cases and Sheet	11
Jewel Luncheon Set	4, 5, 7	Instruction Page	21
Netherland Centerpiece	18, 19	Invisible Joining	5

If your dealer hasn't Clark's O N T. Book No. 9, send ten cents and we will forward promptly this helpful book.

THE SPOOL COTTON CO., Dept. 30, 315 Fourth Ave., New York

Clark's O.N.T. Mercerized Crochet

Fancy Lunch Basket

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 18.)

with a tassel of the same or ready-made silk cord can be substituted.

A yard will be needed, double it and attach tassel to one end, just above this run on a good sized bead, then knot the cord closely to it to keep the bead in place.

Now run the cord into the center of the outer case and out again at a point half way between where it is run in and the upper edge, run through another bead and again knot closely. Finish the end with a bead knotted in place on both sides as shown.

To close wind cord about the case and slip the loose end under bead where cord emerges.

IT'S EASY WITH THE BROIDERFAST

Does beautiful embroidery in one-quarter the usual time. Gives your lingerie, outer garments and household linen the exquisite charm of beautiful needlework. Works a wonderful beaded effect for sport blouses or coat suits. Embroiders chain stitch or French knots.

Send only one dollar for holder, three sizes needle-points and full directions. Money back in three days if not satisfied. Agents make big money. Terms accompany first order.

Dept. 9—Broiderfast Sales Co., Ft. Worth, Tex.

SPECIAL OFFER to introduce our goods

only 75¢

7½" wide

for this Cut Glass Bowl

Beautiful floral pattern. Convenient size for berries, salads, etc. Send 75c. cash, money order or check. We will ship at once, charges paid, east of the Miss. If west, add 15c. postage. Safe delivery guaranteed. Money back if you want it.

Krystal Krafters Department C, Trenton, N. J.

FREE

The first person in every community who purchases a SUNRAY Lamp, will receive a 300 Candle Power Lantern worth $8.50 absolutely FREE. Lights up the yard or barn like a searchlight. Cheap to operate.

No Wicks to Trim
No Smoke
No Smell

300 CANDLE POWER

SUNRAY lamps and lanterns operate 20 hours on a few cents' worth of kerosene or gasoline. Better than gas or electricity. Whitest light ever produced. Nothing to wear—simple—safe. 15 days' trial. Satisfaction guaranteed. Write for special offer on FREE lantern and agency proposition. Act Now.

KNIGHT LIGHT COMPANY Dept. F340 Chicago, Ill.

$1.97

GUARANTEED WATCH

To advertise our business, and introduce our bargain price list of Elgin Watches, we will send this elegant guaranteed watch by Parcel Post C. O. D. $1.97 ONLY, nickel silver plated case, stem wind and stem set, genuine American lever movement, fully guaranteed a reliable timekeeper. Give your full P. O. address, box or St. No., and watch will be sent at once. Pay your Postmaster $1.97 and it is yours. Satisfaction guaranteed. Boston Jewelry Co. 30 W. Adams St. B31, Chicago, Ill.

LATEST RING

FREE this sterling silver platinum finish mounting is the very latest style in rings. Has lace work effect—hexagon top setting with brilliant white stone. Looks like an expensive diamond ring.

SEND NO MONEY—

Just your name and address and we will send you four of our new Art Pictures for you to dispose of on special 25c offer—Send the $1 you collect and as a reward we'll send you this ring—worth many times this small service, but we want to introduce our pictures at once.

C. M. THOMAS, Dept. 5-R, 337 W. Madison St. CHICAGO

5 YEAR GUARANTEE

TYPEWRITERS

5 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

Thoroughly rebuilt. ⅓ manfgrs. price—easy payments—Remington, Smith, Underwood, etc. Send for illustrated circular at once.

INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXCHANGE, 177 N. State Street, Dept. A-17, Chicago, Ill.

3-Piece Toilet Set

THERE does not live a girl whose heart will not fairly jump with joy at the sight of this swell dull black finish Toilet Set.

The Brush is nine inches long, 2½ inches wide, firmly set with white bristles. The Mirror is 8½ inches long, 4½ inches wide on back, with a four-inch clear, finely beveled glass set with rich ebonized frame. The Comb is seven inches long, 1½ inches wide, with fine and coarse teeth. Both Mirror and Brush have a handsome silverine shield on the back for monogram or initials.

This fine Comb, Brush and Mirror Set comes in a specially fitted box and is yours absolutely free if you will accept the following offer.

Given To You! For only five one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send this fine Three-Piece Toilet Set free by Parcel Post prepaid. Reward No. 7635.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

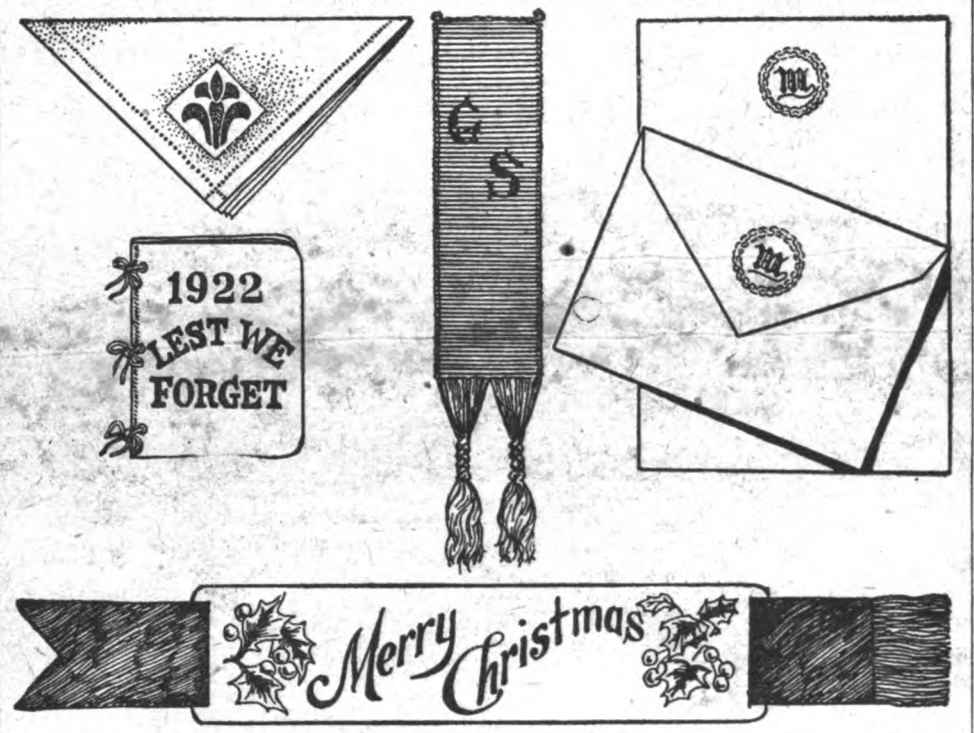
Five Christmas Gifts Your Friends Will Like

By Ella Gordon

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

FANCIFUL trimmings on handkerchiefs have gained in favor and variety with our present day knowledge of making the old and new stitches. This is how the patchwork designs happen to find their way to the handkerchief corners, giving an opportunity to display the finest kinds of stitches. The one shown is an eleven-inch hemstitched square of fine white linen. In one corner is a square patch of pale pink linen, embroidered with bright green before it is blinded onto the handkerchief.



The return to the use of book-marks is something that every reader of books will rejoice in. It's a pretty olden time idea, we know, for in very old volumes are found examples made of ribbon with old-fashioned cross-stitching, and still others bearing silhouettes in likeness, no doubt, of some ancestor. Besides the practical use of a book marker, they seem to acquire a friendly personality as they direct the way to the desired place.

The book-mark illustrated is made of grosgrain ribbon two inches wide. The ends are raveled, then divided in two parts, and held in tassel fashion by a few braidings about half way down. Sew over the edge of the ribbon where the raveling begins, and fasten at each end of the braiding with silk that matches. Initials, a cross-stitch design, a sketch in water-colors, or, if one cares to give a likeness of themselves, a snapshot may be glued onto the ribbon.

The small book on which is printed "Lest We Forget," suggests its purpose. Making a record of things to be done, as well as those accomplished, helps keep an orderly household and is sure to make interesting books of reference.

The one pictured was an ordinary soft-covered book with lined pages. The cover, being a commonplace brown, was removed, and in its place was used heavy art paper used by photographers. The back folds of the pages were neatly trimmed off, the cover cut to fit in front and back sections, and three holes punched through the entire book. Cords were pushed through these openings and tied, as shown in illustration, making a loose-leafed book, so that more pages may be added at any time. The lettering is done with water-colors.

Marked stationery is always an acceptable gift, and affords an opportunity for original ideas. If gold or silver leaf is obtainable, a foundation over which it can be used is made by dissolving equal parts of granulated sugar and gum arabic in water enough to give it about the body of ink. Use with a pen, making the desired design, and allow it to dry. When ready to use the gold leaf, pass the part of the paper bearing the design quickly over a steaming kettle and apply the leaf at once, or dry bronze may be successfully used in its place.

Receiving a greeting at Christmas time from friends both old and new always brings a sense of grateful pleasure unlike that on any other occasion. And the same may be said of the sender, for who does not delight in knowing that in just that simple message, "Merry Christmas," they are giving pleasure that is more than passing. Expensive gifts are not necessary, and except to the very few are not in good taste. The small card, made at home, carries the glad tidings, and with it no obligation.

It is very simply made. Cut a strip of decorative or plain art cardboard as above illustrated. About half an inch from each end, with the point of a sharp knife, cut a straight slit as long as the ribbon is wide, then pass the ribbon under the card and up through the slits. Fringe one end and notch the other. For lettering, use gold bronze, as described for decorating stationery, and water-colors for the holly.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

OLIVIA, MINNESOTA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

We have just finished reading your reply to Lorena Thrush's letter. Evidently you know as much about the Girl Scouts as you do about a pump jack. We are both Girl Scouts. We are taught how to swim, it is true, also other kinds of signaling and scouting and athletics. But above all we are taught how to bake, cook, sew and take care of children.

A pump jack is a modern invention consisting of two cog wheels and a belt wheel. This is fastened to the suction rod in the pump. The belt wheel is connected to a gasolene engine by means of a strong leather belt. In this way water is pumped by the engine.

One of us lives on a large grain and dairy farm two miles north of town. The other lives in town. By the way, Olivia is the best town in the best state in the Union, and is not situated in the woods at all, but on the prairie.

Your nieces,
LUELLA ERICKSON,
ALLEYENE DIRKS,

Luella-Alleyene, I can't tell you how grateful I am to have your splendid description of a pump jack. Not a single cousin wrote in to help me, and I was afraid I would never find out what this strange water machine was and could never again feel on real friendly visiting terms with a pump. Now my mind is at rest and it is you to whom I owe this relief. In my joy I read to Billy what you had written. "Why, Uncle Lisha," he exclaimed, after listening attentively, "it must be only another name for a Ford!"

And, Alleyene-Luella, you have told me all about the Girl Scouts as well. It is true I did know a little bit more about the Scouts than about the pump jack, for I have seen many a Girl Scout (but unfortunately never one that was baking bread), while a pump jack I had never seen and could not have recognized if I had. I'm grateful for this news, too, and to know that you are learning how to "bake, cook, sew, and take care of children." You'll find these things mighty good to know, Luella-Alleyene, and of use in the days when you have forgotten how to signal and are too busy to do much swimming or scouting. Although you didn't tell us just how much housekeeping you had learned already, you must be talented workers to keep up the reputation of the "best town in the best state in the Union." But I'm afraid the other cousins will think you are more proud than polite, when you scout around and annex all these high honors for Olivia, the Prairie Rose of Minnesota.

Strong Building, Main Street,
BURLINGTON, VERMONT.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I have been so interested in your department, and the letters which I have read made me want to know you all the better; so I am writing with the hope that you will all take pity on a lonesome cousin and write me some nice long letters. I am particularly interested in the West—a place where I have always wanted to be, but haven't gone to yet.

I have noticed, since receiving COMFORT, that you have not published any letters from the state of Vermont. Now, my dear Uncle Lisha, I trust that you haven't any grudge against Vermont and its people. I assure you we are just like anybody else and, of course, I think my state is the best place in the world. However, I am not narrow-minded enough to believe that you will think the same. I live in one of the prettiest cities in the state, on beautiful Lake Champlain. People come from all over the world to view the sunsets over the lake, and one gentleman who was traveling through here remarked that he had spent most of his life in Switzerland—where the scenery and sunsets are supposed to be the most beautiful in the world—but he had never witnessed such gorgeous ones as he saw looking across the lake above the mountains in New York state. Then, too, my city boasts of having the only college in the state, and the Medical College ranks as one of the highest in the country—so you see I am quite proud of my city and state.

Nevertheless, I have just devoured the descriptions in the letters which some of you cousins have written from the West—about your homes and what you enjoy—and I do want you to write to me. I'll promise to write you a ten-page letter on my typewriter, for you see I'm a stenographer and can make my fingers fly without much effort. Perhaps you would like to hear a little more about myself, as I am a newcomer to COMFORT. First, as the minister says (you know that they always say first, second and third!), well, first, I suppose I should tell you my age: I am not so old that I blush and look guilty when I tell my age! I opened my eyes to this world just twenty years ago last March, and as I liked the looks of things I decided to stay. Everyone, including my fond parents, declared I was the homeliest baby they ever saw, but doubtless you remember the old adage: "Homely in the cradle, pretty at the table"—so I might say that I have improved since then and, although not pretty, I don't think I'm bad to look upon. I dare say I should have whispered the last sentence, for if Billy the Goat should see it, he would probably say, "The vain creature; I'll fix her!" and proceed to chew my letter into bits. But if he does please, please save just the address, Uncle Lisha, so that the cousins can write to me.

Yours hopefully and sincerely,
MARJORIE G. STOCKWELL.

You'll have to live in a Strong Building, Marjorie, if you expect it to bear the weight of all the letters you will soon be receiving from cousins delighted to loosen up your loneliness and make your "fingers fly" at your typewriter. Billy the Goat, who likes to play with mathematics, has computed that if you carry out your plan of answering all cousins with a ten-page typewritten reply, your pages of note paper, if placed end to end, would reach from Burlington, Vermont, to Nashville, Tennessee, with thirty-eight feet, three pages left over. Marjorie, I'm mighty glad that when you opened your eyes and looked about, you decided to stay a while. Other people seem to reach the same conclusion—which I think shows that this old world is not so bad as Boss Lenine and Comrade Trotzky claim it to be in their hungriest moments and rashest statements. Perhaps the first thing your very young eyes saw was one of those beautiful Lake Champlain sunsets, and this made you all the more determined to stick around—even if your Pa and Ma were so discouraged they thought some mistake had been made and the Stork ExpressCompany had delivered the wrong package. I don't doubt that you have improved a bit since you squinted admiringly at that first sunset. Living amid beauty ought to make people beautiful. Sometimes it does, but mostly it doesn't, I'm sorry to have to admit. So I'm all the gladder, Marjorie, that you have proved that lovely northern Vermont is full of better beauty-dope than anything on the shelves of the Burlington Drug Company.

You say you "have just devoured" such descriptions as the cousins have sent in of their Western homes. I'll bet you didn't realize, Marjorie, that when you wrote this you were saving your letter from Billy. He was visibly pleased when he read that sentence, and said: "Uncle Lisha, this girl has just my ideas regarding diet. Perhaps her little touch of vanity is justified, for I am certain the consumption of a generous quantity of raw paper is an aid to good looks, Uncle. I

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 26.)

Women Made Young

Bright eyes, a clear skin and a body full of youth and health may be yours if you will keep your system in order by taking

GOLD MEDAL HAARLEM OIL CAPSULES

The world's standard remedy for kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles, the enemies of life and looks. In use since 1696. All druggists, three sizes.

Look for the name Gold Medal on every box and accept no imitation

VIOLIN GIVEN

This special sweet toned Violin given for selling two lots of 20 pictures at 10 cents each. Order 20 pictures, when sold send the $2.00 and choose Violin or other prize according to big list sent with pictures. MAY ART CO., DEPT. 48, CHICAGO, ILL.

Military finish air rifle. Sell 8 Boxes Mentho-Nova at 25c. U. S. Supply Co. Box 29, Greenville, Pa. FREE

MONEY $ for live men. Key for stamp. E. KERSTE, Box 288, Ottawa, Illinois

CARDS, Dice, Magic Goods, Novelties, Catalog Free. D. M. SMYTHE Co., Newark, Mo.

Premo Junior Camera

Reward No. 7417

Takes A Picture 2¼ x 3¼ Inches In Size

Film Pack (12 Exposures) and Instruction Book

All Given For A Club Of Seven!

OF course you have heard of the "Premo"—made by the Eastman Kodak Co.— so we feel it hardly necessary to tell you that it is a strictly high grade camera—one that you can depend upon to produce the most pleasing and satisfactory results. The Premo takes a picture 2¼x3¾ inches, is handsomely leather covered, fitted with a reliable quick action lens, automatic shutter adapted for either snap shots or time exposures and has two brilliant view finders so that pictures may be taken either the long way or short way of the camera. The Premo also uses a film pack containing twelve films which can be put in the camera and taken out again in broad daylight, thus doing away with the necessity of going to a dark room every time you want to load it. We know that there must be thousands of COMFORT readers who have been waiting for just this opportunity to secure a real good camera without paying a big price for it. And remember, we send you not only the camera itself but also include one film pack of twelve films (enough for twelve pictures) and an instruction book, all packed together in a strong, compact box and sent to you free by parcel post, prepaid, on the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For a club of only seven one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you free by parcel post prepaid this fine Premo Junior Camera with one Film Pack containing twelve films and complete Instruction Book. Reward No. 7417.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Gold Bracelet

Adjustable—Guaranteed For Ten Years

THIS style of Bracelet has always been a great favorite because it is adjustable. It can be made to fit the arm of either woman or growing child. It is made of rolled gold, absolutely guaranteed for ten years, is very light and dainty, measuring only 3-16 of an inch in width. It positively will not tarnish or change color as do the cheap Bracelets, but, being genuine rolled gold, it will always retain its bright, handsome appearance.

By purchasing these Bracelets in large quantities, direct from the factory, we are enabled to offer it for a ridiculously small club of subscriptions. Just read our free offer.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this guaranteed, rolled gold Bracelet, free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9852.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Missing Relatives and Friends

For the convenience of its subscribers, COMFORT reopens the "Missing Relatives' and Friends' column.

To the readers of COMFORT is extended the privilege of inserting three-line notices in this column if they will secure only one new yearly subscriber to COMFORT at 50c. If you wish to find a missing relative or friend you can insert a three-line notice containing not over 22 words in this column by securing only one new subscription at 50c. If a longer notice is required send one 50c subscription for each additional seven words.

Wanted: To hear from J. Harey Cantrell; last heard of him at Cordele, R. R. 1, Oklahoma, in 1920. Mrs. Mary S. Cantrell, Pickens, R. R. 3, S. C.

Mrs. C. W. Duncan would like to know the whereabouts of any of U. W. and Nanie Smith's children, last heard of when father and mother died at Summerville, Ark. Mrs. C. W. Duncan, Ensley, R. R. 1, Box 44, Ala.

Wanted: To hear from any one by the name of Applebee. Mrs. Jane Mills (Applebee), Celina, R. R. 1, Texas.

Will someone write me about Miss Mary Russell, leaving Columbia, S. C., for Wilmington, N. C., over 30 years ago? She has relatives, the Georges, at Lexington, S. C. Mrs. S. E. Shealy, Lexington, R. R. 3, S. C.

About the year 1880, Mrs. Allen and four children, John, George, Zane and Henry, left Tennessee for Texas. Any of them, or anyone knowing them, please write G. W. Carden, Hixson, Tennessee.

Will anyone knowing the whereabouts of A. R. Smitt, please write his sister. Last heard of at La Grange, Georgia. Mrs. Estell Hearington, Samson, R. R. 3, Ala.

Our neigbor's Boy

by Enid S. Smith

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"WILT thee have an eye to my boy whilst thee and thy lad tarry here in the Temple?" asked a young woman of calm and gentle mien. "I and his father must needs make ready for the journey—take down the tent and load it on the big camel and make ready the provision basket."

"Yea, we will look to the boy," replied Susanna, the older woman. "My Andrew here must needs see The Great Trumpet, Paradise Bridge, and the Gates of Righteousness here in the Temple before we betake ourselves to our journey."

Without further word the younger woman left the Temple. Susanna led little Andrew past long rows of gilded altars where holy men sat and instructed their pupils, past the high priest with his breastplate of precious stones, then over to where hung the curtains from Babylon interwoven with gold roses, then across to the great copper gates which were so heavy that it was hard work for thirty men to swing them back and forth on their hinges. But ever and anon she turned to look at her neighbor's boy who seemed content to examine the grandeur of the Great Temple alone and in silence.

"Oh, mother," said Andrew, "wilt take me to see the Great Trumpet with which Moses called together the Children of Israel?"

"Yea, my son, but we must needs go to this old arch which has been here ever since the time when the first Temple was erected on this spot. Now near the arch, propped against the wall, thou mayest see the old copper trumpet. Behold its great length and weight. To raise it would be like lifting a pillar to the mouth and playing upon it."

When the little boy saw the huge trumpet he stopped—astonished. "How dented and battered it is, mother, yea and full of dust and spiders' webs, and look how it is covered with the tracing of ancient letters!"

"Well said, my son. Probably a thousand years have gone by since any one has tried to coax a tone out of it. Since Moses called together the scattered tribes none has ever made it speak forth. It is called, my son, the Voice of the Prince of this World, and whoever can again make it speak shall gather all the peoples of earth under his dominion. So say the Rabbis."

Susanna smiled to herself as she thought of this prediction simply as an old myth. So engrossed in her thought was she that she failed to notice a holy man seat himself with his group of pupils just beneath the Trumpet. A dispute soon arose concerning a youthful stranger who had sought wisdom at the feet of the holy man. "Thou art a gentile!" accused the holy man, "and have no right to learn of the doctrine of the only true God. Shall I cast that which is holy to the dogs?"

Susanna awoke from her meditations. The boy, Andrew, was gazing into the great Trumpet and her neighbor's boy was standing a short distance away listening to the conversation.

"I declare to you," continued the holy man, "that you gentile have no right to enter this part of the great Temple. Leave it immediately or my faithful pupils will throw themselves upon you and hurl you from the Temple."

"But," pleaded the youthful stranger, "my soul is faint with longing to know of the great true God, and for that purpose have I wandered over deserts and across seas to seek Him in His Temple."

The holy man's pupils sprang to their feet as their teacher cried: "Begone, thou dog, or we fall upon you! It is as impossible that you should remain here and learn of the true God as it would be for one to arise and blow in the huge copper trumpet, which we call the Voice of the Prince of this World."

As the holy man spoke the neighbor's boy stepped to the trumpet and laid his hand upon it. "This is a great injustice," he said to himself. "Oh, if I could only blow in the trumpet and help the poor boy whose life is in danger! I would, at least, make one soul happy upon this my ninth birthday."

He grasped the trumpet with his tiny hands. He felt it raised to his lips, and when he breathed into it a great tone came forth and resounded through the Great Temple.

All eyes were turned toward the lad, then toward the gentile youth.

"Come, learn of the true God," said the holy man. "He has performed a miracle to show me you are permitted here to remain."

But the lad who but a moment before had held the trumpet now had disappeared toward Righteousness Gate.

"I must have an eye to him," said Susanna, taking Andrew by the hand. "We will now go and see the pillars which our father Abraham brought with him to Palestine from far away Chaldea. We will——"

But she was interrupted by the holy man addressing her: "Woman, who was that lad who awakened the Voice of the Prince of this World?"

"I know not his name," she replied, "he is our neighbor's boy, a lad of Nazareth." With these words she passed the group of pupils on her way to Righteousness Gate.

"Mother," said Andrew, "how strong must be the lad to have lifted that huge trumpet! Perhaps the angels came to help him because he was helping another. Then again, mother, he seems different from the other boys of our village,—perhaps he is part angel himself."

"What strange thoughts are in thy head, my son. He is but our neighbor's boy, a lad that carries the water jugs from the well for his mother, and works with his father at the bench. The trumpet may not be as heavy as it appears, neither may it be such a difficult thing to make it speak; but here is Righteousness Gate. It is said that the one who can squeeze between these pillars is righteous before God and has never committed a sin."

"And here is our neighbor's boy, here before us staring at the pillar with great open eyes."

"Certainly he does not think of trying to squeeze himself in between them!" laughed Susanna. "Behold, my son, how the floor about here is worn away by the many who have attempted to force their way through the narrow space. But believe me, none have ever succeeded."

"Ah, mother, who are these in the portico here? Judges helping people settle their disputes?"

"Aye, my son, I take it to be such. There is a rich man in his trailing purple robe. He is evidently accusing the poor widow in their midst. Listen! Ah, I now understand. The rich man claims that she has not paid him the hundred shekels she owes him. She declares she has paid him, but that he insists upon collecting the debt twice. She now has no money, and must sell her children into slavery in order to pay her debt."

"Behold, mother, the rich man is now taking oath. Dost hear? 'I swear that, as certain as that no one shall ever pass through Righteousness Gate, does this widow owe me the hundred shekels.'"

The neighbor's boy, who had been sitting at the base of the pillars now arose. "The rich man has sworn falsely," he said to himself. "If I could but help another soul on this my ninth birthday! How good it would now be to pass through Righteousness Gate and free this widow and her children!"

The lad sprang upon the platform where the two pillars towered into the heights, and looked through the crack. He then put his shoulder to the groove to make a way. All eyes were upon the boy—then upon the old pillars, as they seemed to glide apart, to make a space wide enough for the boy's slender body to pass between them. There was great confusion, wonder and excitement as the lad came through on the other side. The judge called out that all should lay hold on the rich man for swearing falsely in the Temple, and that the widow should be released. When this was done he asked for the lad who had passed through Righteousness Gate. But no one but Susanna had noticed in what direction he had disappeared.

"Come, my Andrew," she said, "we must needs see Paradise Bridge, and then be on our way to Nazareth. The sun now——"

"Woman," interrupted the judge, as she passed the portico, "didst notice that lad who passed through yonder pillars? Canst tell of his whereabouts?"

"Aye, my lord, he is but our neighbor's boy, a lad who dwells in the village of Nazareth."

"But, mother," said Andrew as they walked on, "he is truly a most wonderful boy, for who else could have passed through those pillars?"

"But, my son, perhaps there was a wider space there than there seemed to be, besides the lad is very slender. I doubt not but thou, when thou wast his age could have done likewise."

"I am quite certain I could not, my mother, for my own eyes saw there was no space even for a temple dove to squeeze through, besides I cannot make my clay birds fly away as does his?"

"Clay birds fly away? What sayest thou?"

"Aye, mother, brother James is wont to tell how he and our neighbor's boy make clay birds on the streets at Nazareth. Thou knowest how the sun shines on the little water-puddles in the uneven cracks in the stones that cover the street. Our neighbor's boy puts down his hands, captures the sunbeams like paint in a paint pot, then spreads it over his clay birds, bedecking them from head to foot with a diamond-like luster. James was angry when he could not make his birds likewise beautiful, and crushed under foot several of our neighbor's birds; whereupon this wonderful lad clapped his hands to awaken his birds and cried, 'Fly, fly!' and behold the remaining moved their tiny wings, fluttered anxiously to the eaves of the nearby house. Aye, he can paint with sunbeams and blow the breath of life into dead clay."

"Thou has much imagination, my son, but here is Paradise Bridge. Thou seest our neighbor's boy is here ahead of us, examining the sharp steel sword which is drawn across the chasm. This is a great sight, my son. The deep, wide chasm is here as it has been from time immemorial. King Solomon did not wish to fill it in when he built the Temple. No bridge has ever been laid over it, nothing but this sword sharpened, with the blade up. With the changes of the ages this sword has nearly rusted away. It trembles and rocks when anyone walks in the temple court, for it is no longer securely fastened at the ends."

"But why, mother, is it called Paradise Bridge?"

"Because, if anyone can cross the chasm on this trembling bridge, which surface is thinner than a sunbeam, then he can be certain of getting to Paradise. Behold, also, my son, in the court of the deep chasm, the altar surrounded by the white-robed priests. They are tending the altar fires, and waiting to receive sacrifices."

"Here comes an old shepherd with a lamb, mother. How small and thin is the lamb!"

"Listen, my son, we shall see for what reason he brings the lamb. I now understand all but a few of his words. He says it is the ninth year since at this time he has made such an offering. He regrets the offering is small—but he has sprung all his traps, for this is the time of peace and good-will to all upon the earth, even to animals, he explains, so he could not catch anything for a sacrifice, and he only had this lamb that belonged to him, and will not the priest offer it in honor of the night, nine years ago, when the angels appeared to the shepherds on the hills of Bethlehem?"

"But, mother, the priests will not offer so poor a gift."

"Aye, they say it is forbidden by law to offer such,—that it is as impossible that such an offering be received by God as it would be to cross Paradise Bridge."

As these words were spoken the neighbor's boy walked over to the trembling bridge, and put his foot upon it. Susanna called to him, but he did not seem to hear her. He was thinking: "If on this my birthday I could but make another happy!" He noticed the blade seemed to tremble and that beneath his feet it felt broad and safe. When he took the next step upon it, the air about him seemed to be a support which bore him up as though he were a bird and had wings. One of the white-robed priests turned and gave a cry as he saw the lad walking across the sword.

"Give us your lamb," cried the priests. "God has shown us He will receive your offering: for one has walked across the chasm!"

"Make haste! make haste!" cried a chorus of voices.

Susanna turned and heard the sound of the copper gates as the thirty temple servants put their shoulders against them to put them into motion.

"They are closing the gates," she said. "We must hasten. Our neighbor's boy has already passed through them and has evidently started back to camp."

"But, mother, how wonderful he could walk over that sharpened sword without falling!"

"Aye, my son, it doth now so seem. It seems as though I recollect hearing some story about his being the Star-Child, whose light was seen in the sky and was followed by Three Wise Men. There was also a story about shepherds seeing a host of angels upon the night he was born, singing concerning the Savior who had come to redeem the world; but he is our neighbor's boy. Is it possible these things be spoken of him!"

Dry Cleaning Danger!

Cleaning without water does not necessarily mean cleaning without liquids. There are two kinds of dry-cleaning, one by the use of gasolene, benzine, or naphtha which dissolves out the grease and thus frees the dirt; the other by the use of powders or meals which absorb it. As cleaning with these liquids is dangerous because they explode and take fire so easily, it must not be intrusted to a careless person. Use out-of-doors and in the shade, and away from flame or fire. Store in an out-house.

In cleaning with gasolene, put the whole garment in and soak one hour. Rub on a board, or use a washer which does excellent work. It is well to mark spots with a white thread so that they can have special rubbing by hand. Rinse in clear gasolene until the gasolene comes clear. The gasolene may be put through a heavy cloth and used again.

Children are likely to get pitchy substances on their clothes, but this can be entirely removed by mixing lard and corn-meal together and working it in with a vegetable brush. Scrape it off with a knife and apply more until the pitchy substance disappears; then remove the grease gasolene. When children get paint on their clothes, if turpentine can be immediately applied, it will disappear.

Light felt hats are cleaned by covering with French chalk, magnesia, or even common flour. Let it remain on over night, then thoroughly brush out.

Coat collars should be sponged with a little weak ammonia water frequently if the coat is commonly worn. This prevents a greasy or shiny condition.

Frequent washing will, beyond doubt, do more to prolong the life and fresh appearance of a garment than anything else. Dust deadens the luster and contains living organisms that feed on the fabrics.

Free Lessons to Music Lovers

For a limited time, the "Largest School of Music in the World," which has already enrolled over 250,000 students, makes this unprecedented offer. An opportunity is open for you to receive lessons FREE on any instrument you choose at practically no cost. You can take either a beginner's course or a course for advanced pupils. The only expense will be a sum about equal to the cost of sheet music, postage, etc.

This wonderful offer is made to you for a short time because we want you to profit by our new method of teaching. We want your friends to see how amazingly easy it is for you to learn at home with our simple ABC method. Your ability to play any piece of music you desire, after taking our lessons, will justify our remarkable offer to you.

New Method Makes Music Amazingly Easy

You don't have to know a thing about music. Our lessons are written in such a simple style that even children of seven years have become excellent musicians through them. Each step is explained so plainly that it is impossible to go wrong.

Our method does not depend upon "tricks." You simply learn to play by note—quickly and easily. You are soon able to play any kind of music. After completing the lessons, you can play any popular piece, or the most difficult classical composition.

Here is the secret of our success. With our hundreds of thousands of pupils, we can afford to employ the world's best music masters to write our lessons. These lessons have been perfected as a result of our vast experience in teaching this host of successful pupils. You are now offered lessons written by our greatest musicians and brought to a point of excellence never before attained.

For Beginners or Advanced Pupils
Piano	Mandolin
Organ	Drums and Traps
Violin	Harmony and Composition
Banjo	Sight Singing
Clarinet	Ukulele
Flute	Piccolo
Harp	Trombone
Cornet	Saxophone
Guitar	Voice and Speech Culture
Cello	Automatic Finger Control

An Easy Way To Popularity and Easy Money

How many an evening's pleasure has been spoiled for you by the admission, "I'm sorry! But I neither play nor sing."

Music is becoming more and more an essential part of every social entertainment. If you cannot play, you are an outsider in most of the fun. But if you are able either to sing or play, you are always more than welcome.

Besides, paid entertainers are in constant demand. You can now learn to play any instrument and every kind of music—easily. You will be able to give recitals, play in symphonies or dance orchestras, or in a jazz band. Ability to play or sing affords the easiest way to earn extra money.

Send For Free Book Today

Never again will you have such an opportunity to satisfy your love for music and become an expert performer. The U. S. School of Music now offers to give you lessons at practically no cost—merely charging an amount about equal to the cost of sheet music, postage, etc. Don't let this wonderful short-time offer pass by you.

Our Free Book, "Music Lessons in Your Own Home" tells all about the offer and explains the various courses you can take. Send today for this free book and choose what course you want before the time limit of this offer expires. Instruments supplied when needed, cash or credit. Mail coupon NOW.

U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC
412 Brunswick Bldg., New York

MR. DAVID F. KEMP,
U. S. School of Music, 412 Brunswick Bldg., New York City.
Please send me your free book, "Music Lessons in Your Own Home," and particulars of your Special Offer. I am interested in the following course

.....
(Name of Instrument or Course)

Name .....
(Please Write Plainly)

Address .....

City..... State.....

BE AN ARTIST

DRAWN BY 14-YEAR-OLD-BOY

The above cartoon was drawn by Master Bob Brennan of the Washington School of Art. Bob writes that he is selling his work and that he is cartoonist on a small paper in Evansville, Ind. He is but one of our many students and graduates who are making money as cartoonists, illustrators and designers.

Learn By Mail at Home!

By our new method of teaching drawing by mail you can learn in your own home, in a short time. Get into this fascinating work yourself and earn $50 to $100 or more per week! The study is fascinating. Only a few minutes a day! Have your own studio or secure high-salaried position. Or work in spare time. Many students earn while they are learning.

FREE! BOOK AND ARTISTS' OUTFIT! WRITE TODAY

A complete outfit free to all students. Includes everything required to produce hundreds of dollars' worth of pictures. Write today. Special terms to a limited number of new students. Mail postal or letter for beautiful Booklet, "How to Become an Artist," filled with drawings and full particulars of our extraordinary offer. Do it now—Before you forget.

WASHINGTON SCHOOL OF ART, Inc.
Room 1734, Marden Bldg., Washinton, D. C.

5 Magazines — Good — $1

Woman's World, (Monthly)
Good Stories, (Monthly)
American Woman, (Monthly)
Mother's Magazine, (Monthly)
The Farm Journal, (Monthly)
} Our Price $1.00 ALL FIVE FOR 1 YEAR

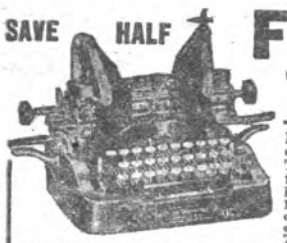
ORDER BY CLUB NUMBER 112

A Dollar Bill will do—We take the risk

Send all orders to

Whitlock & Summerhays
25 North Dearborn Street, CHICAGO

AGENTS: $8 a Day



Selling concentrated, non-alcoholic food flavors. Always fresh. Put up in collapsible tubes. Ten times the strength of bottled flavors. Guaranteed under U. S. pure food laws. All flavors. Sells in every home. Used every day. Not sold in stores. Big demand. Big repeater. 100% profit.

MEN OR WOMEN

can make big money. Haut sold over $300 in one month. You will find this a big, easy seller and a sure repeater. Must satisfy customers or money back. Write for territory and sample outfit. Get a big line of customers. Get repeat orders every month and have a steady income. Write quick.

AMERICAN PRODUCTS CO., 5389 American Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio

SAVE HALF FREE TRIAL

No money down. No obligation to buy. Try an Oliver 5 days free in your own home at our risk. Return it at our expense or keep it and pay at the easy rate of $4 a month. The identical Oliver formerly priced at $100. New selling plan saves you $50.50.

Learn to Typewrite at Home
Big demand everywhere for typists. Take a regular position or do typing at home for pay. Easy to learn on the Oliver. Teach yourself at home in a short time. Instruction book of Famous Van Sant System of Touch Typewriting free to purchasers who request it when ordering. Write for particulars.

Write for descriptive catalog and full particulars of free trial offer and easy payment plan. A post-card will do. Write today.

The OLIVER Typewriter Company 1609 Oliver Typewriter Building, Chicago, Ill.

Free to Writers!

A WONDERFUL BOOK—read about it! Tells how easily Stories and Plays are conceived, written, perfected, sold. How many who don't DREAM they can write, suddenly find it out. How the Scenario Kings and the Story Queens live and work. How bright men and women, without any special experience, learn to their own amazement that their simplest Ideas may furnish brilliant plots for Plays and Stories. How one's own Imagination may provide an endless gold-mine of Ideas that bring Happy Success and Handsome Cash Royalties. How new writers get their names into print. How to tell if you ARE a writer. How to develop your "story fancy," weave clever word-pictures and unique, thrilling, realistic plots. How your friends may be your worst judges. How to avoid discouragement and the pitfalls of Failure. How to win! This surprising book is absolutely free. No charge. No obligation. Your copy is waiting for you. Write for it now. Just address AUTHORS' PRESS, Dept. 60, AUBURN, NEW YORK

Stem Wind & Set

10 YEAR GUARANTEE
Watch, Ring & Chain Given—We positively give a genuine American Stem Wind & Set Watch, beautifully designed case, warranted time-keeper. 10-year guarantee; Sparkling Set or Plain Ring all for selling 25 large Beautifully Colored Art and Religious Pictures at 10c each. When sold send us $2.50 & we'll send Watch and Ring. HOME ART CO., 426-28 West 59th Street, Dept. 307, Chicago

WRIST WATCH GIVEN
Dandy Wrist Watch guaranteed 5 years given for selling two lots of 20 pictures at 10 cts. each. Order 20, when sold send the $2.00 and choose wrist watch or other valuable prize according to big list sent with pictures. RAY ART CO. Dept. 18, Chicago

FREE

Not a toy but a genuine Violin, perfect tone, handsome appearance. Bow included. Sell 40 packets Garden Spot Seeds at 10c a packet and violin is yours. Write for seeds today. Lancaster Co. Seed Co., Sta. 181, PARADISE, PA.

Beautiful Silk Remnants

REMNANTS of real silk, in all shapes, sizes and colors. They are carefully trimmed and just what you need for making up quilts, tidies, pillow tops and all kinds of "crazy patchwork." We will send you a package containing more than one hundred of these beautiful silk pieces and 5 skeins embroidery cotton in different bright colors, also an Instruction Book with eight full-page illustrations showing how to ornament seams of crazy patchwork and other work where fancy stitches are used, also how to work the Outline and Kensington Stitch, Arrasene and Chenille Embroidery, ribbon work, plush or tufted stitch, also directions for Kensington painting. All this is yours free upon the terms of the following special offer:

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you one package of these Silk Remnants free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 5561.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Antique Jewel Box

For A Club Of Two

IT seems hardly necessary to describe this beautiful Jewel Box as our illustration speaks for itself. It is made entirely of rich oxidized silver which will never tarnish. It is heavily embossed on all sides and on the cover. It is silk lined throughout and sufficiently large for all kinds of small articles of jewelry, trinkets, etc., measuring four inches in length, two and a half inches wide and two inches high.

Every girl and woman delights in the possession of a real jewel box for her dresser and our offer places this one easily within the reach of all. Like everything else, they cost a good price in the stores but we buy direct from the factory, hence we are able to make the following very liberal offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this handsome Jewel Box free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9952.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Conducted by Cousin Marion

In writing this department always sign your true name and give your address; if not, your letter will receive no attention. Name will not be published.

CHRISTMAS is absolutely no time to be melancholy and I hope none of you are in that deplorable state, but in case you are, here is a quaint little charm against it:

"I once gave a lady two-and-twenty recipes against melancholy; one was a bright fire; another, to remember all the pleasant things said to her; another, to keep a box of sugar-plums on the chimney-piece and a kettle simmering on the hob. I thought this mere trifling at the moment, but have in after life discovered how true it is that these little pleasures often banish melancholy better than higher and more exalted objects; and that no means ought to be thought too trifling which can oppose it either in ourselves or in others." —Sydney Smith.

The second recipe, alone, has been worth much to me, not that I'm inclined to be melancholy—fat folks seldom are—but when I might be, I think of the kind letters received daily from so many dear girls and straightway I'm the happiest person in the world. Thank you for that and a Merry Christmas to All.

WORRIED DOLLIE, Ark.—If he loved you he would wish to protect you; since he doesn't, you must protect yourself even if it means breaking your engagement. As always, the woman pays, and he isn't worth the price, is he? For that matter, no man is. I don't think I'd marry him if I were you.

UNDECIDED, Indiana.—My advice is to marry neither since you love both, or think you do. Anyway, it is very dog-in-the-mangerish of your fiance to release you on the condition that you never marry. How long do you think he'd remain single if he met a girl he cared for as is likely to happen? As for his threat to "punish you"—if he is coward enough to threaten he is probably too much of a coward to do anything desperate, unless mentally unbalanced.

MRS. M., Calif.—To be sure, your husband has his faults—most of them have—but if you could exchange him for the husbands of some of your friends, as the wives know them, you'd be wishing you had him back again. Overlook his faults and be thankful they aren't any worse.

POLLY FROM PENNSYLVANIA.—The old version of "open your mouth and shut your eyes and I'll give you something to make you wise," has been changed to read,

"Shut your mouth
And open your eyes,
And people will think
That you are wise."

Of course I'm not personal or anything like that but it is a good idea to keep still when you do not know whereof you speak.

BRIGHT EYES, Wisc.—Don't let him take you home from dances if he cannot take you to them. Go with someone else. That ought to wake him up.

UNDECIDED, Idaho.—That seems to be the favorite nom de plume, only you have already decided to elope when you are eighteen. I can't advise you to marry the older man, with property, just because your father wants you to, but I do advise you to wait a while longer before marrying the younger man who works for day's wages. That's rather uncertain these days unless he has some money saved for an emergency. Emergencies are so apt to occur.

LORA, Tenn.—Your sister should be in a position to help you. Talk your educational problem over with her. That's what older sisters are for, to help younger sisters.

ELEANOR, Ill.—Next time you feel so much above the country people with whom you are placed, just repeat this little verse ten times, repeat it one hour if necessary.

"Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursel's as ithers see us!
It wad frae many a blunder
free us,
And foolish notion." —Burns.

INNOCENCE, Wash.—You, at the advanced age of nineteen, may be capable of taking care of yourself at a dance, but I don't think you should assume the responsibility of caring for a boy of seventeen. Some of the dances of today are wild affairs and you never can tell what might happen to him, and then you'd be blamed because you didn't take better care of him. (2) I don't think people of the same complexion are any more apt to quarrel after marriage than those of opposite complexion. Anyway, it is easy enough to change one's complexion.

BLANCH, La.—If you get any happiness out of loving a man who cared so little for you that he married someone else, go ahead and love him as much as you want to, but it's a terrible waste of time. Even if he were divorced or widowed, you have no assurance that you'd be his second choice.

MABELLE, Mich.—Do just as you have been doing. You are quite right. (2) You are fortunate to be able to talk and dance at the same time. I've danced with people who talked in time to the music, sort of a one-two-three manner, but that was in the days of the old-fashioned glide waltz. I tremble to think of a conversation set to modern dance music. No, that doesn't mean that I'd shimmy.

C. G., La.—Just keep on refusing to go out with him until he finally realizes that you don't intend to, and stops asking you. Be firm about the refusal, though, and don't say you are "so sorry, perhaps next week," etc., when you don't mean it. (2) When a friend or friends come to the store where you are working and invite you to a party, accept or refuse as quickly as possible and explain that your employer doesn't like to have you mix business and pleasure, particularly as he pays for your time during business hours.

ALABAMA CURLS, Ala.—Shame on you, at your age to be thinking of marrying a litle boy of seventeen years, only six feet, four inches tall. Why don't you wait until he grows up? Being a good cook and housekeeper is more important than being an "expert on sewing," though that does rank a close second. You can't expect your husband to thrive and grow fat on a diet of baked seams and fried buttonholes, no matter how "expert" they are. Wait four years longer and I'll send you a wedding present.

BROWN EYES, Okla.—Just because you are the "prettiest and most stylish girl in town" doesn't mean you'd be throwing yourself away by marrying a fellow who "doesn't dress like a gentlemen" even though you admit he has all the qualities that go to make up a gentleman. To my mind, a gentleman is one who looks and acts like a gentleman even when he isn't dressed like one. What you want is a wax figure such as used in store windows. They are such perfect gentlemen.

DOLLY, S. Dak.—"A nice home and comfortable living" are important factors, I'll admit, but the average girl of eighteen desires love and romance, and the "nice home" shared day after day with someone you do not love, might not seem so nice after a while. On the other hand, there is every chance that love would come after marriage. One never can tell, but don't get married just because your married sister wants you to. Misery loves company, you know.

CLARA, Ala.—A cameo scarf pin—but not a pink cameo—would make a most acceptable Christmas gift for any man, but cameos are quite expensive.

MEGG OF IDAHO.—"Is there any harm in a girl of sixteen going with her boy friends if she keeps herself in her place and just goes to have a good time? No harm, provided she succeeds in keeping her boy friends in their place. You'll find your mind in better shape for your studies if you give less thought to boys. They are all right as friends, but don't take them seriously or think about them too much.

I haven't got to make good reesolutions for the new year. Those I made last year are almost as good as new and need only a little patching in places. I must do that right away so as to have them ready for next month. Better look after yours.

Good by, COUSIN MARION.

Stella Rosevelt

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12.)

"I will give you this handsome emerald for it," said the spoiled beauty, turning a valuable ring upon her finger.

"Thank you. No; I could not make the exchange."

"Nonsense! You're stuffy enough, I hope," the refined young lady retorted; and, with lowering brow, she turned impatiently away, and went into the dining-room.

An hour later, while Star was busily practicing, she stole slyly into her room and pounced greedily upon the coveted little treasure, which was stuck into a dainty pincushion made of bits of silk and covered with an embroidered lace tidy, all the work of the little maiden's skillful fingers.

"I was bound to have it," the unprincipled girl said, triumphantly, as she examined it closely.

"It is lovely; the most delicately carved cameo that I ever saw, and, for a little thing, must have cost no mean sum. Ah! it is marked on the back of the setting," she continued, turning it over. "A. S. and two tiny strawberry leaves underneath. I wonder who 'A. S.' is, or—was? What a lovely ring it would make."

She lifted the skirt to her basque and deliberately pinned it upon the lining, an evil look in her brilliant eyes.

"I'll capture it for a while, just to torment her for her presumption in trying to outshine me before papa the other day. The little minx! she is altogether too high-headed and airy to suit me."

This important matter disposed of, she began to look about Star's room with some curiosity.

There was very little to attract any one in the little maiden's bower, and yet it had a cozy, homelike air about it; but her scant wardrobe, as Josephine opened the closet door to look within, appeared very mean in the petted and indulged beauty's eyes; and, indeed, it compared very unfavorably with the pretty outfit which had gone down on the ill-fated vessel on which Star had sailed.

"It is a mystery to me how she manages always to look so nice with these few traps," Miss Richards muttered, as she shut the door with a sign of disgust and turned to leave the room.

"Ha! what have we here?" she cried, as she caught sight of a new, prettily-bound book lying on the small table. "Oh, this is that new novel that I heard Charlie Carpenter raving about the other evening. I wonder where she got it. I think I'll appropriate it myself; it looks inviting," she added, slipping the leaves through her fingers.

"Chatsworth's Pride," she continued, turning to the title page. "I should like to know who wrote it; but the author's name is not given. However, I'll read it, and see if it is as wonderful as Charlie said."

It was not a large book, and, dropping it into her pocket, this "Paul Pry" in petticoats stole from Star's little bower and glided unobserved to her own room, having accomplished her object in securing the coveted cameo, and vented her spite upon the offending girl for having dared to outshine her in the presence of her father.

Later, when Star went up to her little sanctum and found both pin and book gone, she surmised at once who had been there.

The loss of the book she did not mind so much, but to lose the cameo—that precious gift of kind, handsome Archibald Sherbrooke—was more than she could bear with either patience or fortitude, and a passion of tears testified to her grief for her loss.

She knew that it would be useless to appeal to Josephine for it; she could not prove that she had taken it, and she would doubtless feign astonishment and innocence if questioned regarding it, and unless she could regain possession of it by strategy, it was, she feared, lost to her forever.

A week subsequently the family repaired to their country residence at Yonkers, where they usually spent the hot months, excepting a few weeks' sojourn at some fashionable watering place or mountain resort.

Here Star, who had been told that she was to have the use of the music-room whenever she wished, began her work in earnest, and gave six hours a day to hard, faithful practice.

Wednesdays and Saturdays, however, she went into New York to take her lesson, Mr. Richards having arranged with one of the first teachers for her instruction.

When not attending to her music, Star spent most of the time in her own room, and no one questioned as to how she occupied it; and although she continued to be ignored by the family when it was possible to do so, and snubbed and sneered at when it was not, she was comparatively happy, knowing that every day well spent was helping her on toward emancipation and independence.

One day Mr. Richards came home with a very grave face and sought an audience with his wife.

"I have a letter from your Uncle Jacob here," he said, drawing one from his pocket as he spoke.

Mrs. Richards' face lighted instantly.

"From Uncle Jacob? That is good news. Has he returned?"

"Yes."

"How is the dear old man, and when is he coming to make us a visit?" she asked, with animation.

"He is not at all well—has been having serious trouble with his head and eyes. He returned last fall, and since then has been visiting your brother in the West. Listen, and I will read you what he says:

"'MY DEAR GEORGE: You see by the heading of this that the wanderer has returned—yes, and returned to wander no more. I cannot write much, for I am not able to do so. I returned from abroad last fall, since when I have been with Henry, and now propose to go East and visit or make my future home with you, as you have so often pressed me to do. I know you will heartily sympathize with me when I tell you that the steamer on which I sailed was wrecked, and all I had was lost. I regret to come to you, as I shall, almost penniless, and in this broken state; but you have so often told me that there would always be 'a warm corner in your home' for me, that I am going to take you at your word. I shall not wait for a reply to this, but follow almost immediately, for I know I shall meet with a hearty welcome.'"

Then followed a few affectionate sentences for each member of the family, but Mrs. Richards scarce heeded them.

"It can't be possible that Uncle Jacob has lost all his property!" she cried, aghast. "Why, the last we heard he was worth a million!"

"I know; but in these days it does not take long to lose a million," her husband replied, gravely, adding: "It is a misfortune, indeed for the old man; but we will do the best we can for him, allowing him to feel it as little as possible. He will feel it, however, for he was, as I remember him, a very high-spirited, independent man."

Mrs. Richards' face was crimson from mingled emotions.

"It is a shame!" she cried, angrily. "Uncle Jacob always gave Henry and me to understand that we should be his heirs; and now we have to lose half a million apiece. How under the sun do you suppose he lost it?"

"I have no idea—some speculation, doubtless."

"It appears that he expects to be taken care of in his old age just the same as if he were the Crœsus we have always supposed him to be," Mrs. Richards said, wrathfully.

"He has a right to expect it," her husband replied, with some sternness; "you have always professed the deepest affection for him, and urged him to make his home with you. Who should take care of him in his misfortune if not his only brother's children?"

"Henry is as well able to have him as I am, and I don't see why he could not have stayed there."

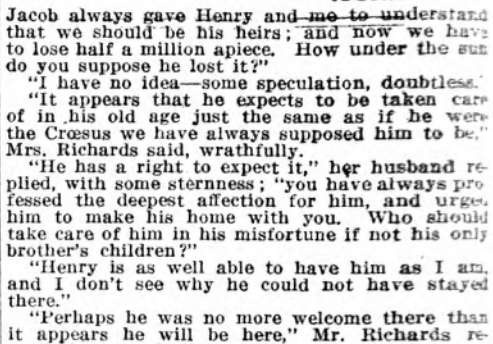
"Perhaps he was no more welcome there than it appears he will be here," Mr. Richards remarked, sarcastically.

"Well, I'm not going to have him here, and there's an end of the matter. I shall post him right back to Henry. His wife does not have half the care that I do, socially. We might as well open a hospital for the lame, the blind, the halt and beggars generally."

"I am astonished to hear you speak thus, Ellen, and of your own relatives, too, especially after all your flattering protestations. Of course we will receive your uncle kindly, and show him all proper attention."

"I will not," his wife retorted angrily. "I may as well set my foot down first as last; he shall not come here to be a burden upon us. You have had your way about Stella; now I'll have mine in this matter. One beggar in the house is enough."

"Ellen, how you are changed! When I first knew you, you were sweet-tempered and kind. I believe your life of unlimited indulgence and luxury has soured and hardened you," Mr. Richards said, with a regretful sigh for the early days of his married life, when his wife was loving and lovable.



"Thank you; your compliments are not of a particularly 'sweet' nature," she answered scornfully.

"Your uncle says he shall follow his letter immediately; he may arrive at any hour. What shall we do with him?" asked Mr. Richards, taking no notice of her sarcasm.

"I don't know—I don't care. Tell him that the house is full of company—anything you please; only mind, I will not be burdened with a half blind, decrepit old man;" and the excited woman flounced angrily from the room, leaving her husband sitting alone in sad and troubled thought.

TO BE CONTINUED.

16-Piece Aluminum Set

For A Club Of Only Five

TO describe the many virtues of this splendid Aluminum Set seems unnecessary. Every good housewife knows what it means to have her kitchen utensils made of this bright, handsome, light-weight, sanitary metal that is so easy to keep clean, that never "peels," rusts or corrodes and never wears out.

As shown in our illustration, this big-value Kitchen Set consists of the following named pieces, all pure aluminum—16 of them in all: Six Teaspoons, Six Tablespoons, One Whole Mixing Spoon, One Ladle, One Slotted Mixing Spoon and One Cake Beater.

Please bear in mind that each and every piece is full standard size for every-day use in the home and the set as a whole is in every way equal to those sold at high prices in the retail stores today. We buy direct from the manufacturer, however, and in large quantities, thereby securing the lowest factory price. As a result, we can afford to give away this set for a very small club of subscriptions.

Given To You! For a club of five one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this genuine Aluminum 16-piece Kitchen Set, free by Parcel Post, prepaid. Reward No. 7615.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

18-Inch Center 12-Inch Doily

Both Stamped On Good Material

THEY are stamped on the best linen-finished cotton cloth all ready for embroidering. The simple yet elegant designs may be easily worked, using solid embroidery, French knots or eyelets for the basket, solid embroidery or satin stitch for the sprays and flowers and buttonhole stitch for the scalloped borders. Remember, we give you BOTH Centerpiece and Doily on this offer.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you this 18-inch Centerpiece and 12-inch Doily free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8361.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

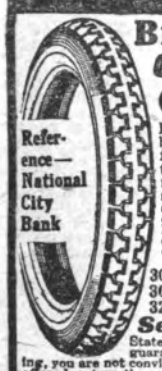
Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we shall be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Auto Owners

WANTED!

To introduce the best automobile tires in the world. Made under our new and exclusive Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process that eliminates Blow-Out—Stone-Bruise—Rim-Cut and enables us to sell our tires under a



10,000 MILE GUARANTEE

We want an agent in every community to use and introduce these wonderful tires at our astonishingly low prices to all motor car owners.

Write for booklet fully describing this new process and explaining our amazing introductory offer to owner agents.

Hydro-United Tire Co.
Dept. 167, Chicago, San Francisco, Pottstown, Pa.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

Brand New Tires GUARANTEED 6000 Miles

Reference—National City Bank

First National Tires are Factory built, not reconstructed. Made from new fresh rubber and fabric throughout with name and serial number. Positively not old or rebuilt stock. Every tire perfect in material and workmanship. Built with extra plys of heavy fabric to give greater mileage. First National Tubes are made of heavy duty laminated rubber. Guaranteed for one year. Sold at following low prices:

Tire	Tube	Tire	Tube
30x3	$8.75	$1.75	31x4 $13.40 $2.75
30x3½	9.95	2.15	32x4 14.95 2.95
32x3½	11.75	2.45	34x4 15.75 3.40

Send No Money Just your name and address. State whether S. S. or Cl. are wanted. We guarantee immediate shipment. If, after seeing, you are not convinced that these are the best values ever offered, return them at our expense. If full cash is sent with order, deduct 5 per cent from above prices.

First National Rubber Products Company
1526 S. Wabash Ave. Dept. 121 Chicago, Illinois

Investigate—Get facts on Walsh No-Buckle Harness, before buying. I send you this double wear harness on 30 days' free trial. See for yourself the harness that outwears buckle harness because it has no buckles to tear straps, no friction rings to wear them, no holes in straps to weaken them. Thousands in use in every state.

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL RIGHT ON YOUR OWN TEAM

Return if not satisfied. Costs less, saves repairs, wears longer, fits any size horse perfectly. Made in all styles, back pads, side backers, breechingless, etc. Terms:—Cash or six months' time payment, whichever you prefer. Write for my illustrated harness book today—post yourself on the many money and time saving advantages of the Walsh No-Buckle Harness.

JAMES M. WALSH, Pres.
WALSH HARNESS CO.
Dept. R-1
137 Keefe Avenue
Milwaukee, : Wis.

FREE Walsh Harness Book Tells the Why and How WRITE FOR IT TODAY

Weighs less—costs less. Greater power, speed, strength. A few pounds pull on the lever means tons on the stump. You can pull big stumps alone—quick, easy, cheap—without extra help. 80-page illustrated book—Land Clearers' Guide—free. Tells best clearing methods under all conditions. Low prices to demonstrators on one-man and horse-power pullers. Write today

A. J. Kirstin Co., 1802 Lud St., Escanaba, Mich.

1000 SHOT ALL STEEL MAGAZINE AIR RIFLE GIVEN

WE GIVE TO BOYS Choice of Six Guns (on four easy plans) for selling our Magic Healing Wav-o-lene at 25c Box. WE TRUST YOU! Order Seven Boxes Today On Postal Card—we send promptly, Prepaid. Easy to sell—used in every home. Return money as instructed, choosing your Gun according to one of the plans shown in our Big Premium List. Also 200 other Gifts or Big Cash Commission if you prefer. If you are prompt—a special Free Gift.

HAMILTON 22 CAL. HUNTING RIFLE WITHOUT COST

WAVERLY CO. 202 Tower Bldg., Monongahela, Pa.

350 SHOT REPEATER SEND ORDER TODAY. FREE!

Constipated?

JOHNSON'S FRESH BRAN

Here's Easy Quick Relief

JOHNSON'S fresh table bran gives almost instantaneous relief to the most distressing case. A big bag sent, postpaid, to your table for $1.00. Made from choicest wheat, every kernel washed and scientifically milled. Used in baking or as a cereal. Good for children or grown-ups. Learn the new way to perfect health. Only fresh bran contains full strength. Get yours direct. Satisfaction guaranteed. Send today.

JOHNSON'S FLOUR CO., Box 101F, Milwaukee, Wis.

WATCH, RING AND CHAIN GIVEN

We positively give a genuine American Stem Wind and Set Watch, beautifully designed case, warranted time-keeper, 5-year guarantee; Sparkling Set or Plain Ring all for selling 25 of our easy to sell jewelry articles at 10c each. When sold send $2.50 & we'll send Watch & Ring. Home Supply Co., 428 W. 35th Street, Dept. 108, Chicago

Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

Questions relating to gasolene engines and automobiles, by our subscribers, addressed to COMFORT Auto Dept., Augusta, Maine, will be answered by our expert, free, in the columns of this department. Full name and address is required, but initials only will be printed. That we may intelligently diagnose your trouble please state the year in which your car was made.

Car Lock

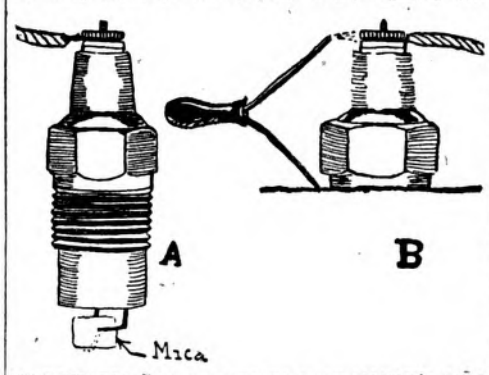
MANY owners do not know that their cars can be locked without going to the expense of purchasing extra equipment. Most of the cars sold at present have battery ignition and a distributor that has a removable distributor arm. The distributor cover is usually retained by two snap fasteners and by simply releasing these the cover is readily removed and the distributor arm pulled out. Ordinarily there should be no alarm regarding the replacement of the arm as they are designed to fit in one position only. Automobile thieves in one large city made a practice of carrying an assortment of distributor arms but if one desires to go to the trouble he can make almost certain that the ignition will remain locked by changing the position of the pin in the breaker cam and drilling a new hole in the distributor arm. This arrangement will not fit the standard segment arm and will accommodate only the one refitted for it. An expert automobile mechanic should make the change as regards the fit of the driving pin in the distributor arm because if the work is not accurately handled there is danger of altering the ignition timing.

Helpful Pointers

Not Enough Speed

When you step on the throttle and notice by the speedometer that the speed is lacking, do not immediately arrive at the conclusion that a new carburetor is needed or that a general overhauling will help. It may be that the linkage which controls the throttle is worn or loose and that you are not obtaining full advance. There is a butterfly valve in the throat of the carburetor, the opening and closing of which controls the amount of gas going into the engine. Have a friend advance the throttle on your car and then take hold of the throttle lever on the carburetor to determine if it is possible to obtain more advance. If so, a check up of the linkage will readily show you where the play exists.

Spring Lubricant



Graphite mixed with melted paraffin and spread between the spring leaves is said to be an excellent lubricant for this purpose.

Tire Pump

One of the most valued accessories in time of need is the tire pump, yet in times of clear sailing it is given practically no care. Most pumps are equipped with a leather plunger, which in time dries out and the pump loses its efficiency. Neat's-foot oil will soften the hardened leather or if the washer is beyond repair it should be replaced with a new one.

Answers to Last Month's Quiz

1. Kerosene is not considered as a satisfactory anti-freeze agent in the radiator of an automobile for the reason that it has a tendency to attack the rubber hose. Another point which must be scored against kerosene is its low boiling point. In mild weather the engine would have a tendency to overheat and the odor of the kerosene would be objectionable. Cases are on record where owners have poured kerosene into the system the same as one would use alcohol. This practice does not as much as afford protection from freezing as water and kerosene will not mix. When the motor is stopped the kerosene readily separates from the water and floats on the top. It will be understood that the water in the system will then be as susceptible to freezing as if no anti-freeze solution was used.

ILLUSTRATES 5TH ANSWER TO LAST MONTH'S QUIZ.

2. I do not doubt but that the vast majority of readers can correctly answer the question regarding the proper method of turning the engine over with the hand crank. It is astonishing, however, to note the number of drivers who can correctly answer this question who persist in cranking by the dangerous method, viz., pushing down on the crank. Should the motor backfire when pushing down on the crank the chances are that the operator will be unable to move his body out of the way of the spinning crank. The usual result is a broken arm and I believe that everyone will recognize that retreat is next to impossible for the reason that he is pushing down with considerable pressure and that he is off balance at the moment that the crank handle is snatched out of his hand. The result is that he throws himself into the spinning crank rather than draw away from it. On the other hand, when he draws up on the crank, should the handle be snatched out of his hand by backfire, the natural tendency would be for him to move to the left away from the flying crank.

3. It has been explained several times in these columns that complete combustion of the gases in the cylinder should occur when the piston has just passed the top dead center point so that the expansion will push the piston on its downward stroke. If the combustion takes place before the piston has passed top center, the result is in the form of a resistance to the upcoming piston. When the motor is in operation this condition is manifested by pounding, loss of power and not infrequently the stalling of the engine. The most common cause of an early spark is improper manipulation of the spark lever. If the spark timing is correct the spark will take place at the proper moment in the cylinder with the lever fully retarded and the motor running at idle. As the speed of the motor increases the lever should be advanced proportionately. Most drivers have probably noticed that when running upgrade and the motor is required to pull, there is a knock and loss of power when the spark lever is advanced. This is due to the spark occurring too early in the cylinder and the expanded gases affording resistance instead of strength to the pistons. An accumulation of carbon will also cause an early spark. The carbon when sufficiently heated becomes incandescent and fires the gases in the same manner as would the spark.

4. Water will freeze when subjected to a temperature of 32 degrees Fah.

5. It is quite frequently considered as final that a spark-plug which will spark when grounded outside of the cylinder is satisfactory for use in the cylinder. It is not conclusive. The real value of a test above referred to is the determining of the spark heat. Let us briefly analyze the condition so as to finally prove that a plug which sparks outside of the cylinder will not always spark inside of the cylinder. When the plug is placed on top of the cylinder to be tested, the air between the plug electrodes is at atmospheric pressure. This condition is ideal for the jumping of a spark between the two points as in all probability it affords the path of least resistance and this is the channel always taken by current. Now let us place the plug in the cylinder. The time of firing is when the piston has the gases tightly compressed. We now have thicker air which affords considerable resistance to the jumping of electrical current. If the plug is defective the current will seek an easier channel to follow and as a result there will be no spark. When testing a plug out of the cylinder it is a good plan to place a piece of mica or thin glass between the points. This will compel the current to run around the mica or glass to complete the circuit. Insert just enough mica or glass between the points to command a flow of current of approximately three-eighths inch. Cut "A" will assist in gaining an understanding of this test. Still another excellent test is shown in cut "B." Insert a long cotter pin or lady's hairpin into a wooden handle and spread the points to form a "Y." Place one of the points so that it makes contact with the cylinder or some other metal part of the motor. While the engine is running bring the other point about a quarter inch from the top of the plug. If the plug is perfect, current will jump the gap to the cotter pin rather than the points of the plug in the cylinder.

Monthly Quiz

1. Why is kerosene not used as fuel for the automobile?

2. What is the difference between a low-tension and high-tension magneto?

3. What causes gasolene to accumulate in the crankcase?

4. Consider that no anti-freeze solution is used and the motor overheats on a cold day. What is the cause?

5. A newspaper account reports that a car was running along smoothly when without warning the crankcase was blown to atoms. Can you account for such a condition?

Answers to Correspondents

SCORED CYLINDER.—Number 3 cylinder of my 1915 Dodge touring car is slightly scored. Would it be possible to have this cylinder rebored and fitted with oversize piston and rings without throwing the engine out of balance? My head-lights go out and come on, but after they light and the car starts moving they usually stay on. What in your opinion is the trouble?

L. B., Holcomb, N. Y.

A.—Boring out the cylinder to remove the score would in my opinion necessitate the use of a piston of considerable over size. This cylinder would then deliver much more power than the remaining three and naturally the motor would be out of balance. I understand that firms are now making a specialty of cleaning up cylinder scores. I am not fully acquainted with the process but as near as I can understand the score is filled in by the welding method and then ground to size. The cylinder is made but very little over size and it is not necessary to regrind the other cylinders. It might be well for you to investigate to determine whether there is anyone in your vicinity who handles work of this nature along the lines suggested. Regarding the lighting trouble you are experiencing, I believe there is a loose connection somewhere. The vibration evidently brings the connections together and closes the circuit. Look at the head-light connectors, wiring, switch, etc.

NOISY GEARS.—The differential gear of my Model 90, 1919, Overland car makes too much noise, just like grinding. The ring gear is a new one I put in in place of an old one which had most of the teeth cracked on top and one of them about half gone. There was no noise when the car was new but I broke a key in the pinion gear and with that the grinding began, and since then all adjustments fail to remedy the trouble. Please advise me whether the gears are set too close or too far apart.

E. B., Yankton, S. Dak.

A.—To produce quiet operation of rear-axle gears it is common practice for manufacturers to grind them to a perfect fit. You will appreciate that a gear will operate quietly with the one with which it was mated but may be noisy if run with another gear. This may be the cause for the present noise. On the other hand, the breaking of the old ring gear may have injured the drive pinion and a new pinion would therefore be the only means of obtaining silent operation. If adjustment does not take out the noise, I would suggest a new pinion. When writing for a new pinion inquire whether the gears are machined in sets.

MISFIRING SPARK-PLUG.—I have mislaid a communication received from one reader which related to a misfiring spark-plug and the correction of the difficulty by removing the cable and compelling the current to jump a gap before entering the plug. If I remember correctly, this reader referred to this method as an intensification of the spark and asked me to account for the process. In my way of looking at the condition compelling the current to jump a gap before entering the plug did not produce an intensified current but, to the contrary, reduced the voltage. The introduction of a gap is a resistance feature which naturally would have a tendency to lower the voltage rather than increase it. As an explanation of the perfect operation of the plug after the introduction of the gap, I would draw attention to the fact that the higher the voltage of electrical current the more difficult it is to insulate it. Naturally the current is seeking to escape wherever possible and if the plug is in the least defective it will probably afford a path of escape for the current. By introducing a gap in the circuit the voltage is reduced and therefore not so hard to insulate. The current which has in this manner been reduced in voltage passes up a crack in the porcelain, finding it easier to jump the points of the plug. I have heard several theories for the result of a defective plug operating satisfactorily after placing an additional gap in the circuit but the one given above is my opinion of what takes place.

Send No Money 6000 Miles Guaranteed

Greatest tire offer we ever made. Brand new inner tube and reliner free with every one of our special constructed double tread standard tires—practically puncture-proof and guaranteed for 6,000 Miles Service. This is your opportunity to save big money on good tires.

Size	Price	Size	Price
30x3	$6.95	32x4	$10.85
30x3½	7.95	33x4	10.95
32x3½	8.75	34x4	11.15
31x4	9.95	32x4½	11.25
		33x4½	11.85
		34x4½	12.65
		35x4½	12.90
		36x4½	13.95
		35x5	13.85
		37x5	14.45

Write Today Just send your name, address, and number of tires wanted. Pay only on arrival. If dissatisfied after examination return at our expense and your money immediately returned. State whether Non-Skid, Plain, Clincher, or S. S. Send today. Extra—10 per cent discount for full cash with order.

NEW ERA TIRE COMPANY
300 N. Avers Ave., Dept. 3872 - Chicago, Illinois

STANDARD TIRES LESS THAN 1/2 Price

Send No Money

Don't miss this chance to cut your tire cost in two and get a reliner with each tire FREE. We ship at once on approval standard Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone, Mason and other adjusted tires in excellent condition and Your Money Back if you don't like them. They can readily be guaranteed for 6,000 miles. So sure are we you will like these tires that we request no deposit in advance. These are not sewed together tires known as the double tread and reconstructed tires.

SEE THESE LOW PRICES

Sizes	Tires	Tubes	Sizes	Tires	Tubes
28x3	$4.95	$1.25	34x4	$ 8.50	$2.60
30x3	5.25	1.50	32x4½	9.60	2.75
30x3½	6.25	1.60	34x4½	9.25	2.95
32x3½	6.75	1.75	35x4½	9.65	3.15
31x4	7.75	1.95	36x4½	9.95	3.25
32x4	7.95	2.25	35x5	10.50	3.45
33x4	8.25	2.40	37x5	10.75	3.65

Remember, a reliner Free with each tire. When cash is sent with order 5 per cent discount allowed. Examine—judge for yourself. If not satisfied, return goods at our expense. Specify straight side, clincher, non-skid or plain wanted.

CLEVELAND TIRE AND RUBBER CO.
3116 Michigan Avenue Chicago, Illinois

2 Tires for $11.25 FREE Tube with Each Tire

Most sensational tire offer of the year! Two tires for less than the usual cost of one—and a free tube with each tire! This is a special lot—all standard makes—selected for record-breaking sale. No double treads or sewed tires. Our big volume means best tire values! Thousands of steady customers everywhere are getting full mileage out of these slightly used tires and you, too, can get

8000 Miles

Size	1 Tire	2 Tires	Size	1 Tire	2 Tires
30 x 3	$ 7.00	$11.25	32 x 4½	$13.50	$22.90
30 x 3½	7.95	13.65	33 x 4½	13.95	23.45
32 x 3½	9.00	15.45	34 x 4½	14.45	23.90
31 x 4	10.00	16.90	35 x 4½	14.95	24.45
32 x 4	11.50	19.75	36 x 4½	15.45	25.45
33 x 4	12.25	20.90	35 x 5	15.90	26.15
34 x 4	13.25	22.45	37 x 5	16.45	26.55

SEND NO MONEY! Shipment C. O. D. Express or Parcel Post. Examine tires on arrival and if not fully satisfied return same at our expense and your money will be promptly refunded, including shipping charges. State whether Straight Side or Clincher. DON'T DELAY! ORDER NOW!

ALBANY TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
2721 Roosevelt Road Dept. 3667 Chicago, Illinois

INNER TUBE FREE 6,000 Miles Guaranteed

SEND NO MONEY

Here is the greatest tire offer ever made. Never before such low prices. Brand new Inner Tube given Free with every one of our special reconstructed tires guaranteed for 6,000 miles. We ship at once on approval. Pay only when convinced.

Less Than ½ Price

30x3	$6.15	32x4½	$9.10
30x3½	6.75	33x4½	9.60
32x3½	7.10	34x4½	10.25
31x4	7.35	35x4½	10.75
32x4	7.95	36x4½	11.50
33x4	8.25	35x5	11.95
34x4	8.75	37x5	12.50

Also Free Reliner with each Tire

Write Today No money now—just your name and number of tires wanted. Pay on arrival. Examine and judge for yourself. If not satisfied return at our expense and your money immediately refunded. Be sure to state size and whether clincher or straight side. Don't delay—send now. Immediate shipment.

Seven Ply Tire Co., 115 E. 26th St., Dept. 255, Chicago

One Man Saw Rig

Cuts Faster—Pays for Itself

Saw your own wood for winter. Make big money cutting wood for market. New OTTAWA One-Man Saw Rig saves time and labor. Easily moved. Magneto equipped. No extras to buy.

A complete, powerful, 4-H. P. engine for belt work. 30 Days Free Trial. Buy for Cash or on Easy Terms. Write for FREE BOOK and new low factory price.

Ottawa Mfg. Co. Dept. 115 Ottawa, Kans.

WANTED

Railway Mail Clerks

$1600 to $2300 Year.

Hundreds Needed

MEN—BOYS OVER 16
SHOULD WRITE IMMEDIATELY

Steady work
No Layoffs
Paid Vacations

Common education sufficient.
Send coupon today—SURE

Franklin Institute, Dept. T 214, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Send me, without charge, (1) sample Railway Mail Clerk Examination questions; (2) schedule showing places of all coming U. S. Government examinations; (3) list of many Government jobs now open.
Name .....
Address .....

FEATHER BED OUTFIT

Now Only $12.50

Send us $12.50 and nearest express office and we will ship you this wonderful outfit consisting of One 40-pound New FEATHER BED, One Pair of 6-lb. New FEATHER PILLOWS, and One Pair full size BED BLANKETS or BED SPREAD. All new clean, sanitary feathers; best 8-ounce A. C. A. feather-proof ticking. Positively biggest bargain offered by any one. About half store price. Sold on our MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE. Mail Money Order today. Our Bargain Catalog mailed FREE.

SOUTHERN FEATHER & PILLOW COMPANY
DEPT. 51 GREENSBORO, N. C.

$5.00 Buys a New Feather Bed

Don't pay more! $5.00 will put a genuine PURITY BRAND new feather bed in your home, guaranteed full weight and full size and featherproof ticking. Biggest offering in the bedding field made direct by manufacturers who undersell the world. Money back if not satisfied. Write now for details and catalog.

PURITY BEDDING FACTORIES
Dept. 307 Nashville, Tenn.

Prices Slashed — Wonderful Feather Bed and Pillows

Sleep on it FREE

Yours to sleep on for 30 nights—a magnificent feather bed! All new live feathers; best tickings; use it as if it were your own. If you're not amazed with the quality and the sensational price, return bed to us. No cost or obligation to you. A daring offer which we defy others to equal.

Bargains in Feather Beds

Prices Guaranteed Lowest in America. Quality finer than you ever dreamed possible. Other factories wonder how we do it. Full particulars in our free book—nothing ever like it—full of astonishing bargains. Send today for Free Book, Samples of Feathers and Ticking. Read about our free test offer and our $2,500 Guarantee Bond. Mail postal now!

Lewis Feather Bed Co., Dept. 1233 Nashville, Tenn.

The Surprise Parcel of FULL SIZE BEDDING

1 beautiful silkoline Comforter
1 pair Blankets, wool finish
2 Sheets, size 81x90, seamless
2 Pillow Cases, 18x36
1 ideal Bedspread
2 Turkish Towels, large size

ALL FOR $13.95

Shipping charges prepaid.

YOUR MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFIED
Send name and address for full particulars.

WHOLESALE BEDDING SUPPLY CO.,
4 Mogadore Rd., East Akron, Ohio

Send money by postal order or registered mail. Your Government receipt is your PROTECTION.

Feather Beds Delivered To You FREE

Write at once for Free, Big Bargain Book on New Sanitary Feather Beds and Pillows, also special low prices. All feather beds delivered to you express prepaid, for 10 Days Free Trial. Satisfaction guaranteed. Before you buy, get this free book and sample of feathers. Write us today—now.

AMERICAN FEATHER & PILLOW CO., Dept. 10, Nashville, Tenn.

Get a FEATHER BED Save $11. 1 25-lb. bed; 1 pair 6-lb. pillows; 1 pair blankets, full size; 1 counterpane, large size; all for $13.95. (Retail value $25.00). Same as above with 30-lb. bed, $14.95; with 35-lb. bed, $15.95; with 40-lb. bed, $16.95. Beds alone, 25-lb., $8.95; 30-lb., $9.95; 35-lb., $10.95; 40-lb., $11.95. Two 2-1-2-lb. pillows, $1.75. New feathers, best ticking. $1,000.00 cash deposit in bank to guarantee satisfaction or money back. MAIL ORDER TODAY OR WRITE FOR CATALOG
Sanitary Bedding Co., Dept. 114, Charlotte, N. C.

PURE-BRED POULTRY Most profitable varieties. Also Eggs and BABY CHICKS, BELGIAN HARES. Incubators, Brooders, Grain Sprouters, Supplies. Highest quality. Low Cut prices. Illustrated Catalog mailed FREE. Address
Nichol's Poultry Farm, Box 21, Monmouth, Ill.

PRICES DOWN ON BIGGEST VALUE For Your MONEY

X-RAY INCUBATORS

Delivery charges paid

20 big features mean sure hatches and low operating cost. Best for 20 years—over 200,000 successful users. Write for catalog and low prices on X-Ray incubators and brooders.

X-RAY INCUBATOR CO.
1161 X-Ray Sta., Des Moines, Iowa

55 EGGS FROM 57 HENS were received by Mr. C. E. Graham after feeding ARROW EGG TABLETS. They will double your egg supply and prevent cholera. Order now and receive our Free Baby Chick offer.

Don't send a cent: Cut out this adv. and mail to us, giving your name and address, and we will send you two $1.00 boxes ARROW EGG TABLETS. When they arrive, pay the postman $1.00 for one box, the other is yours free of charge.

Feed for 30 days and if not satisfactory, we will refund your money. Write today. ARROW CHEMICAL CO., Rocky Ridge, Maryland.

Baby Chicks

NEW LOW PRICES — SEASON 1922

MILLER BABY CHICKS ARE BRED FOR HEAVY EGG PRODUCTION

Customers report pullets lay all winter. 20 varieties to select from. 1,000,000 chicks via prepaid parcel post safe delivery guaranteed. Pleased customers in every state. 19th season. Catalog FREE.

MILLER POULTRY FARMS
Box 608 LANCASTER, MO.

Early Chicks

Half a million at new low prices. Write today for FREE copy of our complete, new, pure-bred chick catalog. Every breed illustrated. A postcard will bring it.

MURRAY McMURRAY
Box 29 Webster City, Iowa

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

What About That Pure Bred Cockerel

I WONDER if you have sent for the new male bird yet? The time to get good birds at reasonable prices is slipping away. You must act quickly if you want to improve your stock for next year. For your own good I beg of you to get rid of the unprofitable mongrels, and purchase one or two really good birds, for if you have only mediumly fair stock, and mate a few of the hens to a good bird next spring, you are sure to get some youngsters who will more than pay you for your trouble. Look through the advertising columns for the addresses of well-known breeders of whatever variety you are breeding, and write to them for prices of cockerels; or, better still, quote what price you can afford to pay, remembering always that you can't expect to get something for nothing, and that even a cull bird from a breeder who has for years kept nothing but full-blooded stock is of more value to breed from than a splendid looking bird which may have all sorts of mixed and poor varieties among his ancestors. For, as I have before explained to you, the individual bird or animal is not half so important as his parents and grandparents, so far as his influence is concerned on future stock.

When writing to breeders about cockerels, you should give a clear description of the hens you want to mate him to, because the breeder will then be able to select a bird with such characteristics as will counterbalance the weak points in your birds.

To illustrate: If the hens happen to have legs rather too long for the breed they belong, the male bird chosen to mate with them should have legs a trifle too short, and, of course, the same throughout the points. There are few perfect birds, so matings must be arranged to counterbalance the faulty points. And it is impossible to get perfection from one mating, so it is positively necessary to breed the pullet back to the sire, even to the third and fourth generation.

Now, many people run away with the idea that it is only conformation and plumage that one does such mating for, but it is quite as necessary when one is trying to build up a strain of heavy-laying birds. Roosters must be the offspring of prolific layers, no less than the hens to which they must be mated, and it is only by remating to the progeny of the original sire that the breed can be firmly established. Of course, the same is to be said if your ambition is to raise specially good table birds with deep breasts and heavily-meated thighs. So you see, even for the general-purpose bird, it is well to devote some thought to the subject, and be careful to select not only hens that are known to be good layers, but also males who are known to be the sons of heavy layers; and once having established a good pen, it is well to be very careful how you introduce a strange male bird.

I am emphasizing this subject now, because so many of my correspondents seem to be convinced that all that is necessary to get good layers is to select their best hens. I use "hens" in writing, but of course the same principles apply to ducks and geese, and, to a certain extent, turkeys. It is quite time to consider breeding flocks of ducks and geese now, for if strange birds have to be bought, it takes time for them to become accustomed to their new surroundings, and as they are early layers, there should be no delay about the purchase.

Both ducks and geese are such easy keepers when they have a wide range that it is advisable for every small farm to keep a flock of either one or the other. Imperial Pekin ducks start laying in January, when hens' eggs are bringing very big prices, so the ducks' eggs are a very great convenience and economy, as they can be used at home, and usually sell to neighbors for cooking purposes, even if they don't like to eat them. Ducks' eggs make even better cakes and custard than hens' eggs, and people who are living near towns and cities can always dispose of any surplus quantity to confectioners and candy makers.

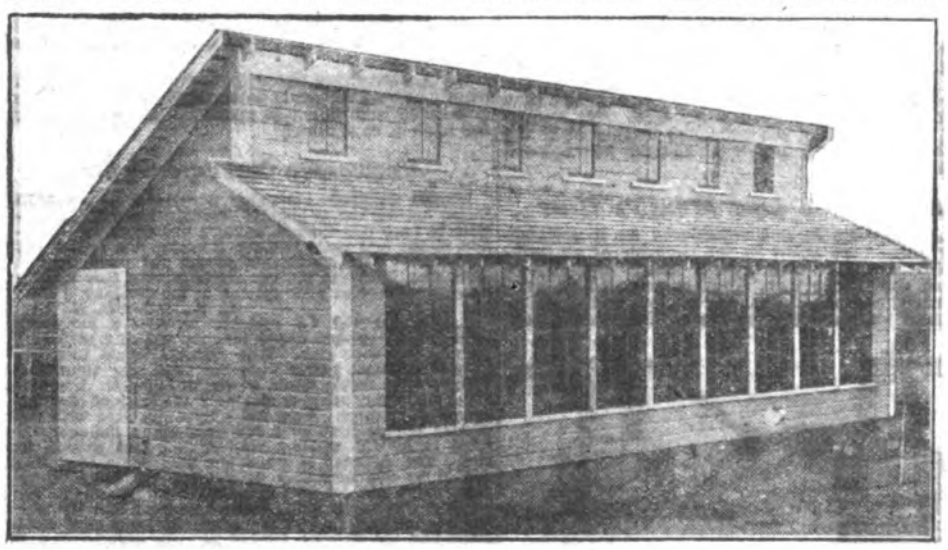
I give you this hint, as it is not advisable to hatch ducks before April in most localities, and by that time hens' eggs have gone down in price to such an extent that one does not mind using them in the kitchen. If you have raised any number of ducks or geese during the last season, now is the time to fatten and market them. Confine them in rather small yards; boil and mash any waste, green vegetables, small potatoes, or any other root crop that you may have on hand. When cool, mix about a quart of wheat middlings or cornmeal through a panful, and you will have a good fattening mash for twenty birds, and give them all the skimmed milk you can spare in a dish they can only get their bills into, and they will be ready for market within three weeks.

Old ducks and geese which are to be kept for breeding in the spring must have a dry place to sleep in and good food. Chopped corn-stalks, or fodder, well steamed, and a little bran, make a good, inexpensive mash. If skim-milk is plentiful, give them some every day, to take the place of insects which they can no longer find for themselves. If there is no milk to spare, get some commercial meat scraps, and mix about a tablespoonful for each bird in the mash three times a week. Also be careful that they have plenty of grit and water. Ducks and geese often suffer for water on a general farm after outdoor pools and troughs are frozen.

The care the birds receive now will influence their laying, and the strength of the ducks and goslings next spring.

The matter of litter for the floor is almost as important as the selection of food stuffs. Many people think that any old hay or straw will do for hens to scratch in, but it won't. Musty, moldy or old hay causes more sickness among hens than anything else, as it breeds several different kinds of spores and germs, which float in the air when the hens dig up the material, and are inhaled by the birds, and rapidly develop diseases of the lungs and intestines; and one special germ even affects the eggs laid by the hens, causing white diarrhea in chicks hatched by them. So you see how important it is to have clean litter and nesting material. We use shavings and chopped corn-stalks topped with dried leaves, as long as we have them. We gather all we can in the fall and store them in boxes. Several years ago we tried shavings only, and had many cases of crop-bound hens, but have had no trouble since we used the combination of corn-stalks or straw. The shavings are particularly valuable, because they are cheap, and prevent the other material from packing down, and so insure a circulation of air through the litter, which keeps it sweet.

Don't overcrowd your house. There is nothing more detrimental to egg production or strong chicks in the spring as overcrowding stock in the winter. Twenty well-cared-for hens, with plenty of house room, will produce more eggs and better birds next spring than fifty which are crowded. Besides which, if a lot of hens are crowded into small quarters in the night, their breath and the moisture of their bodies is more than the air can carry off, so it rises to the roof, where it freezes during the night and melts during the heat of the midday sun, so causing a recurrence of moisture day after day, which soon makes the house damp and unhealthy. Plenty of cold fresh air perpetually circulating through the house keeps it fresh and dry, and is beneficial to the birds.



The breed of chickens you keep, the part of the country in which you are located, must influence to a great extent the general care and feeding of your stock. In sections of the country where the weather is extremely cold, hens require rations rich in fat and oils to keep them warm. On the other hand, in the Southern States they require only enough fat-forming foods to nourish their bodies and produce eggs.

Hens must have a variety of food to produce eggs in winter. The best way to convince you of the fact is to give you a chemical analysis of the egg, which is: Water, 650 grains; albuminoids, 80 grains; oil, fats, etc., 135 grains; mineral matter 9 grains; sugar, coloring matter, etc., 26 grains. The remaining hundred parts of the thousand of the egg are used in the shell, which contains about 50 grains of salts and lime and 50 grains of pure, uncombined lime, the remainder being carbolic acid water of crystallization. Albuminoids are the flesh-forming parts of food, often called nitrogens.

Oils and fats come under the head of carbons. Mineral matter consists of lime, soda, potash, magnesia and sulphur. Knowing the materials necessary for the egg, no one ought to be so foolish as to expect a hiddy to produce eggs unless she is provided with the necessary materials. Farmers complain that hens lay nearly all their eggs in the spring, when they are hardly worth the trouble of marketing, and stop as soon as the prices go up in the winter. And it is true of most farms, simply because in the spring the hens can find all the elements necessary for the formation of the egg, but after frost destroys green grass, clover and insects, they stop producing because they have no materials from which to make the egg.

Green vegetable food is most important, and is usually the most difficult for the farmer to provide, during the winter, but now that the price of grain has gone down, it will pay to sprout oats for the laying and breeding stock. There are several sprout cabinets (as they are called) on the market, which are well worth the price, which ranges from five to fifteen dollars; but there are plenty of people who don't want to spend five dollars, so I am going to tell you about a home-made cabinet which costs only two dollars.

Get a case from the village store, five feet long, two feet wide and two feet deep. Line this with zinc at the front end, running the zinc up to about fifteen inches. Then set the box up on end, making what had been the top the front, and from loose boards make a top to fit it. Then get eight pairs of iron shelf brackets from a five-and ten-cent store, and put the first set of four brackets, two on each side of the cabinet, six inches from the bottom, and the other two sets nine inches above. Make legs nine inches high, to lift the bottom of the cabinet from the floor, cut a hole four inches square in the center of the bottom, to permit the chimney of a lamp to go through and strike on the bottom of the first tray, which rests on the first set of brackets. This tray must be made at a plumber's shop, but it won't cost more than seventy-five cents. The three other trays can be made of light wood. The strips of wood at the bottom of the trays must be left open, and a piece of burlap tacked over to prevent the oats from falling through. A brooder which has a tin chimney is the best to use, so there is no fear of smashing. When in use, after the chimney has been pushed through the hole in the bottom of the cabinet, a block of wood must be placed under the lamp, to raise it high enough to hold it firmly in place, and bring the top of the chimney to within an inch of the zinc tray, which is kept filled with water. The oats are put into pails of warm water the night before the trays are to be filled, and then spread two inches deep in each tray.

ONE OF THE BEST TYPE OF HOUSES FOR WINTER LAYERS.

A NEW OIL LAMP FREE

Burns 94% Air

M. A. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., the inventor of a wonderful new oil lamp that burns 94% air and beats gas or electricity, is offering to give one free to the first user in each locality who will help introduce it. Write him for particulars. Agents wanted.—Advertisement.

I almost forgot to explain that there was another hole two inches square in the center of the top of the cabinet, which was covered with flannel, to act as a ventilator. When the door of the cabinet was closed and the lamp lighted, the heat kept the water in the zinc pan steaming slightly, and insured a moist, warm temperature throughout the cabinet.

The three oat trays were made about an inch smaller than the inside of the cabinet, to permit the moist air to circulate all round them. Naturally, the bottom tray, getting the most heat, is the first lot of oats to develop sufficiently to feed, and at that point it can be removed, and the trays dropped down so that the second and third trays are at the bottom, and what was at the bottom is at the top.

The oats are ready to feed when from two to five inches high. Just cut a sod—roots and all, of course—and feed to the hens at noon—the improvement in the egg yield will surprise you. A sod six inches square is enough for twenty-five hens. Divide it into small pieces before feeding, so that they are all sure to get a fair share. Don't neglect roosters, for a good percentage of sprouted oats in their rations insures fertile eggs, which will mean good hatches when the incubators and broody hens get busy.

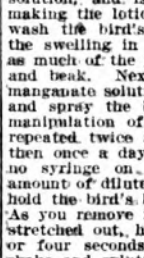
Correspondence

Subscribers are entitled to advice of our Poultry Editor, free, through the columns of this department. Address Poultry Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. BE SURE to give your full name and address, otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

C. H.—It is advisable to leave chicks in the incubator about twelve hours, but you must be careful that the heat does not run up too high or drop dangerously low. The amount of extra heat generated at hatching time will increase the moisture and the animal heat when the chicks are breaking through the shells, and often makes the matter of regulation a difficult one, as the lamp has to be turned down nearer the beginning of the hatch, and the inexperienced attendant often forgets that when the hatch is nearing the end, the moisture subsides in the egg chamber, and the temperature may fall if not carefully attended to. I am sure there is money in keeping hens for market eggs, and especially in the Eastern States. I am not sufficiently familiar with the two states you mention to venture on a decided opinion about the advantage or disadvantage of poultry raising but I do know that Texas has a great many drawbacks.

V. Y.—We have no book on geese or other poultry, and I am not in a position to recommend you to any breeders of the variety you desire.

M. L. S.—The birds have roup. Remove all the sick ones from the regular chicken house and confine them in separate quarters, otherwise the disease is very likely to spread through the whole flock. Clean and disinfect the house and feed and water vessels, and as a precaution against further trouble, add one teaspoonful of permanganate of potassium solution to every quart of drinking water. To make the permanganate solution, buy ten cents' worth of the crystals, put one teaspoonful in a quart bottle, fill up with warm water, and shake until dissolved, or until the water has taken all it can absorb. This is what is called a saturated solution, and is to be kept as a basis of supply in making the lotion to use in treating sick birds. First wash the bird's head with warm water, gently press the swelling in the eyes toward the nostrils, to force as much of the pus as possible out through the nostrils and beak. Next dilute one tablespoonful of the permanganate solution with the water, fill a small syringe, and spray the bird's throat, eyes and nostrils. The manipulation of the lumps and the spraying must be repeated twice a day until the inflammation subsides, then once a day until a cure is effected. If you have no syringe on hand, make three or four times the amount of diluted mixture, put it into a quart can, and hold the bird's head in it whilst you count ten slowly. As you remove it, turn quickly upwards with the neck stretched out, hold the head in that position for three or four seconds, then release and allow the bird to shake and splutter at will. Repeat after the bird has quite recovered its breath, then place it in a clean, small coop in a sheltered shed or room. Whilst under treatment, the bird should have light, nourishing food. Birds that have once had roup should never be used in breeding pens, for their eggs are very likely to hatch chicks that carry inherent tendencies toward the disease.



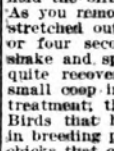
B. M. J.—You had better write to the secretaries of the White Orpington and Plymouth Rock Clubs, enclosing a stamp for reply, and asking them to give you the addresses of breeders in your vicinity. The secretary of the W. O. Club is J. L. Lyle, Plainfield; N. J.; of the P. R. Club, E. B. Thompson, Lock Box 403, Amenia, N. Y.

T. M.—Dried leaves make a very good litter for a poultry house, especially if used over corn-stalks. See first part of the department in this issue.

M. T. S.—From your description, it seems as if the turkeys must have eaten something poisonous. For Entero Hepatitis (commonly called blackhead) takes longer to develop. Without knowing more of the case I cannot give very serviceable advice, I am afraid. In all cases of poison it is helpful to give from one to three tablespoonfuls of castor oil but it must be administered at once.

W. E. P.—From your description I think the birds have fungoid, which is apt to spread very rapidly from bird to bird. When the disease has advanced to the stage you state it to be, there is little hope of being able to accomplish a cure. However, if you wish to try it, read answer to M. L. S. in this issue, and treat as recommended to her for roup, supplementing the treatment by rubbing the heads and combs and wattles with carbolic ointment after the peroxide has dried off.

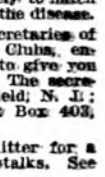
L. G.—There must have been too much heat in the egg chamber through most of the term of incubation. Thermometers are frequently faulty. Better get your doctor to test yours by comparing it with his. You can buy incubator thermometers at any store that carries poultry supplies, or a drug store or hardware store would order one for you. For instructions about making an oat sprouter, see the last part of the department in this issue.



NEW KIND OF INCUBATOR

Requires 3 minutes a day. Saves work, time, money. Built round, kitchen's best. No cold corners. One gallon oil one filling of lamp to the hatch. Wonderful built-in moisture attachment and complete circuit radiators keep eggs moist and mild always. Many other features. Make sure work, time and money fully described in new FREE book—write, postal will do. Your copy RIGHT.

Radio-Round Incubator Co. 2112 Roy St., Wayne, Neb.



POULTRY AND PIGEONS FOR PROFIT

Foy's big book tells all about it. Contains many colored plates—an encyclopedia of poultry information, poultry houses, feeding for eggs, etc. Written by a man who knows. Sent for 5 cents. Low prices, fowls and eggs.

FRANK FOY, BOX 6, CLINTON, IOWA.

DOLLARS IN HARES

We pay $7.00 to $18.50 and up a pair and express charges. Big Profits. We furnish guaranteed high grade stock and buy all you raise. Use back yard, barn, cellar, attic. Contract and Illustrated Catalog Free.

STANDARD FOOD & FUR ASS'N
405 A. Broadway New York

PURE WOOL SWEATERS $4.60

Heavy weave, Shaker knit, V-neck, Pullover style used by all big colleges. In blue and green heather tone mixtures. Retails regularly for $10.00.

Send No Money

Just order and pay postman on arrival. All sizes.

"THE SPORT CENTRE" 527 Market St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Better Luck With Hens

Healthy birds and lots of eggs are not a matter of luck but of knowing how. Editor, H. P. Schwab, Prof. Lewis, Charles Cleveland, H. H. Collier and D. E. Hale point the way to profits with large or small flocks in Everybody's Poultry Magazine. These articles written in an understandable way that means dollars to you. Send 20 cents right now for a four months' trial subscription.

EVERYBODY'S POULTRY MAGAZINE
Dept. A Hanover, Pa.

December Garden Calendar

WITH our large family of COMFORT subscribers scattered thickly over the forty-eight states of the nation, it is a difficult matter to make our gardening hints apply to widely differing soils and seasons. The best we can strive for is the "happy medium" suited alike to readers in the Sunny South and the Snappy North.

Planning the Garden

December is the planning month. It is the month when we should set out the new grape vines, berry bushes and fruit trees; plant the vegetables and arrange the flower beds—on paper. Farm gardening, except in the comparatively few cases where it is conducted on a large and extensive commercial scale, is a sort of "hit or miss" proposition. Everything is left to the last minute, then done with a feverish rush. Naturally the best results are not obtained by this kind of hurry-up work. Careful planning is necessary for all-around satisfaction.

Some cold December evening after you have helped "put away" a generous helping or two of real old-fashioned New England boiled dinner, and while the memory of the tasty cabbage, onions, turnips, rutabagas, carrots and potatoes are still fresh in mind, get out your paper and pencil and go to work. After-dinner contentment is a great inspiration to us to plan ahead for future vegetable dinners. Remember that the home garden will pay abundantly for all the time and care the gardener gives it—if he, or she, have directed the gardening efforts wisely. Lack of success is most frequently due to neglect or to misdirected effort.

First, remember that it is useless to attempt to garden in competition with shade and trees. Hoeing, fertilizing and watering cannot make up for lack of sunlight. Otherwise good garden tracts may be entirely spoiled by worthless trees and shrubs which cast their shade on the plot. Their roots also under-run the soil to rob it of moisture and plant food necessary for the garden truck. Cut out trees or shrubs on the east, south and west sides of the garden; trees on the north side are less harmful. If this cannot be done, then select a new site for the garden plot. Do not begin under an unsurmountable handicap. Shade from buildings is another disadvantage seldom thought of. Keep it in mind when planning.

What sort of a house or barn would the carpenter build without a good working plan drawn in advance? Still, a vast majority of gardens are made and planted row by row, with no plan either in mind or on paper. Hit-or-miss planting results in wasted time, poor utilization of the soil and lessened production.

Draw your plan to a fairly large scale; for the small garden either one-half or one-fourth inch to the foot will be most convenient, as this shows more plainly the distances between rows. First decide where each crop is to be planted and the space to be devoted to each. Then draw these crops in, indicating the exact distance between rows and the direction of the rows. Also indicate the approximate dates for the planting of early crops. Then on another piece of paper plan for the "follow up," the utilization of the space occupied by early crops for others which will follow in the same space as soon as it is vacant. Here is one place where thought counts. For instance, how many of us know just what we will do with the space where the radishes, spinach and early peas have been grown? They are out of the way early in the growing season and if we are "onto our job" we can make real use of the same space for another crop. Another point to consider is the planting date for lettuce, peas, beans and other vegetables of which more than one planting is to be made to keep the fresh supply coming on over a longer season. For instance, it always is a good practice to plant beans, either green or wax, a row or less at a time, and to plant several rows at intervals of from a week to ten days. This insures fresh beans in quantities which can be utilized while fresh by the average farm family, a far better method than the single planting one which gives us first overabundance then no beans at all.

If it were possible for us to make a garden plan that would be suited to all cases and climates we would gladly do so. As this is obviously impossible, it is up to each individual gardener to "hoe his own row" in more ways than one. The best we can do is offer hints and suggestions based on our own experience. By the way, here is one: When the rough plans have been drawn on paper with a pencil, and every point has been thoroughly threshed out and definitely decided, take good heavy paper and make the finished working plan with ink, using India ink if you have it handy. Remember that the plan must serve for a whole season and that sweaty, soil-stained hands will rub off and blot out pencil marks. Therefore the heavy paper and ink suggested.

Ten Points to Remember in Planning

1. Make every foot of land work all the time. Most of the garden will easily grow two crops; part will even grow three if well planned.
2. Vegetables which can be stored for winter use should be given preference over those which spoil quickly and must therefore be used at once.
3. Plan long-season (slow-growing) crops first. Short-season crops will almost take care of themselves, and can even be grown between the rows of the former.
4. Crops requiring a large amount of space, such as potatoes, corn, and the vine crops like cucumbers and melons, might better be planted in a separate field.
5. Plant lettuce and spinach in the shade, not out of choice, but if a shady spot exists in your garden. These plants will get along with less sunlight than others such as tomatoes and beans.
6. Plant staked tomatoes and other high-growing plants where they will not shade the sun-loving ones. Shading may be reduced by having rows run north and south.
7. Plan on a wide variety of vegetables. Nothing is more tiresome than having the same kind of vegetables day after day. A little forethought can prevent it.
8. Avoid planting egg-plant, cauliflower and peppers unless you have had considerable experience with garden crops. Slight errors in cultural methods or an unsatisfactory season may spoil these crops. Better plan on the more hardy ones.
9. Better plan rows too wide than too narrow. It is safer to sacrifice space than good results. Crowding is dangerous.
10. Long rows permit the use of the horse cultivator, a labor saver well worth keeping in mind when garden planning. Short rows are a nuisance and should be avoided unless hand machinery is to be used entirely.

Why the Manure Spreader

Many farmers who say that they cannot afford a manure spreader are driving automobiles! We like to think, with good reason back of our personal opinion, that the farmer who has a good herd of cows and a manure spreader to make the correct and complete utilization of manure possible, can easily afford an automobile. But we do not feel that the automobile will in many instances pay for the spreader. Also, bankers will lend money more freely for the purchase of a new spreader than for an auto, unless it happens to be a truck, and the truck is essential to the delivery of perishable farm produce.

What can be said in favor of the spreader? Well, in the first place, the spreader can be easily adjusted to spread manure to any desired thickness, and it will do it accurately and evenly. This is obviously impossible where manure is hauled to the field in a wagon box, piled in small piles at more or less equal intervals, then scattered with a pitchfork. We have all seen the rank growth resulting from this "pile and scatter" method in a field of oats or timothy hay. Part of the land has received more than its share; the remainder has to make the most of short rations of plant food.

Nor is it satisfactory to haul manure to the field and scatter it direct from the back of the moving wagon, though this plan is somewhat better than the former. Time and time again we have even had lumps or chunks of dried manure and straw clog the sickle bar of the mower in fields which had been top dressed early in the spring. Later these same lumps are raked up by the hay rake and unless picked out they will go to the hay mow. This cannot happen when the spreader is used.

Farmers who own manure spreaders all speak of the great saving in hard labor. This is a point well worth considering, but to our way of thinking a more important point is the fact that the spreader is an inducement to "do it now." We all have seen, and many of us have labored on, the large accumulation of mixed and soggy manure in the barnyard right next to the door, where it has been pitched or dumped out of the wheelbarrow all winter long. With the spreader there is a big inducement to load it direct and haul it away to the field as soon as filled. Many barns are so planned that the spreader can drive right inside to be loaded then driven direct to the stubble field or other land and spread immediately. Others have the little carrier so arranged that it dumps its load into the spreader. Both plans are good, and distribute the manure hauling job over the whole season instead of storing it up for the busy time in early spring. We are not taking exception to storage of manure in concrete pits where the liquid as well as the solid fertility can be saved; such pits are a fine investment, but they are so uncommon on the average run of farms that we speak rather for the farmer who lacks them, and they are far in the majority. Any implement which helps distribute the farm work over a long period is a good investment, and when that implement at the same time does a very necessary work better, quicker and cheaper than it can be done by hand it is well worth considering as an investment.

We have never in our experience known of a farmer who has once acquired the "spreader habit" to go back to the old, hard unsatisfactory way. Some have learned by practice that certain styles of spreaders are better suited to their needs than others, but they all insist on having some sort of a spreader.

Care of the Calving Cow

The process of calving calls for the use of large amounts of stored up energy. On this point hinges to a large extent the success or failure of dairy management. Why? Because high milk production draws heavily upon the strength and vitality of the cow. The best milkers will make milk at the expense of their own bodies if need be, so strongly has the milking tendency been developed. Hence we can readily see that while a cow is milking she has little opportunity to store up a reserve of strength to be used at calving time. Therefore it is necessary for the dairyman to see that prior to calving time his cows are so handled and fed that the required energy and strength will be available when needed.

Many are of the opinion that a cow should not be dried off some time before she is due to freshen. Some go so far as to brag about the cow "that has never gone dry in the three years I have had her." This is a serious mistake, and one which can both harm the animal and the owner. No cow can continue to milk heavily right up to calving time and at the same time get her own body in condition to withstand the strain of calving then go right on milking heavily again for another twelve months. A rest of from six weeks to two months before calving is recommended in all cases. Shortening the milking period does not reduce the income from the cow; on the other hand, it increases her yields, and at the same time insures a big, strong, healthy calf. Successful dairymen with years of experience to back up their statements insist on having cows dried off. It is interesting to note that these men seldom have cows troubled at calving time or later with retained afterbirth, that they are the owners of the high producers, and that their calves make a remarkable growth right from the start. To them the practice of drying off their cows is backed by a strong dollars and cents' argument.

Up to the two weeks just prior to calving, feed the cow a liberal grain ration to enable her to put on a surplus of flesh. To cut down on her feed at this time, though many farmers do so, is a short-sighted policy indeed, and one that in the long run is sure to react against both cow and her owner. The ration should be one that will keep the bowels open. Good body building feed combined with silage and roots to add succulence will put the cow in the best condition. Then about two weeks before the cow is due to freshen the ration should be changed to bran and oats, or bran alone. Many dairymen give their cows all the bran they will eat at this time. If bran does not loosen the bowels, which it usually does, add a tablespoonful of Epsom salt to the ration daily. The reason bran is fed, in addition to the laxative property, is that it lessens the amount of congestion in the udder and causes the afterbirth to come away more freely and surely. The underfed cow is subject to all the ills resulting from retained afterbirth which her poor physical condition invites.

Nature decreed that cows at calving time should seek a secluded spot away from their kind and there on the clean grass give birth to their young. The spring calving cow can still be allowed to follow Nature's plan with relatively little danger of infection, though it is best to know where she is and to be on hand shortly after the calf is dropped to remove mucous from its mouth and nostrils and to help it stand up and suck if it is weak. Spring calving is now less common than fall or winter freshening, however. For the cow due to calve in cold weather it is well to remove her to a perfectly clean, sanitary, well-bedded box-stall two or three days before calving time so that she will become accustomed to her new quarters. Keep her under observation as the advent of the calf approaches, but do not remain in sight too much of the time. To do so worries the cow. All that is necessary is to be on hand to render assistance if needed; the cow that has been well fed and cared for seldom needs help if the presentation is normal, and to help when not needed may cause injury.

As soon as the cow shows signs of willingness to eat after calving give her a bran mash. Also give her water if she wants it. For the first day or two it is best to warm the drinking water to take off the chill. If the cow is a heavy milker, and her udder is distended or slightly inflamed, do not milk her dry for the first two days. In this way many attacks of milk fever can be prevented. Feed laxative feeds for four days or more if necessary, then change to the regular ration.

Ox Warble Damage to Cattle

Most farmers are more or less familiar with the ox warble or grub which causes lumps or swellings along the backs of cattle in late winter or early spring. Beyond the fact that these lumps contain a grub which can be squeezed out by placing the neck of a bottle over the lump then striking the bottle a smart "thump" with the hand, and that hides from warble-infested cattle are "docked" when sold, few farmers realize the great damage done by this pest. Experienced investigators of the U. S. Bureau of Entomology have recently added much to our knowledge of the warble, its development and control; we give the following brief account in answer to the many inquiries received from cattlemen the country over.

Two Kinds of Warble

A fact not generally known until recently is that there are two kinds of warbles in the United States. One has a very wide distribution, occurring over the entire country. The other is restricted to the cooler Northeastern and North Central states, and to a lesser extent occurs in the Northwestern states. The latter species is more important from the standpoint of the general farmer, for it is the one which does the damage in the feed lots of the corn belt as well as throughout the Northern dairy region from the Atlantic to the Rockies, whereas the former is most common in the range country where its control is almost impossible.

The Northern warble terrifies cattle more than the common warble fly at the time of egg laying. Few farmers have considered just what the constant running about the pasture and fly fighting really means in loss of weight or condition of beef animals and falling off in milk production of dairy cows. It is not possible to arrive at accurate figures covering this point, but figures are given placing the loss due to damaged hides at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000, whereas the estimated total damage has been placed as high as $150,000,000. Even though these figures include the whole country, the amount is startling.

Early Stages of Development

When cattle are quiet in pasture the fly usually deposits its eggs low down on the legs, attaching one to each hair. As the cattle become excited and dash around the pasture trying to escape, the eggs are deposited higher up on the thighs, belly and flanks. The eggs hatch in three to four days and the tiny maggots immediately crawl down the hairs and burrow under the hide. The old idea that they gained entrance into the body by being licked off by the tongue now has been disapproved. For the first two months after gaining entrance to the body the maggots cannot be traced, or at any rate they have not yet been followed. At about the end of this time they appear under the mucous membrane or lining of the gullet, where they remain for several months setting up irritation by burrowing up and down along its course.

Migration to Back

In the late fall or early winter, when the grubs have grown to a length of about three-fourths of an inch, they migrate up the ribs and diaphragm to the back, where they come to rest just under the hide along the backbone. When the lumps begin to form, the stockman for the first time learns that his cattle have become infested with warbles. On reaching the back the grubs each cut a small hole through the hide, then remain in the same place until fully developed. As the grubs grow in size the hole is enlarged, until about the time cows are turned out on grass in the spring, when the full-grown grubs, which have now become almost black in color, crawl out of the hole and drop to the ground. Here they lie for some time protected by the thickened skin, while the grub is transformed through the so-called pupa stage to the mature fly.

The ox warble fly lives only a few days at most and does not partake of any kind of food during its mature stage. Its only object is egg laying; once the eggs are laid the flies die. Furthermore, the flies do not travel far from the place where they "hatched" or emerged in the adult winged form. Authorities state that about a quarter of a mile would cover the cases studied. For that reason some stockmen in regions known to be badly infested by the flies keep their stock in the barn for a week or two when the adult flies are known to be about.

Control Measures

The fact that the adult fly lives for only a relatively short time and that they do not travel widely makes control possible. Under ordinary conditions the most effective plan is to remove the grubs about midwinter when they appear under the skin along the spine. As we have mentioned before, this can readily be done by pressing the opening of a wide-necked bottle down upon each lump. As one old farmer explained it to the writer when he was a boy, "Pop goes the warble." If all the grubs are carefully removed, and the sockets or openings are washed with a solution of coal tar disinfectant, healing will be rapid and satisfactory. With no grubs left in the hide to grow to maturity and produce the eggs from which a new "crop" is to be developed, the pests can be quickly eradicated. The only point to keep in mind is that the warble flies, though they do not range over a wide territory, may prefer your cattle to your neighbor's even though his stock may have provided their winter nursery. For that reason it is best to avoid roadside pastures or pastures along the boundary fence where it may be only a few rods to cattle either carrying the grubs or those which have dropped grubs which will soon develop into mature flies.

It is interesting to learn that in the state of New York a project to eradicate the ox warble grub in a whole county is now under way as an extensive test of this method. The Tanners' Council is reported to have contributed $10,000 to a fund of $40,000 which will be placed at the disposal of the Crop Protection Institute for labor, material and expenses necessary to carry on the extensive work of warble eradication in the county mentioned. This serves also as a proof of the interest taken by tanners and state agricultural departments alike in the eradication of this harmful pest.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from the eminent specialists and experts of our Agricultural Staff on questions relating to farming, live stock and dairying.

Address Modern Farmer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

Questions and Answers

WEEDS IN ALFALFA.—I have nine acres in alfalfa that is four years old, but the weeds are crowding out the alfalfa. Can I get rid of the weeds by re-seeding without plowing and destroying what alfalfa is there? If so, should the seed be cut in with a disc harrow?

H. H., Wheatley, Ky.

A.—If weeds have gained the upper hand throughout your entire alfalfa field then disking and re-seeding would hardly prove satisfactory. This method is employed only where alfalfa has winter killed or where a few well-defined patches of weeds are found. It would be best to proceed as follows: Plow up the whole field if weeds are bad in all parts. Disk and work up thoroughly, then plant to some cultivated crop which will permit of weed eradication. One season of this treatment should suffice. The following year, with the land clean of weeds, work up a good seed bed and seed alfalfa anew, using a clover crop to protect the young plants and keep back weeds until they get a good foothold. Select alfalfa seed that has proved successful in your locality, that has a high germination test and that is free from weed seeds. In this way you will again get an even stand upon the original field which is already inoculated.

ASPIRIN

Name "Bayer" on Genuine

BAYER

Beware! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for twenty-one years and proved safe by millions. Take Aspirin only as told in the Bayer package for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago, and for Pain. Handy tin boxes of twelve Bayer Tablets of Aspirin cost few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

AGENTS: $54 a Week

2 in 1 Reversible Raincoat

One side dress coat, other side storm coat. Tailored seams, sewed and strapped. Two coats for the price of one. Brand new. First season. Not sold in stores. We control the entire output. Take orders from men and women who object to paying present high prices.

Guaranteed Waterproof

or money back. Our men and women representatives having wonderful success. Right now is the big season. No experience or capital needed. You take the orders. We ship by parcel post and do all collecting. Commission paid same day you take orders. We are paying thousands of dollars to our agents taking orders for this new Reversible Coat. We have all of the latest and best styles of raincoats for men, women and children. Our new, big swatch book, 48 pages, shows all new and distinct patterns. Write today for agency and sample coat and make some real money this season.

Parker Mfg. Co., 517 Storm St., Dayton, Ohio

A Bushel of Reading Matter

REMEMBER We will not send you merely your choice of one of these books, but ALL FIVE of them, just as listed above. You all know Charlotte M. Braeme. She is one of the world's most fascinating writers. Her name alone is enough to guarantee a good strong story, interesting and entertainingly told. Here is a chance for you to read 5 of her best books, aggregating 160 large double column pages.

FREE OFFER To introduce our publication, EVERYDAY LIFE, the great monthly story paper of interest to all members of the family. Send only 25c to pay for year's subscription, and 10c extra to pay for postage, etc. (35c in all) and we will send our paper for one year and the collection of books as above. This is a big introductory offer. If the above titles are out, will send others just as good.

EVERYDAY LIFE, 337 W. Madison St., R M 75, Chicago

ELEGANT 7-JEWEL WATCH

$5.95

C.O.D.

An old reliable house offers this elegant extra thin 7-jewel watch for only $5.95. Genuine gold filled case—(not gold finished) Open face, screw back and bezel. Stem wind and set. Guaranteed 7-jewel movement. Gold hands and numbers. A dandy watch and fine time keeper. Regular price $10.50.

FREE for short time only—beautiful knife and chain with each order. Act quickly while they last. SEND NO MONEY. Pay postman only $5.95 on arrival, and watch, knife and chain are yours. Money back if not delighted. Large catalog free

UNITED BUYING ASS'N., 4410 Lincoln Ave., Chicago

INDOOR CHEMICAL TOILET

Get this New Modern Home Convenience at once. A City Comfort for Country Homes. No Plumbing! Running Water nor Sewerage required. Ask for No. 8Z9409 1-4 enclosing $6.98. Order today.

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO.
Chicago
Philadelphia Dallas

WHITE FLAME

BURNERS make your old kerosene lamps and lanterns give a brilliant white light better than electricity or gas. Doubles your light. Saves oil. No Mantle to Break. Guaranteed Safe and Reliable. Delights every user. Send now for complete sample postpaid 50 cts., stamps or coin. 3 for $1.25. Money back if Not Satisfactory. Live Representatives Wanted. Exclusive Territory.

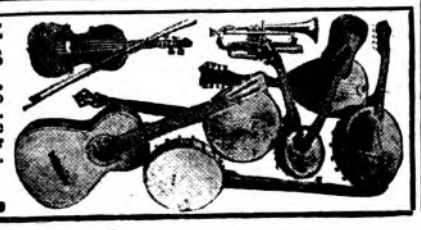
WRITE FLAME LIGHT CO. 76 Clark Bldg. Grand Rapids, Mich.

WRIST WATCH AND RING REALLY GIVEN

This up-to-date, serviceable, stem wind & set, popular size, guaranteed fine timekeeper, & fine ring actually given for selling only 24 pks Bluette our famous wash bluing at 15c or 24 & 12 pks Sachet Perfume at 10c. Order Choice. Both in big demand and easy to sell.

CHICAGO BLUING WKS., 1920 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. 301, CHICAGO



Sales Agents

wanted in every county to give all or spare time. Positions worth $750 to $1,500 yearly. We train the inexperienced. Novelty Cutlery Co., 76 Bar St., Canton, Ohio and lessons sent on free trial. Violin, Tenor Banjo, Hawaiian Guitar, Ukulele, Mandolin, Cornet, Banjo Mandolin, Banjo Ukulele, Guitar, Banjo Guitar or Banjo. Wonderful new copyrighted system of teaching note music by mail. Four lessons will teach you several pieces. Over 100,000 successful players. Do not miss this free trial offer. Write for booklet. No obligations.

FREE PROFESSIONAL TONE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

SLINGERLAND SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Inc.,
1815 Orchard Street, Dept. 121, Chicago, Illinois

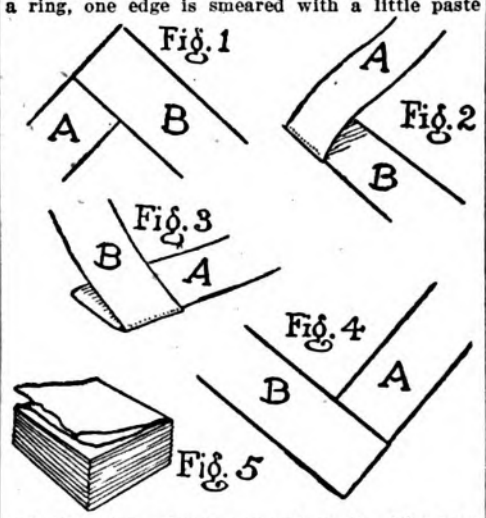
Paper Chains for Christmas Tree

By Paula Nicholson

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

VERY few people know that it is easy to make most decorative chains and cornucopias for the Christmas tree from gay-colored papers. The advantage of these decorations is that they are not only cheap but very effective.

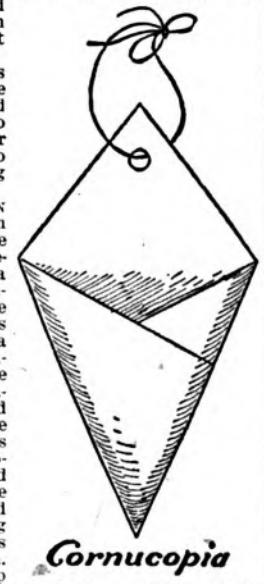
Most families keep their glass ornaments and tinsel from year to year and the expense is not really included in the annual decoration of a Christmas tree. At any stationer's one can procure sheets of colored paper. This is often called pinwheel paper and it comes in sheets four by six inches, each roll containing twelve sheets of every color.



Ring Chain

Accordion Chain

Good scissors are essential. The paste can easily be made at home. On a few spoonfuls of flour pour boiling water, stirring the mixture with a spoon; very little water will give it the right consistency; the paste should be quite stiff, not watery. Allow it to cool before using.



THE RING CHAIN. The ring chain is most effective and the most rapid to make. The sheets of the pinwheel paper are cut into four strips lengthwise with dressmaking shears which, by their size, will ensure a sufficiently straight division of the paper. The first strip is bent into a ring, one edge is smeared with a little paste and the other edge is pressed on it. The next strip of paper is slipped inside the ring and then bent in the same way and pasted to form the second link of the chain. By repeating the process add other links until the desired length of chain is obtained. This is all the secret. The art comes in the selection of the colors used. Chains in solid colors are very effective, the dark colors being more decorative. The dark green makes the most beautiful solid color chain. The chain in two colors is also pretty; about six rings of red and about the same number of black, or a combination of green and gold, blue and silver give a lovely contrast. In this blending of colors each member of the family will vie in obtaining effects, thus developing imagination and adding keenness to the whole undertaking. There undoubtedly will be in each family some independent member who will refuse to allow suggestions given by the others and will make a chain the "crazy pattern"—all colors mixed up without any order of design—but the result will justify the apparent lawlessness. A child of four can make these chains with delight and success, for even if the paper is a little torn and wrinkled through the handling of unskillful little fingers the beauty of the chain lies not in the perfection of the making but in the general effect, and the baby's chain can be hung in the most conspicuous place.

The same paper is used for making the accordion chain and the cornucopias, so that not all the paper should be cut into strips for the ring chain.

THE ACCORDION CHAIN.—The accordion chain demands a little more work, but the result justifies the extra labor. When the colors of the paper are mixed the chain seems ever changing, like a chameleon. It is elusive. To make it the paper should be cut into eight strips instead of four, as for the ring chain. The strips must be pasted together end to end, and for the best effect the colors should be solid—four strips being blue, then about as many red, and so on. The pasted strip should not be made too long, as that makes it more difficult to handle without tangling; allow it to dry while the second strip is pasted on. The two strips "a" and "b" are placed at right angles as shown in Fig. 1 and pasted together; "a" is folded over "b" as shown in Fig. 2. Then "b" is folded over "a" as in Fig. 3, and pressed down flat as in Fig. 4. The process of folding one strip over the other is repeated until the chain is of the desired length. When finished it will appear like a compact block like Fig. 5, but when stretched out it assumes the appearance of the "accordion" chain." It is well to paste the ends together, for the chain might unravel when stretched or allowed to hang loosely. The colors blend in the most unexpected ways, and as the chain is one with many shadows it is most effective.

Cornucopia

A dozen cornucopias will add to the interest of the tree, although if there are many little people more can easily be made; the paper does not cost much. These are made by simply turning the paper on a corner into the cornucopia shown in the picture; the other corner is pasted down and a colored twine or narrow ribbon is threaded through by which it can be hung on the tree. The paper is strong enough to stand the weight of the cornucopia well filled with candy and nuts.

130 New Transfer Patterns FREE

All The Latest Stylish Designs For Milady's Dress, Lingerie And Accessories, Children's Garments, Household Linen And Fancy Work, Also Hoops, Stiletto, Embroidery Cotton And Instruction Book.

COMFORT needleworkers will welcome this splendid new transfer outfit consisting of five large sheets of patterns, five skeins embroidery cotton, different colors: hoops, bone stiletto and book on embroidery stitches. This grand pattern assortment, which easily surpasses anything we ever offered before, includes more than one hundred thirty new stylish motifs for all kinds of wearing apparel, table linen, towels, handkerchiefs and many beautiful articles of fancy work for home decoration. They may be used singly and in innumerable combinations. There are designs for corset covers, petticoats, collars, borders and sprays for dresses, lingerie, etc., borders for braid, towels, etc., anchors, repeat scallops in five different sizes, two sizes of fancy scallops, fleur-de-lis, French knots, child's dress, Dutch figures, scarf end for Bulgarian work, rose design for pillow, corners for table covers, centerpieces, lunch cloths, handkerchiefs, etc., etc., 17-inch butterfly centerpiece, doilies, one complete 2¾-inch Old English alphabet, one complete 1½-inch initial block alphabet, one complete ½-inch initial script alphabet, and various other designs—over one hundred thirty in all.

The patterns may be instantly transferred to any material by simply rubbing with bowl of a spoon or by pressing with a hot iron. They can be used at least six times with satisfactory results.

Remember—in addition to all these patterns, we also include free of charge, five skeins good embroidery cotton in different colors, hoops, bone stiletto and a book illustrating and describing all the principal embroidery stitches, making embroidery so simple that a child can do it.

We will make you a present of this big transfer outfit if you will accept the following

Special Offer. For a club of two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this complete transfer outfit, exactly as described, free by mail postpaid. Reward No. 9272.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 20.)

have often noticed this." And Billy closed one eye and regarded his aquiline profile in the parlor mirror.

I liked your letter, Marjorie, and agree with you in admiring beautiful sunsets. What I can't abide is a sunrise. At 5.14 P. D. Q. of a cold winter morning I have seen the sun rise as I pulled on my boots—and I have thought it the ugliest sight I ever looked upon. But this wasn't a Vermont sun, Marjorie. Perhaps that made the difference and the difficulty.

TATUM, NEW MEXICO.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I want to be the first to join the "Girl Housekeepers of America." I think that would be something useful and grand. I want to be lots of use to my mother, as she isn't strong and I am the only girl. We live on a homestead on the eastern plains of New Mexico, fifteen miles west of the Texas line. Papa and Mamma have been here thirteen years. Mamma filed a homestead, then later she married and Papa filed a homestead, so we have a section (640 acres) of land. We farm some, but raise cattle mostly. We are selling cream this summer. We raise our own meat. Mamma has a nice start of Buff Orpington chickens. She has given me a part interest in the chicken business. We expect to get an incubator soon, and Papa is building a henhouse. This is a healthful country—plenty of fresh air and sunshine. It is mostly too high here for those who have heart trouble, but it is the grandest place on earth for those who have T. B. I would sure like to see the mountains, the trees and running streams you cousins write about. This country would seem odd to Eastern cousins for a while, but they would soon learn to like it. This is a plains country; no rivers, no trees, no mountains. The mirages you Eastern cousins read about in story books are real with us. They are most beautiful in the cool winter mornings, just at sunrise. You can see the towns or villages fifteen miles away. Every home has a windmill and tank. The gardens are irrigated from the tanks. Most people raise fish in their tanks for home use. We have plenty of cactus here to stick in our feet.

I am ten years old, and if this gets into print I may call again.

Your loving niece, PANSY HARKREADER.

Pansy, you are hereby appointed "First Housekeeper, Tatum Branch, New Mexico Council, Girl Housekeepers of America." Upon certification that you have made one tin of soft gingerbread, just sweet and dark enough and nicely baked, I will have the National Headquarters of the Girl Housekeepers of America forward you a "Gingerbread Badge" to wear upon your left arm as a token that you have passed the "Tendercook's Test." Remember the gingerbread must be baked in a square tin, be at least three inches in thickness, and have, when cool, a sort of molasses "goo" over the top. No other variety of gingerbread will pass the test, so watch out, do your best and have the oven just right.

And talking about tests, Pansy; it's certain you could pass one as a Girl Letter Writer. Your letter is one that Bill and I regarded as a remarkable ten-year-old production, and we have placed it in our Special Archives. And Billy and I know a lot about letters—both by taste and looks. You did not say a word about your school, nor tell how far you have to run in the cactus with your bare feet before you get to your desk. But your letter shows that you must have a good school—or rather a school with a good teacher—when you do get there out of the center of your 640 acres. If your school is really far off, Pansy, why don't you arrange to have it brought more conveniently close every morning by one of those mirages? What's the sense of having mirages around unless they are useful as well as beautiful?

I think that's a great scheme, Pansy,—having fish always on tap, so to speak, in your own tank. It's much handier than having them running loose in a river where you're never sure of catching them when you want them. A bunch of fat mackerel and halibut swimming around in your irrigation tank makes you quite safe from any delays or war prices of the family butcher and his Ford Meat Chariot. Why not a few lobsters in the tank, Pansy? And a crab or two? I should think some of the small mackerel and herring might get out through the irrigation pipes once in a while and be lost among the tomatoes and onions. But even then I suppose they would make good fertilizer.

I like trees and mountains, Pansy, and I'm not so sure as you are that I could learn to love your plains country. It would seem too plain for me and I would feel as if I were living in the middle of a dinner plate. Anyway, I would want a mirage of a mountain once in a while to prevent me getting too lonesome for the hills. If you'll agree to the mirage, Pansy, perhaps I'll come out some day and see how I like it and how your Buff Orpingtons and the fish are coming on. Are there enough homesteads left so that Billy and I could each have one if we decided we wanted to stay?

RIDGEWOOD, L. I., 277 Menahan St., N. Y.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

I just want to write you a little bit of scribbling from a long-lost and forgotten cousin. Now starts the commencement of what it was I am going to say yet once: I just came back from a five months' vacation on Long Island, and it's what you would call a grand and glorious place. I was reading the cousins' letters and happened to stumble upon the one from Frank Clark of Henryville, Tennessee, and so I've got to do a little knocking. I want to talk about the scenery on Long Island; you don't have to go as far as Tennessee, the Yosemite Valley, Colorado, or any of those places; Long Island gives you plenty of camping, rowing, swimming, roaming in the woods, berry picking of all sorts, apples, wild grapes, clam digging, both hard and soft; fishing, and trapping eels. This is only the enjoyment of the summer. Now for the winter months: Then Dame Nature casts over the earth a coat of that magnificent downfall we call snow. In the winter we have all kinds of hunting of small game, sleighrides, coasting, skating and all sorts of winter sports.

Now, dear Uncle, I guess I have got you wondering what sort of a specimen of animal is shooting this line of talk, so I guess I'll let you know that I am a little Mamma's Boy of 21. I have dark hair, brown eyes, complexion hard to say, as after coming back from five months in the open air and sunlight I am well done on both sides. I am a nut for camping, and my vacation consisted of nothing else. My occupation is that of an optician, and I can make you any color eyes or eyeglasses that you wish.

I guess I will close, and I will agree to answer any of the cousins corresponding.

With love to you, I remain,

Your long-lost, war-disheveled nephew,
GEORGE TEALE.

Here you've been in the war, George, and got long-lost and all disheveled as you admit, and you come back to our circle and talk a lot about Long Island and don't say a word about your wartime experiences. Not but what Long Island is worth talking about. You are getting pretty close to

(CONTINTED ON PAGE 34.)

Silver Salt And Pepper

New Colonial Design

THIS hand-Silver Salt and Pepper Set is the last word in style and service. The new "Colonial" is without doubt one of the most fashionable designs ever introduced. And the set will give years of service because both Salt and Pepper are heavily quadruple silver plated. They are three inches in height, of good weight and on account of their broad bases cannot easily be overturned, thus spilling salt and pepper on the tablecloth.

Solid Sterling Silver Sets are being made in this same popular pattern. As a matter of fact, it is difficult to distinguish the above set from one made of sterling silver.

We will send you this Salt and Pepper Set free upon the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this beautiful quadruple silver plated Salt and Pepper Set free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8114.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Free Outfit for Rug Making

Stamped Burlap, Hook, Color Scheme and Full Directions—For a Club of Four.

TO those of our readers who desire to take up the fascinating and profitable work of home rug-making described in March COMFORT, we are prepared to furnish everything necessary for the work. For a club of only four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you free, by parcel post prepaid, one large piece of burlap for a rug 31 by 54 inches in size, stamped with the handsome "link" design illustrated above. We will also send you one steel hook, complete instructions for making the rug and instructions as to what colors to use and where—the signal numbers in these instructions corresponding with the same numbers stamped on the burlap. Reward No. 8054.

If you prefer to pay cash, we will send you the stamped burlap prepaid for $1.00 and the hook prepaid for 25 cents. ($1.25 for both.)

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Taylor
BEST FOR FIFTY YEARS
NEEDS FURS

Fur Market Good!

Send for Fur Price List and Shipping Tags. Ship every skin you get to headquarters. Every "Old Timer" ships to Taylor. Best for fifty years. Top prices paid. Ship today. Book of Traps Free! Write for it. Quotes lowest prices on baits, traps and all supplies you need.

TAYLOR SMOKE TORPEDO
Reaches rear of den—drives every animal out. No suffocating or spoiling fur. Torpedo, 10 feet cable and 12 smoke cartridges. Postpaid.... ....$1.80

F. C. TAYLOR FUR COMPANY
685 Fur Exchange ST. LOUIS, MO.

BIGGS Wants FURS

Ship your furs to BIGGS at Kansas City and get Highest Prices—quick! No waiting. A fair, square deal to all trappers; honest grading and top prices, always. No "Commissions" deducted. BIGGS helps you make more money at trapping.

FREE! Send name and address today for Free Subscription to "Trappers' Exchange," the finest trappers' magazine published. Also ask for latest fur market reports and "How to Get Traps Free." Write Now!

E. W. BIGGS & CO.
702 Biggs Bldg. Kansas City, Mo.

TRAPPERS GET OUR PRICE LIST

We pay what we quote and do not undergrade. Cash sent you the same day your furs are received and you get highest market price.

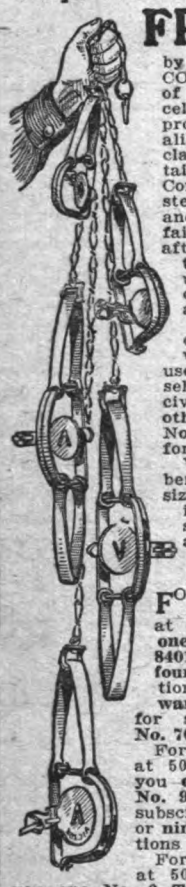
YOU GET HONEST GRADING

Get our price list and shipping tags. They are SENT FREE. Write today.

McCULLOUGH & TUMBACH
134 North Main St.,
St. Louis, Mo.

Wanted:

Raw Fur Buyer



We want a country raw fur buyer in every county of your state, to represent us this season. A big opportunity for those who qualify. Write at once for our proposition.

CHARLES S. PORTER, INC.
121 West 27th Street, New York City

FREE TRIAL

Let us send this fine Razor for 30 days free trial. When satisfied after using, send $1.85 or return razor. Order Today.
JONES MFG. CO. 160 N. Wells St. Dept. 648 Chicago

TRAPPERS! Don't Buy Traps When You Can Get Them FREE!

SAVE your money and earn your traps by getting up a few clubs for COMFORT. We offer you one of the best traps made—the celebrated "Victor," used by professional and amateurs alike. In fact, most trappers claim it is the best trap. Certainly there are none better. Constructed of the strongest steel, with a powerful spring and heavy jaws, it never fails to hold the animal after it is caught. Every "Victor" also has an 18-inch unbreakable steel chain, complete with swivels, ring and staple.

You can have your choice of sizes—No. 1, 1½ or 2—which are the sizes always used for muskrat, skunk, weasel, raccoon, mink, martin, civet, gopher, opossum and other small animals, while the No. 2 size is also large enough for fox, wolf and lynx.

We will give you any number of "Victor" traps—any size desired—free and prepaid if you will send us a few subscriptions to COMFORT, as explained in the following Club Offers!

FOR one one-year subscription (not your own to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you one No. 1 Trap. (Reward No. 8401.) Or we will send you four traps for three subscriptions at 50 cents each. (Reward No. 8753), or nine traps for six subscriptions (Reward No. 7616).

For two one-year subscriptions at 50 cents each we will send you one No. 1½ Trap (Reward No. 9302), or four traps for six subscriptions (Reward No. 7626), or nine traps for eleven subscriptions (Reward No. 72211).

For two one-year subscriptions at 50 cents each we will send you one No. 2 Trap (Reward No. 9312), or four traps for six subscriptions (Reward No. 7636), or nine traps for twelve subscriptions (Reward No. 73312).

Remember, we pay all parcel post or express charges. Please be sure to state both the size and reward number of each trap wanted.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Quest of Otter Pelts

By Dick Wood

CHAPTER III.

SUCCESS IN TRAPPING.

THE next morning would be spent setting traps in all the available places they could find. After the traps were set out and while waiting for them to catch the furs, they would haul over their deer, which they felt were safe from Curley's prying eyes; set up the folding sheet-iron stove and bank in the tent to stand the winter snows and zero weather.

True, the boys were a little concerned about having to live in a tent that could not be locked up during their absence; but ordinarily, as they knew, it is not customary to lock even cabins in the wilderness, and to do so is a serious breach of woods etiquette. Also to be caught stealing or plundering a cabin in the wilderness is an offense punishable by shooting. They did not expect anybody else to come into the vicinity; and decided Curley would hardly risk the chance of detection in robbing their camp. They did plan to hunt up some hollow trees or a cave to hide their furs in, especially any valuable ones secured.

The trappers started out to Pelcher Lake with about twenty-five or thirty traps apiece, ranging from the No. 1 for a weasel to 4's for otter and beaver. Most of their sets were made in hollow snags, so that they would not be snowed under in mid-winter. Such sets they called "cubbies," and these were generally good for a season, though it was necessary to replenish the bait supply occasionally. If the snag was hollow at the top, they roofed it over with evergreens; and invariably they had to use the belt axe to enlarge the hole at the entrance, so a large fisher could easily enter, if attracted to the set by the bait cached in the rear behind a skillfully covered and always ready-for-action trap. To make it inviting to the fisher, a pole two to four inches in diameter was placed to extend from the ground to the entrance of the cavity in the snag, and this pole served the dual purpose of a clog (the trap chain being fastened to it) and a convenient method of approach. The holes should preferably be three to five feet off the ground; that is, the height of the maximum depth of snowfall. The trap was usually covered with rotten wood dust, though moss and leaves are satisfactory if perfectly dry. This is the set for fisher, marten and even 'coon approved by the most successful wilderness trappers in the Adirondacks, the Canadian bush and Michigan Peninsula.

Mink were fairly abundant around Pelcher Lake, and this valuable fur bearer was eagerly sought by the trappers. The mink's tracks were to be found near the edge of the water; it is not much of a dry-land animal. Its food consists of fish, especially trout, birds, rabbits and similar small prey. They were not taking bait very well at that season, so the boys made blind sets for them, using a trap heavy enough to drown the animal when it springs into the water. They were fairly easy to catch by setting traps in narrow runways under drift debris, logs, banks, etc. Every precaution was used not to leave human scent around the sets. The traps were invariably staked so the catch would reach water of drowning depth.

AND INVARIABLY THEY HAD TO USE THE BELT AXE TO ENLARGE THE HOLE.

Weasels were everywhere so abundant it was a "cinch" to catch them, as Bill put it. All they had to do was to find one's trail leading into a hollow log, or any hole under tree roots, and set the trap unconcealed and adjusted to spring with the lightest tread on the pan. Usually a partridge or rabbit's head was used for bait.

'Coon were taken both in blind and bait sets, though this animal was not abundant in the vicinity of Pelcher Lake. A small cubby pen was built of sticks against a tree or ledge of rocks near the bank of the lake or a stream (as the 'coon, like the mink, invariably follows the water), and baited with fresh fish. Trout were easily procurable in every stream and could be taken as fast as one could pull them out. As they were so rarely molested by man, the boys felt no concern about using them for bait. Later these pens served equally well for mink, when the fish baits were strictly fresh.

The fox is one of the staple furs with the North Woods trappers. In some wilderness sections they are exceedingly numerous, although it is not by any means a rare thing to find this valuable animal abundant around the settlements, especially the outskirts of civilization or the foothill country. They are hard to catch, and they are not; depending on the skill of the trapper. Most fur bearers are hard to catch and hold. Even the humble skunk and muskrat will most blindly walk into the amateur's traps, but they are uncanny in twisting and chewing out of traps. The fox, otter and their kind are clever in avoiding traps, but once securely caught are very apt to stay caught until the trapper arrives to dispatch them.

As is the case with most valuable and particularly wilderness fur animals, the difficulty lies in the ability of the trapper to eliminate his own human odor, which the keen-nosed animals can readily detect around the amateur's sets. Foxes are cunning wherever they are found. In the farming sections they readily walk into the paths of men, having learned there is no danger in the tracks alone; but in the wilderness a fox will not cross a man's trail.

Both Bill and Fred had succeeded in trapping foxes on the farms and had little trouble in getting their share of the woods foxes. They visited the sets made at the paunches of the deer they had killed and found a fox at each set. The traps had been placed just before the snowstorm which covered them over properly. Thereafter the boys got most of their foxes by dragging out a large bait, just prior to a snowstorm, and setting traps around it. Occasionally it snowed enough to bury the traps before a fox visited the bait.

The skunk was not to be found in the deep woods, and the boys did not miss him. There isn't much fun in taking this animal when other more valuable and less offensive animals are abundant.

However, the little muskrat, known to every farm lad, was fairly abundant, though not of the size and fur quality as out on the farms, where there is an abundance of vegetation and sunlight. The deep dark-stained waters, buried in the shade of tall spruces and tamaracks, produce an undersized muskrat, with a pelt tending to be "papery," as the fur graders say. Yet muskrat furs were high and the carcass is so excellent for both food and bait, the boys kept out a number of traps on floating logs, in blind trails and at den holes along the banks of the lake and stream. The animal was given sufficient room to reach deep water and drown, otherwise mink, fisher and other animals would eat them out of the traps.

The middle of December arrived and the boys had done well trapping. They did not dare leave their furs in the tent, but put them in a hollow tree in a thick canvas bag suspended on a wire out of the reach of rodents. Of course, the furs were left at camp until they cured on the boards, and then taken out and hidden. They had taken one otter, two fisher and five foxes, besides numerous mink, 'coon, muskrats and weasels. They had not bothered to go after marten, which stay close to the peaks well up to timberline, where this line is reached, but caught a few in fisher sets. The marten will readily walk into a baited trap; the only difficulty is in locating their haunts. The trap should be a mink size, or No. 1.

Not having seen or heard anything of Curley, the trappers thought they would get through the season without molestation, and with a profitable catch, even if they didn't succeed in taking the otter. Yet, Fred had spoken several times of making another visit to Otter Pond to learn if Curley was catching the otter. Only once had the bunch come across their own territory and then they missed every trap.

One day it stormed and Fred sallied forth to "Curley's Pond" glad the snow would soon cover his trail and Curley would not be antagonized by his visit. Fred wanted to study the surroundings of this particular pond and ascertain the reason for otter preferring it to any other. The storm was a Godsend, and the young trapper knew he could leisurely inspect Curley's grounds without fear of meeting the irate old trapper.

Rounding a bend, Fred surprised two otters sporting on a steep bank and the ice of the lake. Their dark fur seemed to glisten, even in the dull light of the winter day. His first impulse was to shoot the largest otter, then attempt to get the other one before it reached an airhole. Second thought convinced him of the folly of such a procedure. The shots would bring Curley to the spot, which not only would be disastrous to his plans, but might result in a quarrel or something of worse consequence; and only by luck would he reach the struggling otter before they could reach a water-hole. There was yet a chance he could trap the otter himself.

Fred approached the spot, lately the playground of the otter, and was surprised to notice some refuse of trout, proving the otters had just feasted. He craned his neck to look under the ice into the airhole, and noted the abundant air space between the water and banks. Along the banks were numberless tracks forming a well-defined trail, while above the ice otter signs were extremely scarce.

That evening at camp Fred surprised Bill by outlining a plan whereby they could beat Curley to the otter. It sounded so plausible both boys celebrated the happy idea by opening their last bottle of grapejuice. They now felt confident they could induce the otters to come onto their own grounds and get caught in the traps, unbeknown to Curley. At last the old trapper would be outwitted. He would be chagrined to find the otter he claimed gone and to hear of the boys reaching home with a fine collection of pelts.

The young trappers had often wondered why the otter preferred Otter Pond to Pelcher Lake, the former body of water lying in trapper Curley's territory, the latter on their own grounds. It was for Fred to solve the natural cause and obliterate it.

Early one morning in December, a time when otter fur is at its best, Fred and Bill visited Pelcher Lake. Each carried an axe and some large beaver traps. Fred's surmise was right. The beaver had dammed up the outlet of the lake, thus flooding the vicinity. The water had backed up under the ice, completely filling all air spaces. Now an otter can swim, dive and sport under water; it can catch a fish, but it is not a fish. It must breathe air same as any other animal. While the otter may appear to live in the water by diving through an airhole never to reappear, nevertheless it must rely on finding an abundance of air between the ice and water.

The beaver is more at home in the water than the otter, though not any more agile. However, in common with the muskrat, it comes to the surface and breathes against the ice. When the bubbles have become purified and filled with oxygen, the beaver again fills its lungs and goes on. This process of breathing is natural with the beaver, whereas with the otter it may be only an emergency method. Anyway, the beaver were quite satisfied with the scant air spaces along the banks and in the tops of their houses. This condition was not exactly to the liking of the otter.

"That outlet was dammed up in the fall and accounts for the fact otter located around Otter Pond about the same time," explained Fred.

"What's going to fetch the otter over to this lake after you release the water? You can't go over and say to the otters: 'Now, Otters, I've let some of the water out of Pelcher Lake and you can now move your house.' They are content where

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 29.)

HILL Says- RUSH YOUR FURS

Don't wait for price lists. Don't wait for anything. Bundle up every fur you have and ship at once to HILL BROS. where you are SURE of highest prices, correct grading, prompt remittance.

NO COMMISSION CHARGED

You can rely on HILL BROS. We are absolutely responsible—have been in business many years and by our fair and honorable methods have won the confidence of the trappers and fur shippers of North America.

READ THIS SPECIAL OFFER

On shipments amounting to $30.00 or more, we will, if requested, hold your furs separate and advise you our best price. If not entirely satisfactory, we will promptly return your furs to you. Could anything be fairer than that? NOTE—If you want your furs held separate, your request MUST ACCOMPANY THE SHIPMENT.

SHIP YOUR FURS TODAY

Take advantage of this offer. Let us prove to you that HILL pays more for furs than any other house.

HILL BROS. FUR COMPANY
306 Hill Bldg.,
St. Louis, Mo.

FREE
HOW TO GRADE AND TRAP FURS

MAIL COUPON TODAY

HILL BROS. FUR CO.
306 Hill Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

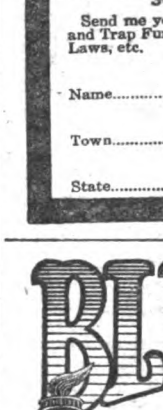
Send me your FREE book, "How to Grade and Trap Furs" Official Fur Price List, Game Laws, etc.

Name.....

Town.....

State.....R. F. D.....

BLUSTEIN Pays NEW YORK PRICES for FURS



Trappers and Collectors —this season you cannot afford to take chances. Be careful where you ship. Don't be satisfied with low prices—get more money by shipping to BLUSTEIN in New York—the gateway to the fur markets of the world. Send us a trial shipment and you will be so pleased that you will never ship elsewhere.

Why We Can Pay More Than Others

We pay more for furs than others because we have the best foreign market. We charge no commission, that's another 5% you save. If requested at time of shipment we hold furs separate and advise our best price—if not satisfactory, we return furs at our expense. Write at once for our latest Price List and Shipping Tags. We will place your name on our mailing list so you can keep posted on the New York fur market. Write us at once. Our prices will surprise you.

David Blustein & Bro.
196 W. 27th St. New York City

Trappers

We are fur tanners of all kinds of hides you catch. We tan and dress them in our own factory and make them up into coats, robes, gloves, mittens and

LADIES' FURS

When asking for our circular mention the kind of fur you have to be made up. We are taxidermists on rug work and mounted game heads of all kinds. We tan and make up fox skins very beautifully.

W. W. WEAVER
CUSTOM TANNER
730R READING, MICHIGAN

FURS— SHIP AT ONCE

to the "WORLD'S LARGEST FUR HOUSE" located in New York City—the World's Largest Fur Market.
We must have large quantities of furs. Ship Immediately.
BETTER PRICES — RETURNS — GRADING.
FREE Guaranteed price list, shipping tags and complete market news. A postcard will do—Write at once.
ALBERT HERSKOVITS & SON.
103 Herskovits Bldg.
44 to 50 W. 28th Street NEW YORK

HERSKOVITS
OUR CAPITAL $2,500,000.00

SKUNK

We pay highest cash prices for all staple furs—Skunk, Mink, Muskrat, Raccoon, Red Fox. Fancy furs a specialty, including Silver and Cross Fox, Fisher, Marten, etc. Est. 1870. Our continued prompt returns and liberal policy are now bringing us shipments from all North America, Alaska to Mexico. Send for free Price List. Address

M. J. Jewett & Sons, Redwood, N. Y. Dept. 5.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and broncial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

What 15 Cts Will bring YOU From the Nation's Capital

The little matter of 15 cts. (coin or stamps) will bring you the Pathfinder 13 weeks on trial. The Pathfinder is a cheerful illustrated weekly, published at the Nation's center for people everywhere: an independent home paper that tells the story of the world's news in an interesting, understandable way. Now in its 29th year. This splendid National weekly supplies a long-felt want: it costs but $1 a year. If you want to know what is going on in the world, this is your best means. If you want a paper in your home which is reliable and wholesome; if you would appreciate a paper which puts everything clearly, strongly, entertainingly, briefly—here it is. Splendid serial and short stories and miscellany. The Question Box Answers YOUR questions and is a mine of information. Send 15 cts. to show that you might like such a paper and we will send the Pathfinder on probation 13 weeks. The 15c does not repay us, but we are glad to invest in new friends. Address: The Pathfinder, 521 Langdon Sta., Washington, D. C.

GIVEN

Real Talking Machine. Plays all disc records, singing, band, instrumental. Clear and distinct. Guaranteed. Lots of fun. Record and needles included. Sell 40 packets Garden Spot Seeds at 10c a packet and the talking machine is yours. Send no money. Write today for seeds and catalog.

Lancaster Co. Seed Co., Sta. 192, PARADISE, PA.

3 Piece Toilet Set Free for selling only 8 boxes of our famous ROSEBUD at 25c a box; a home necessity. EASY TO SELL. WE TRUST YOU. Big catalogue sent with goods. Order today.

Write to this firm.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Dept. A, Woodsboro Md.

GIVEN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE

Fine moving picture machine with supply of films. Easy to operate, by oil or electricity. Free for selling only 12 boxes of Mentho-Nova. Sell at 25c a box, return the $3 and receive this dandy premium. Satisfaction guaranteed. Order now. Hundreds of other premiums and big Cash Commission.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. 850, Greenville, Pa.

BIRTH STONE RING FREE

14K GOLD finished, guaranteed to give satisfaction, with stone for any month, to introduce our catalogue. Send 15c to cover cost of advertising and mailing. Send size.

SUN JEWELRY CO., Dept. 28, EAST BOSTON, MASS.

SILK REMNANTS, LARGEST Packages yet offered. Square of Stamped Satin free with every package. 20c MFRS. AGENCY, X, Portland, Maine

Until January 1 Only!

Look At Me! I Have Curly Hair

I'm All Dressed Up!

This Beautiful DOLL Will Be Given For A Club Of Only Two!

THINK of it! This big, handsome Doll for a club of only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT. As we have only a few of these Dolls left, we are making this special short-time bargain offer, good until January 1st only. Considering the present high prices, which bid fair to hold for another year, every mother should send for at least two or three of these handsome Dolls even if they are not to be used until next Christmas. You will save money by doing so.

This Doll is nearly a foot high, has a strong, durable, stuffed body and an indestructible head. You can make her stand up, sit down in a chair and assume all sorts of natural positions. Her beautiful brown hair hangs in luxuriant curls, her eyes are blue as the sky, she has on a pretty trimmed dress with sash, and, taken altogether, she is certainly the cutest and sweetest baby doll in all toyland.

Last year we gave away thousands of these Dolls for a club of three, as Christmas presents to our readers and they were delighted with them. Now that there are but a few left, we shall give away the remainder for a club of only two. If you want one of these handsome Dolls, send in your order before they are all gone. We advise you to send in your order today—next week may be too late.

Our Bargain Offer! For a club of only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this handsome Doll, exactly as described, free by Parcel Post, prepaid. Reward No. 9872.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

Through the columns of this department free information pertaining to Etiquette, Personal Appearance and kindred subjects will be given in answer to questions by our subscribers, but not more than two questions the same month by any one subscriber. Address Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and give your own full name and address. Name will not be published.

A READER, Bristol, W. Va.—It would be correct for you to accompany your gift at Christmas to this teacher with the note you mention—adding to your holiday greetings thanks for the interest she has taken in aiding your studies. (2) Yes; a small silver pencil would make an appropriate gift, or a fountain pen of a size and type suitable to be carried in a hand bag or purse.

M. L., Ravensdale, W. Va.—Such a phrase as "Meet my sister Annie" would not constitute a correct or pleasant introduction. If your sister, through marriage, has a name different from your own, this should appear in the introduction for the sake of clearness. A simple and proper form would be: "Mr. Blank, this is my sister, Mrs. Dash."

E. C., Dagman, Mont.—The matter of popularity in social affairs is largely one of personality, although there is no denying the parts played by wealth and family position in influencing attention and regard. If you are kind and cordial in all your relations with the young people of your community, we do not quite see why you should be avoided in the way you state, and why you should have to write: "When I want to join them, they all run away." Try and take a real part in all the plans and activities of your young acquaintances, and be careful of whom you pick as a close friend or chum. Be sincere and natural in all your speech and actions; share your interests with others and join in theirs—and if you still lack friends, it will be the Dagman boys and girls who will be the losers and not you. Keep the wise old saying in mind: "To have friends, you must first be one."

GOLDENROD AND PURPLE ASTER, Wyoming.—No harm would be done by your telling this boy that you would be glad to have him come and see you some time. (2) It would be best, for various reasons, that you say farewell to your friend at the door of your home. If you walk with him to the gate, some nasty neighbor might infer that you were trying to hang on to your boy caller. Gossip is as plentiful as October goldenrod and asters.

L. B., Hancock, Md.—It has come to be the custom in wedding felicitations to wish the bride happiness and congratulate the groom upon his good fortune. Upon the part of the happy couple, smiles and thanks are the only needed responses.

BROWN EYES, Fairfield, Wash.—We think it vastly improper for boys to write notes to girls during school hours. There are plenty of classroom studies without establishing a course in correspondence with a boy teacher. Stick to the curriculum and make your boy friends understand that you intend doing this. (2) The right sort of schoolgirl complexion should have no need of cosmetics to give it beauty or color—and if one hasn't the right sort, a start should be made at once to make it so. The road begins with plenty of water inside and out; fresh fruits and green vegetables, with sweets and greasy foods avoided; and proper exercise in the open air each day. A touch of talcum powder might have a place now and then in a girl's toilet, but paint only best belongs upon the side of the schoolhouse where she studies.

M. S., Quinton, Ala.—The bride's costume for a December wedding would differ in no way from that worn for a ceremony in the month of June and roses. You should wear the conventional white silk and lace, unless you are married in your going-away gown—in which case any plainly tailored dark serge or tweed would be correct and sensible. In the latter case you would be careful to choose hat, shoes and gloves to harmonize with your traveling frock. (2) A girl bride would be greeted with a kiss by her father-in-law—or should so salute him if he appears bashful or backward. She might say: "I hope Tom's father is going to like me. I know you have a good son, and I want you to think you will have as good a daughter." Be simple and sincere in assuming your new relationships with your husband's family.

ANXIOUS READER, Pelican Rapids, Mich.—Your employer's gift to you last Christmas was undoubtedly in appreciation of your faithful services. He would not expect that you would make any like present to him this year, but would, we feel sure, be glad to have from you some card of greeting and remembrance at the holiday season. You may send him this, but do not make him any gift, which would be inappropriate to do under the circumstances of your relations with him.

E. R., Smithville, Tenn.—If your parents have no objection, you may follow the local customs prevailing among girl friends of your own age concerning escorts from prayer meetings, etc.

M. H., Lebanon, Ore.—At a party, a boy may say to a girl: "Will you dance this with me?" or, "May I have the pleasure of this dance?" A girl will signify her assent by rising to accept the offer. (2) There is no question of what a girl should answer when a boy asks, "if she has a kiss" for him. A boy does not properly make such an inquiry, and if he does thus break conventions, he must be prepared for anything which might happen in the way of the girl's reply. We have heard of some who made rather stinging answers. Etiquette establishes no rules for kissing inquiries, but it does prefer to arrange that a girl keep all privileges of personal affection for the man she is to marry.

SPORT, Alabama.—A boy would retain a girl's arm and make a way for her when taking her through a crowd. (2) When a boy and girl who are acquaintances meet upon the street, it makes absolutely no difference which of the two is the first to speak.

A. O., Imperial, Nebr.—In the case you describe, it would have been your place to make the required introduction. This was because you were acting as hostess in your own home and the duty more naturally devolved upon you. (2) The word "camouflage" is pronounced "cam-oo-flazh." The first syllable as in Sam, the second as in food, and the third to sound like the last portion of the word "garage." In the pronouncing of "camouflage," the accent is equally divided over the three syllables, with perhaps the slightest possible drag and accentuation upon the last.

FLOSSIE.—The delicious cheese concoction known as "Welsh rarebit" or "rabbit," is served by pouring it over individual slices of hot toast. This dish is usually made informally at chafing-dish gatherings, and the toast, if preferred, may be ready upon the plates of the guests to receive the melted cheese. (2) In serving grapefruit, a half is served to each guest. The fruit should be ice cold, and have the pulp previously cut away from the side and in segments from the center, so that each portion may be easily removed with an orange spoon. It is worth while to take care and pains in preparing grapefruit. A sharp knife should be used, and the fruit neatly divided from the tough inner and outer skin. No sugar is placed upon the fruit, but powdered sugar and salt should be at hand to suit the individual preferences.

F. B., Tulare, Calif.—You are correct in believing that a stamp is never enclosed in a purely friendly letter for purposes of reply. Your correspondent is in error in following his strange custom of prepaying your answering letters.

THREE HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS, Rifle, Colo.—You ask if it is proper for you to "go to places" with boys. Sometimes it would be proper and sometimes not—depending wholely upon the places. But we can state that any "place" where a boy can kiss you after seeing you but four times (as in your second question) is a most improper spot to be in, and we advise that you avoid either the place or the boy. (2) No, a boy should not introduce himself to you at a dance. He should find some friend to perform this pleasant ceremony for him. You should choose for your new acquaintances only those who are favorably known to other friends you now have.

B. A., Chicago, Ill.—You did the right thing in receiving as you did these friends of your sister-in-law who were strangers to you. It was one of the many instances where common sense and sincerity result in the best manners. (2) You could have apologized when you were compelled to leave the room in farewell, and you could have said to the callers that you hoped you might have the pleasure of seeing them again.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from our eminent legal adviser on all questions of law except divorce matters.

Address Home Lawyer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

MRS. W. L., Montana.—If your local assessor has assessed your property for more than its true value, or higher than other properties in the same locality, we think you should appeal for a review of the assessment to your County or State Board for the Equalization of Taxes; we think you should make your appeal promptly and that you should be prepared to show the true value of your property, and the assessment made upon similar property in your locality.

E. T., Oregon.—We think that children born to parents who have never been legally married are illegitimate.

MRS. A. S., Missouri.—We think it will be necessary for the woman you mention to make a complaint against the man who assaulted her, in order that he may be punished for his act.

MRS. A. C., Virginia.—Under the laws of Ohio, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving no child nor descendant, his whole estate, after payment of debts and expenses, would go to his surviving widow, provided the property did not come to the decedent by descent, devise or deed of gift, but in case such property came to the decedent by descent, devise or deed of gift from an ancestor or from a former wife, the share of the surviving widow would be diminished.

MRS. C. C., Kansas.—We think you should make your complaint for the violation of the Federal law you mention, to the United States District Attorney for the district where the law was violated.

G. M. S., Kansas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a married man, who abandons his wife, without good cause, can be compelled to support her, unless she has independent means of her own.

J. V., Michigan.—We think the laws of your state require that veterinary surgeons be licensed to practice their profession.

L. B., Illinois.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a married man has a legal right to leave his whole estate to his widow, by will, if he so elects, provided he possesses testamentary capacity, and provided no undue influence is exercised upon him in procuring the will, and provided the will is properly drawn and executed. We think your local authority would be in a better position to pass upon the validity of the will you describe.

MRS. E. S., Ohio.—Under the laws of your state, we think the rights of a widow in her deceased husband's estate upon his death, without a will, and without a surviving child or descendant, would depend upon the manner in which he acquired the property; if none of the real estate came to him by descent, devise or deed of gift, we think the surviving widow would receive the whole estate.

A. G. B., Tennessee.—We think an examination of the records would show whether the deeds you mention are in proper form to convey the property you mention.

MRS. G. E. P., Pennsylvania.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the real and personal estate of a decedent, whether male or female, remaining after payment of all just debts and legal charges, which shall not have been sold, or disposed of by will, or otherwise limited by marriage statement, shall be divided and enjoyed where such intestate leaves spouse and more than one child, one-third part to such surviving spouse, and the balance in equal shares to the children, the descendants of any deceased child taking such deceased child's share; we think the share of such of the children as are minors would be administered by a general guardian during minority; we think there is an inheritance tax if the shares exceed the inheritance tax exemptions.

MRS. J. P., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that if your debt is overdue, your creditor can enforce the repayment of same from any property you may own, not exempt by law from levy under execution.

E. E. P., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man or woman, without a will, one-half of the community property goes to the survivor and the remainder to the child or children of the deceased. We think either party to the marriage can dispose of his or her share of the community property by will.

MRS. G. M., Oregon.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving no lineal descendant, his whole estate would go to his surviving widow. We think a married woman has a legal right to disinherit her children and leave her whole estate to her husband if she so elects.

MRS. C. R., Minnesota.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that in cases where the parents are separated, the courts have power to award the custody of the children to either of the parents, taking into consideration what would be for the children's best interest.

P. G., Tennessee.—If your neighbor continues to trespass upon your property after being forbidden to do so, we think it will be necessary for you to prosecute her for her acts.

J. L., New Jersey.—We do not think the laws of any state prohibit a married man from leaving practically his whole estate to his wife, although in some states it is necessary to mention children to show conclusively that the intent was to cut them off; we think that in order to execute a valid will the testator must possess testamentary capacity, must be under no undue influence, the will must express his true intent, and must be legally drawn and executed.

D. R., Arkansas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that you would be entitled to a share in your grandmother's estate if she dies without a will in case your father is dead, but if he survives his mother you will have no intestacy rights in her estate as children are preferred to grandchildren; we think that if she leaves a will she can make a provision for you if she desires to do so, but she has a legal right to disinherit children or grandchildren if she elects to do so.

MRS. D. B. T., Pennsylvania.—Under the laws of your state, we think the consent of parents or guardians is necessary for the marriage of females under twenty-one years of age, and that in case the parents are divorced the consent of the parent to whom the custody of such child was awarded in the decree of divorce should be procured.

MRS. E. B., Idaho.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that in the absence of a will, your husband's children will be entitled to a share of his separate estate upon his death.

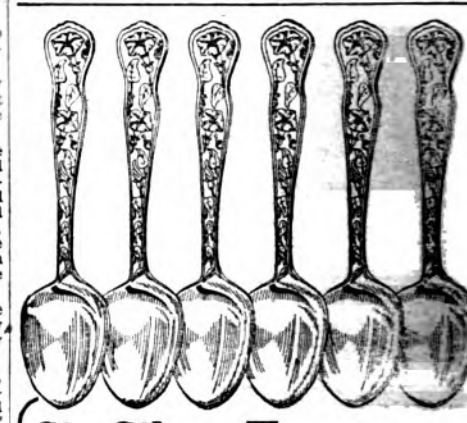
MRS. C. M. M., Texas.—We do not think you can now recover any portion of the land sold by your grandmother during the Civil War.

MRS. J. I., Pennsylvania.—We think that marriages between first cousins are prohibited by the laws of your state.

Club Feet

Ruby Booth was born with Club Feet. At ten months she was brought to McLain Sanitarium. Photos show result of treatment. Parents' letter tells everything.

When Ruby was 6 months old, a doctor put her feet in plaster paris casts. After 3 months they were no better than when he started. We had given up all hope of a cure, when we heard of McLain Sanitarium and took her there. Her feet are now perfectly straight. I shall never cease to be thankful. Refer anyone to me.



Mr. and Mrs. George Booth, Carbon, Iowa.

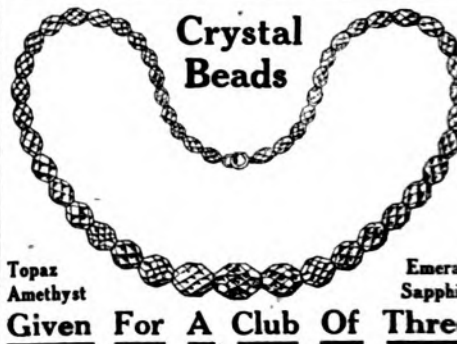
For Crippled Children

The McLain Sanitarium is a thoroughly equipped private institution devoted exclusively to the treatment of Club Feet, Infantile Paralysis, Spinal Disease and Deformities, Wry Neck, Hip Disease, Diseases of the Joints, especially as found in children and young adults. Our book, "Deformities and Paralysis," also "Book of References" sent free.

L. C. McLain
Orthopedic Sanitarium
990 Aubert Ave.
St. Louis, Mo.

Six Silver Teaspoons

The Beautiful "Morning Glory" Design



BY buying in large quantities we are enabled to offer our readers this handsome set of six teaspoons for the ridiculously small club mentioned below. They are six inches long, silver plated on a white metal base, so there is no brass to show through, and they will never have that dingy or tarnished appearance even after years of constant use. The design is the beautiful "Morning Glory" deeply embossed on the handles which are finished in soft, elegant French grey. The bowls of the spoons are perfectly smooth and bright polished.

The rich design and splendid wearing qualities of these teaspoons combine to make this the most attractive premium offer in years. Our illustration does not do them justice. They must be seen to be appreciated. We know they will exceed your highest expectations.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you six of these fine Silver Plated Teaspoons free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9682.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Crystal Beads

Topaz Amethyst Emerald Sapphire

Given For A Club Of Three!

THESE Crystal Beads are the latest thing out and so beautiful are they we could not refrain from buying a quantity to give as club rewards to our young lady readers. The Necklace is 24 inches in length, with a strong, durable gold-plated clasp; the beads are graduated, the largest ones measuring ⅞x⅝ inches and the smallest ⅜x¼ inches in size. They are real cut glass—not pressed glass—and their flashing prismatic colors are a delight to the eye.

For summer wear, with low-neck dresses, nothing could be more stylish than one of these handsome new necklaces and we are delighted to think that we are able to make this offer. Be sure to state color desired when ordering. You can have your choice of Topaz, Amethyst, Emerald and Sapphire.

Given To You! For only three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you one of these handsome and stylish Crystal Bead Necklaces free by parcel post prepaid. Please be sure to mention color wanted. Reward No. 9033.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Eveready Flashlight

THIS is the "Eveready" Daylo, 6½ inches long, 1½ inches in diameter, equipped with a powerful battery that will last for many weeks. It is always ready for use—a simple movement of the finger turns the light on or off as desired. In the night it shows the way around the house without fuss or bother—it lights up the darkest rooms, attics or basements. It can be used in the shed or barn, around hay, powder or gasolene without the slightest danger of fire. Outdoors, neither wind nor rain can put it out. When riding or walking after dark, it throws a brilliant light far in advance, showing up every object long before you reach it. This flashlight is so useful you should not think of getting along without one. Safe, convenient, always ready when you want it, it is the best insurance against fire and accident in the world.

CLUB OFFER. We will send you this Eveready Flashlight complete with battery, all ready for business, for four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each. Reward No. 7984.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Don't neglect a Cold

Dangerous sickness often starts with a cold. Ward off your colds with Musterole before pneumonia starts.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment made with oil of mustard. It has all the healing properties of the old-fashioned mustard plaster but none of the unpleasant features.

Musterole is not messy to apply and without the blister.

At the first sneeze or sniffle take down the little white jar of Musterole from the bathroom shelf and rub the ointment gently over the congested spot.

With a tingling warmth it penetrates the skin and goes right down to the seat of trouble.

Rheumatism, tonsillitis, lumbago, coughs and colds are all symptoms that call for Musterole.

Order Musterole today from your druggist. 35c and 65c in jars and tubes; hospital size, $3.

The Musterole Co., Cleveland, Ohio

BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER

MUSTEROLE

WILL NOT BLISTER

FOUKE

WANTS $10,000,000.00 WORTH OF FURS

And will pay higher prices than any house in America to get them. We have such a big demand we must have more furs quick. Write for new book—Trappers' Partner, regular price lists and tags—all free. Don't sell your furs until you get Fouke's prices. Write today.

FOUKE FUR CO., 250 Fouke Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

OTTAWA

1½ H-P ENGINE IS NOW ONLY $35.50

Other sizes 2 to 22 H-P at low prices. Good engines sold direct to you 90 Days' Trial -10 Year Guarantee. Write for Free book before you purchase any engine.

OTTAWA MFG. CO.
1271-A King Street Ottawa, Kansas

16,000 Miles without a Puncture

Wonderful invention. Insyde Tyres—Inner Armor for automobile tires. Positively prevent punctures and blowouts. Guaranteed to give double tire mileage, any tire—old or new.

Over 100,000 Satisfied Customers

Easily applied without tools. Just slip inside casing before replacing tube. Will not heat or pinch. Use over and over again. Old worn-out casings will give 3 to 5,000 miles more service. Low priced. Agents wanted in every county.

American Accessories Co., B-1623 Cincinnati, O.

"Linene" TRADE MARK

Send 2 Cents in U. S. stamps to pay postage and we will send you FREE a SAMPLE COLLAR of our New Style "Copley." State size wanted. REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. E, Boston, Mass.

FREE

Sell 24 Perfume Pkgs. at 10c. When sold send $2.40 and we'll send stem wind watch, or keep $1.00. Rex Co., V-12, Chicago

MONEY Made quickly by smart men. Artol Co., 115 Nassau St., N. Y.

Comfort's Bedtime Stories

For Little Folks

20 WONDERFUL TALES In Story And Verse 20

TWO complete libraries of cute little books for the children, including many of the old-time favorites as well as newer and later stories. Library No. 7951 consists of Robinson Crusoe, Little Red Riding Hood, Cinderella, Mother Goose, Animal Pets, Playmates, The Three Bears, The Sleeping Beauty, Playful Pets, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 1. Library No. 7991 consists of Land of Tulips, Our Farm Yard, Our Country, Happy Days, Story of Santa Claus, Chums, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 2; In the Jungle, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 3; The Big League. Each book is 4x5¼ inches in size, printed in large clear type and contains five beautiful full-page illustrations in colors.

Given To You! We will send you either Library of 10 Books free and prepaid for one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, or both Libraries (20 Books) for two one-year subscriptions at 50 cents each. Please mention number of Libraries wanted.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Quest of the Otter Pelts

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 27.)

they are, and not moving much, they will not discover the water has been released here."

"Leave that to me, my Partner, just heave the axe against some of those large limbs holding this beaver dam together. We'll cut through enough of the dam to release the water a foot. We need a few more beavers to fill our permit, and can get them by setting traps at the break in the dam. They will walk into anything to repair their dam after the water starts falling fast."

It didn't take the boys long to tear out enough of the dam to let the water down the required amount. So toughly woven were the branches that there was no danger of the entire dam washing out. The boys knew that a few beavers would get in their traps, and this happening would frighten the rest so they would refrain from further attempts to repair the dam.

The water fell with much cracking and groaning of the ice. The boys hastened back to the shelter of nearby evergreens, after they had set their traps, and awaited the outcome. Very soon a large beaver, one of the males of the colony, came down to the opening of the ice towing a peeled branch of a popple tree. Unsuspecting of danger, it set its fore feet into one of the water-buried traps. With a lurch, it dived into deep water, and churned it till it foamed.

After a half-hour, it seemed to Fred, he succeeded in getting the beaver to the surface and close enough to dispatch it with a club. In the interim a beaver had stuck its head up in front of the boys. Bill was ready with his rifle, having anticipated such a chance, and placed a .25-20 bullet between its eyes, at almost the same instant hurling his gun onto the ice and making a dive for the beaver. Fortunately he was able to grab a kicking hind leg as it was fast disappearing under water, and threw the dying animal out on the ice.

The boys had no trouble in finishing filling their allotment of beavers, as these animals became frantically careless in attempting to repair their dam. There was a thrill to getting so many valuable pelts by such a quick method, and the boys were reminded of younger days when they had read and re-read the writings of Irving and others on early-day trapping methods practiced by the white and redskin trappers.

When the water got down to a normal overflow, the ice had sagged considerably toward the middle of the lake. The boys now gathered up their pelts, and the best quarters of the beavers for food, and hiked for camp.

The young trappers did not again visit the lake for a week. They did not want scouting otters to find the slightest trace of human odor around the lake.

Fred's surmise that the otter would discover the new condition of the water at Pelcher Lake was correct. A week after the water had been lowered, several otter signs were noticeable about the beaver dam. No doubt the otter had found the fishing much better, as the trout had been unmolested except for the toll taken by mink.

The boys tended their mink, weasel and marten lines until about ten days had elapsed after the breaking of the dam, then they carefully set nearly two dozen large traps around the lake; particularly taking pains to guard the outlet. A trap was set blind at every airhole. As these holes were invariably over swift water, the traps were not too deep setting on the ground and there was no odor to alarm the animal. In a few of the places, where the water was apt to freeze over, salt was used to prevent ice forming, but a set or two was demolished by the deer trying to get the salt, so the method was abandoned.

The traps were never touched by bare hands. They had first been carefully boiled, then dipped out with a wooden fork and handled with buckskin gloves. Most of the sets were blind, that is without bait. Such a set is the most successful with keen-nosed and sly animals, if the trapper knows where to place his traps. He locates the sets by watching trails, haunts, etc.

Invariably a stone was wired to the trap chain so as to carry the animal down into deep water and drown it. This prevented the struggling animal from frightening others away, besides being a humane practice.

One of the most effective sets was made by sawing a block of ice out near each bank of a small stream and placing a blind set trap along the bank. Invariably tracks showed the banks had been used. If the water was shallow so the animal could wade a distance away from the bank, sticks were used to fence in the trap, thus forcing any passing animal over the trap. Precaution was taken not to use sticks the beaver would chew on, such as popple. Where the stream was very small and shallow, a block of ice was cut out through the middle, the trap placed in the center and fenced on each side to the banks so even a small mink could not pass without going over the trap. The crosscut saw was used to remove the ice and it was sawed on a slant inward at the bottom, so the blocks set back easily. Salt or snow was used to prevent the blocks from freezing tight. This set caught them many minks and otters.

The second day after the otter traps were set out the boys collected three otters, all drowned and their fur in number one condition. This was the most valuable catch they had ever made in their lives, eventually netting each about fifty dollars. They could hardly believe their eyes; valuable otters were coming in as fast as muskrats had on the farm trap lines.

A week of huge trapping success passed. The boys had worked from daylight till dark tending their traps, and till bedtime skinning and stretching the furs. Boards had been planed out from split cedar, hewed to regulation size with a pocket axe.

The day arrived when the boys collected their duffle and furs together preparatory to the trip out to home and the farms. They wanted to get started while the tobogganing was good, besides the otter had quit getting into their traps. They now had about a dozen of these fine furs, which were enough for anybody but game hogs. Finding their furs in the hollow-tree cache unmolested, the boys decided to go by Curley's camp. They had been considerably surprised and not a little anxious in not seeing or hearing anything from the old trapper.

Curley was sitting in camp with his feet propped up on the stove-hearth watching a pot of beans boil. The whoop of the boys brought him to his feet. His face registered more than surprise when he opened the door and saw the big bunch of furs lashed on the boys' toboggan.

"What luck?" greeted Bill good-naturedly.

"Wal, not so bad. I see you get the otter. It takes regular trappers to get them birds."

Fred glanced about the cabin and noticed the dry-goods-box cupboard was almost empty.

"Well, Curley," said Fred, "we realize we got a little close to your grounds, not knowing you were coming back to trap this year. I don't see many furs around and your larder looks empty, too. I—we——"

"Yes, I've had tough luck. Ain't got no grub, no cartridges, no tobacco and no snowshoes to get out on. Broke my last pair of 'shoes yesterday, and got no buckskin or seasoned wood to repair them. Not been to my traps today. Was going to cook this last mess of beans and then starve slow, like the animals in my traps. 'Course after the way I treated you boys—well, I don't blame you if you keep on goin' an' I ain't got a bullet to hold you all up with. But I hope you'll think of my poor old folks up in Canada and take this letter out and mail it. It's a good-by message; I left years ago and never sent word back. Oh, if I only had some tobacco left I could stand it till spring, then raft down the river."

Curley extended the poorly scribbled letter addressed to a lady in Montreal, then wearily walked over to his bunk and laid down. The beans began to smell of scorching, but he made no effort to remove them from the stove.

Both boys were moved by the old trapper's pathetic predicament. Perhaps he regretted his unruly past; maybe he had been moved to unfriendly deeds by unfair competition. Anyway, both boys agreed to the resolution disclosed in each other's eyes. Fred beat Bill to it:

"Here, Curley, we've got more grub than we need going out. Here is an extra pair of snowshoes we had, and you'll find more grub cached in a hollow tree near our camp site. There's a trail to it. Lucky my gun shoots the same cartridge yours does; here's two dozen rounds. They're too heavy to carry out, anyway. We've got no tobacco but you'll find some cached back of that cupboard if the pesky red squirrels haven't carried it away. Found it there in the box when we came in; stuck it back out of the way. So long, hope you make a good catch; we didn't get them all."

The boys unloaded much of their outfit and started before the amazed Curley could take a big chew of the "F. O. B."

"Hey, boys, gimme that letter," yelled Curley, the boys fast disappearing in the dense balsams and tamaracks. "I ain't going to send it, I can go myself, now. Look here."

Curley pulled up the makeshift mattress over the bunk. Under it was the finest bunch of fisher pelts they had ever seen. Fisher were more valuable than otter.

"Yep, I laid off the otter this year; didn't have time to bother with them. I located this pocket of fisher in the Bearclift ledges last season. I knew fisher furs were going to run high, so I let people think I was leaving the country so they wouldn't be coming in on me. Every trapper in the state thinks there is more furs where Curley traps, because he gets the most. They tried to hog me out of my own grounds and trap under my nose. Some of them give me the devil because I came from Canada. They hate Canucks.

"Now I can finish my mountain trapping and get out in the spring with the biggest catch I ever made. Then it's me for old Canada. And, boys, this cabin and these grounds belong to you, and if you'll stay over a few days I'll show you over the fisher lines and let you onto the best drag scent bait you ever saw. All I ask is you keep it mum; my Indian grandfather taught it to me. It's a secret of the old Canuck trappers."

"Shake, Curley," exclaimed Fred.

"Here, too," dittoed Bill.

The boys stayed.

THE END.

Do You Want BIG MONEY For YOUR Furs?

Sure you do! How can you get it? That's up to you! All you have to do is to ship to the right house. Scores of thousands of trappers all over North America have learned from experience that a sure way to get big money for furs is to ship direct to an honest, reliable, responsible, safe fur house—a house that has been satisfying fur shippers for more than thirty-eight years—a house that will always give you an honest grading, pay you the highest market price on every skin and send your returns quickly. "SHUBERT" is a mighty good house for you to do business with. You take no risk—"THE SHUBERT GUARANTEE" protects you absolutely. We want furs—QUICK—and are paying big prices, so don't wait another minute—quick action means big money for you.

SHUBERT

GIVE "SHUBERT" A TRIAL TODAY

SHIP ALL YOUR FURS DIRECT TO

A. B. SHUBERT, INC.

THE LARGEST HOUSE IN THE WORLD DEALING EXCLUSIVELY IN AMERICAN RAW FURS

25-27 W. AUSTIN AVE. DEPT. 28 CHICAGO, U. S. A.

SHIP QUICK!

Ship DIRECT to FUNSTEN if you want the big money! Don't wait to write! The World's Leading Fur House is giving highest grading, best service—biggest checks.

We want MORE Muskrat, Mink, Skunk, Raccoon, Fox, Wolf, Civet Cat, etc., quick! and are paying top prices now! Get check by return mail. Write for our special information to Fur Buyers.

FUNSTEN ANIMAL BAIT

Used by successful trappers for 20 years. Double your catch. State kind wanted. $1 PER CAN 3 Cans, $2.50 Postpaid

FUNSTEN BROS. & CO.
436 Funsten Bldg.
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

BIG PRICES For MUSKRAT!

SHIP TO

FUNSTEN

Trapping Solves Unemployment in Rural Districts

With the return of the raw fur industry to a normal basis, the trapping of fur-bearing animals will be engaged in quite extensively again this winter and more than a million men and boys will have an opportunity to reap the harvest that nature has provided for them. The fur catch this season should amount to approximately fifty millions of dollars and practically every cent of this large amount will go directly to the men and boys of the rural districts.

Trapping always provides profitable work for those who engage in it and this year in particular, when so many of our people are in need of employment, the opening of the trapping season has been looked forward to with hopeful expectancy. The big fur houses are cooperating with them to the extent of furnishing free all information necessary to enable them to become successful trappers.

If you have spare time you will find trapping this season profitable enough to provide a good income during the winter months. Get started at once by writing one or more of the reliable fur houses whose advertisements you will find regularly printed in COMFORT.

The U. S. Public Health Service estimates that at least 500 and possibly 1,000 lepers are at large in the United States, and that the number is increasing. The government did not start work on its Federal Home for Lepers a minute too soon.

GIVEN A REAL HAMILTON .22 RIFLE

For selling only 2 lots of our Beautiful Colored Art & Religious Pictures at 10c each. Order 25 pictures at once. They sell on sight. You can easily win this 22 Sure Shot Rifle in no time. Guaranteed. GAIR MFG. CO., 1926 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. 601, CHICAGO

Big Premium Budget 10c

17 Popular Songs with Music, 25 Portraits, Actresses, Presidents of U. S., 14 Complete Stories, 63 Magic Tricks, 56 Amusing Experiments, 15 Puzzles, 22 Rebuses, 60 Parlor Games, 150 Riddles and Conundrums, 100 Jokes and Funny Readings, 60 Money-Making Secrets, 84 Album Verses, Dictionary of Dreams. Send us 10c, and we will send all the above, and Big Novelty and Jewelry Catalogue. Add 2 cents for postage.
H. C. LORCK, Dept. C-8, GREENLAWN, N. Y.

Our Scientific Method will stop that

STAMMER

Send for free 200 page book. It tells how to permanently stop stammering or stuttering in a few weeks' time. A natural guaranteed method.
The Lewis School for Stammerers
12 Lewis Bldg., 71-77 Adelaide St., Detroit, Mich.

Wrestling Book FREE

Be an expert wrestler. Learn at home by mail. Wonderful lessons prepared by world's champions Farmer Burns and Frank Gotch. Free book tells you how. Secret holds, blocks and tricks revealed. Don't delay. Be strong healthy. Handle big men with ease. Write for free book. State age. Farmer Burns, 3049 Ramge Bldg., Omaha, Neb.

Ship Us Your Raw Furs By Express

We guarantee to hold all shipments entirely separate, and in case our valuations are not satisfactory we will return your goods at once, and pay all express charges both ways.

H. A. PERKINS & CO.
WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, VT.
References: Dun or Bradstreet Commercial Agencies—Any Bank

Cuticura Soap
—The Safety Razor—
Shaving Soap

Cuticura Soap shaves without mug. Everywhere 25c.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and broncial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

What 15 Cts Will bring YOU From the Nation's Capital

The little matter of 15 cts. (coin or stamps) will bring you the Pathfinder 13 weeks on trial. The Pathfinder is a cheerful illustrated weekly, published at the Nation's center for people everywhere; an independent home paper that tells the story of the world's news in an interesting, understandable way. Now in its 29th year. This splendid National weekly supplies a long-felt want; it costs but $1 a year. If you want to know what is going on in the world, this is your best means. If you want a paper in your home which is reliable and wholesome; if you would appreciate a paper which puts everything clearly, strongly, entertainingly, briefly—here it is. Splendid serial and short stories and miscellany. The Question Box Answers YOUR questions and is a mine of information. Send 15 cts. to show that you might like such a paper and we will send the Pathfinder on probation 13 weeks. The 15c does not repay us, but we are glad to invest in new friends. Address: The Pathfinder, 521 Langdon Sta., Washington, D. C.

GIVEN

Real Talking Machine. Plays all disc records, singing, band, instrumental. Clear and distinct. Guaranteed. Lots of fun. Record and needles included. Sell 40 packets Garden Spot Seeds at 10c a packet and the talking machine is yours. Send no money. Write today for seeds and catalog.

Lancaster Co. Seed Co., Sta. 192, PARADISE, PA.

3 Piece Toilet Set Free for selling only 8 boxes of our famous ROSEBUD at 25c a box: a home necessity. EASY TO SELL. WE TRUST YOU. Big catalogue sent with goods. Order today.

Write to this firm.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Dept. A, Woodsboro Md.

GIVEN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE

Fine moving picture machine with supply of films. Easy to operate, by oil or electricity. Free for selling only 12 boxes of Mentho-Nova. Sell at 25c a box, return the $3 and receive this dandy premium. Satisfaction guaranteed. Order now. Hundreds of other premiums and big Cash Commission.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. 850, Greenville, Pa.

BIRTH STONE RING FREE

14K GOLD finished, guaranteed to give satisfaction, with stone for any month, to introduce our catalogue. Send 15c to cover cost of advertising and mailing. Send size.

SUN JEWELRY CO., Dept. 28, EAST BOSTON, MASS.

SILK REMNANTS, LARGEST Packages yet offered. Square of Stamped Satin free with every package. MFRS. AGENCY, X, Portland, Maine 20c

Until January 1 Only!

Look At Me!

I Have Curly Hair

I'm All Dressed Up!

This Beautiful DOLL Will Be Given For A Club Of Only Two!

THINK of it! This big, handsome Doll for a club of only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT. As we have only a few of these Dolls left, we are making this special short-time bargain offer, good until January 1st only. Considering the present high prices, which bid fair to hold for another year, every mother should send for at least two or three of these handsome Dolls even if they are not to be used until next Christmas. You will save money by doing so.

This Doll is nearly a foot high, has a strong, durable, stuffed body and an indestructible head. You can make her stand up, sit down in a chair and assume all sorts of natural positions. Her beautiful brown hair hangs in luxuriant curls, her eyes are blue as the sky, she has on a pretty trimmed dress with sash, and, taken altogether, she is certainly the cutest and sweetest baby doll in all toyland.

Last year we gave away thousands of these Dolls for a club of three, as Christmas presents to our readers and they were delighted with them. Now that there are but a few left, we shall give away the remainder for a club of only two. If you want one of these handsome Dolls, send in your order before they are all gone. We advise you to send in your order today—next week may be too late.

Our Bargain Offer! For a club of only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this handsome Doll, exactly as described, free by Parcel Post, prepaid. Reward No. 9872.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

Through the columns of this department free information pertaining to Etiquette, Personal Appearance and kindred subjects will be given in answer to questions by our subscribers, but not more than two questions the same month by any one subscriber. Address Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and give your own full name and address. Name will not be published.

A READER, Bristol, W. Va.—It would be correct for you to accompany your gift at Christmas to this teacher with the note you mention—adding to your holiday greetings thanks for the interest she has taken in aiding your studies. (2) Yes; a small silver pencil would make an appropriate gift, or a fountain pen of a size and type suitable to be carried in a hand bag or purse.

M. L., Ravensdale, W. Va.—Such a phrase as "Meet my sister Annie" would not constitute a correct or pleasant introduction. If your sister, through marriage, has a name different from your own, this should appear in the introduction for the sake of clearness. A simple and proper form would be: "Mr. Blank, this is my sister, Mrs. Dash."

E. C., Dagman, Mont.—The matter of popularity in social affairs is largely one of personality, although there is no denying the parts played by wealth and family position in influencing attention and regard. If you are kind and cordial in all your relations with the young people of your community, we do not quite see why you should be avoided in the way you state, and why you should have to write: "When I want to join them, they all run away." Try and take a real part in all the plans and activities of your young acquaintances, and be careful of whom you pick as a close friend or chum. Be sincere and natural in all your speech and actions; share your interests with others and join in theirs—and if you still lack friends, it will be the Dagman boys and girls who will be the losers and not you. Keep the wise old saying in mind: "To have friends, you must first be one."

GOLDENROD AND PURPLE ASTER, Wyoming.—No harm would be done by your telling this boy that you would be glad to have him come and see you some time. (2) It would be best, for various reasons, that you say farewell to your friend at the door of your home. If you walk with him to the gate, some nasty neighbor might infer that you were trying to hang on to your boy caller. Gossip is as plentiful as October goldenrod and asters.

L. B., Hancock, Md.—It has come to be the custom in wedding felicitations to wish the bride happiness and congratulate the groom upon his good fortune. Upon the part of the happy couple, smiles and thanks are the only needed responses.

BROWN EYES, Fairfield, Wash.—We think it vastly improper for boys to write notes to girls during school hours. There are plenty of classroom studies without establishing a course in correspondence with a boy teacher. Stick to the curriculum and make your boy friends understand that you intend doing this. (2) The right sort of schoolgirl complexion should have no need of cosmetics to give it beauty or color—and if one hasn't the right sort, a start should be made at once to make it so. The road begins with plenty of water inside and out; fresh fruits and green vegetables, with sweets and greasy foods avoided; and proper exercise in the open air each day. A touch of talcum powder might have a place now and then in a girl's toilet, but paint only best belongs upon the side of the schoolhouse where she studies.

M. S., Quinton, Ala.—The bride's costume for a December wedding would differ in no way from that worn for a ceremony in the month of June and roses. You should wear the conventional white silk and lace, unless you are married in your going-away gown—in which case any plainly tailored dark serge or tweed would be correct and sensible. In the latter case you would be careful to choose hat, shoes and gloves to harmonize with your traveling frock. (2) A girl bride would be greeted with a kiss by her father-in-law—or should so salute him if he appears bashful or backward. She might say: "I hope Tom's father is going to like me. I know you have a good son, and I want you to think you will have as good a daughter." Be simple and sincere in assuming your new relationships with your husband's family.

ANXIOUS READER, Pelican Rapids, Mich.—Your employer's gift to you last Christmas was undoubtedly in appreciation of your faithful services. He would not expect that you would make any like present to him this year, but would, we feel sure, be glad to have from you some card of greeting and remembrance at the holiday season. You may send him this, but do not make him any gift, which would be inappropriate to do under the circumstances of your relations with him.

E. R., Smithville, Tenn.—If your parents have no objection, you may follow the local customs prevailing among girl friends of your own age concerning escorts from prayer meetings, etc.

M. H., Lebanon, Ore.—At a party, a boy may say to a girl: "Will you dance this with me?" or, "May I have the pleasure of this dance?" A girl will signify her assent by rising to accept the offer. (2) There is no question of what a girl should answer when a boy asks, "if she has a kiss" for him. A boy does not properly make such an inquiry, and if he does thus break conventions, he must be prepared for anything which might happen in the way of the girl's reply. We have heard of some who made rather stinging answers. Etiquette establishes no rules for kissing inquiries, but it does prefer to arrange that a girl keep all privileges of personal affection for the man she is to marry.

SPORT, Alabama.—A boy would retain a girl's arm and make a way for her when taking her through a crowd. (2) When a boy and girl who are acquaintances meet upon the street, it makes absolutely no difference which of the two is the first to speak.

A. O., Imperial, Nebr.—In the case you describe, it would have been your place to make the required introduction. This was because you were acting as hostess in your own home and the duty more naturally devolved upon you. (2) The word "camouflage" is pronounced "cam-oo-flazh." The first syllable as in Sam, the second as in food, and the third to sound like the last portion of the word "garage." In the pronouncing of "camouflage," the accent is equally divided over the three syllables, with perhaps the slightest possible drag and accentuation upon the last.

FLOSSIE.—The delicious cheese concoction known as "Welsh rarebit" or "rabbit," is served by pouring it over individual slices of hot toast. This dish is usually made informally at chafing-dish gatherings, and the toast, if preferred, may be ready upon the plates of the guests to receive the melted cheese. (2) In serving grapefruit, a half is served to each guest. The fruit should be ice cold, and have the pulp previously cut away from the side and in segments from the center, so that each portion may be easily removed with an orange spoon. It is worth while to take care and pains in preparing grapefruit. A sharp knife should be used, and the fruit neatly divided from the tough inner and outer skin. No sugar is placed upon the fruit, but powdered sugar and salt should be at hand to suit the individual preferences.

F. B., Tulare, Calif.—You are correct in believing that a stamp is never enclosed in a purely friendly letter for purposes of reply. Your correspondent is in error in following his strange custom of prepaying your answering letters.

THREE HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS, Rifle, Colo.—You ask if it is proper for you to "go to places" with boys. Sometimes it would be proper and sometimes not—depending wholely upon the places. But we can state that any "place" where a boy can kiss you after seeing you but four times (as in your second question) is a most improper spot to be in, and we advise that you avoid either the place or the boy. (2) No, a boy should not introduce himself to you at a dance. He should find some friend to perform this pleasant ceremony for him. You should choose for your new acquaintances only those who are favorably known to other friends you now have.

B. A., Chicago, Ill.—You did the right thing in receiving as you did these friends of your sister-in-law who were strangers to you. It was one of the many instances where common sense and sincerity result in the best manners. (2) You could have apologized when you were compelled to leave the room in farewell, and you could have said to the callers that you hoped you might have the pleasure of seeing them again.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from our eminent legal adviser on all questions of law except divorce matters.

Address Home Lawyer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

MRS. W. L., Montana.—If your local assessor has assessed your property for more than its true value, or higher than other properties in the same locality, we think you should appeal for a review of the assessment to your County or State Board for the Equalization of Taxes; we think you should make your appeal promptly and that you should be prepared to show the true value of your property, and the assessment made upon similar property in your locality.

E. T., Oregon.—We think that children born to parents who have never been legally married are illegitimate.

MRS. A. S., Missouri.—We think it will be necessary for the woman you mention to make a complaint against the man who assaulted her, in order that he may be punished for his act.

MRS. A. C., Virginia.—Under the laws of Ohio, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving no child nor descendant, his whole estate, after payment of debts and expenses, would go to his surviving widow, provided the property did not come to the decedent by descent, devise or deed of gift, but in case such property came to the decedent by descent, devise or deed of gift from an ancestor or from a former wife, the share of the surviving widow would be diminished.

MRS. C. C., Kansas.—We think you should make your complaint for the violation of the Federal law you mention, to the United States District Attorney for the district where the law was violated.

G. M. S., Kansas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a married man, who abandons his wife, without good cause, can be compelled to support her, unless she has independent means of her own.

J. V., Michigan.—We think the laws of your state require that veterinary surgeons be licensed to practice their profession.

L. B., Illinois.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a married man has a legal right to leave his whole estate to his widow, by will, if he so elects, provided he possesses testamentary capacity, and provided no undue influence is exercised upon him in procuring the will, and provided the will is properly drawn and executed. We think your local authority would be in a better position to pass upon the validity of the will you describe.

MRS. E. S., Ohio.—Under the laws of your state, we think the rights of a widow in her deceased husband's estate upon his death, without a will, and without a surviving child or descendant, would depend upon the manner in which he acquired the property; if none of the real estate came to him by descent, devise or deed of gift, we think the surviving widow would receive the whole estate.

A. G. B., Tennessee.—We think an examination of the records would show whether the deeds you mention are in proper form to convey the property you mention.

MRS. G. E. P., Pennsylvania.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the real and personal estate of a decedent, whether male or female, remaining after payment of all just debts and legal charges, which shall not have been sold, or disposed of by will, or otherwise limited by marriage statement, shall be divided and enjoyed where such intestate leaves spouse and more than one child, one-third part to such surviving spouse, and the balance in equal shares to the children, the descendants of any deceased child taking such deceased child's share; we think the share of such of the children as are minors would be administered by a general guardian during minority; we think there is an inheritance tax if the shares exceed the inheritance tax exemptions.

MRS. J. P., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that if your debt is overdue, your creditor can enforce the repayment of same from any property you may own, not exempt by law from levy under execution.

E. E. P., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man or woman, without a will, one-half of the community property goes to the survivor and the remainder to the child or children of the deceased. We think either party to the marriage can dispose of his or her share of the community property by will.

MRS. G. M., Oregon.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving no lineal descendant, his whole estate would go to his surviving widow. We think a married woman has a legal right to disinherit her children and leave her whole estate to her husband if she so elects.

MRS. C. R., Minnesota.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that in cases where the parents are separated, the courts have power to award the custody of the children to either of the parents, taking into consideration what would be for the children's best interest.

P. G., Tennessee.—If your neighbor continues to trespass upon your property after being forbidden to do so, we think it will be necessary for you to prosecute her for her acts.

J. L., New Jersey.—We do not think the laws of any state prohibit a married man from leaving practically his whole estate to his wife, although in some states it is necessary to mention children to show conclusively that the intent was to cut them off; we think that in order to execute a valid will the testator must possess testamentary capacity, must be under no undue influence, the will must express his true intent, and must be legally drawn and executed.

D. R., Arkansas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that you would be entitled to a share in your grandmother's estate if she dies without a will in case your father is dead, but if he survives his mother you will have no intestacy rights in her estate as children are preferred to grandchildren; we think that if she leaves a will she can make a provision for you if she desires to do so, but she has a legal right to disinherit children or grandchildren if she elects to do so.

MRS. D. B. T., Pennsylvania.—Under the laws of your state, we think the consent of parents or guardians is necessary for the marriage of females under twenty-one years of age, and that in case the parents are divorced the consent of the parent to whom the custody of such child was awarded in the decree of divorce should be procured.

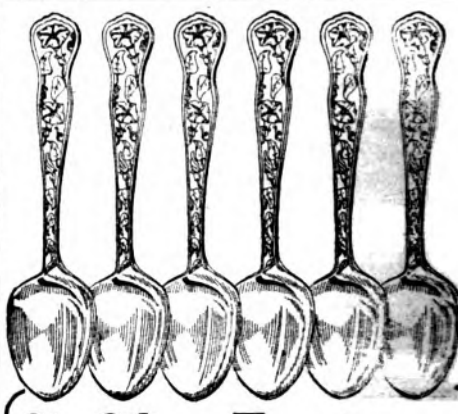
MRS. E. B., Idaho.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that in the absence of a will, your husband's children will be entitled to a share of his separate estate upon his death.

MRS. C. M. M., Texas.—We do not think you can now recover any portion of the land sold by your grandmother during the Civil War.

MRS. J. I., Pennsylvania.—We think that marriages between first cousins are prohibited by the laws of your state.

Club Feet

Ruby Booth was born with Club Feet. At ten months she was brought to McLain Sanitarium. Photos show result of treatment. Parents' letter tells everything.



When Ruby was 6 months old, a doctor put her feet in plaster paris casts. After 3 months they were no better than when he started. We had given up all hope of a cure, when we heard of McLain Sanitarium and took her there. Her feet are now perfectly straight. I shall never cease to be thankful. Refer anyone to me.

Mr. and Mrs. George Booth, Carbon, Iowa.

For Crippled Children

The McLain Sanitarium is a thoroughly equipped private institution devoted exclusively to the treatment of Club Feet, Infantile Paralysis, Spinal Disease and Deformities, Wry Neck, Hip Disease, Diseases of the Joints, especially as found in children and young adults. Our book, "Deformities and Paralysis," also "Book of References" sent free.

L. C. McLain
Orthopedic Sanitarium
990 Aubert Ave.
St. Louis, Mo.

Six Silver Teaspoons

The Beautiful "Morning Glory" Design

BY buying in large quantities we are enabled to offer our readers this handsome set of six teaspoons for the ridiculously small club mentioned below. They are six inches long, silver plated on a white metal base, so there is no brass to show through, and they will never have that dingy or tarnished appearance even after years of constant use. The design is the beautiful "Morning Glory" deeply embossed on the handles which are finished in soft, elegant French grey. The bowls of the spoons are perfectly smooth and bright polished.

The rich design and splendid wearing qualities of these teaspoons combine to make this the most attractive premium offer in years. Our illustration does not do them justice. They must be seen to be appreciated. We know they will exceed your highest expectations.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you six of these fine Silver Plated Teaspoons free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9882.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Crystal Beads

Topaz Amethyst Emerald Sapphire

Given For A Club Of Three!

THESE Crystal Beads are the latest thing out and so beautiful are they we could not refrain from buying a quantity to give as club rewards to our young lady readers. The Necklace is 24 inches in length, with a strong, durable gold-plated clasp; the beads are graduated, the largest ones measuring ⅞x⅝ inches and the smallest ⅝x¼ inches in size. They are real cut glass—not pressed glass—and their flashing prismatic colors are a delight to the eye.

For summer wear, with low-neck dresses, nothing could be more stylish than one of these handsome new necklaces and we are delighted to think that we are able to make this offer. Be sure to state color desired when ordering. You can have your choice of Topaz, Amethyst, Emerald and Sapphire.

Given To You! For only three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you one of these handsome and stylish Crystal Bead Necklaces free by parcel post prepaid. Please be sure to mention color wanted. Reward No. 9033.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Eveready Flashlight

THIS is the "Eveready" Daylo, 6½ inches long, 1½ inches in diameter, equipped with a powerful battery that will last for many weeks. It is always ready for use—a simple movement of the finger turns the light on or off as desired. In the night it shows the way around the house without fuss or bother—it lights up the darkest rooms, attics or basements. It can be used in the shed or barn, around hay, powder or gasolene without the slightest danger of fire. Outdoors, neither wind nor rain can put it out. When riding or walking after dark, it throws a brilliant light far in advance, showing up every object long before you reach it. This flashlight is so useful you should not think of getting along without one. Safe, convenient, always ready when you want it, it is the best insurance against fire and accident in the world.

CLUB OFFER. We will send you this Eveready Flashlight complete with battery, all ready for business, for four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each. Reward No. 7984.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Don't neglect a Cold

Dangerous sickness often starts with a cold. Ward off your colds with Musterole before pneumonia starts.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment made with oil of mustard. It has all the healing properties of the old-fashioned mustard plaster butnone of the unpleasant features.

Musterole is not messy to apply and without the blister.

At the first sneeze or sniffle take down the little white jar of Musterole from the bathroom shelf and rub the ointment gently over the congested spot.

With a tingling warmth it penetrates the skin and goes right down to the seat of trouble.

Rheumatism, tonsillitis, lumbago, coughs and colds are all symptoms that call for Musterole.

Order Musterole today from your druggist. 35c and 65c in jars and tubes; hospital size, $3.

The Musterole Co., Cleveland, Ohio

BETTER THAN A MUSTARD PLASTER

MUSTEROLE

WILL NOT BLISTER

FOUKE

WANTS

$10,000,000.00

WORTH OF FURS

And will pay higher prices than any house in America to get them. We have such a big demand we must have more furs quick. Write for new book—Trappers' Partner, regular price lists and tags—all free. Don't sell your furs until you get Fouke's prices. Write today.

FOUKE FUR CO., 250 Fouke Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

OTTAWA

1½ H-P ENGINE IS NOW ONLY $35.50

Other sizes 2 to 22 H-P at low prices. Good engines sold direct to you. 90 Days' Trial -10 Year Guarantee. Write for Free book before you purchase any engine.

OTTAWA MFG. CO. 1271-A King Street Ottawa, Kansas

16,000 Miles without a Puncture

Wonderful invention. Insyde Tyres—Inner Armor for automobile tires. Positively prevent punctures and blowouts. Guaranteed to give double tire mileage, any tire—old or new.

Over 100,000 Satisfied Customers

Easily applied without tools. Just slip inside casing before replacing tube. Will not heat or pinch. Use over and over again. Old worn-out casings will give 3 to 5,000 miles more service. Low priced. Agents wanted in every county.

American Accessories Co., B-1623 Cincinnati, O.

REVERSIBLE "Linene" TRADE MARK

Send 2 Cents in U. S. stamps to pay postage and we will send you FREE a SAMPLE COLLAR of our New Style "Copley." State size wanted. REVERSIBLE COLLAR CO., Dept. E, Boston, Mass.

FREE

Sell 24 Perfume Pkgs. at 10c. When sold send $2.40 and we'll send stem wind watch, or keep $1.00. Rex Co., V-12, Chicago

MONEY Made quickly by smart men. Artol Co., 115 Nassau St., N. Y.

Comfort's Bedtime Stories

For Little Folks

20 WONDERFUL TALES In Story And Verse 20

TWO complete libraries of cute little books for the children, including many of the old-time favorites as well as newer and later stories. Library No. 7951 consists of Robinson Crusoé, Little Red Riding Hood, Cinderella, Mother Goose, Animal Pets, Playmates, The Three Bears, The Sleeping Beauty, Playful Pets, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 1. Library No. 7991 consists of Land of Tulips, Our Farm Yard, Our Country, Happy Days, Story of Santa Claus, Chums, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 2; In the Jungle, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 3; The Big League. Each book is 4x5¼ inches in size, printed in large clear type and contains five beautiful full-page illustrations in colors.

Given To You! We will send you either Library of 10 Books free and prepaid for one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, or both Libraries (20 Books) for two one-year subscriptions at 50 cents each. Please mention number of Libraries wanted.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Quest of the Otter Pelts

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 27.)

they are, and not moving much, they will not discover the water has been released here."

"Leave that to me, my Partner, just heave the axe against some of those large limbs holding this beaver dam together. We'll cut through enough of the dam to release the water a foot. We need a few more beavers to fill our permit, and can get them by setting traps at the break in the dam. They will walk into anything to repair their dam after the water starts falling fast."

It didn't take the boys long to tear out enough of the dam to let the water down the required amount. So toughly woven were the branches that there was no danger of the entire dam washing out. The boys knew that a few beavers would get in their traps, and this happening would frighten the rest so they would refrain from further attempts to repair the dam.

The water fell with much cracking and groaning of the ice. The boys hastened back to the shelter of nearby evergreens, after they had set their traps, and awaited the outcome. Very soon a large beaver, one of the males of the colony, came down to the opening of the ice towing a peeled branch of a popple tree. Unsuspecting of danger, it set its fore feet into one of the water-buried traps. With a lurch, it dived into deep water, and churned it till it foamed.

After a half-hour, it seemed to Fred, he succeeded in getting the beaver to the surface and close enough to dispatch it with a club. In the interim a beaver had stuck its head up in front of the boys. Bill was ready with his rifle, having anticipated such a chance, and placed a .25-20 bullet between its eyes, at almost the same instant hurling his gun onto the ice and making a dive for the beaver. Fortunately he was able to grab a kicking hind leg as it was fast disappearing under water, and threw the dying animal out on the ice.

The boys had no trouble in finishing filling their allotment of beavers, as these animals became frantically careless in attempting to repair their dam. There was a thrill to getting so many valuable pelts by such a quick method, and the boys were reminded of younger days when they had read and re-read the writings of Irving and others on early-day trapping methods practiced by the white and redskin trappers.

When the water got down to a normal overflow, the ice had sagged considerably toward the middle of the lake. The boys now gathered up their pelts, and the best quarters of the beavers for food, and hiked for camp.

The young trappers did not again visit the lake for a week. They did not want scouting otters to find the slightest trace of human odor around the lake.

Fred's surmise that the otter would discover the new condition of the water at Pelcher Lake was correct. A week after the water had been lowered, several otter signs were noticeable about the beaver dam. No doubt the otter had found the fishing much better, as the trout had been unmolested except for the toll taken by mink.

The boys tended their mink, weasel and marten lines until about ten days had elapsed after the breaking of the dam, then they carefully set nearly two dozen large traps around the lake; particularly taking pains to guard the outlet. A trap was set blind at every airhole. As these holes were invariably over swift water, the traps were not too deep setting on the ground and there was no odor to alarm the animal. In a few of the places, where the water was apt to freeze over, salt was used to prevent ice forming, but a set or two was demolished by the deer trying to get the salt, so the method was abandoned.

The traps were never touched by bare hands. They had first been carefully boiled, then dipped out with a wooden fork and handled with buckskin gloves. Most of the sets were blind, that is without bait. Such a set is the most successful with keen-nosed and sly animals, if the trapper knows where to place his traps. He locates the sets by watching trails, haunts, etc.

Invariably a stone was wired to the trap chain so as to carry the animal down into deep water and drown it. This prevented the struggling animal from frightening others away, besides being a humane practice.

One of the most effective sets was made by sawing a block of ice out near each bank of a small stream and placing a blind set trap along the bank. Invariably tracks showed the banks had been used. If the water was shallow so the animal could wade a distance away from the bank, sticks were used to fence in the trap, thus forcing any passing animal over the trap. Precaution was taken not to use sticks the beaver would chew on, such as popple. Where the stream was very small and shallow, a block of ice was cut out through the middle, the trap placed in the center and fenced on each side to the banks so even a small mink could not pass without going over the trap. The crosscut saw was used to remove the ice and it was sawed on a slant inward at the bottom, so the blocks set back easily. Salt or snow was used to prevent the blocks from freezing tight. This set caught them many minks and otters.

The second day after the otter traps were set out the boys collected three otters, all drowned and their fur in number one condition. This was the most valuable catch they had ever made in their lives, eventually netting each about fifty dollars. They could hardly believe their eyes; valuable otters were coming in as fast as muskrats had on the farm trap lines.

A week of huge trapping success passed. The boys had worked from daylight till dark tending their traps, and till bedtime skinning and stretching the furs. Boards had been planed out from split cedar, hewed to regulation size with a pocket axe.

The day arrived when the boys collected their duffle and furs together preparatory to the trip out to home and the farms. They wanted to get started while the tobogganing was good, besides the otter had quit getting into their traps. They now had about a dozen of these fine furs, which were enough for anybody but game hogs. Finding their furs in the hollow-tree cache unmolested, the boys decided to go by Curley's camp. They had been considerably surprised and not a little anxious in not seeing or hearing anything from the old trapper.

Curley was sitting in camp with his feet propped up on the stove-hearth watching a pot of beans boil. The whoop of the boys brought him to his feet. His face registered more than surprise when he opened the door and saw the big bunch of furs lashed on the boys' toboggan.

"What luck?" greeted Bill good-naturedly.

"Wal, not so bad. I see you get the otter. It takes regular trappers to get them birds."

Fred glanced about the cabin and noticed the dry-goods-box cupboard was almost empty.

"Well, Curley," said Fred, "we realize we got a little close to your grounds, not knowing you were coming back to trap this year. I don't see many furs around and your larder looks empty, too. I—we——"

"Yes, I've had tough luck. Ain't got no grub, no cartridges, no tobacco and no snowshoes to get out on. Broke my last pair of 'shoes yesterday, and got no buckskin or seasoned wood to repair them. Not been to my traps today. Was going to cook this last mess of beans and then starve slow, like the animals in my traps. 'Course after the way I treated you boys—well, I don't blame you if you keep on goin' an' I ain't got a bullet to hold you all up with. But I hope you'll think of my poor old folks up in Canada and take this letter out and mail it. It's a good-by message; I left years ago and never sent word back. Oh, if I only had some tobacco left I could stand it till spring, then raft down the river."

Curley extended the poorly scribbled letter addressed to a lady in Montreal, then wearily walked over to his bunk and laid down. The beans began to smell of scorching, but he made no effort to remove them from the stove.

Both boys were moved by the old trapper's pathetic predicament. Perhaps he regretted his unruly past; maybe he had been moved to unfriendly deeds by unfair competition. Anyway, both boys agreed to the resolution disclosed in each other's eyes. Fred beat Bill to it:

"Here, Curley, we've got more grub than we need going out. Here is an extra pair of snowshoes we had, and you'll find more grub cached in a hollow tree near our camp site. There's a trail to it. Lucky my gun shoots the same cartridge yours does; here's two dozen rounds. They're too heavy to carry out, anyway. We've got no tobacco but you'll find some cached back of that cupboard if the pesky red squirrels haven't carried it away. Found it there in the box when we came in; stuck it back out of the way. So long, hope you make a good catch; we didn't get them all."

The boys unloaded much of their outfit and started before the amazed Curley could take a big chew of the "F. O. B."

"Hey, boys, gimme that letter," yelled Curley, the boys fast disappearing in the dense balsams and tamaracks. "I ain't going to send it, I can go myself, now. Look here."

Curley pulled up the makeshift mattress over the bunk. Under it was the finest bunch of fisher pelts they had ever seen. Fisher were more valuable than otter.

"Yep, I laid off the otter this year; didn't have time to bother with them. I located this pocket of fisher in the Bearclift ledges last season. I knew fisher furs were going to run high, so I let people think I was leaving the country so they wouldn't be coming in on me. Every trapper in the state thinks there is more furs where Curley traps, because he gets the most. They tried to hog me out of my own grounds and trap under my nose. Some of them give me the devil because I came from Canada. They hate Canucks.

"Now I can finish my mountain trapping and get out in the spring with the biggest catch I ever made. Then it's me for old Canada. And, boys, this cabin and these grounds belong to you, and if you'll stay over a few days I'll show you over the fisher lines and let you onto the best drag scent bait you ever saw. All I ask is you keep it mum; my Indian grandfather taught it to me. It's a secret of the old Canuck trappers."

"Shake, Curley," exclaimed Fred.

"Here, too," dittoed Bill.

The boys stayed.

THE END.

Do You Want BIG MONEY For YOUR Furs?

Sure you do! How can you get it? That's up to you! All you have to do is to ship to the right house. Scores of thousands of trappers all over North America have learned from experience that a sure way to get big money for furs is to ship direct to an honest, reliable, responsible, safe fur house—a house that has been satisfying fur shippers for more than thirty-eight years—a house that will always give you an honest grading, pay you the highest market price on every skin and send your returns quickly. "SHUBERT" is a mighty good house for you to do business with. You take no risk—"THE SHUBERT GUARANTEE" protects you absolutely. We want furs—QUICK—and are paying big prices, so don't wait another minute—quick action means big money for you.

SHUBERT

GIVE "SHUBERT" A TRIAL TODAY

SHIP ALL YOUR FURS DIRECT TO

A. B. SHUBERT, INC.

THE LARGEST HOUSE IN THE WORLD DEALING EXCLUSIVELY IN AMERICAN RAW FURS

25-27 W. AUSTIN AVE. DEPT. 28 CHICAGO, U. S. A.

SHIP QUICK!

Ship DIRECT to FUNSTEN if you want the big money! Don't wait to write! The World's Leading Fur House is giving highest grading, best service—biggest checks.

We want MORE Muskrat, Mink, Skunk, Raccoon, Fox, Wolf, Civet Cat, etc., quick! and are paying top prices now! Get check by return mail. Write for our special information to Fur Buyers.

FUNSTEN ANIMAL BAIT

Used by successful trappers for 20 years. Double your catch. State kind wanted. $1 PER CAN 3 Cans, $2.50 Postpaid

FUNSTEN BROS. & CO.
436 Funsten Bldg.
ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

BIG PRICES For MUSKRAT!

SHIP TO

FUNSTEN

Trapping Solves Unemployment in Rural Districts

With the return of the raw fur industry to a normal basis, the trapping of fur-bearing animals will be engaged in quite extensively again this winter and more than a million men and boys will have an opportunity to reap the harvest that nature has provided for them. The fur catch this season should amount to approximately fifty millions of dollars and practically every cent of this large amount will go directly to the men and boys of the rural districts.

Trapping always provides profitable work for those who engage in it and this year in particular, when so many of our people are in need of employment, the opening of the trapping season has been looked forward to with hopeful expectancy. The big fur houses are cooperating with them to the extent of furnishing free all information necessary to enable them to become successful trappers.

If you have spare time you will find trapping this season profitable enough to provide a good income during the winter months. Get started at once by writing one or more of the reliable fur houses whose advertisements you will find regularly printed in COMFORT.

The U. S. Public Health Service estimates that at least 500 and possibly 1,000 lepers are at large in the United States, and that the number is increasing. The government did not start work on its Federal Home for Lepers a minute too soon.

GIVEN

A REAL HAMILTON

For selling only 2 lots of our Beautiful Colored Art & Religious Pictures at 10c each. Order 25 pictures at once. They sell on sight. You can easily win this 22 Sure Shot Rifle in no time. Guaranteed. GAIR MFG. CO., 1926 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. 601, CHICAGO

Big Premium Budget 10c

17 Popular Songs with Music, 25 Portraits, Actresses, Presidents of U. S., 14 Complete Stories, 63 Magic Tricks, 56 Amusing Experiments, 15 Puzzles, 22 Rebuses, 60 Parlor Games, 150 Riddles and Conundrums, 100 Jokes and Funny Readings, 60 Money-Making Secrets, 84 Album Verses, Dictionary of Dreams. Send us 10c. and we will send all the above, and Big Novelty and Jewelry Catalogue. Add 2 cents for postage.

H. C. LORCK, Dept. C-8, GREENLAWN, N. Y.

Our Scientific Method will stop that

STAMMER

Send for free 200 page book. It tells how to permanently stop stammering or stuttering in a few weeks' time. A natural guaranteed method.

The Lewis School for Stammerers
12 Lewis Bldg., 71-77 Adelaide St., Detroit, Mich.

Wrestling Book FREE

Be an expert wrestler. Learn at home by mail. Wonderful lessons prepared by world's champions Farmer Burns and Frank Gotch. Free book tells you how. Secret holds, blocks and tricks revealed. Don't delay. Be strong healthy. Handle big men with ease. Write for free book. State age.

Farmer Burns, 3049 Range Bldg., Omaha, Neb.

Ship Us Your Raw Furs By Express

We guarantee to hold all shipments entirely separate, and in case our valuations are not satisfactory we will return your goods at once, and pay all express charges both ways.

H. A. PERKINS & CO.

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, VT.

References: Dun or Bradstreet Commercial Agencies—Any Bank

Cuticura Soap

—The Safety Razor—

Shaving Soap

Cuticura Soap shaves without mug. Everywhere 25c.

54 Inch Rope Of Pearls

Reward No. 9882

For A Club Of Two!

THE dream of every woman and girl is to possess her own necklace of gleaming, iridescent pearls. There's a wonderful fascination about them—a beauty that appeals to every feminine heart.

Now your dream can come true—for we are giving away this handsome, full opera length rope of Parisian pearls. It is 54 inches long, all the pearls are of uniform size—¼ inch in diameter—of perfect finish and luster, far handsomer than the ordinary imitation pearl necklace sold at a high price. It can easily be wound twice around the neck, making the double rope as shown in our illustration.

By rare good luck we secured first choice of these necklaces from a large importer and at a price that enables us to give them for an unusually small club. Please read the following offer and learn how you can get a beautiful, 54-inch rope of pearls free of all cost.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this handsome, opera length Pearl Necklace free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9882.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Sugar, Creamer And Tray

MADE of "crushed" silver—the very latest idea. Sugar, Creamer and Tray are full standard size. The Tray is quadruple silver plated and both Sugar and Creamer are quadruple silver plated outside and gold lined inside. A very useful set and a beautiful ornament for the dining table or sideboard.

CLUB OFFER. We will send you this Crushed Silver Set free and prepaid for four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each. Reward No. 7904.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

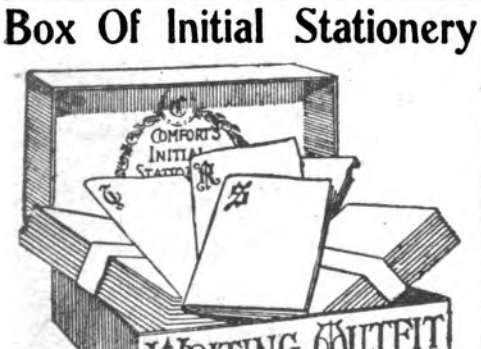
SELF-FILLING Fountain Pen



For A Club Of Three

HERE is a fountain pen that we can positively guarantee. Perhaps you have had some experience with fountain pens which never would write well and continually leaked ink all over your fingers. If so you will certainly appreciate this opportunity to secure a fountain pen that has none of these defects. Our illustration is of course greatly reduced in size. The pen offered you here is 6½ inches long, made entirely of hard rubber, finely finished, and the pen point is genuine 14-K gold. The feeding device is perfect, permitting a uniform flow of ink and it will not leak. Also please notice that this is a self-filling pen. You can fill this fountain pen in less than 10 seconds by pressing down the spring on the side, then placing the pen point in a bottle of ink, after which you release the spring and the pen is instantly filled with ink to its full capacity. If given proper care this pen should last anybody for years. If you will accept the following special offer we will send you one of these self-filling fountain pens with a positive guarantee that if it fails to prove satisfactory in any way you may return it to us and we will replace it with a new pen free of charge.

Club Offer. For a club of only three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this guaranteed self-filling fountain pen free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8873.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Box Of Initial Stationery

Latest Style Monogram

IT is now the height of fashion and evidence of the very best taste to use stationery with your own monogram initial or "crest" on it. In this offer we give you two dozen sheets white linen stationery 10½x6¼ inches in size, each sheet beautifully embossed in colors with any monogram initial you desire and two dozen envelopes. Just think how nice it will be when writing to your friends to have your own letter crest monogram initial embossed in colors on this high-grade fine quality stationery. Remember you get one full quire of choice paper and twenty-four envelopes in this complete writer's outfit. Don't hesitate to send for this premium today because you will surely be delighted with it.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you a box of this Initial Stationery free by parcel post, prepaid. When ordering be sure to specify what monogram initial you want. Reward No. 9482.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

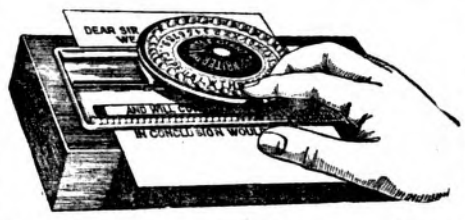
What A Beautiful Christmas Doll For Some Little Girl In Your Home!

Won't She Fairly Shout With Joy When She Wakes Up And Finds This Big, Handsome, Sleeping Dolly Waiting For Her On Christmas Morning?

YES, Santa Claus will bring this big lifelike Doll to any little girl whose Papa, Mama, brother or sister will send in a club of only six one-year subscriptions to COMFORT. Not since before the war have we been able to offer such an expensive Doll. No city store will show a larger or handsomer Doll this season at anywhere near the price we paid for this one. We bought five thousand of them in one lot direct from the factory—that is how we secured them so cheaply. And just think—a club of only six subscriptions to COMFORT brings this beautiful Doll right to your door—yours to have and to own without one cent of expense. What a splendid Christmas present it will make for some little tot in your home!

She Can Open And Close Her Eyes. She Has Real Teeth, Long Golden Hair And Wears A Pretty Dress With Real Stockings And Slippers.

NOW let us tell you more about this Doll. She stands over a foot and a half tall. The body, arms and legs are made by a new improved process which renders them practically indestructible. The head is unbreakable and head, arms and legs are movable. And if you could only see her hair. It is a light golden color, thick, long and luxuriant, falling far below her waist. Her eyes are as blue as the sky and she can open and shut them and go to sleep like a real baby whenever you want her to. Her rosebud lips are parted in a winsome smile revealing her pretty white teeth in a truly lifelike manner.



She is fully dressed from head to feet in the latest style with cute short sleeves, handsome figured lace trimmed waist and short pleated skirt and she wears real stockings and slippers with silveroid buckles. You can undress and dress this Doll as often as you please and you can take off her stockings and slippers and put them on again just as you do your own.

Fathers and Mothers—just look at this beautiful Doll as she stands smiling and waiting for someone to pick her up, hug her and kiss her and take her out to play. Don't you think your little girl would just love to have her for her very own? Of course she would—and you should take advantage of this offer at once. Remember we have but five thousand of these Dolls on hand and when they are gone this offer will be withdrawn.

FOR A CLUB OF ONLY SIX!

YOU can surely find six neighbors and friends who will be glad to subscribe to COMFORT at the present bargain rate of 50 cents a year. Send us their names and addresses and the money collected ($3.00 in all) and we will send you this big, beautiful Sleeping Doll, fully dressed and otherwise exactly as described above, packed in a strong box so that it cannot possibly get broken, free by parcel post prepaid. There will be no expense to you whatever. Your Mail Carrier will deliver the Doll right to your door without charge. This Doll is Reward No. 7806 and please mention this number when ordering.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Little Giant Typewriter

A REAL machine that writes very distinctly. Has every letter in the alphabet, all the numerals from 1 to 10 and punctuation marks. Uses any size letter paper up to 5 inches wide. For correspondence, making out invoices, statements, addressing envelopes, etc., this machine will do the work well. It is very easy to operate, in fact, a child can write on it after a little practice.

Given To You! For three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Typewriter free and prepaid. Reward No. 8853.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Stocking Full of Fine Christmas Presents

For A Club Of Only Two!

BIG Christmas Stockings brimful of presents for the little folks and older children as well. COMFORT is going to play Santa Claus this year and distribute hundreds of these Christmas stockings among its readers who have little ones for whom Christmas Trees and Santa Claus Gifts must be provided at all cost. The contents of the stockings vary a little but the general assortment remains practically the same and you may be sure of receiving as many presents as are herewith illustrated. Each stocking contains just the gifts that delight the hearts of boys and girls—horns, dolls, whistles, musical fifes, toy dishes, jumping jacks, balls, animals, games and other pleasing holiday novelties. The stockings are a foot and a quarter long, and all the presents are regular size, much larger than they appear to be in the accompanying illustration. We will send you one of these Christmas Stockings free upon the terms of the following offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you one of these Big Christmas Stockings full of Santa Claus Gifts free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 1012.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Shaggy Teddy Bear

EVERY little boy and girl wants a Teddy Bear and here is an opportunity for every father or mother who reads COMFORT to get one without expense. "Teddy" is a plump, shaggy fellow, 10 inches tall, made of brown plush, carefully stitched and finished, and his head and legs are jointed in such a manner that you can place him in almost any position. He will stand up, sit down, stand on his head, walk on all fours, in fact he gets himself into all kinds of positions, so comical and lifelike that it makes the children scream with delight just to look at him. Teddy is so well made that he cannot easily become broken, and with ordinary care should last for years. We will send you Teddy free if you will accept the following special offer:

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Teddy Bear free and prepaid. Reward No. 9992.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Ladies Wrist Watch

With Silk Ribbon Bracelet

WE have long searched the market for a suitable wrist watch for our girl readers and at last we have found it.

The above illustration really fails to do the watch justice. We know you will instantly fall in love with it. It is the popular octagon shape, only 5-16 of an inch thick and one inch in diameter. It has a high-grade jeweled Swiss movement and will keep accurate time. The dial is pure white with Arabic numerals. The bracelet is made of the finest black silk ribbon with a genuine rolled-gold catch and slide.

If you want a dainty, stylish, up-to-date wrist watch that you will be proud to show your friends, here is your opportunity to secure one absolutely free. You can easily secure the small club mentioned below and as soon as you have done so this beautiful wrist watch is yours without one cent of cost.

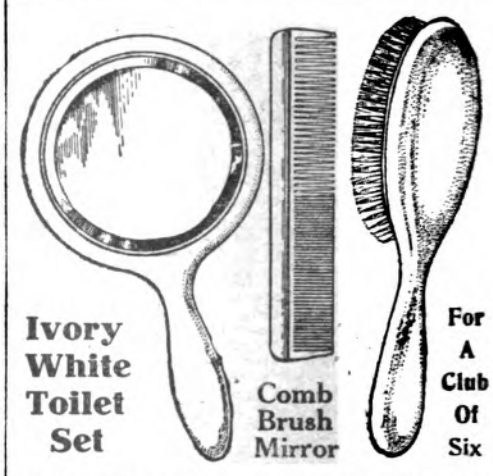
Given To You! For a club of only ten one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this fine wrist watch with ribbon bracelet exactly as described above, absolutely free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 75110.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Writing And Drawing Outfit

Reward No. 9972

For Home And School



For A Club Of Two!

HERE is something that is needed in every home and by every schoolboy and schoolgirl—a big value-assortment of almost everything needed for writing and drawing. Our illustration is, of course, greatly reduced in size. The Case, which is made of fine leatherette, is 10½ inches long and 2½ inches wide. It is of the folding style, with a snap fastener, so that it can conveniently be carried in the pocket or in the children's lunch basket. Inside the Case there are three high-grade pencils with erasers, one good quality penholder with pen, one twin pencil (in reality two pencils in a combination holder), one pencil sharpener, one large rubber eraser, one 10-inch ruler and an aluminum collapsible drinking cup with cover.

This Outfit is manufactured by the American Lead Pencil Company, which is sufficient guarantee of its fine quality, and we know that it will please our readers, especially those who have children going to school, and of course it is just as handy in the home, because all the pencils, penholder, etc., are high grade and just what grown people like to use. If you will accept the following special offer we will send you one of these fine Outfits free.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this complete Writing and Drawing Outfit, exactly as above described, free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9972.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

PURE white, with a fine smooth finish, this handsome Comb, Brush and Mirror Set equals in appearance the finest French Ivory. The Comb is 7½ inches long, very light and dainty, with both coarse and fine teeth. The Brush is 10 inches long and 2½ inches wide, with medium-length, finest, stiff bristles. The Mirror, which measures 10x5½ inches, is made of heavy, flawless, beveled French glass, 4½ inches in diameter.

No lady could wish for a finer Toilet Set than this one. It has the air of refinement found in the highest grade Ivory Sets, it is just as durable and can be cleaned as often as desired without injury to its smooth ivory white finish.

We will give you, free, this fine Ivory White Comb, Brush and Mirror Set in a fitted box upon the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For six one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this Comb, Brush and Mirror Set in a fitted box, free, by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 7796.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

31-Piece Dinner Set

THIS splendid set of dishes is full size for family use and consists of 6 Plates, 6 Cups, 6 Saucers, 6 Cereal or Fruit Dishes, 6 Individual Butters and large Meat Platter all handsomely decorated with clusters of purple wood violets surrounded with rich green foliage and bordered with lovely tracings of gold. Our illustration gives you no idea of the real beauty of these dishes. This is by far the handsomest, daintiest dinner set we have ever offered and we are positive that it will more than please every woman who secures one of them on the terms of our very liberal offer. No matter where you live (if it is not outside the United States), we will ship you this set by express direct from the pottery in Ohio. You are to pay the express charges, but they will be but a fraction of what this set would cost you at retail.

Given To You! For a club of only ten one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this handsome 31-piece Violet Decorated Dinner Set carefully packed to prevent breakage, charges collect. Reward No. 75010.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

28 Steel Engraved Christmas CARDS AND ENVELOPES

Highest Grade Cards Made — All In Colors

Given For One Subscription

IN this assortment of high-grade Xmas Cards, Folders and Envelopes we offer our readers the very best there is to be had. As you perhaps know, the art of steel engraving is the most difficult and most expensive process in the whole world of printing. All the Cards and Folders in this assortment are steel engraved in handsome colors on the very finest, double-weight, linen-finish cardboard, and the illustrations and verses are all different and of the highest order.

The assortment contains Two Greeting or Presentation Cards, 4x5 inches, with envelopes; One Greeting or Remembrance Card, 3½x4½ inches, with envelope; One Six-Page Folder with Silk Ribbon Binder, 2⅝x4 inches, with envelope, and Nine, all different, Christmas Greeting Presentation or Remembrance Cards, 2¾x4 inches, all with envelopes.

We anticipate a big demand for these high-grade Christmas Cards, therefore please send in your order at once as our supply is limited. Remember, you could not buy better cards than these at any price, anywhere—this we guarantee. We will send you this fine assortment of Christmas Cards, Folders, etc., with envelopes to match —28 pieces in all—packed in a neat box, upon the terms of the following free offer.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you this high-grade assortment of Steel Engraved Christmas Cards, Folders and Envelopes, exactly as described, free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 8651.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Gate Top Mesh Purse

THIS is the new "Gate Top" mesh purse with a ten-inch wrist chain, handsome, stylish, and perfectly safe for the carrying of money and other valuables. A slight pull with the forefinger of each hand instantly opens the purse, a gentle pressure with thumb and finger closes it. Our illustration shows the purse closed. When open the top is as large as the bottom, or in other words, two inches in diameter. When closed it leaves an opening only three-fourths of an inch wide over which the brightly polished German silver cover snaps down tightly so that the contents of the purse cannot possibly become lost. This dainty purse is now extremely fashionable so we have purchased a quantity for the benefit of those of our lady and girl readers who like to be up-to-date in these little accessories. You can have one of them free by taking advantage of the following

Club Offer. For three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this handsome and stylish Gate Top mesh purse free by Parcel Post prepaid. Reward No. 7833.

Reward No. 7833

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Boys! Get This Air Rifle!

Automatic Repeater, Works Like A Winchester. Will Fire 350 Shots Without Reloading.

BOYS—here is the Air Rifle you have always wanted—a real repeater which loads automatically just like a Winchester or a Marlin. It is nearly three feet long yet weighs only two pounds, uses BB shot and shoots 350 times without reloading. The barrel and all working parts are made of high grade steel with a gun metal finish, the stock is handsomely stained and polished. This splendid rifle is just what you need to take with you on your camping and hunting trips because with it you can bag all kinds of small game such as crows, hawks, squirrels, rabbits, etc., and for target practice it is just fine. No powder —no danger—your parents cannot possibly object to your having one, because it is absolutely safe to handle. You can get this splendid air rifle entirely free on the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For a club of only seven one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this Repeating Air Rifle exactly as described above free by Parcel Post prepaid. Reward No. 7487.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's Information Bureau

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT subscribers on subjects not related to the special departments elsewhere in the paper will be answered, as far as may be. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions addressed to this Bureau. They will thus save time, labor and postage.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address but we will print only initials if so requested.

MRS. W. W. B., Mascotta, Fla.—Your Columbian half-dollars are not worth any more than their face value, nor would there be any premium upon the stamps you describe.

W. McC., Smith's Basin, N. Y.—See above reply to Mrs. W. W. B., Mascotta, Fla.

MRS. E. E. J., Lake Park, Ia.—The U. S. Patent Office, Washington, D. C., will send to any inventor, upon application, a copy of the Rules of Practice—which booklet contains forms and instructions concerning making application for a patent. (2) Patent fees must be paid in advance and are as follows: On filing each original application for a patent, $15. On issuing each original patent, $20. Every patent contains a grant to the patentee, his heirs and assigns, for the term of seventeen years (except in the case of design patents) of the exclusive right to make, use and vend the invention or discovery throughout the United States and the Territories.

M. B., Vicksburg, Miss.—There would be no salable value to your doctor's diploma bearing the far from ancient date of 1831.

O. P., Dixons Mills, Ala.—We cannot tell you if your domestic made violin which cost $35 seventy-five years ago is now worth more than its original purchase price. It might be in such condition that it is worth much less, or possibly its tone and playing value have increased through the years. This is a question which could be only decided by an expert after trial and inspection.

G. R., Conneaut, O.—States which have a considerable amount of vacant public land still open are as follows: The number of empty acres, the principal U. S. Land Office and the name of the Register are listed after the name of each state: Arizona, 6,643,509; Phoenix, C. E. Marshall. California, 15,237,248; San Francisco, J. B. Sanford. Colorado, 7,364,231; Denver, Mrs. M. W. Dargin. Idaho, 5,628,945; Boise, F. S. Heer. Montana, 3,964,156; Helena, Joseph Oker. Nevada, 31,457,972; Carson City, Mrs. M. L. Bray. New Mexico, 14,915,870; Santa Fe, F. Delgado. Oregon, 13,259,635; Portland, Alexander Sweek. Utah, 13,-316,198; Salt Lake City, G. B. Blakely. Washington, 748,571; Seattle, G. A. C. Rochester. Wyoming, 18,077,735; Cheyenne, W. Reid. You may write to any of the U. S. Land Offices listed above, or to the Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., for further information concerning the regulations established regarding right of homestead entry upon these vacant public lands.

E. S., Hettick, Ill.—The inscription you describe is meant to indicate that your violin was made by Jacob Stainer a couple of centuries ago, more or less; but the addition of the Latin words of the modern and unpopular phrase, "made in Germany," causes our almost certain belief that your fiddle is but one of numerous imitations of "old violins" which are put upon the market to deceive credulous buyers. The faked ancient inscription is added to help in the deception. Be glad if your instrument is as "sweet-toned" as you state, even if you must give up your hope that you are the owner of a work of one of the old masters of violin-making.

MRS. B. T., Ellis, Kans.—The surface of Idaho is mountainous in the northern and central portions, with arid plains in the south. There is a volcanic region in the southeastern part of the state which abounds in saline springs and geysers. The valley lands are exceptionally fertile, and almost every crop known to the temperate zone can be successfully raised. The chief products are wheat, livestock, fruit, potatoes, sugar beets, hay, oats and barley. One farm in Lewis County produced in 1916 a 12-acre crop of barley which averaged 105 bushels to the acre. This is against an average of 25 bushels per acre for the entire U. S. In 1918, Idaho produced over eighteen million bushels of wheat and over five million bushels of potatoes. Much of Idaho's arid section has been placed under irrigation and now produces excellent wheat. Their remains abundant water in the lakes and streams of the state to reclaim some ten million acres which are available for irrigation projects. The forest area of the state is very large, consisting of about twenty million acres. There are estimated to be over forty-five billion feet of lumber in the National Forests of Idaho, and over two million sheep graze in the forest areas. Manufacturing in the state is progressing each year with the extension of transportation and the increase in the population. Immense deposits of coal and phosphate rock remain yet undeveloped in the state. Write to the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Boise, Idaho, for further information concerning opportunities of prospective settlers.

MRS. F., Oklahoma.—The last Saturday in the month of July in 1907 fell upon the 27th day.

M. N. B., Old Fort, N. C.—At this writing Germany is restless and wrestling under the rule of a Republic, the present dominant administration being known as the "Wirth Government." There is still a strong monarchial and reactionary party among the Germans, as well as a turbulent "red" organization. The activities of these add difficulty to the workings of the never-too-well-liked nor strongly established new Republican regime.

C. D., Rutherfordton, N. C.—There is no charge for attendance at city high schools and there would be no question of your "working your way" through a school of this sort. What should be necessary is that you might obtain some part-time or evening employment which would enable you to pay your board while you were attending such school. Many of our large cities maintain splendidly conducted night schools. We advise you to write to the Employment Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. of both Baltimore and Philadelphia. Describe in full your needs and problems and ask for advice and help.

J. A. G., Richmond, Ky.—Wyoming has over eighteen million acres of public lands yet awaiting entry. The state is a great sheep-raising section, but as in many Western states the ranges are steadily giving place to farms and general agriculture. Irrigation is needed in a large part of Wyoming to make the soil produce, and only in the eastern portion can crops be successfully grown without additional water supply. There are numerous public and private irrigation projects in operation today to furnish water to thirsty acres, and where this water touches the soil, fine crops of alfalfa, sugar beets, vegetables and small fruits are being grown. Over a million acres of the state's soil are now irrigated and systems of dry farming are also in use. It is hoped to make many millions of acres productive through methods of dry cultivation. Wyoming has a mean elevation of some 6,300 feet and the dry atmosphere and clear sunshine make the state a favorite health resort. There are over 7,000,000 acres of forest lands. There are U. S. Land Offices in the state at Cheyenne, Buffalo, Douglas, Evanston, Lander and Newcastle. You may address any or all of these for further information.

MRS. A. F., Starks, La.—The small seed pearl which you discovered in your can of sardines would be practically of no value.

I. J., Grandridge, Fla.—There are but a few thousand acres of vacant public land remaining open for entry in Florida, and we imagine that most of this must be useless for agricultural purposes. The only U. S. Land Office in the state is at Gainesville, where R. W. Davis is Register.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 17.)

Mrs. Maud James of Michigan and F. M. B. of Chicago, I admire your ideas concerning the attitude of parents toward children. I suppose there are some real, genuine fathers and mothers somewhere. Why do some fathers and mothers live in an altogether different sphere from their children? Is it not every parents' profound duty to help and teach the young ones how to fly? Why don't they make home a place of pleasure and attraction? A place one doesn't want to leave for any other? Children want companionship and they will get it even from inferior companions if it is denied them at home. We need more unselfish, companionable parents and there will be happier and more contented children. It is a responsible responsibility to become a parent and so few are capable of filling that sacred place.

Every child born into this world has some talent. Some have more than others, but it is certainly an obligation on the part of the parents, if they are at all interested in their children's welfare, to help develop that talent.

I believe it is customary to give a brief description of yourself. Brown hair, brown eyes, round, full face without a "crowfoot," weight 136 pounds and height five feet, seven inches.

"What is failure? It is only a spur to the one who receives it right.
It makes the spirit within him stir to go in once more and fight.
If you have never failed, it's an easy guess
You never have won any high success."

A MAIDEN OF THE SOUTH.

Best Ways of Doing Things Around the Home

After preparing peaches for canning, rinse hands in clear water and they will not be stained.

Add a teaspoonful of soda to your bread sponge when you set it and you will know that it will not sour.

I find that a banana crate does very nicely for a soiled clothes basket. Cover with cretonne if you wish.

If by mistake soup is too salty, put a few slices of potato in it and cook a few minutes. The potato absorbs the extra salt.

Put a small quantity of starch in the bluing water and the clothes will be much easier to iron.—GREEN EYES, Ft. Scott, Kans.

Try baking pumpkin instead of boiling. Cut them in half, remove seeds, turn cut side down in tin and bake in hot oven.—MRS. WM. ROTHENBUEHLER, Monroe, Wisc.

To prevent wash boiler from rusting, clean well after using and rub well with cloth dipped in kerosene. Wash in hot suds before using again.—MRS. A. L. MCKINNEY, Aurora, Nebr.

Empty cocoa tins are very serviceable for spice tins. When used on shelves, label on sides but if kept in drawer, put label on top of cans.—JUST A PLAIN GIRL, Pardeeville, Wisc.

Powdered alum sprinkled on mildew stains and steamed ten or fifteen minutes is said to be good. Be careful to rinse well before it dries on the material. This is important.—EX-SOLDIER'S WIFE, Modesto, Calif.

Buy a can of enamel and paint the legs and parts of stove that do not get heated too much. With a damp cloth wipe these parts every day and save yourself much labor in blacking and polishing.—ANOTHER RED HEAD, Illinois.

To remove white spot from furniture, caused by water, place a thick piece of cloth, saturated in some good furniture polish, over the spot, cover well with paper to keep air out and let remain several days. —MRS. G. A. I.

In slicing pineapple do not use the same knife that was used for peeling unless it is first washed. The rind contains an acid that is apt to cause a swollen mouth and sore lips. The Cubans use salt as an antidote for the ill effects of the peel.—KITTY, Ohio.

When potatoes are scarce, try using whey or water off clabbered milk when making light bread. Boil the clabbered milk until the curd and whey separate and use liquid instead of potato water with any bread recipe. It keeps longer and does not become dry as quickly as potato bread.—COMFORT SISTER, Connersville, Indiana.

To hemstitch on machine without special attachment: fold blotting paper (newspaper will answer the purpose just as well), until you get the thickness corresponding to the opening desired in the hemstitching; put one of the pieces of goods under the paper and the other above, then place all under the presser foot and sew through them. After being sewed, both pieces will be double. Fold back the cloth, first on one side, then on the other, all in the same direction and hold firmly while you tear out the paper. Remove the other half of the paper and open the hemstitching, one edge of each, and sew along the side of the hemstitch; finish the under side as you choose. This is very simple and is a nice way to put flour sacks together in making everyday tablecloths.

Requests

How to can okra.

How to can chickens.

Poem: "The Mystic River."

Information on care of roses.

Cure for white mold on plants.

Poem: "The Heart of a Woman."

How to make popcorn balls and bars.

Address of company making Economy can lids.—MRS. W. T. DAVIS, Lanada, N. Car.

Miss Lula Wilson, Greensboro, R. R. 5, Box 44, N. Car., wants August, 1921, number of COMFORT.

Would like to hear from Michigan sisters as to climate and products.—MRS. G. W. CORBIN, Delhi, Box 104, Iowa.

Bluebird pattern, to be cut from chambray and appliqued to cloth foundation.—GERALDINE ROBARDS, Adrian, Missouri.

Mrs. V. E. Meade, Carmen, Kentucky, would like address of firm selling books on life and sermons of Dwight L. Moody and Billy Sunday.

Will someone send me directions for Irish crochet and roll stitch. Will try and return favor.—MRS. A. L. MCKINNEY, Aurora, 613 Eleventh St., Nebraska.

Will someone please send me the August and November numbers of COMFORT for 1919 and August, 1921, number.—MRS. CAROLINE NELSON, Cylinder, Iowa.

Will someone send me the August, 1921, number of COMFORT and the books, "Wife in Name Only" and "Heritage of Love." Write first.—MRS. A. CRAVENS, Emelle, Ala.

Will someone please send me the October, 1919, number of COMFORT. Will return favor in any way possible. Write first.—MISS NELLIE SCHROLL, Wayland, R. R. 2, Iowa.

Mrs. Emma H. Field, Babylon, Box 326, N. Y., is seeking a copy of a poem known as "The Cuckoo," which appeared at one time in the Eclectic School Reader. Perhaps some COMFORT reader can aid Mrs. Field.

Remedies

EAR TROUBLE.—Bake mullin leaves in oven in earthen vessel. Strain and use the oil obtained for trouble with the ears.—MRS. L. K., S. Dakota.

SPRAINS.—One tablespoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of strained honey, white of one egg. Mix together, beat one hour or longer is better, let set an hour, then dip off foam and apply fluid to affected part. Will relieve a sprain at once.—MATTIE ALLDREDGE, Summit, Ala.

ITCH AND ECZEMA.—Mix equal parts of lard and tar and half as much sulphur as either lard or tar, and apply thoroughly to affected parts. Another good remedy is made by steeping a teaspoonful of Princess Pine in a cup of water and drinking it three times a day, half a cupful at a dose, and bathing the affected parts each time with the tea. This will cure a bad case of eczema.

GALLSTONES.—Take ten teaspoonfuls of the ground root of sweetened and one-half teaspoonful of sacred bark. Boil in one pint of water for one hour or until the liquid becomes slippery. Strain and cool. Take a half cupful at a dose. The first dose generally brings relief. These herbs can be had from the average drug store, or get your druggist to give you the address of some company where they can be purchased.—MRS. F. T. MULLIKIN, Kossuth, Miss.

PISO'S

Safe & Sane

For Coughs and Colds

Insist on it by name

This syrup is different from all others. Pleasant—gives quick relief. Contains no opiates—good for young and old.

35¢ per bottle everywhere

All this jewelry is yours for selling only 6 Boxes Mentho-Nova at 25 cts. Needed in every household. Sells easily. Order today. When sold return $1.50 and all 6 pieces are yours.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Box 329, Greenville, Pa.

BIG CAMERA GIVEN

Genuine Eastman takes large high class pictures 2¼x3¼, the best made, given for selling two lots of 20 Art & Religious Pictures at 10c each. Order 20, when sold send the $2.00 and choose Camera or other valuable prize from big list sent with pictures. RAY ART CO. Dept. 78, Chicago.

You can be quickly cured, if you

STAMMER

Send 10 cents for 288-page book on Stammering and Stuttering, "Its Cause and Cure." It tells how I cured myself after stammering 20 yrs. B. N. Bogue, 1830 Bogue Bldg., 1147 N. Ill. St., Indianapolis.

CARDS Send 5 cents for large Sample Album of Hidden Name, Silk Fringe, Envelope, Friendship, Joker's, Lover's and all other Kinds of Cards, Post Cards and Premiums. Star Beau Catcher and list 980 Scores given Free. No trash. OHIO CARD CO., B-14 Columbus, Ohio.

Dialogs, Monologs, Musical Comedies and Revues, Minstrel Opening Choruses, Darky Plays. PLAYS Vaudeville Acts How to Stage a Play Make-up Goods Catalog Free. T. S. DENISON & CO., 623 So. Wabash, Dept. 6 CHICAGO

Prepaid 10 YEAR GUARANTEE Watch and Ring GIVEN

We positively give a genuine Stem Wind, Stem Set Watch, Beautifully Engraved Case, guaranteed time-keeper, for selling only 25 of our Large, Beautifully Colored Art and Religious Pictures at 10c each. Order 25 pictures. We trust you. When sold, return money collected, and this Watch and Handsome Stone Set Ring are yours. It's easy our way.

GAIR MFG. CO. 1926 Sunnyside Ave. Dept. 101 CHICAGO

You Can Make The Most Beautiful Purses Bags, Chains, Necklaces, Belts, Etc. With The

Kanibas Bead Loom

Thousands of Beads and Complete Outfit

Full Instructions Show You How—You Cannot Possibly Fail

For a Club of 8

BEADWORK is all the rage again. And here is a wonderful yet simple Bead Loom with which any woman or girl can take up this fascinating work at home and easily make the handsomest bags, chains, necklaces, purses, bracelets, belts, collars and cuffs, dress trimmings, shirtwaist sets, slippers, watch cases, fob chains, card cases, pocketbooks,—in fact there is no limit to the number and variety of exquisitely colored bead work articles that can be woven on this Loom.

Anybody can use the "Kanibas" Bead Loom—it is very easy to understand as everything is fully explained in the instruction book sent with the outfit.

Everything you need to work with is included free with the Loom, so you can begin making the articles at once.

In the outfit you will receive one "Kanibas" Bead Loom, five packages of beads in assorted colors of black, white, blue, green, pink, etc., one dozen special bead needles (very long and slender with an unusually long eye), one spool of specially prepared waxed bead thread, and a 44-page instruction book containing more than seventy-five photographs and designs of popular bead work, together with easy, detailed instructions on just what color of beads to use and how to work them.

This book shows how to make different styles of bags, chains, necklaces, purses, belts, collars and cuffs, shirtwaist sets, slippers, watch cases, fob chains, card cases, pocketbooks, dress trimmings, any letter in the alphabet, any numeral, etc., etc.,—giving full directions for all designs. The popular secret order emblems can be worked with great effect in beads for fob chains, bracelets, card cases, etc., and this book illustrates designs for Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Columbus, Elks, Royal Arcanum, also Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and others.

Any woman or girl will be delighted with this practical Loom Outfit because she can make so many pretty things not only for her own use but to give away as presents and to sell. While the beads themselves cost but little, the finished work brings a high price so that there are big profits in the business, if one desires to sell the articles after they are made.

Special Club Offer. For eight one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you the "Kanibas" Bead Loom and Outfit free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 7598.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

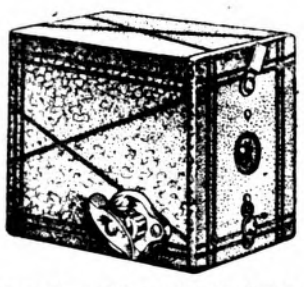
Artist's Paint Box

For A Club Of Only Four



27 Colors.
Fine Camel's-Hair Brush

NEARLY every boy and girl, and many grown people too, like to paint pictures of flowers, animal life, bits of scenery, etc. To get the best results, however, you need a good set of colors like the one shown here. The box is 8½ inches long, 3½ inches wide, made of black enameled metal. It contains eleven regular colors in pans and sixteen moist colors in tubes, including Light Red, Yellow, Light Yellow, Violet, Ultramarine, Green, Light Green, Cobalt Blue, Prussian Blue, Carmine, Warm Sepia, Vermilion, Black, White, Yellow Ochre and Orange. There is also a good quality camel's-hair brush five inches long. Anyone who has a talent for drawing or painting should have one of these outfits because it is of good quality throughout and we know it will give the greatest satisfaction. You can have this Paint Box complete as described upon the terms of the following special offer:

Given To You! For four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this fine Artist's Paint Box free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 7994.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Premo Camera

Reward No. 7944

Films And Instruction Book Free

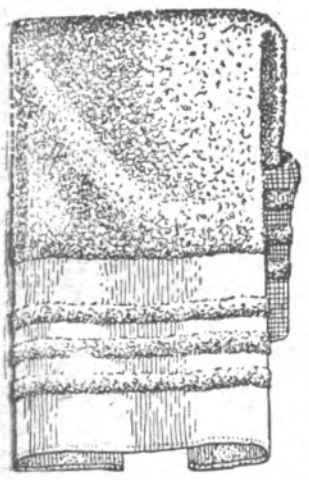
THIS is not a toy but a genuine "Premo" camera, made by the Eastman Kodak Co., therefore you can depend upon it to produce the most pleasing and satisfactory results. It takes a picture 1¼ by 1¾ inches, is fitted with the best quality Meniscus lens and an automatic shutter adapted for snapshots and time exposures. The pictures may be taken either the long way or the short way of the camera. It uses the regulation roll film cartridge containing six exposures, and this may be put in the camera and taken out again in broad daylight, so that you don't have to go into a dark room every time you want to load the camera. Anybody can make good pictures with this camera. Being small and compact, it is just the thing to carry with you to "snap" pictures of your friends, sports, etc., with. And remember, we send you not only the camera itself but also include One Six Exposure Roll Film Cartridge and Instruction Book, all packed together in a strong box and sent to you Free by Parcel Post, prepaid, on the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For a club of four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you by parcel post, prepaid, this Premo Camera with one Roll Film Cartridge containing six exposures and complete Instruction Book. Reward No. 7944.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Gent's Watch and Chain

Reward No. 7696



For A Club Of Six!

A WATCH that any man or boy may feel proud to carry, and an excellent timekeeper. It has a handsome polished nickel case; the movement is American made, stem wind and stem set, the dial is pure white with large plain easily read figures. We have already given away thousands of these watches and they never fail to please and satisfy. Now is the time for you to secure one of these guaranteed watches before the price of them goes up still further as it is pretty sure to do in the near future. We will send you this watch exactly as described, together with a chain, if you will accept the following

Club Offer. For a club of only six one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this guaranteed watch, also a handsome chain free by Parcel Post, prepaid. Reward No. 7696. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Two Turkish Towels

Good Size Soft And Fleecy

AFTER bathing there is nothing quite as fine as a good rub down with a Turkish towel, in fact it is the best towel for all purposes, whether for the bathroom, guestroom or everyday family use. They absorb the water much more readily than other towels and the soft fleece-like surface imparts to the body a delightful feeling of warmth and well-being. They are also fine for baby's toilet as they will not hurt the tender skin. The towels offered here are 15 inches wide and 32 inches long which is a good convenient size for all-round family use, and are of good weight, well made and finished. We will make you a present of two of these towels upon the terms of the following offer

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you one pair (2) of these fine Turkish Towels free by parcel post, prepaid. Premium No. 9912.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

All Yours For Only One Subscription!

52

All Different Lovely Gold and Color Embossed Christmas Enclosure Cards, Folders, Cut Outs, Seals, Stickers, Tags, Etc., Etc.

Reward No. 7931

A Big Package of Beautiful Christmas Novelties, And An Exquisite Colored Christmas Calendar For 1922.

All the latest new style Christmas novelties, beautifully printed and embossed on superfine paper in gold, purple, crimson, holly-green and all the colors of the rainbow. The use of these dainty, appropriate emblems of holiday cheer is now almost universal—everyone realizes how much these refined little cards, tags, seals, stickers, etc., add to the value of the Christmas gift.

For the benefit of COMFORT readers we had this special assortment made up expressly for us by one of the largest and best known Christmas novelty manufacturers in America. And in order to give the greatest value possible we had them add to the assortment a most beautiful 1922 Christmas Calendar 4½ inches wide by 6½ inches long, lithographed in no less than five colors on heavy white coated specially prepared paper. This Calendar alone is worth all that we ask you to send us for the whole collection—and you will say so too when you see it.

Now let us tell you what this big assortment contains:

One Extra Large Colored and Holly Embossed "Christmas Stocking" Enclosure Card.

Five Large Elegantly Embossed and Colored Christmas Enclosure Cards.

Ten Medium Embossed and Colored Christmas Enclosure Cards.

Two Large Handsomely Colored and Decorated Christmas Tags.

Four Medium Colored and Decorated Christmas Tags.

One Extra Large Colored and Holly Embossed Christmas Book Mark.

One Beautiful Extra Large Colored and Embossed Christmas Novelty Cut-out Card.

Two Dainty Colored and Embossed Novelty Cut-out Christmas Folders.

Ten Beautifully Colored and Embossed Santa Claus, Evergreen, Poisettia, and Christmas Bells Gummed Seals.

One Special Large Oval Illustrated Gold Embossed and Colored Christmas Gummed Seal with the words, Do Not Open Until Christmas."

Five Novelty Santa Claus Cut-out Christmas Gummed Seals, Embossed in Colors.

Ten Cute Novelty Children Cut-out Christmas Gummed Seals.

One Artistic, Beautifully Embossed and Finished Christmas Calendar for 1922.

All the Enclosure Cards, Tags and Folders carry a cheery Christmas Greeting, such as "Merry Christmas," "With Best Christmas Wishes," "Christmas Greetings," "Merry Yuletide," "Christmas Joys," and others equally as pleasing and appropriate. These are to be tied to or enclosed inside your Christmas packages to bear a loving message with the gift. And all the gaily colored gummed Stamps and Seals you will use to seal and decorate the outside of your Christmas letters and packages as well. You will be surprised and delighted to see how much they add to the attractiveness of your gifts, to say nothing of the fun of "doing them up."

Don't forget that in addition to all of these lovely cards, seals, tags, stickers, etc., we are also going to send an exquisitely embossed and multi-colored Christmas Calendar for 1922, a large handsome holly decorated Book Mark and two large Christmas Novelty Cut-out Folders which are as unique as they are pleasing. When you first look at one of them it is to all appearances a handsome Christmas Post Card and the other a very attractive four-page Booklet, when presto—a flip of the finger, and the startling transformation takes place, causing the figures and designs to stand out in bold relief, and in a life-like manner that is truly wonderful. These cute novelties are something entirely new this season and they make very attractive center-table or mantlepiece ornaments as they are large and stand without support.

We will send you this package of beautiful Christmas Novelties, including the large Handsome Christmas Calendar upon the terms of the following very liberal

FREE OFFER. For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you this big package of beautiful Christmas Novelties free by mail postpaid. Reward No. 7931.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

2-Piece Toilet Set

THIS is a good grade Toilet Set, consisting of comb and brush. The comb is seven inches long, with coarse and fine teeth, and comes in the new popular "Malachite" green finish. The brush is nine inches long, two and a half inches wide, with firm white bristles, and is finished in the same beautiful "Malachite" green, with a silverine shield on the back. We have given away thousands of these sets and it never fails to please.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Comb and Brush Set free and prepaid. Reward No. 9982.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Genuine Gold Filled

Guaranteed For 5 Years

Gold Birthstone Rings

THE most popular ladies' rings worn today are these beautiful birthstone rings. Not only is it considered lucky to wear one of them but they are now and always will be exceedingly stylish. We are able to illustrate only three of the rings but there are twelve in all—a different stone for each month of the year, and of course you should wear the stone that is symbolical of the month you were born. The following is a list of the twelve rings, names of the stones and the month to which they apply:

No. 8411, January, Garnet. No. 8421, February, Amethyst. No. 8431, March, Bloodstone. No. 8441, April, Diamond. No. 8451, May, Emerald. No. 8461, June, Agate. No. 8471, July, Ruby. No. 8481, August, Sardonyx. No. 8491, September, Sapphire. No. 8501, October, Opal. No. 8511, November, Topaz. No. 8521, December, Turquoise.

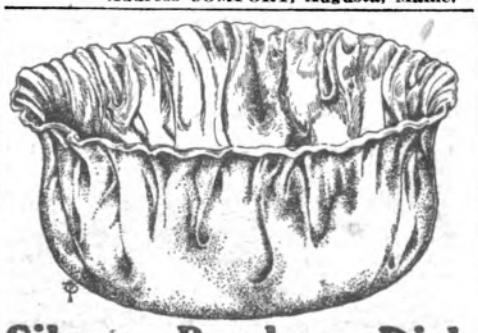
Each ring is guaranteed genuine gold filled, which looks exactly like solid gold and will wear for years. In fact we absolutely guarantee each ring for at least five years. The rings themselves are perfectly plain, the stones are solitaires and perfect imitations of the real gems. The setting of each ring is the ever popular "Tiffany" style. As a Christmas, Birthday or all-the-year-round gift for wife, mother, sweetheart or sister, nothing could be more appropriate and acceptable than one of these beautiful guaranteed rings set with the birthstone of the person to whom it is given. We will send you one of these rings free upon the terms of the following offer:

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you one of these beautiful gold-filled Rings by parcel post, prepaid. Please be sure to give size and number of ring wanted.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.



Three Lovely Ferns

THEY are the largest, handsomest varieties ever grown for house culture—the Roosevelt, the Boston or "Fountain" fern, and the Whitmani or "Ostrich Plume" Fern. We guarantee these ferns to be strong, healthy and well rooted, and that they will reach you in perfect condition, ready to pot. If any of them fail to grow, we will cheerfully replace them free of charge. We are able to illustrate but one variety, "The Roosevelt," but remember you get all three ferns free on this offer.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you the above described collection of three beautiful ferns free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 8581.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Silver Bonbon Dish

THIS beautiful dish can be used for a variety of purposes—for candy, nuts, salted peanuts, popcorn, etc. It is much larger than it appears in the above illustration, measuring over five inches in width and two inches deep. It is heavily silver plated outside and gold lined. Needless to say, it makes a handsome ornament for the sideboard and will last a lifetime.

We will send you this handsome Silver Bonbon Dish free upon the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this Silver Plated, Gold Lined Bonbon Dish free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9942.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

26-Piece Table Set

Given For A Club Of Only Five

WE have made many offers of table-ware, but this is the first time we have been able to offer a complete set of 26 Pieces in return for so small a club. And please don't think that because we are giving this set on such liberal terms that it is plated on a brass base and consequently will change color and have that "brassy" look just as soon as the plating wears off. On the contrary, it has a white metal base; therefore each and every piece is the same color all the way through and will not show signs of wear, even after years of constant use. As shown in the above illustration, there are 26 pieces in this set—6 Knives, 6 Forks, 6 Teaspoons, 6 Tablespoons, Sugar Shell and Butter Knife. Each piece is full regulation size for family use, the handles are handsomely embossed and the blades of the knives and the bowls of the teaspoons and tablespoons are perfectly plain and bright polished. It is only because we buy this set in large quantities direct from the factory that we are able to secure it at a price that enables us to offer it as a reward for so few subscriptions. It is by far the greatest value we have offered and we guarantee every set sent out for a period of five years. We will send this 26-Piece Table Set exactly as illustrated and described to any address upon the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For a club of five one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this 26-Piece Table Set free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 7625.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

"Peggy" The New Winter Doll

She Is Looking For A Mother

Do You Want Her?

PEGGY first saw the light of day in New York but she didn't like the big city with its noise and confusion and was mighty glad to come to Maine on a brief vacation before looking for a permanent home somewhere in the country.

She doesn't care where she lives so long as as it is in some cozy little town or on a nice, big farm, and provided she can find some little girl who will be a kind mother to her. She just loves the horses and cows and doggies and kitties and—yes, even the little "piggies" make her laugh until she can hardly stand up.

Peggy says that life on the farm is the only life for her, so we want to give her to some little girl who lives on a farm, where she can romp and play to her heart's content and be happy all day long. Please remember, however, that we have but a limited number of these Dolls on hand and if you want one your order should be sent in at once.

A New York manufacturer who wanted to keep his help busy during the dull season sold us these Dolls at about one-half the regular wholesale price, so we are enabled to give them away for almost nothing.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you "Peggy" free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8621.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

French Ivory Manicure Set

In A Roll-Up Leather Case

Given For A Club Of Four!

A PRACTICAL and beautiful Set, containing everything necessary for the proper care of the nails. It consists of a 5-inch flexible polished steel nail file, a pair of 3½-inch polished steel curved nail scissors, a 4-inch cuticle knife with French Ivory handle, a 4-inch French Ivory nail stick, and a 4½-inch nail polisher or buffer with French Ivory Top. All these articles are neatly contained in a moire-lined, genuine leather case, measuring 5½ inches wide and 6 inches from end to end when opened. The case rolls up as shown in illustration, and fastens with two snap clasps. In this form it resembles a miniature pocketbook, and is just as convenient to carry, as it measures only 5½x2 inches and only 1 inch in thickness.

Although we offer this Manicure Set for an unusually small club, please understand that each and every piece is strictly high grade and regulation size. We know that every woman and girl who accepts this offer and earns one of these splendid Sets will be more than delighted with it. It is free on the terms of the following offer.

Given To You! For four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this splendid French Ivory Manicure Set in a roll-up leather case free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8124.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

"We Can't Keep House Without Sloan's

WE always keep Sloan's Liniment right where we can lay our hands on it. We use it for every sort of external ache or pain, rheumatism, neuralgia, backaches, stiff joints, sprains and strains."

Sold by dealers you know and can trust.

35c, 70c, $1.40

Keep it handy

Sloan's Liniment Pain's enemy

MOST PITIFUL SIGHT IN LIFE

is a man or woman who has no "will-power" as a result of nerve force exhaustion

All the physical suffering which may be caused by nervous irritability, headaches, backaches, indigestion, heart palpitation, etc., as a result of nerve force exhaustion, are nothing as compared with its awful effects upon the mind and "will power."

The most pitiful sight in life is a man or woman who has "no will"—who has noble impulses and desires but not enough "will power" to carry them through. The memory also fails, the judgment is bad and everything therefore seems to go wrong.

In such cases, do not take mere stimulating medicines nor narcotic drugs (which only further injure your delicate nervous system), but what you need is something to put more nerve force into your nerves and more iron into your blood to help make new nerve force with which to feed your starving nerve cells. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. It also contains strength-giving organic iron for the blood and may therefore be said to be both a blood and a nerve food. Over 4,000,000 people are using it annually. Satisfactory results are guaranteed to every purchaser or the manufacturers will refund your money. Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "Nuxated" on every package. Sold by all druggists.

NUXATED IRON
For Red Blood, Strength and Endurance

WITTE Log Saw

NOW $99.50

$35 Tree Saw FREE If you buy Now
Latest model. Fast Cutting Outfit. Engine, Saw, etc., all complete. From Pittsburgh, add $6.00. Catalog FREE. Write for particulars.

f. o. b. Kansas City

WITTE ENGINE WORKS
3641 Oakland Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.
3641 Empire Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

48 WAR VIEWS INCLUDED FREE

See The Wonders Of War Through The Pan-Chro Scope

FEW of us will ever travel to Europe and there, with our own eyes, view the actual scenes of the mightiest conflict in history. But you can see them through the Pan-Chro Scope, which is almost as good. The Pan-Chro Scope is a new invention—something like the stereoscope—fitted with twin-stereo lens of wonderful magnifying power. With this Scope we send you 48 different War Views, taken with the camera. You place the View in the Scope, and immediately you find yourself face to face with an astonishingly life-like scene that resembles a section of a moving-picture film. First you are aboard an American warship—next you are looking into a trench "somewhere in France," then you are among the barbed wire entanglements in "No Man's Land," again you are watching house-to-house fighting in a captured French town, and many other scenes of actual warfare just as interesting and exciting—48 of them in all. The different views take you direct to Belgium, France or wherever the place may be and shows you the scenes almost as plainly as though you were there yourself. This Pan-Chro Scope and Views is one of the most wonderful souvenirs of the great war yet produced. Everybody is fascinated with it—men, women, boys and girls alike. We have but a few left—but you can feel sure of getting one if your order is mailed at once.

CLUB OFFER. We will send you this Pan-Chro Scope with 48 all different War Views free and prepaid for three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each. Reward No. 8833.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

VETERINARY INFORMATION

Subscribers are invited to write to this department asking for any information desired relative to the treatment of animal troubles. Questions will be answered in these columns free by an eminent veterinarian. Describe the trouble fully, sign full name and give your address; direct all correspondence to the Veterinary Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address, but we will print only initials if so requested.

WARTS.—I have a horse seven years old that has warts all over his upper lip and nose. What can I do? C. K.

A.—Make a thick paste of table salt, flowers of sulphur and cold-pressed castor oil and rub it into the wart-covered parts once or twice daily. Castor oil alone often proves remedial.

CHRONIC SORES.—I have a mare that has three sore feet. They swelled just above the hoof, broke and left running sores. Please let me know what is the trouble. MISS E. R.

A.—We cannot determine from your rather meager description just what is wrong. Boils or quittor cause discharge of pus from the hoof-head but it is rare to find three feet affected at the same time. We are therefore afraid that farcy, the skin form of glanders, may be present, and you should on that account have the mare examined by a graduate veterinarian. Glanders-farcy necessitates destruction of an affected horse according to state law.

LAME HOGS.—My hogs get weak in their hind parts and just stagger around for a week or ten days, but will eat good all the time. Is there a cure? M. B.

A.—If the hogs die in a week or 10 days, the disease, no doubt, is cholera, and the remaining animals should be vaccinated by a veterinarian. Prolonged feeding of cottonseed meal to hogs also causes fatal poisoning which may be preceded by staggering. Hogs often become paralyzed in their hind legs from rickets or constipation from confinement to a pen and overfeeding with corn. Better turn the remaining hogs onto a fresh pasture and add light laxative slop.

CHRONIC COUGH.—I have a cow, five years old, which has had a hacking cough for three months, especially when she is eating. She never coughed until after she had eaten sheaved oats. She is fat, gives a good flow of milk and will freshen in December. Could the oats cause the cough? MRS. J. H.

A.—Any foreign body, such as an oat hull, lodging in the throat or windpipe might cause a hacking cough. It is quite possible, however, that tuberculosis is the cause and for that reason we should advise you to have the tuberculin test applied by a veterinarian. The disease is incurable and makes the milk dangerous for use. If the cow proves to be affected, she should be disposed of in the manner prescribed by state law. The veterinarian will advise you about that.

DISEASE OF CATS.—What is the matter with my cats? They appear well one day and the next they begin to droop, vomit, and die very soon. Before they die, are thirsty and cannot drink. MRS. S. P.

A.—We suspect that the cats are taking poison of some sort, but it would be impossible to determine that without making a personal investigation. If possible, have a veterinarian examine one of the cats. Meanwhile, carefully supervise the feeding and keep the animals away from places where poison might exist.

WARTS.—I want advice how to cure warts on horses and mules. MRS. H. T.

A.—Twist off large warts that have narrow necks or ligate them tightly with a fine cord and they will soon drop off. Then rub the wounds with a nitrate of silver (lunar caustic) pencil. Once daily rub into masses of small warts a thick paste composed of salt, flowers of sulphur and cold-pressed castor oil. Immerse wart-covered teats in a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda for five minutes once or twice daily. Bloody warts on horses or mules may be removed by rubbing in daily a thick paste of salt and yolk of egg.

MANGE.—I have a dog which has a breaking out and it terrifies him. It is what we call the dog itch. Is there anything we can do to prevent it from growing worse? Is there a cure for it? MRS. M. M. B.

A.—Clip the dog and then scrub him clean with tincture of green soap and hot water, removing all scabs or crusts. When dry, rub in thoroughly, every second day, a mixture of two ounces of coal-tar dip, three ounces of balsam of Peru, one ounce of extract of male-fern and one pint of alcohol. Sulphur ointment rubbed in every two or three days, after the thorough cleansing, often proves effectual.

LAMENESS.—I have a mare, which has a limp in her left front leg, noticeable only when she trots. There are no corns and no atrophy of the shoulder. She has been this way for four years and gradually getting worse. When I start to drive her, the limping is scarcely noticeable. By the time I have driven ten miles she limps badly. After standing two hours she limps the same as when unhitched. It doesn't make any difference when she is shod or unshod. She has never been sweenied. (2) What is the operation called unnerving? (3) Are they successful? M. L.

A.—Splint lameness aggravates with exercise as does that due to ringbone, sidebone or corns. Navicular disease of the foot causes severe lameness which temporarily disappears with exercise. If the lameness is in the foot the horse will stand at rest with the foot pointed forward. A foundered horse goes on his heels. Lameness from a sprained, thickened or bowed tendon becomes worse with exercise and probably is present in this case, and if you cannot employ a qualified veterinarian to line-fire and blister the parts, we should advise you to clip the hair from the back tendons and blister that part with a mixture of one dram each of powdered cantharides and biniodide of mercury and one and one-half ounces of lard. A lameness of four years' standing must, however, be considered unpromising. Unnerving is mostly done to remove lameness caused by navicular disease or ringbone of a fore foot. It consists in cutting out a portion of the large nerve on each side of the leg at or just below the fetlock joint, and can only be done by a trained surgeon.

HEAVES.—My horse has had a cough for some time and difficulty in breathing. It is getting worse. J. A.

A.—We suspect that the horse is afflicted with heaves which is incurable when established. If the disease is present, a double bellows-like motion of the flanks will be noticed and the horse will cough and at the same time expel gas from the rectum. The severe symptoms may be relieved by feeding grass in summer and allowing oat straw and bright corn stover in winter, instead of hay. Wet all feed. Feed bran and carrots to regulate the bowels. Three times daily mix in the feed a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal quantities by weight of powdered stramonium leaves and chlorid of ammonia. If that does not give good results, try the effect of a tablespoonful of Fowler's solution of arsenic given night and morning in feed or water.

LAMENESS.—I have a mare which is lame in one of her front legs and has been lame for over a year. She has puffs on her legs. Some have been removed but she is still lame. J. O. H.

A.—A personal examination is necessary to determine the seat and cause of a mysterious lameness. You do not describe the symptoms or state the location of the puffs or say what treatment has been given to date. If you cannot have a competent veterinarian make the necessary examination, please write again and give us full particulars about the case.

HOLDING UP MILK.—Some of my cows are hard to milk sometimes, holding up one-half of it. Can you tell me what to do? W. R.

A.—A cow cannot willfully hold up milk as milk secretion is an involuntary function not controlled by the voluntary nerve system. Hard milking is a different matter, being caused by growths in the duct of the teat or strictures making the opening so small that milk comes in a small stream. A cow fails to secrete milk normally when scared or chilled. Often the teats are so sensitive that fear of pain prevents secretion. Try a change of milkers. It would be well if a woman could milk the troublesome cows. Growths may sometimes be removed by operation. Strictures are overcome by use of teat plugs or dilators and in some cases have to be cut down through in four different directions with a teat bistoury.

FISTULOUS SORE.—My cow has a very large lump under her ear. It breaks and there is an offensive odor. It nearly goes away, but comes back. It feels very hard. It has been there over one year. M. W.

A.—An abscess is present and may contain a foreign body such as a bullet, sliver, superhumerary molar tooth or be due to lump jaw (actinomycosis) or tuberculosis. The large lump should be opened into at its softest part and probed to locate any foreign body which may be removed. If none is found, the pus-secreting sac should be thoroughly scraped (curetted), injected with tincture of iodin and then packed daily with a strip of antiseptic gauze or rope of oakum saturated with a mixture of equal quantities of turpentine and cotton-seed oil. It would be well to have a veterinarian apply the tuberculin test to determine if tuberculosis is present. Write again if we can be of further help.

Holly and Mistletoe

By C. L. Cheever

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

HOLLY and huckleberries grow wild in the southern part of the United States, and there was a time when neither was much respected. But now the thickets of those southern states furnish thousands of holly wreaths. Sometimes there are fewer berries but there is never a failure in the holly crop.

The harvest begins Thanksgiving week, when boys climb to the top of the trees and hack down everything that has berries on it. They forget the future of the tree sometimes, and cut so wastefully that the mutilated tree soon dies, but a tree judiciously cut will bring forth a new supply of twigs and berries in six or seven years.

After the cutting, the masses of branches are cut to pieces in the houses and everybody finds work to do. Children tie two or three bunches of holly together with fine wire, others cut away imperfect leaves, and the older members of the family attach the sprays to wild azalea or sweet pepper bush or some other flexible twigs that look like a bunch of switches when the wreath is begun. A skillful worker will make a hundred wreaths in a day.

Many legends cluster around the holly or "holly tree," one of the oldest of which is that the plant never grew on earth until Christ came to earth and pressed the soil with his footsteps, when it sprang up boldly and flourished and sent forth many spines to protect it from attack. When animals would have harmed the Christ in the fields, the holly clustered about and protected him. Even a cursory examination of the holly tree will show you that the leaves growing on the bottom bough are much more protected by prickles than those near the top of the tree, and even unto this day cattle cannot be induced to approach the beautiful foliage of the holly tree.

Mistletoe is not so popular as holly, yet large quantities of it come into the northern market from the southern forests. The mistletoe is a plant with queer habits; it is really mysterious, and that is one reason it has found its way into legend and myth and fairy tale. The plant is an evergreen bearing a white berry that is glutinous and will stick to a surface like a bit of wax. Fruit-eating birds are fond of these berries and carry them long distances sometimes. Suppose a berry is dropped at the foot of a tree or falls beneath a branch. The seed ripens and sends out a feeding thread toward the tree. The tiny branchlet works its way into a crevice in the bark and soon gets in contact with the sap that runs between the bark and the wood. Now it has plenty of good food from the tree and the plant establishes itself and grows fast, sending its tendrils along the branches of the oak, poplar or chestnut, these being the trees that make the best hosts.

WHAT NEED FOR MORE?—Though indolent and careless, Rastus certainly seemed to be in a happy frame of mind, as he passed a beautiful residence. A man on the lawn, noticing Rastus' apparent poverty, called to him: "Say Rastus, I've got a job for you. Do you want to earn a quarter?"

"No, sah, I'se done got a quarter already," replied the darky as he slouched along.—Boston Post.

Great, Big, Beautiful, Stylish IMPORTED Manchurian WOLF FUR SCARF

$4.56

And we pay the Postage

Most astonishing bargain offer in years places this luxurious Genuine Fur Scarf within your reach! Has been $10 to $15—NOW only $4.56 postage paid and satisfaction guaranteed. If you hurry you can profit by this money-saving opportunity!

Your Money back if you want it!

Delivered FREE!

WARM AND DRESSY!

So beautiful, such silken lustrous sheen, such warmth and classy style, we cannot fully describe this Manchurian Wolf Scarf here. So we will send you yours no money in advance ON APPROVAL. 47 inches long, 14 inches wide, beautifully lined with finest silk, interlined with warm padding. Designed so you can wear it fastened close or flung loose over shoulders. Animal head, big bushy tail.

SEND NO MONEY!

Order by No. 9771. Dark brown or black, state which. No money NOW. Pay only $4.56 on arrival. We pay postage. See it, FEEL its warmth and softness. Remember, we refund price and postage if you're not delighted!

Dept. 172 Chicago

LESTER-ROSE CO.

AGENTS: We Pay $9.00 a Day

taking orders for Reversible Raincoat. Two coats in one. One side handsome black raincoat—other side fine dress coat. Takes the place of an expensive overcoat. Guaranteed water proof. Latest style. Not sold in stores.

$50.00 a Week Guaranteed for 2 average orders a day

No experience necessary. No capital required. All you do is to take the orders. We deliver by Parcel Post and do all collecting. Commission paid same day your orders are booked. Work full time or spare time. Easy to get orders on account of two coats for the price of one. Get started at once. Big season now on. Send for sample coat to wear and show.

Thomas Raincoat Co, R2530 Dayton, Ohio

EARN ONE IN AN AFTERNOON

We give this fine Pocket Ben watch, made by BIG BEN people or valuable sterling silver ring for selling only 40 of our fine handkerchiefs in sanitary glassine envelopes; send us the $4 and receive watch or ring. Everybody buys. Order today; we trust you.

Sanitary Handkerchief Co., Claremont, N. H.

A REAL .22 RIFLE ACTUALLY GIVEN AWAY HAMILTON

for selling only 22 Pks. Bluette, Our Famous wash Bluing at 15c or 48 Pks. Sachet Perfume at 10c. Order choice. Both fast sellers. You'll be surprised how easy it is to earn this Fine True Shooting 22 Cal. Rifle. Guaranteed.

CHICAGO BLUING WKS., 1820 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. 701, CHICAGO

Give COMFORT To Your Friends As A Christmas Present!

WHY not! In these days of high prices where could you find a better, more inexpensive present than a one-year's subscription to COMFORT?

It is the one gift that pleases everybody—a gift that will become a cheery, welcome reminder of you month after month for an entire year—and at so little expense you will not notice it at all. Simply send us 50 cents and the name and address of the friend you wish to remember written on the coupon below and we will enter the subscription for one full year to commence with our Christmas number and with it we will also mail a beautiful Christmas Presentation Card so that both paper and card will reach your friend at about the same time. The card is beautifully colored and embossed with a dainty appropriate Christmas design and verse on one side and on the other side is a specially printed announcement of the gift and a space left for your name as the giver which we will fill in ourselves before the card is mailed.

Isn't this a splendid idea? Surely among all your friends there is someone who will appreciate and enjoy such an interesting magazine as COMFORT and who will think of you gratefully every time the carrier leaves it at the door.

Better send us your friend's name and the money now—it's none too early to avoid the Christmas rush—and you will have at least one present less to think about because we will attend to all the details. After you mail the coupon and money you can dismiss the matter from your mind as we will take good care of your order and mail both the paper and the handsome Christmas Presentation Card properly filled out with your name as the giver at precisely the right time.

"COMFORT FOR CHRISTMAS" COUPON

Publisher COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Dear Sir: As a Christmas present from me please send COMFORT for one year to the following address, also the Christmas Presentation Card properly filled out with my name. I enclose 50 cents to pay for same.

My Friend's Name.....

Street & No...... R. F. D. No...... Box No......

Post Office..... State.....

(Be Sure To Write Your Own Name And Address Below)

My Name Is.....

Street & No...... R. F. D. No...... Box No......

Post Office..... State.....

☞ If you wish to make a present of COMFORT to more than one friend write the full names and addresses on a separate sheet of paper and pin this coupon to it. BE SURE TO ENCLOSE 50 CENTS FOR EACH NAME SENT.

Crooked Spines STRAIGHTENED

Cure Yourself or Your Child at Home, Without Pain or Inconvenience, of any Spinal Deformity with the Wonderful PHILO BURT METHOD.

No matter how old you are, or how long you have suffered, or what kind of spinal deformity you have, there is benefit and a possible cure for you. The Philo Burt Appliance is as firm as steel and yet flexible and very comfortable to wear. It gives an even, perfect support to the weakened or deformed spine. It is as easy to take off or put on as a coat, causes no inconvenience, and does not chafe or irritate. No one can notice you wearing it.

Cure Yourself At Home

The Appliance is made to fit each individual case. It weighs ounces where other supports weigh pounds. The price is within the reach of all. Hundreds of doctors recommend it.

We GUARANTEE Satisfaction and LET YOU USE IT 30 DAYS.

If you or your child are suffering from spinal trouble of any nature, write me at once for our new book with full information and references. Describe case fully so we can advice you intelligently. The Philo Burt Method consisting of a scientific appliance and a course of especial exercises, has produced wonder-benefit or cure in over 30,000 cases.

Philo Burt Company, 334-12 Odd Fellows Temple, Jamestown, N. Y.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' With the MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right.

"The Morley Phone for the DEAF is to the ears what glasses are to the eyes. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it." Over one hundred thousand sold. Write for booklet and testimonials.

THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 766, 26 S. 15th St., Phila.

Wearing Fibre Arms and Legs Gust Earns $20 a Week.

Gust Bloomquist froze his hands and feet. All were amputated. By aid of Trautman limbs, not friends and relatives, he makes his own way. Send for Gust's picture and catalog on arms, legs and braces. Ray Trautman, Minneapolis Artificial Limb Co., 657 Dean Bldg., Minneapolis, Minn.

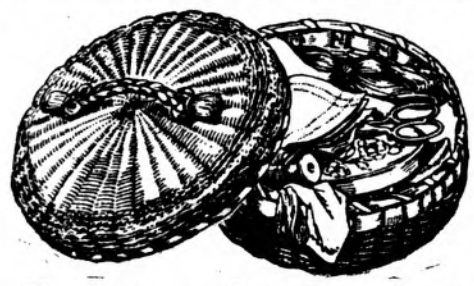
STAMMER

If you stammer attend no stammering school until you get my large FREE book entitled "STAMMERING, Its Origin and The Advanced Natural Method of Cure," bound in cloth and stamped in pure gold. Ask for special tuition rate and a FREE copy of "The Natural Speech Magazine." Largest, best equipped and most successful school in the world for the cure of stammering. No sing-song or time-beat. School open all year. Now is the best time to enroll. Lee Wells Millard, President.

The North-Western School, 2338 Grand Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

The Bee Cell Supporter

A BOON TO WOMANKIND



Made from the purest, softest rubber. Six cups or faces render misplacement absolutely impossible! Endorsed by the medical profession. Send us $2.50 and we will mail you one postpaid in plain package. Money back if not entirely satisfactory. Write for descriptive circular. It's FREE.

The Bee Cell Co., Dept. 168 White Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

LOOK YOUR BEST. Make sure of smooth white arms, face and neck in spite of sallowness, blotches, freckles, blackheads etc. If you want to be charming and attractive—Don't pay 50c but send 10c at once for sealed Package, which will transform your appearance instantly. Warranted. TOILET COMPOUND CO. Box 1927A, Boston, Mass.

Sweet Grass Basket

For Your Sewing And Fancy Work

WHERE is the woman who does not "just love" these beautiful Sewing Baskets made of sweet grass? Their delightful fragrance which is practically everlasting is like that of flowers; they are handsome in appearance and very strong and serviceable, being hand-woven by the St. Regis Indians of Canada, who produce the finest hand-made baskets in the world.

Of ample size—eight inches in diameter and three inches deep—and with its close-fitting top, this sweet-grass Basket is just what you need in which to take along your sewing or fancy work when calling or visiting. And at home it holds your work, along with scissors, buttons, thread and other necessities, so that you always know just where to look for them. And the Basket itself is such a beautiful ornament for any room.

The Indians sell these Baskets for $2.00 and $3.00 apiece at summer resorts, but by buying in large quantities they let us have them at a special low price. Therefore, we are able to offer the Basket herewith illustrated and described for a very small club of subscriptions as you will note by reading the following bargain offer.

Given To You! For only four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this fragrant, sweet-grass Sewing Basket free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 8084.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Family Doctor

The remedies and advice here given are intended only for simple cases; serious cases should be taken to your local doctor.

Address The Family Doctor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published

---

MISS C. M. S., Bristol, Tenn.—The lack of fibrin in the blood can be due to heredity. Basham's mixture will help if not cure the condition. It should be taken for a long time and your diet should be a very nutritious one—one that will tend to thicken the blood without clogging up the system.

MR. A. A. K., Akron, Ohio.—The cure of your facial pimples as well as pimples anywhere depends much on diet, keeping the bowels regular, etc. You must avoid sweets as well as pastries of all kind, drink plenty of water and exercise in the open. Apply locally, lotio alba after steaming the face thoroughly. Of course all blackheads should be removed by use of the comedo extractor before steaming the face or applying the lotion.

MRS. W. A. M., Boonville, N. C.—The blue spots mentioned are hemorrhagic and due to thin blood. Take Basham's mixture in tablespoonful doses, well diluted, after meals.

MRS. T. S., Sullivan, Ind.—Probably your trouble is chronic malaria. Try a teaspoonful of Warburg's tincture after meals, well diluted.

MRS. C. A. J., Orting, Wash.—Tuberculosis is contagious and you should not have the case in your house. Boiling water will destroy the germ as well as solutions of corrosive sublimate—one to five thousand, in strength.

MISS I. M., Durant, Okla.—For your chronic constipation take a tablespoonful of the following mixture morning and night: Fluid extract of cascara sagrada, two ounces; glycerine, two ounces; tincture of nux vomica, sixty drops, and tincture of belladonna, twenty drops. This remedy will probably cure your headache and benefit you in every way.

MRS. W. M.—Have your 19-months-old baby operated on for tonsils and adenoids. Would advise you, from your history, to raise your next baby on the bottle and not try to nurse the baby. Keep the baby on bottle milk to which has been added a tablespoonful of lime-water to the pint of milk. Also give the baby a teaspoonful of milk of magnesia once in a while. Sweet milk is better for baby than buttermilk. For your constipation, take five-grain pills of cascara sagrada morning and night.

MRS. M. W., Addington, Okla.—For the irregular menstruation, due to anemia, no doubt, from symptoms given, have your daughter take a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture after meals, well diluted.

MRS. E. N. J., Brigham, Utah.—Your headaches are due to eye-strain and you need to have your eyes fitted with proper lenses, to be worn constantly. For the leucorrhea, douche with a teaspoonful of a saturated solution of permanganate of potassium in a quart of hot water. Use the douche morning and night.

MRS. M. E. N., Bunceton, Mo.—Your son's "red eyes" must be due to the need of glasses. Have his eyes examined and proper lenses prescribed for him.

MRS. B. U., Solo, Ark.—You are passing through the so-called "change of life." Take two-grain capsules of ovarian extract, to which has been added one-twelfth grain of thyroid extract. Take the capsules twice a day only.

MRS. A., Camden, N. J.—For your melancholia and general nervous symptoms, take five-grain tablets of asafœtida after meals. Of course, avoid sweets, take plenty of exercise in the open and keep your bowels free.

MRS. R. M., Altamont, Ill.—Have the larger warts removed by the use of the actual cautery. After the larger ones are successfully removed, the others will disappear, in the majority of cases, without treatment.

MISS L. G., Chatham, Va.—For the "hot flashes," take a five-grain tablet of asafœtida after meals.

MRS. L. J. D., Pilot Point, Texas.—For your many symptoms, which seem to be due to malarial influences, take two teaspoonfuls of Warburg's tincture after meals, well diluted.

MRS. L. A. S., Chase City, Va.—You have a local infection of tonsils and throat. Gargle with Dobell's solution several times a day.

MRS. H. M., Melbourne, Ky.—The resorcin treatment that was recommended in COMFORT will do your hair and scalp good, as well as prevent the hair from falling out.

MR. J. U. P., Billen, Ohio.—Cancer can, and usually does, follow ulcer of the stomach if the ulcer is not cured by treatment and proper diet. Keep up the sodium bicarbonate if it helps the condition.

MR. W. L., Monongah, West Va.—Your chronic constipation can be cured if you will eat only coarse foods, add bran to your cereals, take a tablespoonful of American Oil with your meals and, also, take at night a ten-grain pill of cascara sagrada.

MR. C. K., Little Rock, Ark.—You have had excellent treatment and should be free from your rheumatism for all time. There is little in favor of heredity. You must avoid sweets of all kinds, including pastries. Drink at least two quarts of water daily, avoid coffee and tea as well, eat mutton, lamb, white meat of chicken, and bacon. Add no salt to your food during meals, eat plenty of green vegetables and fruits of almost all kinds. Of course, keep the bowels regular. The above regimen will largely eliminate your tendency to rheumatism. As a remedy you might take one or two yeast cakes dissolved in a glass of water daily.

MRS. W. H. C., Mirage, Colo.—Chlorozene tablets will do your throat good, if not cure your condition. Dissolve one in a glass of hot water and use as a gargle. These tablets are essentially Dakin's solution which has been so much used in surgery to date.

MR. R. T. C., Lakin, Kansas.—Take an eight-grain powder of glycero-phosphate of lime after meals. Cod liver oil is also indicated in tablespoonful doses after meals. These remedies will make bone and also increase your flesh content.

MRS. A. P., Butler, Mo.—Salicylate of soda will not injure your hearing if not taken in too large doses.

MRS. E. K., Macomb, Okla.—Rupture does not cause any trouble with the kidneys. Any doctor can by examination determine if one has rupture. Appendicitis does not affect the water. Itching after menstruation may be due to a kidney disease. Apply locally a weak carbolic ointment not over one per cent. in strength.

MISS F. B., Tupelo, Okla.—There is no safe and sure cure for bunions outside of operation. Wear proper shoes and apply locally to the inflamed bunion an ichthyol ointment—full strength.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 26.)

Billy and me, George,—almost a neighbor, if the Long Island would cut its rates, or not insist on Bill traveling in the baggage car. I must rule that I think Frank Clark's Tennessee mountains can beat Long Island, George, in a contest on points. But it's true that one does not have to go scouting thousands of miles for natural beauty—not in our fortunate country, at least. Almost always scenes in which we can find out-of-door happiness are near at hand or can be found close by. There are loads of beautiful spots in counties adjoining New York City, which transcontinental travelers know nothing about when they come back telling of the Grand Canyon or of the delights of the Pacific Coast. But the distant fields seem always the greenest—both to men and sheep. I like Long Island from Southampton to Montauk Point, George. It is beautiful all about Great Peconic Bay and through the Shinnecock Hills. Billy and I often go down that way for an outing or a breath of sea air. Last October I slept on the beach four miles from Southampton, snuggled in the sand, caressed by the salt winds, and visited by troops of stars. It is these things one remembers. Like you, George, I am an incorrigible camper. If one wants to get the most possible out of a vacation, camping out is the answer. The spread of the custom of camps, camping and out-of-door living generally, in our country during the last decade is the best thing that ever happened for the health, happiness and pocketbooks of all of us who are not summer hotel proprietors or physicians.

If you are an optician, George, you ought to be able to keep your own eyes ground up so that everything, even beautiful Long Island, looks always the best possible. If you could make some sort of a sunny pair of glasses, so that the world would always look bright to the wearer, you could be sure of a large sale. I'll put an order with you right now for a pair about eleven inches wide—these are for Billy, of course, and must be made wide across the nose piece. That's great, George, that you can make any color eyes as well as glasses. You may be getting business from some of the cousins who have green and yellow head lamps which they would like to trade for a nice pair of pansy or baby blue.

League Shut-in and Mercy Work for December

"Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these you have done it unto Me."

Written references from doctor and postmaster must positively accompany all appeals from shut-ins. Every month brings to me many letters which disregard this simple and necessary rule. Appeals unaccompanied by the references required will be destroyed.

Ellen Mayes, Carmi, Ill. Old and alone in the world, and helpless after several serious operations. A worthy case which only money can help. E. W. Wing, Clifton, O. A man of sixty-two who has been paralyzed for eight years. Asks for postcards and cheery letters. This is a simple request to be answered. Mrs. Alice Stacy, R. 1, Varnells Station, Ga. An invalid widow of sixty with a helpless son on her hands for support and care. Aid her in carrying on her brave battle. Dora Kendrick, Linn Creek, Mo. Helpless and cannot leave her room except when carried. Sympathetic friends ask that a postcard shower come to brighten up her lonely life. Miss Dollie E. Hylton, Woolwine, Va. An orphan who has lately been a hospital case and who, with an invalid aunt of 74, is struggling to maintain a little home together. Who will send on the cash to aid this well-recommended case? Lafayette Swanson, Boomer, N. C. Helpless as baby for 19 years, and with a failing wife as caretaker. A deserving case. Claude Shifflits, Richmond, Ky. A widow's son of fifteen. A poor unfortunate afflicted with chronic epileptic fits. Give him a dime shower. Mrs. A. C. Hottinger, Hebron, O. Confined to her bed for over twenty years. Cannot walk a step. Old, needy and deserving. Think of her situation and open your hearts and pockets.

We celebrate this month the birth of Him whose love for his fellows was greater than any the world had ever known or can know. As followers of Him, shed love in the practical forms, which you at a distance can give, into the dark homes and sad hearts of those who are on our League's roll for help and cheer this month. It is the truest Christmas celebration you can make; it will be the truest remembering of the birthday of Him who said: "Give and it shall be given unto you."

Lovingly,

Uncle Lisha

Comfort's League of Cousins

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of COMFORT'S immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers.

Membership is restricted to COMFORT subscribers and costs fifty-five cents, only five cents more than the regular subscription to COMFORT which is included. The fifty-five cents makes you a member of the League and gives you an attractive League button with the letters "C. L. O. C.," a handsome certificate of membership with your name engrossed thereon, and the privilege of having your name in the letter list, also a paid-in-advance subscription to COMFORT. You continue a League member as long as you keep up your subscription to COMFORT. There are no annual dues, so after you have once joined all you have to do to keep in good standing is to keep your subscription to COMFORT paid up.

How to become a Member

Send fifty-five cents to COMFORT'S Subscription Department, Augusta, Maine, with your request to be admitted into COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS, and you will at once receive the League button and your membership certificate and number; you will also receive COMFORT for one year if you are a new subscriber; but if you are already a subscriber your subscription will be renewed or extended one full year beyond date of expiration.

The League numbering over forty thousand members, undoubtedly is the greatest society of young people on earth.

Address all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and they will promptly reach the head of the department for which they are intended.

WATCH, CHAIN AND TWO RINGS

as premiums—send no money—simply name and address—merely give away FREE 12 Beautiful Art Pictures with 12 Boxes of our famous White Cloverine, which you sell at 25c each. We will send you this Genuine American Watch, also Chain and two Gold Shell Rings, according to offer in our Premium Catalog which you receive with the Cloverine. Millions are using Cloverine.

LADIES! YOU CAN ALSO EARN A BEAUTIFUL DINNER SET OR SIX LACE CURTAINS

and many other beautiful premiums. Our plan is the easiest and absolutely square. Write quick—Pictures and Cloverine sent promptly, post-paid. Be first in your town.

THE WILSON CHEMICAL CO.,

BIG CASH COMMISSION TO AGENTS Dept. M. 102, Tyrone, Pa.

Poems Requested

The following poems have been requested by readers of COMFORT and sent for publication.

The Christmas Tree

In many lands, by many seas,
Today they are planning Christmas trees.
Skies be dull, or skies be fair,
Fields white or green, they do not care,
Today they are planting everywhere.
In town and country, hall and cot,
On upland farm and corner lot,
Grandsire, maid and tow-haired tot
Plant with laughter, song and play,
The tree whose fruit is ripe in a day.
Oh, of all the fruit in the world, to me
There is none like the fruit of the Christmas tree!

Its leaves are green as cress that grows
In beds where the purling brooklet flows;
Its buds are silver, pink, or white
As apple blooms or snows at night.
Or glinting stars in the frost-moon's light.
Its blossoms are golden-hues and gleam
Like lights reflected in a stream,
Or golden treasure in a dream;
Its fruits is on every tint and shape,
Shaming the orange and plum and grape,
Oh, of all the fruit in the world to me
There is none like the fruit of the Christmas tree!

If you should seek for the seed or shoot
From which to grow this wondrous fruit,
The field and wood you'll search in vain,
Nor find them on the hill or plain,
On river path or ocean lane,
By any map or guide or chart,
In country store or city mart,—
You'll find them only in your heart;
For every heart has a seed or shoot
From which to grow this wondrous fruit;
Oh, of all the fruit in the world, to me
There is none like the fruit of the Christmas tree!

—Edward F. Burns.

Christmas Bells

I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old, familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

And thought how, as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Had rolled along
The unbroken song
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

Till, ringing, swinging on its way,
The world revolved from night to day
A voice, a chime,
A chant sublime
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

Then from each black, accursed mouth
The cannon thundered in the South
And with the sound
The carols drowned
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

It was as if an earthquake rent
The hearth-stones of a continent,
And made forlorn
The households born
Of peace on earth, good will to men!

And in despair I bowed my head;
"There is no peace on earth," I said;
"For hate is strong
And mocks the song
Of peace on earth, good will to men!"

Then pealed the bells more loud and deep;
"God is not dead; nor doth he sleep!
The Wrong shall fall,
The Right prevail,
With peace on earth, good will to men."

—Longfellow.

A Man's Reply

"I stand at the bar of your own pure woman's soul,
Condemned in the cause that you plead;
My only defence is the simple request
That you'll judge me by motive, not deed.

"For remember that man's but a child in the dark,
Though formed by the Hand above;
He will fall many times, but shall walk forth at last,
In the sunshine of infinite love.

"So I'm 'boldened to answer your question so fair,
And give you a man's reply;
That for the prize of a true woman's love
I am ready to live or die.

"You say that the man who gains your love
Must be brave, and true, and good;
I answer, that she who wins my heart
Must be the type of true womanhood.

"You say you look for a 'man and a king,'
A very prince of the race—
I look for a kind and generous heart
And not for a queenly face.

"You require 'all things that are good and true,'
All things that a man should be.
I ask for a woman, with all that implies,
And that is sufficient for me.

"You ask for a man without a fault,
To live with here on earth;
I ask for a woman, faults and all,
For by faults I may judge of worth.

"I ask for a woman, made as of old—
A higher form of man—
His comforter, helper, adviser and friend,
As in the original plan.

"A woman who has an aim in life,
Who finds life worth the living;
Who makes the world better for being here,
And for others her life is giving.

"I will not require all that I have asked,
In these lines so poor and few,
I only pray that you may be all
That God can make of you.

"For your heart, and life, and love
Are sacred things to me,
And 'I'll stake my life' that I'll be to you
Whatever I ought to be."

Sent in by C. T. B., Winchester, Mass.

Where Are the Wicked Folks Buried?

"Tell me, gray-headed-sexton," I said,
"Where in this field are the wicked folk laid?"
"I have wandered the quiet old graveyard through,
And studied the epitaphs, old and new;
But on monument, obelisk, pillar or stone,
I read of no evil that men have done."

The old sexton stood by a grave newly made,
With his chin on his hand, his hand on his spade.
I knew by the gleam of his eloquent eye
That his heart was instructing his lips to reply.

"Who is to judge when the soul takes its flight?
Who is to judge 'twixt the wrong and the right?
Which of us mortals shall dare to say
That our neighbor was wicked who died today?

"In the journey through life, the farther we speed,
The better we learn that humanity's need
Is charity's spirit, that prompts us to find
Rather virtue than vice in the lives of mankind.

"So commendable deeds we record on these stones;
The evil men do—let it die with their bones.
I have labored as sexton for many a year,
But I never have buried a wicked man here."

When people have especially pleased you, it is not a bad plan to let them know it. Though "Virtue is its own reward," a little bonus of merited praise is no more than fair, and will never lack of appreciation.

The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities

Pithy Little Advertisements that are Interesting, Instructive and Profitable to Read, for they put you wise to the newest and best in the market and keep you in touch with the world's progress.

AGENTS WANTED

Agents Steady income, large manufacturer of Soaps, Perfumes, Toilet Articles and Pure Food Products, etc., wishes representatives in each locality. Manufacturer direct to Consumer. Big profits. Honest goods. Whole or spare time. Cash or Credit. Send at once for particulars. American Products Co., 5088 American Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

We Start You In Business, furnishing everything; men and women, $30 to $100 weekly operating our "New System Candy Factories" home anywhere. Booklet free. W Hillyer Ragsdale, Drawer 5, East Orange, N. J.

Crew Managers—Agents. Opaline paintings are a knock-out. Make old territory new. Seasoned picture men double their sale. Beginners make $1.00 an hour and more with rigs. Greatest hit ever made. Samples and expense money furnished. Write today. Consolidated Portrait Co., Desk A-14, 1029 W. Adams St., Chicago.

Agents—Write for big soap offer. Quick Seller, Big Money Maker. Ho-Ro-Co, 131 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

We Start You without a Dollar. Soaps, Extracts, Perfumes—ToiletGoods. Experience unnecessary. Carnation Co., 131 Olive, St. Louis.

Agents—Make a Dollar an Hour. Sell Mendets, a patent patch for instantly mending leaks in all utensils. Sample package free. Collette Mfg. Co., Dept. 452-B, Amsterdam, N.Y.

Sell Necessities. Everybody needs and buys the "Business Guide." Bryant cleared $800.00 in July. Send for sample. It's Free. Nichols Co., Dept. 6B, Naperville, Ill.

Large Shirt Manufacturer wants Agents to sell complete line of shirts direct to wearer. Exclusive patterns. Big values. Free samples. Madison Mills, 503 Broadway, New York.

Agents: A Brand New Hosiery proposition for men, women and children. Must wear 12 months or replaced free. All styles, colors and finest silk hose. You can sell at less than store prices. Write for samples. Thomas Mfg. Co., Class 619, Dayton, Ohio.

Agents: $40 a week selling guaranteed hosiery for men, women and children. Must wear 12 months or replaced free. Write for sample outfit. Thomas Mfg. Co., Class 119, Dayton, O.

Agents! 1921's Greatest Sensation. 11-piece toilet article set selling like blazes at $1.75 with $1.00 dressmaker's shears free to each customer. Get lined up for Christmas rush. E. M. Davis Co., Dept. 505, Chicago.

350% Profit. Quick Seller. Klean-Rite Magic Washing Compound. Washes Clothes Without Rubbing. Samples Free. Bestever Products Co., 1943-MIrving Park Blvd. Chicago.

Agents:—$100 Weekly. Automobile owners wild with enthusiasm. Marvelous invention doubles power, mileage, efficiency. Saves cost first day. Sensational sales everywhere. Territory going like wildfire. $26 sample outfit and Ford Car free. Write quick. Owes Co., Dept. 113. Louisville, Ky.

Agents—We pay $9 a day taking orders for Inside Tyres. Best and easiest seller ever put on the market. Guaranteed to give double tire mileage. Any tire. No punctures or blowouts. Every auto owner buys on account of low price. Enormous demand. Write quick for agency. American Accessories Co., B 620, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Make $100 Weekly Selling Rolly's Washday Wonder. New Chemical Dirt Solvent. Harmless. Cleans without rubbing. Want Agents and crew managers. Free Samples. Rolly Chemical Co., L3, Hastings, Nebraska.

Agents—Everybody uses extracts. Sell Duo double strength Extracts and complete line Household Necessities. Products used constantly. Big repeaters. Write today. Duo Co., Dept. E 41, Attica, N. Y.

Agents—Steady Income. Large manufacturer of Handkerchiefs and Dress Goods, etc., wishes representative in each locality. Big profits, honest goods. Whole or spare time. Credit given. Send for particulars. Freeport Mfg. Co., 60 Main St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Agents! A sale in every home for our beautiful Dress Goods, Silks and General Yard Goods. Quick sales! Big profits! Large book of 1000 sample fabrics Free to agents. Write today. National Importing & Mfg. Co., Dept. 24X, 573 Broadway, New York.

AGENTS WANTED

Make $25 to $50 Week representing Clows' Famous Philadelphia Hosiery, direct from mill—for men, women, children. Every pair guaranteed. Prices that win. Free book "How to Start" tells the story. George Clows Company, Desk 14, Philadelphia, Pa.

Be successful Agent! Free sample outfit—worth $2.25. "Quality" beauty preparations. Make big money. Extensive line. Established 50 years. Lynas Co., 200 Logansport, Ind.

General Agents. Something new. Whirlwind seller. "Repeat" washing powder. Washes clothes without rubbing. Women throw away washboards. Big profits. Exclusive territory. Write today free package. Kittredge Co., 2 Putnam St., Tunkhannock, Pa.

Sell washing tablets that are different. They work quicker, sell easier and at a greater profit. Get our proposition. Newton & Co., 4 Main St., Newark, New York.

Agents—New Invention. Harper's Ten-Use brush set and fibre broom. It sweeps, washes and dries upstairs windows, scrubs and mops floors and does 5 other things. Big profits; easy seller. Free trial offer. Harper Brush Works, Dept. A, Fairfield, Iowa.

Bees pay if kept right. Be a progressive beekeeper. We can show you how. Send $1.00 today for Bee Primer, 9 months subscription to American Bee Journal and catalogues of bee supplies. American Bee Journal, Box 61, Hamilton, Ill.

Sales Agents. Men or women. $200 a month. Year round position. No layoffs. Take orders for Jennings New Style Hosiery. Written guarantee of satisfaction or new hose free. Write for outfit. Jennings Mfg. Co., Dept. 223, Dayton, Ohio.

Wonderful Seller. 96c profit every dollar sales. Deliver on spot. License unnecessary. Sample Free. Mission Bead Factory C, 2421 Smith St., Detroit, Mich.

We Pay $36 a Week and expenses and give a Ford Auto to men to introduce poultry and stock compounds. Imperial Co., D 1, Parsons, Kan.

Agents—Fast-selling household specialty; big profits; liberal terms. Write H. E. Bishop Co., St. Louis, Mo. Dept. 2.

$10.00 A Day Easily Earned; Seven Bar Boxes Assorted Soaps, Christmas Perfumes, Combination Christmas Boxes; Selling Like Hot Cakes. Men, Women, 100% profit. Old Established firm. Crofts & Reed Co. Dept. 158, Chicago.

Agents: $5 a day taking orders for Empire Tire repair. 40 punctures repaired for $1.00. Five minute service. Sample free. Parker Mfg. Co., 217 Bark St., Dayton, Ohio.

FEMALE HELP WANTED

$6-$18 a dozen decorating pillow tops at home; pleasant work; experience unnecessary; particulars for stamp. Tapestry Paint Co., 104, LaGrange, Ind.

Government Wants Women. Clerical work. $1100 year. List positions free. Franklin Institute, Dept. T9, Rochester, N. Y.

Wanted:—Girls—Women. Become Dress Designers. $135 month. Sample lessons free. Franklin Institute, Dept. T501, Rochester, N.Y.

CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS

Used Correspondence Courses at less than half original price. Any school, any subject, for men or women. Send for free price list of 1000 courses. Students' Exchange, 1966 Broadway, New York. Courses bought.

FARM WANTED

Wanted To hear from owner of good farm for sale. State cash price, full description. D. F. Bush, Minneapolis, Minn.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Will You Sell Us Your Spare Time? We will train you to write show cards for us. There is no canvassing or soliciting; we supply you with steady work; distance no object; will pay you from $15 to $50 a week. Wilson Methods, Limited, Dept. L, 64 East Richmond, Toronto, Canada.

MOTION PICTURE PLAYS

Photoplay Ideas Wanted By 48 Companies. $25-$500 paid. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Producers League, 311, St. Louis.

MISCELLANEOUS

Remnant Store, 1510 Vine St., Cincinnati, O. Greatest Dry Goods Bargains on Earth. Agents and Storekeepers supplied.

Switches made from combings. The new way. Write me. Mrs. E. Vandervoort, Davenport, Iowa.

Coal Saver. Cuts your coal bills in half. Simple, cheap, and effective. Full method, 25c. W. Bixby, Warren, N. H.

OLD COINS

Mail This Slip with your name and address and 10 cents and you'll get a large U. S. Copper Cent nearly as big as half dollar, and large 50 page illustrated coin catalog. You'll find it fascinating and profitable. Send Now. B. Max Mehl, Numismatist, Mehl Bldg., Dept. F, Fort Worth, Texas.

SALESMEN WANTED

Salesmen: Make extra money easily. Sell our Accident & Sickness policies in your spare time. $5000 death, $25 weekly benefit for $10 yearly. Address Underwriters, Dept. F-26, Newark, N. J.

Cigar Factory Wants Salesman—Full time or side line. Previous experience unnecessary, as we give complete instructions. J. H. Hargrave & Co., 22, Chatham, Va.

FARMS FOR SALE

163-Acre Farm $3000 with Horses, Furniture, 17 Cows and young stock, crops, implements, convenient live RR town; about 100,000 ft. timber, 100 apple trees; 9-room house, 14-cow barn, silo. Only $3000, part cash. Page 10 New Catalogue. Free. Strout Farm Agency, 150 B G, Nassua St., New York City.

The State Land Settlement Board of California has a number of desirable irrigated farms of twenty and forty acres in SanJoaquin Valley for sale to bona fide homeseekers on 36½ years' time. 5 per cent interest annually. Your opportunity to acquire a farm in winterless California. All deciduous fruits profitably grown; alfalfa is a paying crop. Ideal conditions for stock and poultry. Good schools and unsurpassed roads. Fruit associations market your crops, relieving you of marketing problems. You can farm all year in California. Go this fall and see. State Board's booklet, also Santa Fe folder describing San Joaquin Valley, mailed free on request. C. L. Seagraves, Gen. Colonization Ag't, SantaFeRy., 913 Ry. Ex., Chicago.

Want to hear from owner having farm for sale; give particulars and lowest price. John J Black, Comfort St., Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Ladies earn money crocheting, sewing, tatting, making aprons and caps from our patterns. Apron and cap sets made $30.00 per doz. No canvassing. Send 35c for the patterns—returned if desired. Kenwood Pattern Co., 6238 S. Park Ave., Chicago.

HELP—MALE & FEMALE

Earn $25 Weekly, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Press Syndicate, 451, St. Louis, Mo.

Government Positions Are Fine: $1400, $1600, $1800 at start, up to $2300 and $2600. Exams everywhere. Write Today for full information. Patterson Civil Service School, Box K, Rochester, N. Y.

MAGAZINES

Ambitious Writers send today for Free copy, America's leading magazine for writers of Photoplays, Stories, Poems, Songs. Instructive, helpful. Writer's Digest, 609 Butler Bldg., Cincinnati.

6 Different, Interesting, Clever Publications, prepaid to any address only 25c. Publications price $1.50. All current issues. Satisfaction guaranteed. Walhamore Company, Lafayette Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

PATENT ATTORNEYS

Patents—Write for free Guide Book, and Evidence of Conception Blank. Send model or sketch and description for free opinion of its patentable nature. Highest References. Prompt Service. Reasonable Terms. Victor J. Evans & Co., 841 Ninth, Washington, D. C.

Inventors—Desiring to secure patent should write for our book, "How To Get Your Patent." Send model or sketch and description for opinion of its patentable nature. Randolph & Co., Dept. 112, Washington, D. C.

Patents—Send for free book. Contains valuable information for inventors. Send sketch of your invention for Free Opinion of its patentable nature. Prompt service. (Twenty years' experience). Talbert & Talbert, 402 Talbert Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Patents Promptly procured. Moderate Fees. Best References. Send Sketch or Model. George P. Kimmel, Master of Patent Law, 27-N, Loan & Trust Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Patents Secured. Prompt service. Avoid dangerous delays. Send for our "Record of Invention" form and Free Book telling How to Obtain a Patent. Send sketch or model for examination. Preliminary advice without charge. Highest references. Write Today. J. L. Jackson & Co., 102 Ouray Bldg., Washington, D. C.

MALE HELP WANTED

All men, women, boys, girls, over 18, willing to accept Government Positions, $133, write immediately, Ozment, 104, St. Louis.

Wanted—1500 Railway Traffic Inspectors; no experience; train for this profession thru sparetime home-study; easy terms; $110 to $200 monthly and expenses guaranteed, or money back. Outdoors; local or traveling; under big men who reward ability. Get Free Booklet G-5 Stand. Business Training Inst., Buffalo, N. Y.

Government needs Railway Mail Clerks, $133-$192 month. Write for free specimen questions. Columbus Institute, A-2 Columbus, O.

Wanted men:— Become Automobile Experts. $35 week. Earn while learning. Write. Franklin Institute, Dept. T410, Rochester, N.Y.

Be an Expert Penman; Wonderful Device guides your hand; corrects your writing in few days. Complete Outline Free. Write C. J. Ozment, 53, St. Louis, Mo.

Firemen, Brakemen, Baggagemen, $140—$200, Colored Porters by Railroads everywhere. Experience unnecessary. 828 Ry. Bureau, East St. Louis, Ills.

Firemen, Brakemen, for railroads nearest their homes—Everywhere, beginners $150, later $250 monthly (which position?). Railway Association, Desk M 17, Brooklyn, N. Y.

MICH. FARM LANDS FOR SALE

Landseekers! 20, 40, 80 ac. tracts in Mich; rich clay loam soil; $15 to $35 per ac. Small pmt. down, bal. long time. Write for Free booklet today. Swigart Land Co., C-1246, First National Bank Building, Chicago.

HELP WANTED

Stop Daily Grind. Start Silvering Mirrors. Auto headlights, tableware, etc. Plans free. Clarence Sprinkle, Dept. 99, Marion, Ind.

Hundreds Men—Boys, over 17, wanted as Government Railway Mail Clerks. Commence $135 month. Steady. List positions free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. T 12, Rochester, N. Y.

Wanted—Men, Women, age 17 to 65, for U. S. Govt. positions. Experience unnecessary. Information free. Chicago Civil Service College, Dept. K, Chicago, Ill.

Income For Life. A government job is sure, no lay-offs. Good pay; short hours, vacations; pay while sick; pensions. We'll prepare you quickly at small cost and guarantee you get position or your money back. Write today for free book R. X. 2004, listing positions. Washington Civil Service School, Paramount Building, Washington, D. C.

STAMPING NAMES

Stamp Names on key checks. Make $19 per 100. Send 25c for sample and inst. Either Sex. C. Keytag Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

PHOTOPLAYS, STORIES

Wanted—Men and women ambitious to make money writing Stories and Movie Plays. Send for wonderful Free Book that tells how. Address Authors' Press, Dept. 31, Auburn, N.Y.

PHOTO FINISHING

Special Trial Offer. Your next Kodak film developed 5c. Prints 2c each. Moser & Son, 2122 St. James Ave., Cincinnati, O.

World's Finest kodak photo new art style. Entirely different, never seen before. Roll dev. 5c, prints 2c each. Malden Art Co., 5 Cin., O.

Old Tintypes, Daguerreotypes or Faded Pictures of loved ones can be restored so as to produce beautiful enlargements and perfect likenesses under our new process. Individual pictures may also be produced out of groups. Satisfactory results guaranteed. Prompt work. Fair prices. Roanoke Photo Finishing Co., 502 Bell Ave., Roanoke, Va.

Enlargements De Luxe—5x8, 35c; 7x11, 45c. Send 20c with order, pay balance if satisfied. Ashton Photo Works, Ashton, Ill.

MOTION PICTURE BUSINESS

$35.00 Profit Nightly. Small capital starts you. No experience needed. Our machines are used, endorsed by Govt. institutions. Cat. free. Atlas Moving Picture, 471 Morton Bldg., Chicago.

HONEY FOR SALE

For Sale Select quality Clover and Basswood honey. 1921 crop. Sample 15c. Price List free. M. V. Facey, Preston, Minn.

Honey and Cheese of Superior Quality packed in family size packages, write today for Free price list. E. F. Rosa, Monroe, Wis.

Honey-Buy the best and save money. Send for prices. Sample postpaid for 15c. Wilfred Schaefer, Box 259, Hicksville, New York.

Honey Finest Clover. 3 lbs. $1.00, 5 lbs. $1.50. Delivered free. Price list free. Sample 15c. Wm. A. Cook, Attleboro, Mass.

AUTOMOBILES

Automobile Owners, Garagemen, Mechanics, Repairmen, send for free copy of our current issue. It contains helpful, instructive information on overhauling, ignition troubles, wiring, carburetors, storage batteries, etc. Over 120 pages, illustrated. Send for free copy today. Automobile Digest, 525 Butler Bldg., Cincinnati.

HOME WEAVING

Looms—Only $9.90—Big Money in Weaving Rugs, Carpets, portieres, etc., at home; from rags and waste material. Weavers are rushed with orders. Send for free loom book, it tells all about the weaving business and our wonderful $9.90 and other low-priced, easily-operated looms. Union Loom Works, 272 Factory St., Boonville, N. Y.

FOR PHOTOGRAPHERS

Have You a Camera? Write for Free sample of our big magazine, showing how to make better pictures and earn money. American Photography, 230 Camera House, Boston, 17, Mass.

MAIL ORDER BUSINESS

I Made $25,000 with small Mail Order Business. Sample article & plan 25c. Free Booklet. Tells How For Stamp. AC Scott, Cohoes, N. Y.

STORY WRITERS WANTED

Authors:—Stories, poems, photo plays etc. are wanted for publication. Submit Mss. Literary Bureau, C4, Hannibal, Mo.

ENTERTAINMENTS

Plays, Speakers, dialogues, and Entertainments; catalogues free. Address Dept. A, Ames Pub. Co., Clyde, O.

Three Wheel Chairs in November 617 Is COMFORT'S Total to Date

The three November wheel chairs go to Emma Tete Overcash, Thomasville, N. C., 100; Johnie E. Melton, Bulls Gap, Tenn., 85; Jesse W. Fillpot, Rich Hill, Mo., 63.

MISS ELLA VAN ZILE ENJOYING HER COMFORT WHEEL CHAIR VERY MUCH.

The figures following their respective names indicate the number of subscriptions sent in by them or by ther friends for them.

Emma Tete Overcash, age 29, is crippled in her lower limbs by spinal trouble, and in the past twelve years has not been able to walk or stand alone. Her friend, Mrs. W. E. Stinson has been largely instrumental in obtaining the subscriptions which procured this chair for Miss Overcash.

Johnie E. Melton, age 40, has been crippled in his legs and feet the past three years, caused by rheumatism. He has a wife and children, "six in the family", he writes, and being incapacitated for work is "dependent on the people for help." It is a sad affliction to fall on the head of a family.

Jesse W. Fillpot, age 33, has been an invalid from birth. He is so crippled in his lower limbs that he is unable to walk, and is almost helpless as he has only partial use of his arms. For support and care he is dependent on his widowed mother who is sixty-four years old, poor and unable to do hard work. She has sent in all the subscriptions to procure this chair for him.

As it takes 150 subscriptions to procure a COMFORT wheel chair, those who do not understand the system of our Wheel-Chair Club may wonder how each of these three applicants obtained a wheel chair by sending in a considerably less number of subscriptions than the required 150. The explanation is that the difference is made up by the subscriptions and cash contributed to the "general" (wheel-chair fund) by generous readers who thus manifest their interest in, and contribute substantially to, the beneficent work of COMFORT'S Wheel-Chair Department.

It is a shame to any community that allows a cripple in its midst to suffer for want of a wheel chair when one can be obtained free by a comparatively small effort in procuring subscriptions to COMFORT. Any cripple, or the friends of any cripple, who needs a wheel chair should write me at once for full information as to how to obtain a wheel chair free through COMFORT'S Wheel-Chair Department.

A study of our Roll of Honor is interesting, showing what wheel-chair applicants and their friends are doing in their behalf, also what benevolent readers are doing to help the general cause by liberal contributions of subscriptions or cash for the benefit of the "general" wheel-chair fund, and to these latter "good Samaritans" I am especially grateful for their generous support of COMFORT'S great charitable undertaking which thus far has provided 617 crippled shut-ins each with a much needed wheel chair. Keep up your good work, and God bless you for it.

MRS. JANE DORITY ENJOYING HER COMFORT WHEEL CHAIR.

Sincerely yours,
W. H. GANNETT,
Publisher of COMFORT.

P. S. For the information of our many new subscribers let me explain that for each and every 150 one-year subscriptions to COMFORT, at 50 cents each, sent in either singly or in clubs by persons who direct that they are to be credited to COMFORT'S WHEEL-CHAIR CLUB instead of claiming the premiums to which they would be entitled, I give a FIRST-CLASS INVALID WHEEL CHAIR to some needy crippled Shut-in and pay the freight, too. It is a large and expensive premium for me to give for that number of subscriptions, but I am always glad to do my part a little faster each month than you do yours.

Has Been Enjoying Her COMFORT Wheel Chair More Than Two Years

Washburn, Maine, R. R. 1.

Dear Mr. Gannett:

I am sending you a recent photograph of myself to show you and COMFORT readers how I am still enjoying my COMFORT wheel chair which I received more than two years ago. Although my right arm is helpless I can wheel the chair nicely with my left hand. I wish again to thank you and all other kind friends who helped me to get it.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Jane Dority.

Enjoying Her COMFORT Wheel Chair Very Much

Seattle, Washington.

Dear Mr. Gannett:

We received the wheel chair for our daughter, Miss Ella Van Zile, some time ago and should have acknowledged it with thanks before this, but waited to get a picture taken of her in her wheel chair. I enclose the picture and hope to see it in Comfort. She enjoys the chair very much and it enables us to get her out in this lovely sunshine. We thank you and all others, who helped us to obtain the chair, for their kindness. Wishing Comfort all kinds of success, I am,

Respectfully,
Mrs. Mary Van Zile.

COMFORT'S Roll of Honor

The Roll of Honor comprises the names of those who have sent five or more subscriptions, or a dollar or more in money, to credit of the Wheel-Chair Club during the month previous. Following each name is the number of subscriptions sent.

Harriet A. Bates, Iowa, for Kenneth Rose, 51 subs and $1.00; Mrs. W. E. Stinson, N. C., for Emma Tete Overcash, 25 subs.; Mrs. William Jensen, Del., for Thomas Heller, 15 subs and $1.50; Mrs. Ted Kinsler, S.C., for Thornton Gently, 14 subs.; Mrs. Emily Caldwell, Texas, for Annie Matlock, 13 subs and $2.00; Miss Brook Deskins, W.Va., for Jeanette Deskins, 11 subs.; Mrs. Rachel Rogers, Texas, for Annie Matlock, 10 subs.; Myrtle Matlock, Texas, for Annie Matlock, 8 subs.; John D. Williams, Texas, for Dee Williams, 7 subs.; Mr. John Key, Ky., for Mamie Key, 6 subs and $1.00; Mrs. J. H. Post, La., for Dee Williams, 5 subs and $5.00; Mrs. W. I. Paddock, Minn., for Myrtle Geneve Herrell, 5 subs.; Mrs. Matilda Fillpot, Mo., for Jesse Fillpot, 5 subs.; Mrs. Will Tutherow, N. C., for Clarence Wm. Tutherow, 5 subs.; M. E. Sunday School Class, Mrs. Bessie Durr, Teacher, Thomas, W. Va., and Earl Phillip, Wm. Duncan, Eldridge Thompson, Vernon Thompson, Harold Nazelrod, Kennith Pase and Hobert Smith, for general, 4 subs and $6.00; A. Steward, Maine, for General, $20.00; Mrs. Roy Wilson, Ga., for General, $1.00; Mrs. I. Octgen, N. Y., for General, $1.00; Mrs. Olive A. Tobey, Maine, for General, $1.00.

Hawks Seek Woodchucks

Foxes are great enemies of the woodchuck, says the American Forestry Magazine, while some of the larger hawks feed upon the young when they first come out of the parental burrow and sun themselves about its entrance.

The Best Support in the World For a Rupture

Is The Human Hand

The WORST Support Ever Devised, Is a Hard, Unyielding Knob, or Pad, Pressed Into the Rupture by a Steel Spring—Thereby Preventing Nature From EVER Having a Chance to Bring About a Healing of the Parts.

The Brooks Appliance most closely resembles the human hand as a rupture support. You will notice the first moment you put on a Brooks Appliance, the pliable, flesh like touch of the velvet finished rubber and it will take only this first experience of comfort and security to make you decide—"This is what I want."

For the benefit of our readers we take pleasure in publishing the Brooks offer to save all who are ruptured from wearing painful makeshift trusses that do not cure.

A Portrait Done in Charcoal by Herman Pfeifer, From a Photograph of Mr. C. E. Brooks, Inventor of the Appliance and Founder of the Brooks Appliance Co.

The Brooks Appliance Co. gladly sends their remarkable patented Appliance ON TRIAL to prove that it holds the rupture back, keeps it in place, prevents its coming down or slipping out and finally assists nature to heal up the rupture.

No man or woman ever can look and feel his or her best while suffering the torment, pain and discomfort of rupture.

Every day that you suffer from rupture—every hour of truss torture that you endure—after you read this page is your own fault.

For many years we have been telling you that no makeshift truss will ever help you. We have told you about the harm ill-fitting trusses are doing. We have told you that the only truly comfortable, sanitary and scientific device for holding rupture is the Brooks Rupture Appliance.

The Brooks appliance clings to you without force and you are hardly conscious of its presence. But above all else, it HOLDS always.

Many hundreds of physicians and surgeons recommend the Brooks Appliance and condemn makeshift trusses as more harmful and dangerous than any other method of retaining and treating rupture. Thousands of people have written us testifying to the amazing results they have secured from this great invention. Many of these people live right in your vicinity and we will be glad to send you copies of their thankful letters if you will ask for them when you write.

Men, Women and Children Find the Brooks Appliance Equally Effective.

Send the coupon NOW for further description of the Appliance and for our FREE, NO RISK, TRIAL PLAN.

Ten Reasons Why You Should Accept This Offer

1. It is absolutely the only Appliance embodying the principles that inventors have sought after for years.

2. The appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.

3. Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings closely to the body yet never blisters or causes irritation.

4. Unlike ordinary so-called pads, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.

5. It is small, soft and pliable, and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.

6. The soft, pliable bands do not give the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.

7. Nothing to get foul; it can be washed without any injury.

8. There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.

9. All materials are the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.

10. We guarantee your comfort at all times and in all positions, and sell every appliance with this positive understanding.

.....

The Brooks Appliance Co.,
157 N. State St., Marshall, Mich.

Without cost or obligation on my part please send me by mail in plain wrapper your illustrated book and full information about your Appliance for rupture, and your Trial Offer.

Name.....

Address.....

City..... State.....

The Brooks Appliance Has Freed Thousands of Men, Women and Children From Rupture —Without Pain, Operation, or Loss of Time.

NEW YEAR NUMBER

COMFORT

The Key to Happiness and Success in over a Million and a Quarter Homes

Published at Augusta Maine

VOL. XXXIV
NO. 3

JANUARY
1922

See Story "Her New Year Resolution" on Page 8

Copyright 1921 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Incorporated.

Table of Contents on Page 6.

COMFORT EDITORIAL

THOUGHTS THAT BREATHE AND WORDS THAT BURN

Nation-Wide Campaign against Cancer—Some Things Everybody Should Know about this Dread Disease

CANCER is one of the most baffling problems that medical science has to deal with. It is a disease that always tends to kill; by which is meant that the curative efforts of Nature, that often effect a cure of many other diseases, are powerless in the combat with cancer which, once started, always progresses to a fatal ending unless eradicated by proper treatment seasonably begun. It is understood, of course, that this statement is subject to the further qualification that the patient may die from some other cause before the cancer has had time to complete its deadly process. Cancer is not common in youth but at middle age is a grave menace, for about one in every twelve persons over forty years of age dies of cancer. After reaching a certain stage cancer almost invariably kills in spite of anything that the best medical and surgical skill can do; but if attended to early, while it is small and localized, the right treatment will result in speedy and complete recovery in a large majority of such cases.

Thus it appears that cancer need not and should not be allowed to reap its enormous annual harvest of human lives; and this scourge would be largely held in check but for the practical difficulty in that the general popular ignorance of the subject stands in the way and in most cases prevents early treatment by proper methods, both indispensable requisites for cure of cancer. Most persons who are afflicted with cancer do not detect the nature of the disease until too late or, if they do, are likely to let the opportunity for saving life slip by while trying patent medicines or worthless treatment by quacks.

So little is known of the cause of cancer that little if anything can be formulated with assurance as to prevention, and therefore, in the present state of medical science, the main reliance for reducing the inroads of the disease to the possible minimum must consist in teaching the people to recognize the first symptoms of cancer, and to seek without delay the most efficient remedial treatment known, which implies that they must be enlightened on the last proposition at least to the extent of being able to shun medical impostors and useless or dangerous pretended remedies. For this reason the week beginning October 29th was designated as "Cancer Week" for the purpose of launching a nation-wide campaign of popular instruction on the subject, under the auspices of the American Society for the Control of Cancer, by means of free public lectures and magazine and newspaper articles by eminent authorities in this line of medical practice and research. We invite attention of our readers to the following extracts from the address of Dr. James Ewing, Professor of Pathology at Cornell Medical School and a leading authority on cancer, delivered November first at a public mass meeting in Boston.

Dr. Ewing said that despite exhaustive research and study the medical knowledge regarding cancer was yet "gravely deficient, but the efforts to overcome this deficiency were most strenuous" and the advance made through the cooperation of the different branches of the profession, which have contributed valuable information relating to the disease, "has placed in our hands power to control cancer."

"Cancer affects all kinds of animals," he said, "but man is its chief victim. Cancer is not infectious and probably is not increasing in the same sense that an infectious disease increases, but being mainly a disease resulting from vicious habits and the wear and tear of life, there is very likely a slight tendency upward, and certainly an assurance that the disease will always be an urgent medical and economic problem.

"There is no evidence that the increase of cancer is directly related to diet, while there is abundant proof that the course of established cancer cannot be materially influenced by change of diet. The public should be warned against unwarranted claims and speculations to the contrary. Be careful about reading the general literature on cancer that you find on the corner newsstand.

"Heredity plays a definite role in the occurrence of certain forms of cancer, especially the rare forms occurring in children. With the common forms of the disease heredity has not been shown to be of any practical importance as a causative factor. Rarely cancer appears to run in families. Members of such families may wisely take precautions to avoid the disease, but they should not be alarmed, since cancer also runs out of families.

"The only hope against cancer lies in its early recognition. Since early recognition means the saving of life, it is the plain duty of every sensible person and especially of every educated person, to learn the early symptoms of the main forms of cancer to which one is liable."

The speaker then described the symptoms of the various forms of cancer, of which the stomach cancer is the most common, causing 30 per cent. of all fatalities resulting from the disease. "Cancer may start from lumps, warts, abrasions, sores, scaly patches or pigmented spots on the skin.

"The early cancer is not usually painful; it is not ulcerated, it does not bleed. He who waits for pain, ulceration and bleeding waits for signs of the established cancer. The earliest signs of the two commonest forms of cancer are obscure. The only adequate resource in this dilemma is regular physical examination by a competent physician every six months. In some cities free clinics for the examination for cancer have been established.

"The most generally applicable, available and efficient method of dealing with early cancer is surgical excision. For many forms of superficial, localized, accessible cancers, radium has proved itself the method of choice. The scope of radium therapy is steadily widening. The public should be warned against sweeping claims both for and against radium. For all forms of advanced cancer, radium and X-rays are generally to be preferred to an extensive operation of doubtful outcome. There is a growing tendency to limit operations in advanced cancer in favor of palliative treatment by radium and X-rays. The time is past when the surgeon may undertake to treat cancer without consideration of the value of other methods besides surgery.

"If we could eliminate bad teeth, tobacco and syphilis, cancer of the tongue, tonsil and mouth would practically disappear. Dentists have a very responsible duty in this field. In general the preventable forms of cancer arise from chronic irritation of apparently trivial nature. It is therefore wise to attend to all such minor persistent disturbances and get medical advice about them.

"A very important factor for the control of cancer is the special cancer hospital devoted exclusively to the study and treatment of this disease. Such institutions exist in many large cities, as in Boston, where you have your Harvard cancer commission, and their number is fortunately increasing."

Postmaster General Hays Speeds Up the Second-Class Mail Service

DID you receive your November and December numbers of COMFORT earlier than usual? If so, it was because Postmaster General Hays has speeded up the long-distance transportation of second-class mail matter by abolishing the so-called "Blue Tag" system which has been such a nuisance to magazine publishers and to their subscribers. Prior to 1911 mail matter of all classes was dispatched in regulation mail cars attached to passenger trains; but in that year the Post Office Department, in order to make a show of reducing expenses and saving money, instituted the innovation (officially designated "Blue Tag" system because of the color of the tag adopted to distinguish this service) of using ordinary freight trains for long-haul transportation of magazines to distant distributing centers, there to be resorted and thence forwarded by mail trains to their respective destinations. In view of the extra cost of the additional handling involved it is doubtful whether this slow and inefficient service saved the Government any expense, but it was productive of vexatious delay and exasperating irregularity in the delivery of magazines to distant subscribers. These deficiencies reached their peak under Government management of the railroads, during which we received numerous complaints of COMFORT having been delayed from three to six weeks in reaching our far western and southern subscribers; and other magazines experienced like troubles due to the same cause. In confirmation of these charges we cite the following excerpt from the report of the investigation started in the summer of 1920 by the National Publishers Association "to ascertain the cause of the intolerable delays in the dispatch of periodicals by the Post Office under what is known as 'Blue Tag Mail.'" The report, issued in October, 1920, states:

"The investigation showed that periodicals so dispatched were being subjected to almost unbelievable delays. The records of the Railway Mail Service Division of the Post Office Department disclosed that in some instances railroad cars containing Blue Tag Mail, which under normal conditions would go from New York to Chicago in 5 days, required 22 days; to Council Bluffs, Iowa, 35 days, normally 7 days; to St. Paul 36 days, normally 7 days."

Although during the year following the investigation the operation of the Blue Tag system showed considerable improvement it was still very unsatisfactory; and it could not be otherwise, for at best it is slow besides being subject to all the contingencies and causes of delay and irregularity to which railroad freight transportation is liable. Some idea of the beneficial results to be realized from the change, which went into effect on the first day of last October, may be gathered from the Postmaster General's announcement considered in connection with the foregoing explanation.

The announcement reads in part "that on October 1, 1921, the Post Office Department will reestablish the practice of shipping all monthly, semi-monthly, and bi-weekly periodicals by mail instead of by freight. This will speed up delivery of these periodicals to subscribers." And far from increasing the expense, Postmaster General Hays says that by this improved system the Government can save approximately $268,000 a year in force, rent and drayage. His explanation is that the basis of railway compensation for carrying the mails has been changed from the weight to the space method, and that transportation charges by freight have largely increased. Almost a thousand publications and millions of their subscribers are affected by this more expeditious and reliable service.

Danger from Open Wells

"IN traveling through the country," writes A. L. Potter of Independence, Kansas, "I am surprised at the great number of open wells, and wells with only a trap-door or loose cover, which are a constant source of great danger to the lives of the children on these farms." He expresses the opinion that this dangerous condition is allowed to exist through thoughtlessness on the part of the owners, and asks us to print an editorial warning. This we gladly do, for we frequently read or hear of fatal accidents due to the cause he mentions.

COMFORT'S EDITOR.

COMFORT, PUBLISHED MONTHLY BY W. H. GANNETT, PUB., INC., AT AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Subscription price in United States and United States Possessions 50c a year; Canadian subscriptions 65c a year, foreign countries $1.00 a year. No premiums or prises will be given on Canadian or foreign subscriptions. Please send your renewal just as soon as your subscription expires. We can not send you even one copy of COMFORT, after expiration, until your subscription is Renewed. If you do not get your magazine by the 25th of the month write us and we will send you another copy free. Please notify us immediately in case you move, so that we can change your address and see that you do not miss a single copy. Remember that we must have your former address, as well as your new address to make the change. Be sure to send both. We do not supply back numbers.

Entered at the post office at Augusta, Maine as second-class mail matter. Copyright, 1921 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

Her New Year Resolution

By Zelta Almeda Matthews

See front cover illustration.

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

THE sun, peering through uncurtained windows, revealed discolored, splintery floors, tattered wall-paper, and a confusion of packed boxes of household goods just left by the moving men. A narrow ray of sunlight slanted in at the windows of the kitchen, where my husband and I were having our late breakfast at a small table. We were now face to face with our situation. This old, shabby house, which we had often jestingly called "the family relic," had become our refuge in an adversity of fortune. Our luxurious home in a fashionable part of town had been sold, and we had moved here simply because we had no other place to go.

I looked across the table at Robert's pale, tense face, and as we gazed into each other's eyes, we knew that we were both, for the moment, beaten in our struggle to keep up courage.

"Never mind, dear," said Robert presently, pushing aside his untouched plate, "we will soon find a buyer for this house, and with the money we will start over again, even if it is in a small way."

"Yes,—but, oh, Robert, it does not seem as if there ever again could be anything in life for us. We shall have to live so plainly, and scrimp, and save, and do without almost everything! Why, it is all so shabby and dirty,—and—and——." The long restrained tears burst forth.

"It will be only a little while, Eloise, and we have always said we could be happy on a desert island, if we only had each other," he said, stroking my hair gently.

"But——this!" with a wave of my hand at the shabbiness everywhere about us. "It would be easier on a desert island, far easier," I declared firmly.

"We will tell no one where we are living," proposed Robert, "and we can move from here, in a few weeks probably. Then——" But his imagination failed to penetrate beyond that point in our future.

"I wonder," I said thoughtfully, "if anyone will care about us now that we are poor. We had hosts of friends, but how many have we now, I wonder?"

This thought, which had lurked in my mind since our financial failure, a month ago, now proved unendurable, and rising from the table, I plunged into the day's work awaiting me.

From this first day in the old house, our way of living underwent a complete change. We let almost no one know where we lived, which shut off all social life and the joy of being with sympathetic friends. And we went absolutely nowhere. We had not even the simplest forms of recreation or amusement. We put in order only two or three rooms for our temporary use. We settled into an attitude of waiting, postponing every pleasure until we should move.

Finding ourselves outside the boundaries of our former methodical ways, we went to the other extreme. Our house on the Avenue, with its burglar-alarm devices and steel-barred basement windows, was tight and safe. But in this old house, with its rotten wooden shell, we were afraid—of burglars and of fire.

"If you will sit up, Robert, then so shall I," I declared, and I did—until to or three o'clock in the morning, sometimes later, to be sure everything was safe. This brought our breakfast about noon, and dinner at any hour up to midnight.

Weeks and months dragged by, but the house did not sell.

"How much longer shall we be in this dreadful place?" I would ask.

"Probably not more than two or three weeks," Robert would answer. "I have someone in view now who I'm almost sure will buy it."

"Well, then," I would reply hopefully, "just as soon as we move, we will really 'live' again."

But our isolation, as one month succeeded another, began to have its harmful effect on us, for we were simply "ordinary" people, interested in and liking many things, but with no especially absorbing interest to keep our minds alert and eager, and prevent our getting into the rut which excessively monotonous living invariably produces. We brooded constantly over our situation, but could see no way out. Robert was now at home all of the time. Our whole thought became engrossed with petty details of the house. We grew unhappy and irritable. Trifles assumed gigantic proportions. We had no housemaid, and I prepared elaborate meals, that Robert might choose from the different viands what most appealed to him. The decision as to what we should have for dinner became of tremendous importance. If a vegetable turned out badly, it was a tragedy; it was a calamity if the meat was a shade over- or under-done. I developed a habit of criticism and fault-finding, although I did not realize it then. All I saw was that Robert was becoming moody and cross. I tried, more than ever, to add to his comfort—not by striving for a different mental atmosphere, but by adding still more to my burden of housework, which already was beyond my strength. Everything about our manner of living was fatal to ambitious planning for a better future. We really were poor only according to our former standard of living. We could have lived much more comfortably. There was no reason for our sinking into such a way of living; but there we were. Furthermore, each of us now had various slight physical ailments, which, all put together, amounted to real ill health.

At the end of six months we were still in this house, our furniture not yet unpacked, and were living in the same unhappy way. Nothing held any interest for either of us. Days passed: life went on as in a dream.

We openly quarreled now. It was "Eloise" and "Robert" no longer; it was "you." Our life reacted on us according to our difference in temperament. He was domineering and morose; I was "on edge," sharp of tongue, and hysterical. Discovering that attacks of hysteria made Robert more sympathetic for a time, I indulged myself in them until warned by our family physician.

At last self-restraint reached its limit of endurance. Things had gone especially bad one day; one harsh remark led to another; all the irritability that had for so long been seething within us surged forth into words. Usually I got in the last word, but tonight, as Robert flung himself out of the small kitchen, in which we practically lived, he said, in a low, strangled voice: "Eloise I—I hate you—I never want to see you again. Tomorrow I shall go away,—and I shall never return." And the door slammed.

"I hope you won't return!" I screamed furiously after him.

We had quarreled frequently, but never anything like this before. The next day each apologized, miserably; and each miserably accepted the other's apology.

Now, I cared for my husband, and he cared for me. What was all this about? Nothing. It was simply the result of a wrong way of living, which had, following the sure course from cause to effect, developed a morbidness of mind that saw nothing in its true proportions. I think we both realized this even while we were swept along in its irresistible current. A real point of controversy might have been threshed out and the atmosphere cleared once for all. Morbidness is a disease of the mind,—a terrible one. It flays the very soul until it becomes so raw and quivering that all contact, even the kindliest, is agonizing. Only the morbid or super-sensitive can understand this. Yet there are thousands of such people, who brood, and hurt, and are hurt.

The remedy for a long-continued course of morbid thinking and feeling is complete change of thought, and for this help usually must come from the outside. It would have been well for Robert and me if someone could have pried us out of our environment, and set us down in pleasant surroundings, among cheerful, active-minded people. But there was no one to do this for us. Help, however, did come now. My Aunt Patsy, a woman of rare wisdom, and beloved by both of us, came to make us a visit. What she did not already know of our unhappiness, she quickly saw—for it was open to the eyes of the world. Robert she could not fully reach with her arguments, although he was pleased to have her with us. But so unstrung were my nerves that I was relieved to have someone else think and plan for me. We refused to leave home, so she set about getting us, or me at least, outside our four walls. She said plainly that we must find a way out, for both body and mind.

She remained with us several weeks. We took our meals at the hours which custom had established. We retired before midnight, regardless of possible burglars and fire. The housework was reduced to sensible proportions. She and I attended church, went to lectures, concerts and the theater. I called on neglected friends, and invited them to the house. Not that I had the faintest desire to do these things, but Aunt Patsy's will prevailed. Changes about the house followed in her footsteps. She ordered boxes unpacked, and a cheerful home began to take form. New and fashionable clothes were purchased for me. Mildly protesting that I was no child, nor an invalid, that my affairs should be taken in charge in this high-handed way, she answered gravely:

"Yes, dear, you are an invalid just now. But you won't be for long."

She bought magazines and some of the best of the so-called inspirational books. These latter aroused me more than anything else could. Aunt Patsy was quite "up" in all the most modern theories.

"I want you to understand the tremendous power of your thought over your mind and even on your body," said she. "Your ill health, and Robert's, is simply the result of depressed spirits. Happiness and health go together."

"But, Aunt Patsy, how can I change my thoughts?" I asked. "I can control my voice or my words, but my thoughts come and go as they please."

"You are wrong, Eloise. Nothing falls more quickly into habit than thoughts. The more you entertain any class of thoughts, the more spontaneously will that kind come to you. There are methods for the control of thoughts, and you must learn to use them. You can almost make your life what you will, through control of your thinking. Others have done this, and you, too, can do it."

"What are these methods?" I asked, still incredulous.

"Those that will be of most benefit to you just now, my dear, are what I shall call 'Substitution' and 'Suggestion'," she replied. "By 'Substitution' I mean simply substituting a desirable thought for an undesirable one. Thus, when you feel gloomy, you should in some way deliberately fill your mind with pleasant thoughts, shutting out the gloomy ones. You could read something interesting, or call on a friend, or chat with a cheerful-minded person over the phone. There is always something that a resourceful woman can think of to fit the need and occasion. There is nothing new about this method, except in this way: that it is to be regarded as a definite means to a definite, desired end, and is to be used intelligently and continually, and always instantly at the moment the need arises, before the undesired mood has established a foothold. This is not merely 'good advice' that I am giving you, but a method based on strictly scientific principles.

"By the method of 'Suggestion'," continued she, "I mean merely the suggesting to your mind of definite thoughts or trains of thought that you know will be beneficial to you."

She advised that I start each day by suggesting to myself that:

"Our home and financial position are quite satisfactory for the present."

"Robert loves me as dearly as I love him."

"I am a strong, well-poised woman, who will hold my entire life on a high level where no friction can possibly reach me."

"Nothing whatever can really harm me except as I allow it to harm me by believing in its power over me."

Aunt Patsy made it clear how a word or circumstance causes in me just such feeling as I allow it to, by the way I receive it.

"A thing that cannot be cured," said she, "must be endured. And there are only two ways of enduring,—with calmness and peace of mind, or in a spirit of futile resistance. If it must be endured, why not choose the pleasant way of non-resistance?"

Day after day I posed for the happy, poised woman that I wished to become. Before going to sleep at night, I always made a mental picture of the person I wanted to be, and of the home and life that I most desired; and trusted that what I thus began, in my own consciousness, God would complete in form for me. This not only gave me peace of mind, but by having my goal always before me, I took advantage of every opportunity to do even the smallest thing that might expedite its attainment. I tried to maintain a constructive attitude of mind, and never give lodgment to negative thoughts—of annoyance, disapproval, criticism, discouragement or worry. Thus, when it rained, I learned to say: "This is splendid for the crops in the country." When the sun shone, I said: "And now what a lovely day to be out of doors!"

It was at a New Year Eve party, given by old friends, that the crisis in my progress toward happiness came. On receipt of the invitation, Aunt Patsy promptly said:

"You and Robert really must go."

That evening I resolved to turn over a new leaf in my book of life and cast completely off the cloud that had oppressed me for so long, and I was my old self again. Someone asked:

"Have you people been away the past year or so? No one has seen anything of you."

"Yes, we have been away," I answered deliberately, for we had indeed.

Throughout the evening Robert's gaze seldom left me. In my finery, bejeweled and resplendent, I knew I looked different to him. Excitement and pleasure brightened my dull eyes, dashed color into my pale cheeks, and gave a touch of gaiety and possibly of coquetry to my manner. It came over me with something of a shock, however, that feminine tricks and trappings could fascinate a middle-aged husband, while back-breaking scrubbing of the kitchen floor would not. I pondered it, and with some bitterness, too. Still I wished to be fair. To me it was a new Robert, quite unlike the one on whose account I had long regarded myself as a kitchen drudge. This was no complaining, cross husband; but a handsome man with charm and distinction of manner.

When Aunt Patsy was about to leave us, I suddenly felt a panic of distrust of my will power, so I got out a small Bible, and laying my two hands upon it, I took a solemn oath that I would continue this same sane course of living for at least one year. The task of dragging myself out of the pit that seemed about to swallow both Robert and me, took time, but it brought with it a degree of personal strength and poised self-reliance that I never had before.

We are living in this same house which is still somewhat shabby, but no longer cheerless. We have many guests. To our surprise, none of our former friends have been driven away by our lack of wealth, or the old house, or the unfashionable neighborhood.

"You know—we always have such a good time at your house, that I actually envy you it," bubbled a dear friend the other day.

We have been really "living", just as though we had not been expecting to move any day in the last five years! But the house is now sold—actually sold, and much brighter circumstances are in view for us; and it was Robert's change of mental attitude from despondency to cheerful activity, which dated from the New Year Eve party, that was the chief factor in retrieving his fortune.

Robert and I are nearer and dearer to each other than ever before. Our experience brought us a new humility before each other; there is a tolerance and deference in our relations with each other that we never knew before. How to be happy with people we love, is a problem almost more difficult than that of how to get along with people we do not care for, and it is one that thousands of men and women are trying to solve. One thing I know, and that is: that only unhappiness can come when one excludes everything from life except the petty, sordid details of mere living. One must have new thoughts, and see other people. We are gregarious; that is the law, and so absolute is this law that it is said that were two persons shut up in a room in each other's company, isolated from sight, sound, and knowledge of the rest of the world, they soon would be at each other's throats.

Had I been a more experienced woman, or a stronger and wiser one, I could have found the way to happiness long before it became so difficult. But the hard struggle makes my victory so much the more precious to me.

Saffron Rose—A Slave Girl

By Yetta Kay Stoddard

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

BEHIND the blue door near which stood the straightest larch in the poor hill village of Fochi of Kweichau was Li Lu, the rose-faced one, born.

Immediately that morning Chen O, her old father, hurried along the sun-blistered narrow Street of Many Small Houses, seeking to hide his shame from mockers; but Yue Ping, Li Lu's very young mother, lay laughing to see how that new first baby of hers screwed up its funny hungry mouth and wrinkled its bulging flower-petal brow.

"Not like the ugly mother you have got?" giggled Yue Ping. "But she, that so ugly one, is only one who loves you. Very much. And will marry you to golden prince. And you shall never, never, never, be slave girl."

Then, though the slowly passing air was hot, a strange iciness settled into the tips of Yue Ping's fingers, where they rested on Li Lu's impalpable cheek; a smile of perfect contentment, as of full understanding of the everlasting peace of Zen, lifted the corners of the lips of the little dead mother. At dark time the larch leaned at the window and whispered the babe to sleep.

And between the slave market and Chen O's gold greed there was no one to stand fighting, even so helplessly as Yue Ping would have fought, in defence of the personal rights of the rose-faced.

The azaleas blossomed pink and cheerful at the edge of the bean garden. They remained Li Lu's good friends and undertook the kindly office of perfuming her mean garments. She passed them going to and from the fountain which was in the side court of the Big House on Lily Hill, where Hui K'ung lived. In among the beeches and junipers! Dim vistas there of ponds and iris-bordered avenues! And the day's one lovely joy to Li Lu was the breathing-in of bloom madness; a joy doubled when she had also a look at Hui K'ung. These were near things far off, like the mountain that had one foot in the village itself and was yet so inaccessible. Li Lu could not hope to touch the hand of the high-born boy any more than she could expect to carry forth her old mending basket and sit sewing rags beside the august lotus pools; yet, in a manner, both the youth and the beauty of the world belonged intimately to her and she took them home, in imagination, to the blue door. And in her heart all through the pitiful drudgery that made her childhood a martyrdom, she considered them her very own, her very dearest.

* * * * * * * *

Li Lu's years were ten when famine touched Fochi of Kweichau; when Kow Chu, the old woman who drove her working hours, dropped dead. She had already grown tall and slender like her lullaby larch when Chen O returned to the village for the first time since Yue Ping laughed in death. On swift feet he came, having important business thoughts in his small head. Departing, richer by one hundred cash and a measure of barley, he left Li Lu a domestic slave in the kitchens of the Big House on Lily Hill.

* * * * * * * *

The child's slavery there was all bliss. Even the heavy wooden buckets, to lift which taxed her strength to the limit, became objects of her passionate affection. What then of the venerable lotus lilies? the wan tuberoses? the beautiful boy at study within the green pavilion? To Li Lu it was all like coming to her own place at last. From the window above her sleeping mat she looked down into the Street of Many Small Houses and felt immense sorrow for the free maiden she had been, coming and going by the bean garden, thanking the azaleas, getting angry so often at old Kow Chu.

One day as she struggled with a load Hui K'ung came running out and spoke god-like words to her.

"You are like a saffron rose trying to work!"

He lifted the bucket. For a moment he stood, smiling, a radiant, powerful being. The fragile girl's thin arms trembled, outstretched.

"I am your father's most ignominious little slave," gasped she, as she staggered blindly under the bucket's weight.

If the diamond-pointed sun had come down from the skies to her she could not have known greater exultation than in that moment. She ran to place cakes close to the blessed feet of the kind little gods who held her world's hopes, her soul's boldest secrets.

"To be Hui K'ung's!" she whispered, praying—but so softly that her own heart scarcely became aware of her foolish demand.

* * * * * * * *

The second famine reached Fochi.

Hui K'ung had long before gone far across eastern waters to learn the ways of the life of strange men in a strange world known as college. It was near San-Fran, Noon-Nye-Stay, this College. And his going had been death to the trust that had dwelt in the heart of Li Lu. The hateful little old gods had promised her everything and had given nothing. She offered no cakes, no supplications, to the liars. She dared turn her face away from them. Perhaps that was how she brought to Hui K'ung's father and his household, including all the other servants who did not run away, the sickness that made them go stiff and speckled them black and hideous.

Li Lu was alone. Very frightened, very remorseful, very sad, she was, until she sought out the room where Hui K'ung had once slept, and there found the little tasseled cap that he had worn on the occasion of the bucket lifting. Seeing that there were the most ridiculous slits in the precious old thing, she ran to fetch needles and threads and then sat sewing microscopic stitches into the silk, with her hopeless young hope bringing up the silly prayer words of other days,

"To be the slave of Hui K'ung!"

* * * * * * * *

"Li Lu!"

The girl started, arose, stood with eyes dutifully lowered in the presence of her parent, who, as before, had come on running feet into his native village.

"You very rose face."

The small head waggled as he presented the tainted gift of his flattery. She was his chattel again and he had long hated himself when he thought of the handful of cash and barley grains that had been his price for her, four years since. From that same San-Fran Noon-Nye-Stay that Li Lu knew of had come to him the news that there were cash in thousands for the kind of girl his daughter must have grown to be.

"Come," he commanded.

Leaving her basket, but with Hui K'ung's cap concealed within her sleeve, Li Lu followed Chen O down through the stricken village, out along dusty roads, through other towns, until they came to Siang, where the snorting iron horse dragged them down and down along the shining road that runs with the falling of Siang into Canton. Canton itself. That is where the rose-faced one first saw Hung Lung, the very ugly Dupont Street merchant prince, and his equally ugly lady, Hoey Wu; there took her initial lesson in the time-proven art of deceiving the U. S. Immigration officials at Angel Island. And there is where she stood for the last time with respectfully bowed head in the presence of her father. Between half-closed lids she saw stacks of bright yellow coins paid into his filthy hard hand, and guessed, most inaccurately, as to the cause of his silent mirth.

Always it had been easy for Li Lu to smile. Even when the bad gods had wronged her she could show her thin white teeth in d sion. Now she dimpled as Hoey Wu laid out such soft and silken garments as befitted the "daughter" of wealthy Hung Lung. The slave's garb Li Lu kicked into a corner and laughed to see Chen O, actuated by life-long habits of frugality, gathering up the worn rags and slipping away to add, by their sale, a few cash more to his new fortune.

* * * * * * * *

On boarding the junk that was to take Hung Lung and his "family" over to the steamer awaiting at Hong Kong, a young white man brushed Li Lu's sleeve. She threw out her hand, involuntarily, and he put a card into it. There was in his eyes that which made the girl keep the strip of paper with Hui K'ung's cap, hidden close, not shown to any of her traveling companions.

All across the Pacific Li Lu rehearsed her new role to Hoey Wu and Hung Lung.

"Me Me Sang. My father Hung Lung. My mother, Hoey Wu. We come last spring from San-Fran to pay respect to my father's old father, to the ancestors. We go back now to San-Fran. Me Sang born Dupont Street, San-Fran."

And while Li Lu was replying thus, in anticipation, to the stupid questions that would be asked by the stupid Fan Kwel, the Immigration officials, Hung Lung would show the paper from San-Fran, telling all about his respectable family's going to Canton and giving the three of them permission to return to their respectable place of business in Chinatown.

"Where the real Me Sang? Dead?" asked the slave girl one day. Luxurious environment and indulgent treatment emboldened her to put the question.

"Me Sang married in Canton Chang Fu. Me Sang never go back to San-Fran," explained Hoey Wu, with much wise nodding.

* * * * * * * *

Smile, Li Lu. Be happy in silken softnesses, breathing your unanswerable prayers to the good, kind little gods, once more now. Believe for a while that you are going to find Hui K'ung, to give him back his mended cap, to talk with him in San-Fran of the beeches and junipers and the irises, at Lily Hill above Fochi. What awaits is a frightful awakening, a hideous shack in a hideous alley, where shall come Peek Noe, fat and old and hard on her slave girls always; and if out of Peek Noe's profits of the many years she shall pay Hung Lung the three thousand and five hundred dollars she has agreed to give him for an unsullied rose-faced girl, she is sure of getting back and getting back and getting back all of those many thousand dollars' worth. Better the loneliness of the Big House, Li Lu. Much better to be lying with the others, dead, there.

* * * * * * * *

"Oh, yes. Me Sang. I remember her well, your daughter. Cracky, she's grown these last months, Hung! It's a wonder you didn't marry her off to a Chinese dukeen or something," said Hecky McDoon, Immigrant Inspector at San Francisco, grinned as the Hung Lung party gathered up its bundles and went down with the long line of returning celestials. No question about that trio, he felt sure, and he turned to ballirag a couple of naturalized truck gardeners, anxious to get quickly to their homes in the Sacramento Valley.

* * * * * * * *

Peek Noe felt the texture of the saffron cheek. It was the place that Yue Ping had touched fourteen years before, when the cold crept into her loving fingers and stayed their gentle caressing.

"Very thin," commented Peek Noe.

"It is the long journey. Here she will soon be fat again," promised the bargainer, Hung Lung. "Have you the money now? Maybe I bring her again tomorrow?"

"There is too much danger in the streets. The missionaries watch my business too closely of late. I will pay now, here. Three thousand."

"Three thousand five hundred is the price agreed."

"Three thousand two hundred is all I can get today."

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 7.)

Stella Rosevelt

by Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

The old gentleman bent a keen glance upon the speaker at this.

Star with a startled glance, turned and confronted them.

It is needless to say that the fascinated girl accepted his invitation.

Copyright, 1883, 1902 and 1903 by Street & Smith.
Renewal granted to Mrs. Georgie Sheldown Downs, for 28 years from March 20, 1911.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A terrible storm at sea and from a steamer running between Liverpool and New York only five escape seasickness. Among them is Stella Rosevelt Gladstone, an orphan and on her way to some distant relatives in New York. She is befriended by an elderly man, Jacob Rosevelt, who is startled when he learns her mother called her "Star," her grandmother giving her the name. A fire breaks out and she saves valuable papers. The boats are rapidly filled. Stella refuses to go unless room is made for Mr. Rosevelt, who the next day suffers from an ill turn and is carefully nursed by Stella. The sixth day they are rescued. Mr. Rosevelt is told of the care Stella gave him during his illness and while thanking her a young man approaches and Mr. Rosevelt introduces Archibald Sherbrooke, whose home is in Derbyshire where Star's father preached. Star's shawl becomes loosened and not finding the pin, Mr. Sherbrooke draws one, an exquisitely carved stone, from his necktie, and Stella pins the shawl and then tells the story of the wreck and her endeavor to save Mr. Rosevelt's life. Arriving in New York, Mr. Sherbrooke regrets the loss of her address—he would call before his return to England. He hopes they will meet again and will she always consider him her friend. He places a card in her hand with his address upon it. Stella, remembering the pin, passes it to him. He begs her to keep it as a souvenir. Wishing she had something to give, he will accept a lock of her hair. Stella is met by Mrs. Blunt, Mrs. Richards' housekeeper, who hurries her away, much to Mr. Rosevelt's disappointment. Stella receives a cool reception from her aunt who had written she would befriend and educate Stella until able to care for herself and learns she is to take the place of Maggie Flynn and to be degraded to the level of a common servant. Resenting it, she asks her aunt if her father, from what she wrote him, had any idea she was to come into the family as a servant. Mrs. Richards does not relent, and insists she fills Maggie Flynn's place or none. Stella appeals to Mr. Richards, giving him the letter written by her father to Mrs. Richards and her reply. Stella's father is anxious to provide a home and begs Mrs. Richards to have the care and education of his daughter, since she once professed friendship for Stella's mother in saving her life from drowning. Stella has one hundred pounds. Could she not use it and then teach, relieving his wife of all responsibility? Mrs. Richards is surprised at Stella's suggestion and Mr. Richards makes arrangements for her to attend a select school, she giving a part of each day to household work. By close application Stella wins, at commencement, a part in the class exercises and surprises Mr. Richards, who is present, by her instrumental music, essay and promotion to the senior class. He tells his wife she has done the last day's work in the house. Josephine, admiring the cameo worn by Stella, suggests she give it to her, as her wardrobe does not correspond with it. Going to Stella's room and finding the cameo, Josephine takes it and discovers the initials "A. S". Stella misses the cameo and surmises who has it. In the meanwhile Mr. Richards receives a letter from Mrs. Richards' Uncle Jacob. He has lost all, is penniless and will accept the home that was offered him when rich. Mrs. Richards refuses to receive him, the house is full, and Mr. Richards is left troubled.

CHAPTER X.

THE UNWELCOME GUEST.

ON the very evening of the day of that spirited discussion between Mr. and Mrs. Richards regarding the coming of the latter's uncle, a railway carriage stopped before the door of their mansion, and an old man alighted.

He was dusty and travel-stained; his hair and beard were white as snow; his clothing—a common business suit—considerably the worse for the wear; while he wore a dark green vizor or shade over his eyes, and appeared both weary and feeble.

He inquired of the servant who answered his ring for Mrs. Richards, and was told in an indifferent, almost impudent manner that she was "engaged."

"Humph!" ejaculated the visitor, lifting the green shade and giving the man a keen look; "where is your master?"

"In the library," was the rather more respectful answer.

"Show me the way there," commanded the stranger, authoritatively; and the servant turned with a subdued air to obey him, recognizing at once his superior in spite of the travel-stained, shabby clothing.

Mr. Richards received his wife's relative with every appearance of cordiality, although there was a restraint in his manner which could be felt rather than explained.

"Ah, Uncle Jacob!" he said, as he shook him by the hand and took his hat from him; "we hardly thought you could arrive quite so soon. I should have looked for you tomorrow, however. Sit down—sit down; and, John," turning to the man who had shown him in, "tell Mrs. Blunt to fix up a nice little supper and send it in here on a tray."

"Don't put yourself out, George; anything will do for tonight. I am more tired than hungry," the old man said, sinking into a luxurious chair with a weary sigh, and removing the green shade entirely from his eyes.

Mr. Richards fidgeted and looked uneasy.

He knew that there was not a room in the house that his wife would give up; every one had been arranged for company who were expected or had already arrived, and he was at his wits' end to know what to do with him.

"Uncle Jacob" poor and ill was an entirely different character from "Uncle Jacob" rich and prosperous.

But he sat chatting socially with him until Mrs. Blunt appeared with a tray and served a tempting little meal, which the old gentleman ate with evident relish.

"I was more hungry than I thought," he said, when at length he had finished his second cup of tea, eaten the leg of a chicken and a couple of rolls. "Now, if you please, I should like to be shown to my room, for I have traveled a long distance today. But—where is Ellen? I should like to exchange greetings with her before I go."

"Ahem!" began Mr. Richards, feeling extremely uncomfortable. "Ellen has a house full of company tonight; if you could excuse her, and wait until tomorrow——"

"Certainly—certainly," the old man said hastily, but in a disappointed tone; for his niece had always been the first to greet him and express her delight at his coming heretofore.

"And," continued his host, growing very red in the face, "I am very sorry, but—every room in the house is taken. Would you mind sleeping at the lodge until we can make a place for you?"

The old gentleman bent a keen glance upon the speaker at this.

He saw his embarrassment, marked his averted eye and shamefaced air, and mistrusted something of its cause.

"Sleep at the lodge?" he repeated, in a peculiar tone. "Oh, no; I've just come from Henry's, where I slept over the stable. They had a 'house full of company,' too. Is the lodge far from here? You know I've never been in this house before."

"About two minutes' walk; I will go with you and see that you are made comfortable. It is too bad that things should happen so," Mr. Richards said, with real regret, as he saw how weary the traveler was, and he had half a mind to ring and command that he be shown into one of the guest chambers in spite of his wife's objections.

"Never mind, George; I shall sleep just as well there as here, no doubt," and he arose as if anxious to get away.

"Where is your baggage? I will attend to having what you need sent down," Mr. Richards remarked, as he took up his hat to accompany him.

"I have nothing but a small valise," was the reply. "You know I wrote you that I had been very unfortunate. I was on board the ——— that was lost last fall, and everything I had on board went down."

"On board the ——— were you?" cried Mr. Richards, in surprise, and glad of any change in the subject of conversation. "Why, then, you must have known Star, as she was also on that steamer."

"Star—Star Gladstone, do you mean?" eagerly inquired Mr. Rosevelt, for it was he, as doubtless the reader has surmised before this.

"Yes, Star, or Stella Gladstone, is her name."

Mr. Rosevelt sat down again, his face full of interest and animation now, and forgetting his weariness for the time in his desire to learn something of the beautiful girl to whom he was so deeply indebted.

"Where is she?" he asked. "What do you know—what can you tell me about her?"

"She is here in this house," Mr. Richards answered. "She is the child of one of my wife's relatives who resided in England, and Ellen, upon learning that she was an orphan, and homeless, consented to have her come here," he concluded, trying to make the best of a very poor story.

"I never expected to hear anything of her again, but I am very glad to know that she is here," Mr. Rosevelt said, with evident emotion. "She saved my life during that awful time, almost at the sacrifice of her own. It would, perhaps, have been better had she not exerted herself in my behalf so much. It is not a pleasant feeling to know that one is regarded as an incumbrance and a burden," he continued, with some bitterness; "but I shall never forget her heroism while I live. She nearly starved herself to death to keep life in me."

"I am astonished at what you tell me," returned Mr. Richards, feeling a deeper interest in Star than ever before.

"She must be a pleasant addition to your family, George; she was a very attractive girl."

"Ahem!" that gentleman replied, avoiding the keen eye fixed upon him. "Yes; she is a smart and talented girl; she will make a fine woman, without doubt. Would you like to see her tonight?"

"No; I believe I am too tired. I will go to the lodge now, if you please. I can see her tomorrow;" and the old man rose again.

Mr. Richards led the way from the room, getting his baggage from the hall, and then took him through the dining-room to lead him out by a side door.

As they passed through the hall, sounds of music and laughter came to them from the drawing-room; and had any one been watching Mr. Rosevelt closely, he might have seen his lips curl with something like scorn, and his eyes gleam indignantly, in spite of his weariness.

As Mr. Richards opened the outside door leading out upon the veranda, a slight figure sprang up from the step, and Star, with a startled glance, turned and confronted them.

A look of surprise swept over her face as she saw Mr. Richards' companion; then, with a low cry of joy, she darted forward and seized Mr. Rosevelt by the hand.

"Oh, sir," she said, tremulously, "I was afraid I should never see you again! How glad I am to meet you once more!"

Mr. Rosevelt recognized her at once, and recognized, too, the heartiness and sincerity of her welcome. There was nothing forced or constrained about either her words or manner.

"Ah, Miss Star, I am as glad to see you as you can possibly be to see me," he said, shaking her hand warmly. "I little thought," he went on, "that when you and I were faring so poorly together that we were bound for the same place. I intended then to come here before this. Why did you not tell me that you were a relative of Mrs. Richards?"

"I did not think much about it, sir, or that my destination could interest you," she said.

"Tut, tut, child!" he said gently; "anything connected with you would have been of interest to me after your kindness to me. I was deeply disappointed to find you gone when I went to seek you; but they told me that some one had come and taken you away, so I was forced to go my way also. Well," he concluded, smiling, "I have found you now, and I shall not lose sight of you again."

"But are you going away now, sir?" Star asked, glancing at the bag Mr. Richards was carrying, and which had the initials "J. R." painted upon it.

"No; only to the lodge for sleeping accommodations, as there is no room in the house for me."

"No room in the house for you?" Star repeated, in astonishment; but something in Mr. Richards' face warned her that all was not as he would wish, and she added, flushing: "I wish you would take my room, then; for I can sleep very nicely on the lounge in the sewing-room."

"No, thank you, Miss Star," Mr. Rosevelt returned; "I will go to the lodge until there is room for me in the house. You are as kind and self-sacrificing as ever, I perceive, but I will not deprive you of your room. Good night, my child; I shall see you tomorrow."

He laid his hand in a tender, caressing way on her head; then went out with Mr. Richards, whom he enlightened still further regarding that eventful voyage which he and Star had made together.

She stood still in the doorway looking after them, a puzzled expression on her face, a gleam of indignation in her large blue eyes.

She had heard Mrs. Richards telling Josephine something about "Uncle Jacob" that afternoon after leaving her husband.

The name had made her think of Mr. Rosevelt, and he had been in her thoughts most of the time since; but she had not imagined that they were referring to him, or that he was a relative of the family. Now she saw that he was the "Uncle Jacob" to whom she referred, but she could not understand his being sent out of the house to sleep.

"No room in the house! What can they mean?" she murmured, with tingling cheeks, for she knew of three unoccupied beds that he might have had as well as not.

To be sure they had been made up for company that was expected, but the visitors would not arrive for a day or two, and it seemed such an inhospitable thing to send that old man away down to the lodge, with its close, small rooms, to sleep.

"I hope I shall never be rich if it would make me hard-hearted like that," she said, with indignation. "I would prefer to struggle all my life with poverty, and have a kind and generous heart—one that can feel for others in trouble and sorrow. How tired and ill he looked, too," she went on, recalling his pale face and drooping attitude, "and he is such a splendid man!"

CHAPTER XI.

FILTHY LUCRE.

The next morning word was brought from the lodge that Mr. Rosevelt was quite ill, and not able to come up to the mansion for his breakfast.

"Breakfast, indeed!" muttered Mrs. Richards, with a toss of her proud head; "as if he supposed he was going to be invited to sit at the table with my fashionable guests in his shabby clothes."

She had received a full account of his arrival and appearance from her husband the night previous, after Mr. Rosevelt's departure for the lodge.

Mr. Richards went at once to see him, and to give orders to Mrs. Mellen, the wife of the gardener, to do everything for his comfort.

Later, his wife, with much inward fretting and fuming, followed his example, not because she had any desire to see him or felt in any way anxious about him, but to save unpleasant remarks and comments.

She met her uncle with anything but a cordial greeting, and which, even in the midst of his suffering, he could not fail to feel keenly.

"I am very sorry, Uncle Jacob, that you are ill, especially as I am full of company just now, and cannot personally give you the attention that you ought to receive," she said, trying to speak sympathetically, but failing utterly.

"Never mind me, Ellen. Mrs. Mellen seems very kindly disposed, and will, no doubt, do all that is necessary for me. I am sorry to be a burden to you in my misfortune, but you have always been so kind to me, urging me so cordially to come to you at any time, that I thought you would be glad to see your old uncle under any circumstances," the old man said, regarding her closely while he was speaking.

"I hope you will soon be better," Mrs. Richards returned, evasively.

"Thank you," he returned, coldly. "Do not allow my condition to cause you any anxiety. I am very comfortable. It is very quiet here, and I shall doubtless do very well."

"Yes; you will be more quiet here than up at the house, where there are so many people and so much going on," she replied, eagerly seizing this pretext for keeping him where he was. "And," she added, "if you need anything, Mrs. Mellen can attend to all your wants."

As she went rustling out of the room and downstairs in her rich attire, her aged and dependent relative lay back in his chair, with a darkening brow and a pale, pained face.

"Money! money! money!" he muttered. "No one is of much account in this world without plenty of the filthy lucre. If I had come here as I used to, with plethoric pockets instead of an empty purse and shabby attire, no one would have been sweeter or more delighted to see 'dear Uncle Jacob' than Ellen Richards. And it was just the same with Henry and his family. When I could make them costly presents and shower favors upon them—when I was 'Jacob Rosevelt, the millionaire'—no trouble was too great, nothing too good for me. It is a cold-hearted, selfish world, no one is to be trusted."

"May I come in?" asked a gentle voice behind him, after a few minutes; and, turning, he saw two blue eyes gleaming at him from beneath soft curls of sunny hair, a pair of red lips smiling upon him, while a slight, graceful figure, daintily clad in a pretty, blue lawn gown, stood in the doorway, waiting for his permission to enter.

Jacob Rosevelt's sad face involuntarily brightened at the sight of this attractive picture, and he said, hastily:

"Well, well, child, I believe you are rightly named, for you come like a veritable star into the gloom of my life. Star Gladstone—it is but an index to your character, for you both brighten and cheer. Of course you may come in."

"Thank you," Star said, laughing, and advancing to his side. "I did not expect to be so highly complimented when I came out. I have brought you this lovely spray of oleanders, which the gardener gave me from the conservatory," and she held up her little vase containing the bright, fragrant blossoms. "And here," she continued, "is a dish of the most delicious raspberries you ever tasted, every one picked by my own fingers," and she held up her right hand, showing her slender fingers stained by the rosy fruit.

Mrs. Mellen entered at this moment, bearing a little tray with a tempting lunch spread upon it.

Star wheeled a small table to the invalid's side, spread a spotless towel, which she found upon the rack, upon it, and then deftly arranged the dishes in the most tempting way before him, putting the oleander blossoms in the center and the raspberries just under his nose, where he could not fail to get their delicious odor and long to eat them.

"There," she went on, smiling, and tossing her hat upon a chair, "I believe I am hungry myself, and if you will allow me to pour your tea, I think I could eat a slice of Mrs. Mellen's delicious bread and butter with you afterward. You don't often see such bread as that, I can assure you, and I frequently run down here and beg her to give me some."

The young girl shot a smiling glance at the woman as she spoke, and the woman's face beamed with pleasure at the tribute to her skill.

"Bless you, child!" Mr. Rosevelt said, as he unfolded his napkin and drew nearer the table, "the sight of your bright face and the smell of your berries have given me an appetite already. Sit down, sit down; my tea will taste ten per cent. better to be poured by your fair hands, and while we eat you shall tell me how it has fared with you during the past year. I see it has not changed you at heart; you are the same as when we parted, and you were as ready as ever last night to sacrifice your own comfort for a poor old man."

Star blushed. She felt almost as guilty, knowing that there had been room for him in the house as if he had been the one to turn her away.

"I knew these rooms were low and close, while my room, although rather high up, was much more airy; besides, you looked too tired and ill to walk way down here," Star explained, with some embarrassment.

"Your own is rather high up, is it? How high?" he asked, giving her a keen glance.

"It is in the third story," she answered, flushing again.

"Ah! one would be apt to get good air in that latitude," said Mr. Rosevelt, dryly. "Now tell me," he added, "what you have been doing since I saw you."

Star gave him an account of her life at school, omitting for several reasons to speak of the fate which had been intended for her, and said just as little as she could in connection with Mrs. Richards and her haughty daughter, or their treatment of her. She told him of her music, of the books she had read, and what her plans for the future were when she should graduate at the end of another year.

She spent more than an hour with him, and when at length she left him, he was apparently much cheered and a good deal better for her visit.

She went every morning afterward while her

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 21.)

This Department is conducted solely for the use of COMFORT sisters, whereby they may give expression to their ideas relative to the home and home surroundings, and to all matters pertaining to themselves and families; as well as opening a way for personal correspondence between each other.

Our object is to extend a helping hand to COMFORT subscribers; to become coworkers with all who seek friendship, encouragement, sympathy or assistance through the interchange of ideas.

Any abuse of this privilege, such as inviting correspondence for the purpose of offering an article for sale, or undertaking to charge a sum of money for ideas, recipes or information mentioned in any letter appearing in this department, if reported, will result in the offender being denied the use of these columns.

Do not ask us to publish letters requesting money contributions or donations of any sort. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate, it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

Please write only on one side of the paper, and recipes on a separate sheet.

Always give your correct and full name and address, very plainly written; otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Address MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON, CARE COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

LAST January when a Sisters' Pin was suggested, it was partly promised that we might have one if enough seemed in favor of it. The letters during the past year have been so encouraging that it is being considered and will be ready for use before long. Various designs were contributed and from these composite ideas we will evolve a COMFORT Friendship Circle pin, an inexpensive affair so far as money value goes perhaps, but priceless in all that it stands for—friendship and the desire to best serve one another.

Of course there was some expense incurred in the initial cost of this pin—having design made and die cast, etc.—and I assumed the responsibility of this, to a certain extent, by saying that I felt sure that enough pins would be ordered as a premium to make it worth while. I'm hoping every one of you will back me up in this. I dislike very much to have anyone say, "I told you so." However, it isn't compulsory,—you are just as much one of us whether you have a pin or not—and I'm not even expecting you to do it but I hope you will want to.

As has been said before, it makes me quite unhappy to be unable to print all the interesting letters received. For a while I tried writing little notes of explanation to those whose letters were not used, but to have kept that up would have meant doing nothing else, to say nothing of all the postage required. It doesn't seem fair for the writer of a perfectly good letter to have no recognition at all, so, beginning with this issue, and from time to time, so far as space will allow, the names of persons writing to this department will be published. Nom de plumes are not included.

Please regard this as my individual handshake and personal welcome. Not that I consider myself more important than anyone else but I happen to be the fortunate hostess to the largest and best Circle in the world. Let's work together for its good.—Ed.

INDIANA.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

It's no use for me to tell how much I enjoy our paper. Everyone knows, if we take COMFORT we enjoy every line of it. I have never visited you before but it was not because I did not want to but rather lack of courage. I haven't the greatest store of that great helper, courage, anyway.

My letter is to one and all but especially to the Old Maids. I am one, but am writing to tell you how I have made my life worth while. I will begin back twenty years ago. Father and Mother died within a month of each other and I, at sixteen, realized I was entirely alone with an unfinished education. I decided that a nurse's training was the best education I could have and I had grown to love taking care of the sick, during mother's long illness. Four years later found me a graduate nurse, and engaged, but the Great Reaper called Death needed him, and this old, dreary world, to me then, and I lost one of the finest of young doctors. I then decided to work outside of the hospital and needed a home. I bought a small house and six lots in the suburbs of a city, paying a small amount down and the balance in small, very small, payments. Then I adopted a mother from a Widow's Home. That was the best thing I ever did for myself. She was sixty years old and true gold from the crown of her white head to the tips of her toes, and such a mother! She kept my little home so that it was a pleasure for me to come home. She was happy and I found life worthwhile. Often for six weeks at a time I was gone but she crocheted, pieced quilts, and read COMFORT. She often sold her work but I would not let her use her money in the home. What jolly times we had. One day we visited an orphanage and borrowed a little fellow of three years. He was so much company for mother that we kept him. Today he is nine years old and I have been repaid a thousand fold for the little expense of clothes, music and other things that go with the education of a child. He is a loving little fellow. Mother has gone to her reward which will surely be a rich one and again this old world is dreary but the dear and loving mother lays beside her Civil War hero and Robert and I are alone. But we are going to have a new mother some of these days and I know all the sisters join in wishing me as good a mother as the one that is gone.

Now sisters, my orphan life has known a mother and my childless life has known a child's love, which has been the greatest thing in my life. Just because you have no money left you is no sign you should not have a home of your own. Just because God sees fit to leave you an orphan is no sign you must remain so. Just because God has taken your intended life's partner away is no sign you should not have a dear little Robert like mine. God has robbed me of a lot but He has provided a substitute for nearly all. All but the fine doctor I lost sixteen years ago. None of our fine bachelor friends need apply for my address—even if you should be so inclined, for I'm really too busy to answer letters. I am beside a very sick patient now who is so nervous that the scratch of a pen would annoy her, therefore I am writing with a pencil.

If I am welcome I will come again and tell you of my work in France, which was very interesting.

YOUR OLD MAID SISTER.

Old Maid Sister.—You have the best kind of courage, the kind that makes the best of any situation and helps others while being helped yourself. I can imagine how that adopted mother felt toward you and how little Robert must worship you. Indeed we do want to hear from you again. —Ed.

COLLINSVILLE, BOX 825, OKLA.

DEAR FRIENDS OF COMFORT:

I have been sitting back here for twenty years, reading the fine things in COMFORT, and this is the first letter I have ever tried sending in. I read the letters from all and they are helpful and entertaining. I gain so many good thoughts from "Crumbs of Comfort," and am especially interested in "Poultry Farming for Women," as I have started raising chickens for profit. And I wish to ask some of the friends who are interested in poultry to write me. Would especially like to hear from some unemcumbered middle-aged lady who is fond of such work. Will answer all letters.

Yours for success, MRS. J. F. ROGERS.

CHAZY, N. Y.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

Will you give a "tiny" place in the "COMFORT'S" Sisters' Corner to a newcomer? This is my first letter to COMFORT although I have been reading it for six months.

I'm from the Empire State, 'way back north. Have lived here 'most of my young life. I lived ten months in the state of Rhode Island, from Jan. 15th until Nov. 7th of last year. On that day I traveled back to "old New York". I must say I did like the country and climate there, but what I admired most was the wages I was getting. I worked at the National India Rubber Co. during that time, and my wages were anywhere, up to twenty-eight dollars a week, but that wasn't all, I loved the work I was doing. We were on piecework, and some of us girls would rush to see who would get the most out during the day. I made thirteen dollars in one day, having taken out about sixty-five thousand feet of wire. My work was always good, I never had any that came back. When any work was bad, they would look up the number on the tag, and find out which girl did it, then she would have to take a knife and strip all the thread from the wire and run it all over again, so that's the reason why most of the girls were careful. We girls had thirteen braiders to take care of, that includes putting in reels (an iron reel having anywhere from one thousand to ten thousand feet of wire on it), and taking out telephone wire and lamp cord. Some we covered with silk, of all different colors, but the white silk was the most difficult to handle as we couldn't get a little spot on it. If we did, we had to take a knife and strip the silk off and run it all over again, besides putting a patch on. We had to do the same with all other colors, but it was not so hard. I did love my work and when I left I was sorry, but we were then going to be on a schedule of three days a week, so it would not pay to stay, not for people who were boarding out; there was "hubby", baby and I. We were boarding with my aunt and she was very good to my baby girl,—I would not leave her with anybody else. "Hubby" also worked in the wire department, but he made cables and had only two braiders.

Dear Mrs. Wilkinson, please find room for my letter in the Sisters' Corner so I may hear from some of the sisters. I dearly love correspondence and I will try to answer every letter and card sent me.

Love to all.

A sister of twenty-two, MRS. WM. J. CUMMS.

ENTERPRISE, R. R. 4, ALA.

DEAR COMFORT FAMILY:

Would you all mind giving me a little space for a chat with the sisters?

I think it is unfortunate when the husband and wife are divided in the opinions, like Undecided Mother and her husband. There are others who can express their ideas much better than I can on dancing, or any other subject, and we know that often children will go against their best teaching and do wrong no matter how well they are taught. I am not in favor of dancing because my father and mother taught us that dancing would lead to sin. I hope my girls and boy will not have talent that way. Of course there are worse things than being an actor or actress, but sin is sin.

I love to read all the letters in COMFORT and have my subscription paid two years in advance and try to get my neighbors to subscribe. Some say it costs too much while others say they haven't time to read it. I do all my house work, carry water quite a distance, send two children to school, crochet and tat, and read COMFORT. I am a widow. I read the Bible and religious books a good deal, so don't have much time to gossip. Ermina's letter reminds me of a story I heard one time.

There was a crowd of women together one evening and they did nothing but gossip and talk about their neighbors. Finally one of them said: "We ought to do like Aunt Polly, not talk about anybody." One of the others said she thought she could get Aunt Polly to say something mean about someone so next time they met and Aunt Polly was there they were discussing a man in the neighborhood who didn't look decent and who didn't work much. This woman said:

"Aunt Polly, isn't John the sorriest white man you ever saw?"

Aunt Polly thought it over for quite a while then said: "I know one thing, he's the best whistler I ever heard."

On the way home they came across a dead dog. This same woman began to tell what a mean dog he had been.

Aunt Polly said: "Hasn't he got pretty white teeth?"

She wouldn't talk about even a dog. I think it would be glorious if we would all follow Aunt Polly's method.

I would like to have letters from the sisters in different states. I'd also like the book, "The Little Marplot," but write first as I only want one copy. I have ordered it several times but always received something else.

I suppose Nelle is married and thinks so much of her husband that she has forgotten all about us. I wish she would write again.

I am five feet one inch tall and weigh 116 pounds so I haven't taken up much room. I have grey eyes, fair complexion and brown hair.

Good by and God's richest blessings upon all of you.

Your busy sister, MRS. MAUD PETTIS.

Mrs. Pettis.—Your Aunt Polly story is one of the best I ever heard. If only there were more Aunt Pollys in this world.—Ed.

IOWA.

DEAR SISTERS AND EDITOR:

Once more I will ask admittance. I am sad and happy this evening. I just saw my darling baby girl's picture in COMFORT, which I sent in some time ago. Then I was happy and had everything to live for. Not long after writing my husband was taken very ill with the flu and pneumonia (we were living in Colorado then) and after five weeks of suffering passed away to his Savior and the little boy we had lost a few years before, leaving a heart-broken wife and little Aileen. Today in reading over my letter published in COMFORT, and written quite a while ago, I thought I would tell the sisters what a comfort my baby was to me during my first months of grieving. In losing my husband I lost the best that life held for me but I still have my baby to live for. Not once did the thought of giving her up enter my head and today I would part with anything but my darling adopted baby. I hope you can understand what this motherless little girl has meant to me during my grief. I think it is a crime to mother a cat or dog and neglect the human race. There are plenty of folks who need our every help. I thought the first months of my sorrow that I could never get over it but I have found great comfort in helping others which has helped to ease the ache in my heart. Our Baby knows where Daddy is. She says in her baby way. "Asleep with Jesus, some day I see him." God bless her.

HAPPY MOTHER.

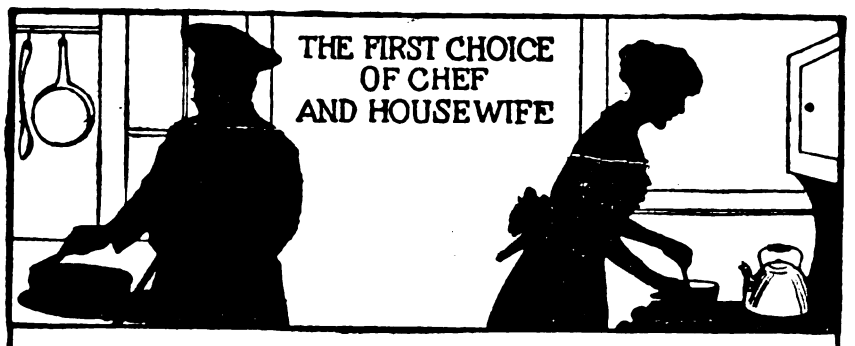
Happy Mother.—The pleasure of hearing from you again is diminished by the sad news your letter contains and though our sympathy is somewhat delayed, it is sincere, nevertheless. To repeat little Aileen's words is the most comforting thought I can give you.—Ed.

FRENCH CORRAL, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I wish Mrs. Wilkinson would tie her Billy the Goat up so he will not get this letter for he must have been hungry last time I wrote.

Of course I like to read the sisters' letters: the babies' pictures always interest me, so I'm sending a snapshot, too. If it is not worthy of space Mrs. W. can look at it anyway. It shows Rex Ellsworth, 3½ years old, holding Audira Allison, who is five months old. They are both bottle babies but I did not order it so.



I wish Mrs. Wilkinson would tell us more about herself, and let us have that picture for which we have asked.

I put up one hundred and fifty quarts of fruit and several quarts of jelly for winter. I used to try my jelly in a saucer. Now I just watch until two drops form on the side of a wooden spoon, then it's done. So much easier and no waste.

I make serviceable aprons of 100-pound flour sacks, after the lettering is washed out and everyone says they are very pretty and they cost almost nothing. I make the front part in bib style, cut out under arms and end in sash to tie, about two inches wide. Over the shoulder to the back are the straps, two inches wide, sewed to the part that extends under the arms. The skirt part is one whole sack with selvedges on the side and is gathered to the waist. It has a hem and either rickrack braid or bias binding may be used to finish the neck and armholes. The two large pockets and front have large apples of pink and blue chambray, arranged in group of three or four, appliqued on, first basting, then chainstitching around, with a green chambray leaf on each side of the group. After one has the idea she can make up different designs. One of mine has pink roses instead of apples and when I get my clean, starched apron on over my gingham dress I feel dressed up. When I go to a neighbor's the large pocket comes in handy, to carry baby's bottle, etc. By the way, how many of you wear your housedresses short? I do and don't intend to go back to long skirts again. They are much easier to wash and iron and to wear, besides requiring less material. I do all my own sewing. My aprons are about one inch shorter than my dresses.

I love to get out in the hills and go out every chance I get. We leave the babies with their grandmother who is delighted to have them, then away to the hills we go. How many of the sisters ever went "bee hunting"? I went the other day but we didn't have any

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10.)

The Best Results are Obtained by Using

Baker's Chocolate

(Blue Wrapper, Yellow Label)

In making Cakes, Pies, Pudding, Frosting, Ice Cream, Sauces, Fudges, Hot and Cold Drinks

For more than 140 years this chocolate has been the standard for purity, delicacy of flavor, and uniform quality.

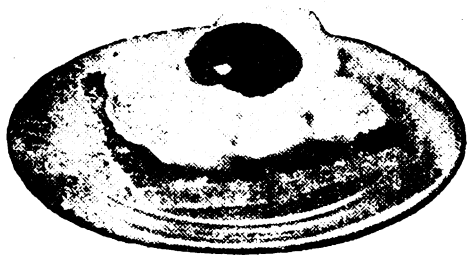
IT IS THOROUGHLY RELIABLE

57 Highest Awards in Europe and America

The trade-mark "La Belle Chocolatiere" on every genuine package

WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.

Established 1780



DORCHESTER MASSACHUSETTS

Booklet of Choice Recipes sent free on approval

Comfort Sisters' Recipes

ONE of these chilly winter mornings, try serving Queen's Toast to the family who may have gotten tired of "hard-boiled" or "three-minute" eggs. To be sure, it is only toast and egg, as illustrated, but so dainty and appetizing that it cannot fail to tempt even the most fussy member of the family. Then again, if you cannot procure fresh fruits for shortcakes, and most of us can't, use marmalade or jelly instead. A rather unusual shortcake recipe is given and illustrated below. I hope you like it.—Ed.

QUEEN'S TOAST.—Make thin slices of toast, butter generously and lay on individual plates. Allow one egg to each plate. Carefully separate the white from yolk, leaving the yolk in one-half of the shell so it will not get broken. Beat the white to a stiff froth and spread on toast. Slip the yolk onto the center, and set toast into moderate oven until the egg is cooked. Individual plates of hot hash topped with egg prepared in this way is very tempting.

QUEEN'S TOAST.

VEAL OYSTERS.—Cut lean veal into small sized pieces and cook in boiling water to cover till tender. Season with salt and pepper. Dip in crumbs and egg slightly beaten with tablespoon of water. Fry in hot fat. MRS. M. O. MACKINTOSH, Canton, Ill.

EASILY-MADE BROWN BREAD.—One cup molasses, two cups rye meal or graham flour, three cups Indian meal, four cups cold water, one large spoon vinegar, one heaping teaspoon soda, one heaping teaspoon salt. Mix the meals dry, then add the other ingredients, dissolving the soda in the vinegar mixed with a little of the water. Mix thoroughly and bake slowly four or five hours.

CINNAMON ROLLS.—One-half cup butter, one-half cup lard, one tablespoon sugar, white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth, one-half teaspoon cream tartar, one-fourth teaspoon soda dissolved in two-thirds cup milk, flour enough to mix quite stiff. Roll thin and cut in pieces four inches long and two and one-half inches wide, wet with milk and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon through the center. Roll and bake in a quick oven.

LEMON CRACKERS.—One cup butter and two cups sugar beaten to a cream, two eggs, one teaspoon soda dissolved in two tablespoons of sweet milk, the grated peel of a lemon and one teaspoon of lemon juice. Knead very hard and roll very thin, and when baked the light may be seen through them.

COCOANUT COOKIES.—One cup sugar, one-third cup butter, one egg, two tablespoons milk, two and one-fourth cups flour, one level teaspoon cream tartar, one-half spoon soda, salt, one cup grated cocoanut.

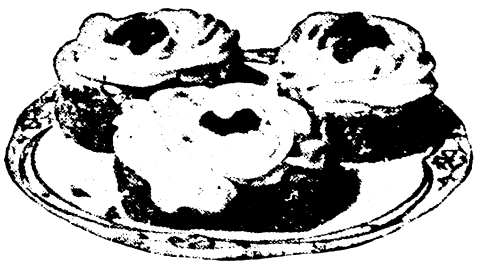
SWEETBREADS.—Soak one hour in salt and water; boil in the same till cooked. Remove skins and cut in slices one-half inch thick when cool, and season each with pepper, salt and nutmeg, dip in egg and flour and fry in very hot butter; take up and keep hot. Add a little flour to the pan, and when brown add nutmeg and one tablespoonful each of vinegar and catsup. Let this boil up and pour over the sweetbreads.

FRENCH DRESSING.—One-half teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper, two tablespoons vinegar and four tablespoons olive oil. Mix ingredients and stir until well blended. This can be done by pouring into large bottle and shaking vigorously.

BROWN STEW.—For this dish the cheaper and less tender cuts of beef, such as the rump and round, can be used. Remove the meat from the bone and cut it into small pieces. Dredge with flour and cook in a small amount of fat until it is well browned. Add hot water, about one quart to every pound of meat; season well with salt, pepper and onion, and cook slowly for an hour. The meat should be very tender and the gravy thick. Tomato and other vegetables may be added while the stew is cooking.

SOUPS MADE FROM DRIED BEANS, PEAS OR COWPEAS.—There are a great variety of soups of high nutritive value that can be made from dried navy beans, black beans, lentils, cowpeas, or other legumes. The vegetables should be first soaked in water for several hours, overnight being usually the most convenient time. When they are thoroughly soaked, the water should be poured off and fresh water added. They should then be cooked until tender, with a little onion, celery, or other highly-flavored vegetable, and salt, then put through a strainer to remove the skins. The juice and pulp should then be either diluted or boiled down to the proper consistency for a soup and should be bound with a mixture of flour and butter, as milk soups are. An ounce of dried beans is very nearly equal in protein value to a glass of milk, although the protein is not so completely digested.

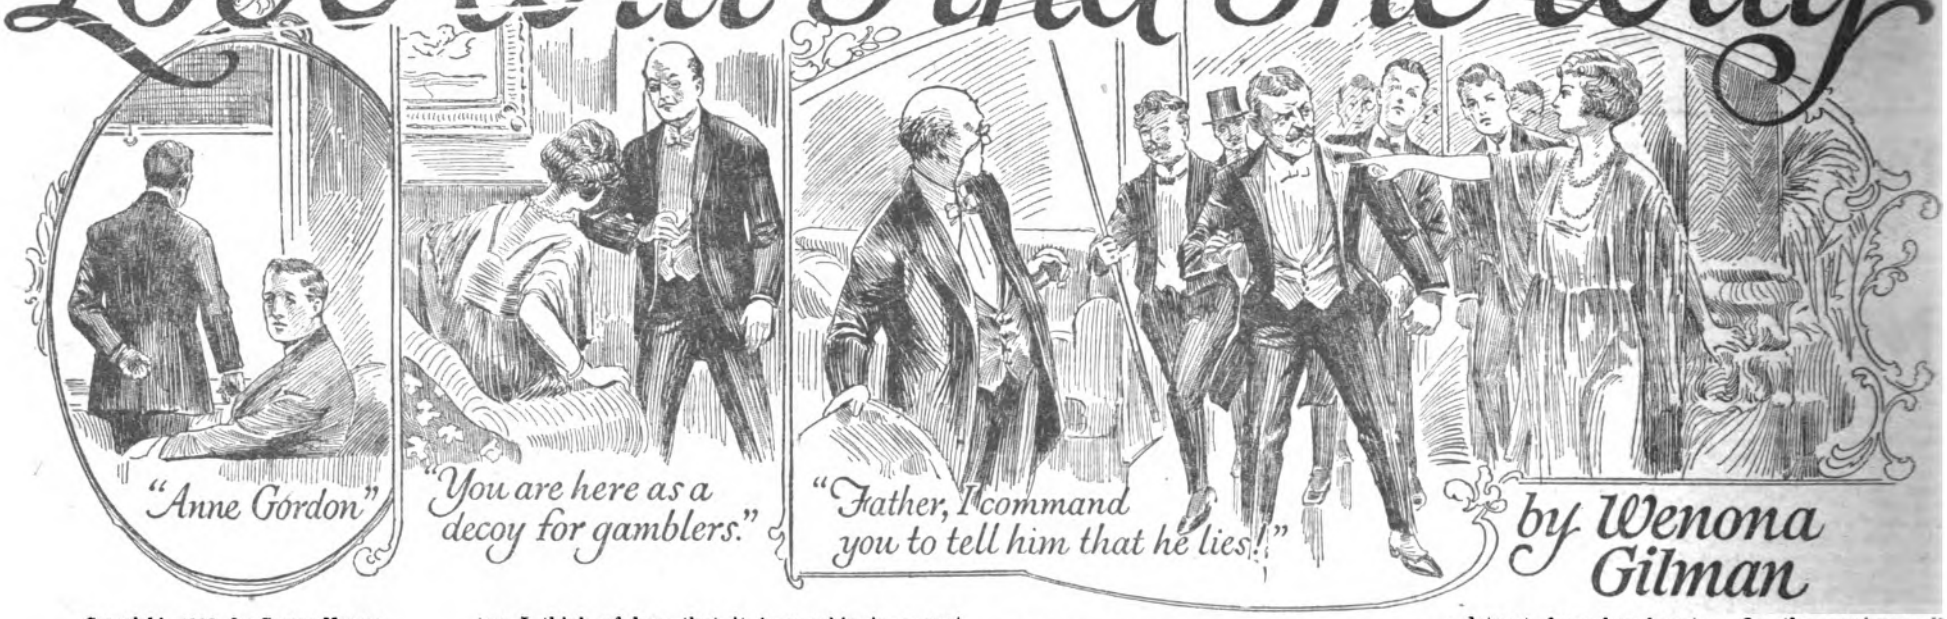
MOCK GOOSE.—Parboil a leg of pork, remove skin and rub meat well with butter; sprinkle with salt, pepper, powdered sage and cover with slices of onion. Make stuffing and cook with pork. Serve with apple sauce or cranberries.



FRUIT CAKE.—One cup sugar, one cup molasses, two-thirds cup butter, three eggs, one teaspoon each of cloves, allspice, cinnamon, one teaspoon soda, two teaspoons cream tartar, three-fourths pound of raisins, three-fourths pound currants, one-half pound citron, one cup milk, three cups flour. Bake two hours in slow oven.

APPLE SAUCE FRUIT CAKE WITHOUT MILK.—One cup brown sugar, one and one-half cups apple sauce, two and one-half cups flour, one-half cup butter, one pound raisins, one teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon nutmeg, two teaspoons baking soda, one-half teaspoon salt, three tablespoons vinegar. Cream the butter and sugar thoroughly together, add apple sauce, flour, raisins, spices, salt and soda mixed with vinegar. Mix and pour into greased and floured cake tin, and bake in moderate oven one and one-half hours. —MRS. L., Millinocket, Maine.

KUMYSS.—Heat two quarts of milk to blood heat, 100 degrees. Add half a cake yeast and two tablespoons sugar dissolved in a little warm water. Let stand for two hours, then bottle and stand for six hours in a moderately warm room; then place on ice. Kumyss will keep four or five days if kept cold but it is better if made every day or two.—MRS. A. BUTORI, Meadeville, Mont.



WHIPPED CREAM SUBSTITUTE.—Slice one banana for the whites of two eggs and whip until stiff. Flavor to suit taste. This makes an excellent substitute for whipped cream. To prevent fruit from settling to bottom in fruitcake, without rolling in flour or boiling, put fruit in before the flour is added and it will not settle.—MRS. MARGARET MOORE, Bosler, Wyo.

COOKED FRUIT SHORTCAKES.—Sift together two cups of sifted flour, one teaspoon of cream of tartar, and one-half teaspoon each of soda and salt. Beat one egg, add three-fourths cup of milk and one-fourth cup of melted butter and quickly stir in the flour, adding a little more milk if necessary. Turn out onto bread board, work into shape but do not knead, and very lightly roll to three-fourths of an inch thick. Spread with any kind of marmalade, thick jam or jelly, roll and cut into slices three-fourths of an inch thick. Bake until brown in a quick oven. Just before serving, cover each shortcake with an icing made as follows: Into the top of double boiler put one cup of granulated sugar, one unbeaten egg white and four tablespoons of cold water. Set into rapidly boiling water and beat with an egg beater until the icing is thick. Take from boiling water, add one teaspoon of flavoring and continue beating until firm enough to spread.

COOKED FRUIT SHORTCAKES.

Love Will Find The Way

by Wenona Gilman

Copyright, 1898, by George Monroe.
Serial Rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Junius Beckwith, a Westpointer, Anne Gordon, wealthy, Marian Reade, companion, friend and protegee of Anne Gordon, occupy a box at the Metropolitan Opera House. The curtain falls and Beckwith admits that "Lucia di Lammermore" has a depressing influence upon him and he cannot think of insanity without repulsion, no matter what the cause may be, and a marriage with either tainted, should be made a crime punishable by law. The next morning is Marian's birthday and deciding to go home, Anne Gordon, with a premonition that she ought to stay, exacts a promise, if any trouble comes, Marian will let her know first. Marian walks away and turning the corner meets June Beckwith and they go to the park. Remembering it is her birthday, he offers his love as a gift and asks her to be his wife. Happy in her love for June, Marian reaches home. Janet Reade, her grandmother, tells her that her mother is not dead but the inmate of a madhouse. What can she say to June? Hearing a voice, she answers to her father's call. He gives her a curious Venetian ring for a birthday gift, and questioning him where he got it he evades the answer and queries what Anne Gordon gives her. Showing the watch, her father berates Marian's friend. She might have given one thousand dollars, which he needs and will have. Marian, under the horror of all she hears, forgets all her grandmother told her, even forgets June Beckwith. Later in the night, recalling her promise to Anne Gordon, she goes to her home. A light flashed from a window opposite shows a rope hung from Anne Gordon's window, and in the window her father's face. Reaching home, Marian meets her father, tells him where he has been, and for no honest purpose, and demands that he return all he has stolen. He refuses, and only after her earnest pleading does he ask what she will do for him. Little dreaming the price she must pay, she asks for nothing but to serve him and she seals the promise upon her mother's Bible. Left alone, Paul Reade decides to keep one ring. Marian writes June she does not love him and that her soul is withered as much as the flower she encloses. Her father assures her he has obtained a position in the brokerage business and rented a house down town. June is stunned upon receiving Marian's letter and welcomes his friend, Fred Underwood, who tells him Paul Reade is a most unscrupulous villain and the house he has rented is a decoy for gamblers, that Marian is not as innocent as she appears. June cannot believe it, and Underwood will prove it to him if he cares to go. June calling upon Anne, she tells of Paul Reade's sudden wealth, and June, knowing where it comes from, as a friend, forbids Anne to go to Marian Reade's home. Going to the reception, Underwood requests Paul Reade to introduce Marian. In the meanwhile June appears with a message from Miss Gordon. He invites Marian for a waltz which she ends with Dick Gresham, the most notorious gambler in New York. The evening ended, Marian faces her father and asks who were those people. She receives no satisfaction from his answer—he expects her to receive them with courtesy, she has sworn to obey him. Anne begs Marian to come to her for a home, to divulge the secret that troubles her and she denies she has one. June Beckwith calls upon Anne, who defends Marian and with tears in her eyes pleads with him not to condemn her. If he never loved Anne before he thinks he does now and she is willing to be his wife. Marian speaks to her father of her mother and what has kept her from Marian all these years. She must see her. Her father refuses and Marian insists. There are those who will help. Paul Reade requests Ezra Morris, whose mother is hopelessly insane and confined in a house built especially for her, to allow Marian to visit her, believing she is her mother. Returning home she cries, "will the inheritance come to her?" Dick Gresham announces Anne's betrothal to Junius Beckwith.

CHAPTER XVII.

FRED UNDERWOOD'S PRAYER.

"I'M deucedly glad you've come, old man. Sit down and have a weed. What in the name of Heaven would ever become of a man if he did not have tobacco?"

June Beckwith pushed a silver stand of fragrant Havanas toward his friend Underwood, as the latter flung himself into a chair, and before replying the big man selected one and lighted it; then, with that universal comfort of the male sex between his lips, he said:

"Where've you been? You have not shown up at the club. Is it possible that you are letting this affair of——"

"I am going to ask you a favor, old friend," June interrupted hastily. "There is nothing so good for a folly of that kind as absolute silence. Don't let us ever speak of it again. I have made an egregious fool of myself, and I frankly confess that I am ashamed of it."

"All right. After today the subject shall be a forbidden one between us; but there was something that I had to say to you, and it was that which brought me here. Have I permission to speak this once?"

"Certainly."

"Then it is this, June. I am not so sure after all that we have not been mistaken. There is something in that girl's face that tells me she is not of the stamp that would be guilty of——"

A long, scornful laugh from June brought him to an abrupt stop.

"So she has succeeded in deceiving you at last, has she?" he cried, with a sneer. "Well, do you know, if it were not such an ungenerous thing, I should be rather glad. It takes away a great deal of my self-contempt. If she could succeed in deceiving a practical fellow like you, who knew the circumstances of the case, why, then there is some excuse for me, who knew nothing."

"She has not deceived me!" exclaimed Underwood, almost sternly. "There is nothing in which she could deceive me. I am not in love with her. She is not the kind of girl that I should want to make my wife, even if she was as pure as—as I would have my sister. It is not that at all, June. I am not in the least in love with her, but I frankly confess that she has interested me. She is there, in that house, surrounded by gamblers, a companion of depravity, and yet, something seems to tell me, as I look at her, as I think of her, that it is a robin in a nest of hawks. June, is it possible that we can have misjudged her? Is it possible that we can have been unjust to her?"

"No!" exclaimed Beckwith fiercely. "It is not possible! She has got the face of an angel and the heart of a fiend. She has willfully made of herself the companion of those people. She knows their character. She knows the business that her father follows, and she has deliberately offered her assistance to him."

Are you sure of that? There was something in her manner the other night that I could not quite understand. She seemed to be frightened. She seemed to be striving to comprehend the sort of thing with which she was surrounded without the knowledge of the world to give her the power of succeeding. I watched her closely. She seemed at times helpless, half-fainting, like the wounded bird that shrinks from your hand without the power of escape."

"And so she is teaching even you to become a sentimentalist. But it is all wasted, dear boy. I have the proof!"

"What proof?"

"This: In order to prevent Miss Gordon from going to that ball, I told her of the discovery that I had made. She was shocked, horrified, and all the chivalry and purity of her great nature was aroused for the girl who had been her friend. She would have saved her at almost any cost. She sent for Miss Reade, and together they talked of Paul Reade's business. Miss Gordon offered Marian a home with her. She offered her sisterhood. She pleaded with her to accept, and Miss Reade refused because she would not desert her father. If she clung to him, hoping for his reformation, I might still respect her; but she does not do that. She entertains his associates, she decoys his victims, she dances with his friends. And she does it all with the smiling countenance of the woman who is pleased with the adulation she receives."

"You are sure that she understood Miss Gordon?"

"There was no chance for a mistake. The conversation was definite, and strictly to the point. Of her own will she has given Miss Gordon up, who was one of the best and stanchest friends a girl ever had. And, now, if you have no objection, we will drop the subject forever, old man. I want to forget that I ever knew Marian Reade!"

"And you can do that?"

Underwood was looking over the head of his friend, his eyes slightly contracted, a dreamy, curious expression darkening them; but they were brought upon a level with June's face suddenly when the answer came, so singular was the tone:

"I must forget!"

"Why?"

The question was asked swiftly, sharply, and June rose and walked to the window before replying. His back was toward Underwood. He leaned against the casing and looked downward into the street, while his fingers fumbled nervously with the keys and small change in the pockets of his trousers.

"Because," he answered slowly, "I am the betrothed husband of another woman!"

Underwood's fingers opened and his cigar dropped into the cuspidor. He was sitting bolt upright in his chair, with his arm upon the table, and his eyes fixed on the back of June's head. The almost boyish coloring that characterized him had vanished, leaving him pale as death.

"Who—is the woman?"

June was too much absorbed to hear the strained tone. He did not even look around, lest his old friend should see the despair in his own countenance as he replied:

"Anne Gordon."

Underwood did not move. His pallor deepened. The silence upon them seemed almost tangible. Suddenly he heard the ticking of his watch in his vest-pocket, and a curious grin passed over his face. It was stiff and unreal, almost distorted. He pulled out his watch and looked at it, then put it back without knowing the hour. He rose, his legs feeling stiff as if numb with cold. For a moment he actually forgot what June had said, and then it came over him again with a sudden rush that seemed to send every drop of blood in his body into his head. He laughed heavily.

"You have not lost any time, have you?" he asked curtly. "Do you remember that old verse that we learned in our boyhood?

"'It is well to be honest and wise,
It is good to be loyal and true,
It is best to be off with the old love
Before you are on with the new.'"

June turned around quickly, and, advancing a few steps, faced his friend.

"I don't wonder you say that," he exclaimed. "I never felt so much like a scoundrel in my life; and I value your good opinion too highly not to explain to you. I know you will understand me, and I know that what I say to you will be as safe as if buried in a grave of silence. When the wheel of destiny begins to turn, Fred, it is impossible to tell in what groove it will stop. I don't want you to think that I am a conceited fool. I am talking to you now of something more serious than either life or death. I discovered—no matter how—that Anne Gordon loves me. Can you understand what occurred, Fred? She does not know I ever cared for Marian Reade, and I pray God that she never may!"

"And you think you can make her happy?"

"I am going to try; I am going to do everything that lays in the power of mortal man; I am going to use my best efforts. If I fail, the fault will not be mine. The hope of my life is to make her happy."

Underwood took the hand that was extended to him, and looked deeply into June's eyes. His voice was not quite steady as he said slowly:

"I believe that you mean what you say. God bless you, June!"

There was something in the tone, something in the expression, that told June all the truth. A gleam of dismay shot into his countenance.

"Fred!" he cried hoarsely, "for the love of——"

"Hush!" exclaimed Underwood, with a little wan smile. Not now. I could not quite bear it, even from you. I love you, old fellow, more than I love my own brother. Perhaps I never understood myself quite so well in my whole life as I do now. The experience has shocked me."

"But I never thought——"

"Never mind. I never thought—of myself, either, and it may be that that has occasioned most of my undoing. Let it go. I don't want you to think I envy you, June, but—I wish you loved her, old man, as I do!"

He smiled again, and as June did not reply, he turned and went quietly out of the room. He took his hat from the rack in the hall and let himself out the front door. He stood there for a moment in the gloaming, looking into the street; then:

"How curious it is," he said, half-aloud, musingly, "that he should have dealt me this blow standing in almost the same spot that he did when I told him about Marian Reade's unworthiness. Retribution is a singular thing. Well, I love him and I love her, and I pray they may be happy!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

MARIAN'S ELDERLY ADMIRER.

For several days after her visit to Judson's asylum, Marian remained closely within her own room, seeing no one except her grandmother.

It was exceedingly irritating to Paul Reade, but he realized that he must not make too much of a demand upon her, and that she must have time to recover from the shock that she had received. He strove to be as gentle with her as his irritation would allow, and did not force his presence on her.

And Marian appreciated the respite that he was giving her. She realized at last, when she could think of anything at all, that she was allowing herself too much time for grief, that she was indulging her sorrow at the expense of others; and summoning all her fortitude, she went one day to the luncheon-room.

Paul Reade rose with genuine welcome and kissed her.

"It has not seemed like home at all without you, pretty one. It is good to have you back. The rest has done you good. You are as dainty and fair as a child," he said impressively.

She tried to return the caress without repulsion.

"I am afraid I have been very selfish, very neglectful of you," she said unsteadily, "while you have been most thoughtful of me. But——"

"Don't make any explanation to me, my darling. Do you think I do not understand?" he interrupted, putting a little tremor into his voice that sounded very natural indeed. "I would have been so glad to have spared you, if only it had been in my power; but you must realize how useless it is to allow a misfortune to spoil all your life. Association with the outer world contains the only hope of forgetfulness, Marian."

She was trying to conceal from him how she shrank from his words, and there was really some warmth in her tone as she replied:

"Forgetfulness never can come to me, father. There is no hope of that, nor ever can be; neither do I forget the duty that I owe to you. I have not the right to burden your life further than it has been burdened. I am not going to be the death's-head at your festival."

"Then you are ready to come back into my life again?"

He could not quite conceal the eagerness of his tone, and she shivered a little as she replied:

"I am ready."

"Then you will join us tonight?"

She hesitated a moment. The effort she was making was a terrible one. It was to her as if she were turning from an open grave to join the revelers in a dance-hall; but she saw that the sacrifice must be made, and with bowed head she answered:

"Yes."

He turned away lest his countenance should betray the almost cruel satisfaction he felt; but before he left her he leaned across the back of her chair and kissed her.

"We are to put the past behind us as far as ever we can, dearest," he said, in a low voice; "and in order to do that we must be gay and try to forget. There is no time like the present to begin. There is a man whom I expect tonight, who may be of the greatest possible advantage to me in a business way. I could scarcely estimate to you his wealth; but it goes so far into the millions that it sounds like some of the old 'Arabian Nights'' stories when one tells of his extravagances. I am very anxious to obtain his good will, Marian. He has seen you, dear. I think he even met you on one occasion when you attended a ball with—one of your old friends. Will you try to look as well as you can, pretty one?"

She shrank back, paling slightly. She thought she saw his object. She thought his desire to be for her to fascinate his wealthy friend and marry him if possible, and aside from the vulgarity of a plan to marry her off, the thought of matrimony was a distinct pain to her. But she could not tell him that. She could not let this man, with whom she had so little in common, know how she suffered.

She struggled with herself for a moment, then answered:

"Yes, father, I will look the best I can."

And she kept her word.

The additional sadness in Marian's face did not detract from her beauty. On the contrary, it seemed to add a strong element of the picturesque, and the alluring, fascinating, seductive personelle had never been more appealing than as she descended to the small reception-room, when a message had been sent by her father.

He nodded his approval to her as she entered, and she smiled in return as he presented a rather elderly man whom she had met in some drawing-room during the winter before, she scarcely remembered where.

She heard the name Dwight mentioned, and then she remembered that he must be Elliott Dwight, the multi-millionaire, though there was nothing else connected with him that she could recall.

"You will excuse me for a few minutes, I am sure," her father had said, after a few platitudes had been exchanged. "There are others who require my attention. Mr. Dwight, when you have grown weary of my daughter, perhaps you will join us in the billiard-room."

"Thank you, Reade; I shall do so," the millionaire drawled condescendingly. "But one does not get an opportunity like this every day. You may only expect to see me when Miss Reade has dismissed me. I should never have the courage to leave of my own accord."

He looked sentimentally at Marian, and with a little wave of the hand, and a laugh that grated horribly on Marian, her father left them there alone.

"And you like this new life of yours better than the old?" Elliott Dwight asked, seating himself beside Marian, and looking into the exquisite face with an expression that was not good to see.

She forced a smile to her lips that she was far from feeling. There was repulsion in the very thought of allowing that man to read one emotion of her heart. Why should she allow him to think that she was not happy? What business was it of his? She was only entertaining him for her father's sake.

"Ah!" she answered, with forced animation, "what girl is there who does not enjoy life—a life that is filled with music, with flowers, with dancing? What girl does not like beautiful dresses—to be admired—to be loved? Do you think that surroundings like these awaken no emotions in the feminine breast, after years in a cottage on the banks of the Harlem River? There is nothing poetic in the Harlem River. It is not Lake Como nor Lucerne. The lights are much brighter here than the stars were there, the music is better than the sounds of the small craft on the water, and diamonds are prettier than the little flowers that grew on the banks. Oh! yes; the new life is full, the old life was empty."

How was he to know that the laugh which followed her words was the result of hysteria? How was he to know that there were the wildest tears struggling just behind it? He was not a man of any powerful discernment, and he saw nothing but lightness and frivolity in her manner and speech.

It was the correct thing, to him, for a beautiful girl to be light and frivolous. The haughty dame was the one to be neglected at home for the companionship of a dainty bit of Dresden such as he believed Marian to be. He laughed with her.

"And you like diamonds?" he asked.

"Am I a woman?" she asked archly, by way of reply.

"And horses?"

"They are a passion I have never had the opportunity to indulge."

"And theaters, and balls, and operas?"

"That is a glimpse of paradise!"

"And foreign travel?"

"That is a dream of the future."

"What place on earth would you most prefer to see?"

"You have asked a question now that would require a thousand answers. I want to see the Nile."

"Cleopatra's memory would sink into insignificance!"

"And the ruins of Troy."

"The charms of Helen would be no longer remembered!"

"I want to see India, and Austria, and Japan, and China. Oh, I want to see the world!"

"And you shall!" cried Dwight, carried away by his enthusiasm and her beauty—"you shall! All those things which you have mentioned you shall have and shall see. You shall have jewels that England's queen shall envy; you shall have such gowns as Eugenie's imagination could never have pictured: you shall have horses, and music, and laughter, and flowers, and there is not a spot on the known globe that you shall not see. Give your fancy reign, and every desire shall be gratified as if your palm held the lamp of Aladdin. Ah! there is nothing that shall be wanting—nothing in all this world, from laughter to love, my beautiful one—for I love you, and, with all this wealth of mine, the world is at your feet!"

CHAPTER XIX.

THE TRUTH REVEALED.

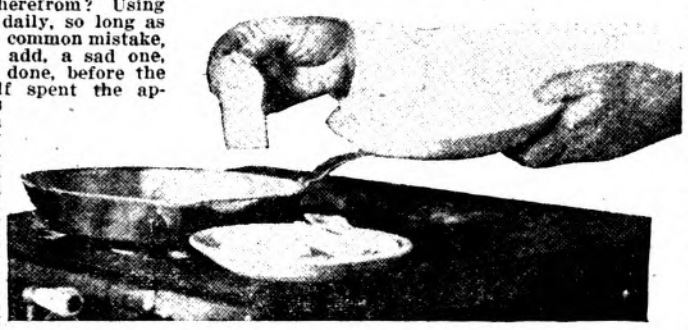
The laughter died from the beautiful face instantly, and, drawing herself up, Marian looked curiously upon her elderly admirer.

He was bending slightly toward her, with a light in his blear eyes that was not good to see. His cheeks were flushed and his hands trembled a little. While the thought of love—his love—aroused every element of disgust in the girl's nature, there was something in his earnestness that called forth her pity.

Her countenance clouded, and her animation died a natural death. She sank back into her chair, and a little shiver passed over her.

"You are very kind, Mr. Dwight," she said, gently but coldly. "I appreciate what you have said, and the honor that you have done me, but

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)



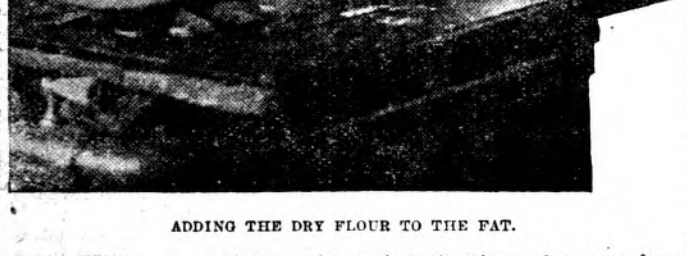
FOOD FROM FARM CELLAR AND STOREROOM

By Violet Marsh

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

MANY of the foods we should eat during the winter months are found right in the farm cellars and store-rooms, including potatoes, cabbage, beets, carrots, turnips, squash, onions, celery and apples, beside the green canned vegetables and fruits. Added to the supply of stored vegetables and canned foods, dairy products, eggs, poultry and pork are usually a part of the farm production. Mutton and lamb, readily obtainable in most farming sections, is classed with beef so far as nutritive value is concerned, and scientific investigation seems to bear out the belief that they readily digest without causing disturbance. To this may be ascribed the common use of mutton and lamb in invalid dietetics, as well as in the daily fare.

Now that we have these valuable food materials right at hand, are we making the best use of them by serving well-balanced meals therefrom? Using canned foods daily, so long as they last, is a common mistake, and, I might add, a sad one, for if this is done, before the winter is half spent the appetite lags and the health of the family seems threatened. Canned berries and other fruits, be they ever so palatable, will soon become unsatisfying if served too frequently. Occasionally someone will say: "I don't can as much fruit as I used to; my family seem to care little about it." In most such cases, if we could "look within," it would be found that this indifference to canned fruit was due to monotony, and that it never would have occurred had the fruit been sometimes made into puddings with tapioca, gelatine or corn-starch, or into shortcakes, or into pudding sauces to be served on warm simple cakes, or rice.

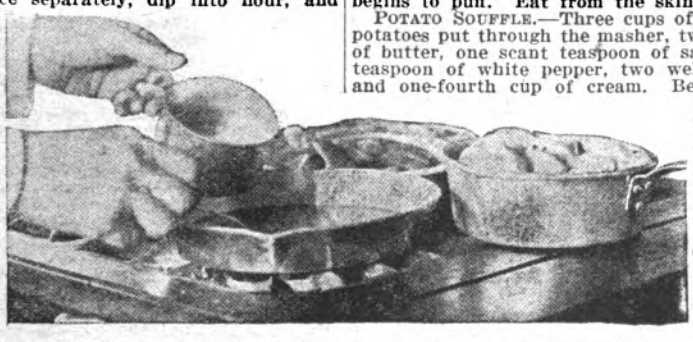


I DIP EACH SLICE OF PORK INTO DRY FLOUR AND PLACE IN STEW-PAN.

To keep well, the body must be supplied with a variety of foods, in which whole grains, fruits, vegetables and milk, which are rich in minerals and the vitamines which are absolutely essential to health, and even to life itself. Use sugar and meat in moderation, and with especial care if the body is acid. Use a variety of cereals including oats and cracked whole wheat. Save and utilize the water in which vegetables are cooked, otherwise their effectiveness is greatly reduced through the loss of mineral content. For this reason, vegetable stews should be served several times a week, and if well made and varied the family will never tire of them.

Raw cabbage soaked in cold water until crisp, then finely shredded and served with a boiled or French dressing, is a very valuable food during the winter season when fresh salad materials are scarce. Properly prepared it is delicious, besides having a high mineral content.

In the carrot we have another valuable food which contains the power of blood-purifying, and ranks next to spinach in content of iron. The onion is another important vegetable and should be freely used plain, in cream and in stews. The potato is a good food, yet alone it will not induce physical vigor, and should daily be accompanied with another vegetable.



ADDING THE DRY FLOUR TO THE FAT.

Use milk and eggs daily. For children who have little appetite for breakfast, you cannot do better than to give them a beaten egg in a glass of milk just before starting off for school. Use each child's favorite flavoring, whether it is a dash of cinnamon, a little vanilla or cooked cocoa. Children cannot concentrate their minds if the stomach is empty.

Fried Pork as a Relish

There is nothing new about fried salt pork, for its use is traceable some generations back, but how many know the secret of frying salt pork so that it may be classed as a tempting relish to be served in cold weather with potatoes and other vegetables? The process is very simple, as shown in the accompanying illustration.

Cut the pork in thin slices, pour hot water over them, let stand half a minute, and drain. Take each slice separately, dip into flour, and place in a frying-pan over a moderate heat at first. When the pork begins to fry, turn each slice. The heat may be somewhat increased but never to a point where the flour will burn. Cook until crisp and a golden brown, and remove from the fat. Pour off all but three tablespoons of the fat, smooth into this three tablespoons of dry flour, and when it begins to cook, add gradually one and one-half cup of hot milk, stirring constantly. Cook until it thickens, season with pepper, and a little salt if necessary. Serve separately, or pour it over the pork. The illustrated heading of this article shows a very attractive arrangement of fried pork in the center of a platter, and surrounded on either side by steam-cooked potatoes and carrots. At the right is a dish of baked tart apples, the proper accompaniment to pork.

GRADUALLY POUR THE HOT MILK INTO THE FLOUR AND FAT.

Seasonable Dishes for the Home Table

STUFFED ROAST PORK.—Lay piece of spareribs in baking tin rib-side up. Cover with a dressing made as follows: Two cups of stale bread-crumbs, one-half cup of chopped celery, one-half cup of chopped tart apple, one-half pound of raw sausage meat, one well-beaten egg, a little pepper and salt. Add no water to the pan unless the oven becomes too hot, which should be avoided. Pork to be tender and of the right flavor must cook slowly; twenty-five minutes to the pound. Baste frequently with the drippings.

CORNED MUTTON.—Rub one and one-half cup of salt into a ten-pound piece of mutton, covering every portion, and let it stand 24 hours. Mix together three-fourths cup of brown sugar, one tablespoon of saltpeter, one-half tablespoon of baking soda, and a little lukewarm water. Lay the meat in a stone crock and slowly pour over it this mixture, wetting every part. Cover the meat with cold water and let it stand three or four days.

SCOTCH HOT POT.—Cut three pounds of mutton in small pieces and brown in a little fat, then remove to the kettle in which the stew is to be made, adding the bones. In the same frying-pan put a little more fat and cook for five minutes two sliced onions, four sliced carrots, and one medium-sized turnip cut into dice; add to meat. Put one quart of boiling water into the frying-pan with one-third cup of pearl barley and simmer until the barley has begun to cook, then pour over the meat and vegetables. Lastly add one bunch of celery cut fine and two grated potatoes, season with pepper and salt and cover closely. Add more water if necessary. Cook very slowly four hours in the oven.

POTATOES BAKED IN MILK.—Peel and slice raw potatoes very thin. Place a layer in the bottom of a deep baking dish, dot with small pieces of butter and a light sprinkling of salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until the dish is three-fourths full, or until the potato is used, and just cover with whole milk. Bake about one hour after the milk begins to simmer, but do not allow the dish to boil. When done, the top will be a golden brown.

If a potato scallop is desired, cover each layer of potato with a sprinkling of flour, and follow directions as given above.

LYONNAISE POTATOES.—Slowly fry one thinly-sliced onion in two tablespoons of pork fat until soft and a little colored, then add about one pint of freshly-boiled potatoes cut into cubes; season with pepper and salt, a little lemon juice and chopped parsley, and stir gently with a fork until the mixture is hot.

FRIED ONIONS AND POTATOES.—Fry sliced salt pork until crisp and remove from the fat, which should be about one-eighth of an inch deep in the frying-pan. Put a generous layer of thinly-sliced onion in the pan and slowly cook about fifteen minutes, then add the raw sliced potato, salt and pepper. Stir well, add boiling water until it comes about half way to the top of potato, cover tightly and set on the back of stove where it will cook slowly. When done, the water will be entirely evaporated. Stir frequently from the bottom of pan while the potatoes are cooking. More pork fat may be used if desired.

STUFFED POTATOES.—Select fine large potatoes and bake until tender but not overdone. Cut off the ends, scoop out the contents and mash with butter, cream, salt and pepper, and a little grated cheese if desired. Return the prepared potato to the skins, piling it high at the open end. Set potatoes into a baking tin with open ends uppermost and place in a hot oven until the potato begins to puff. Eat from the skins.

POTATO SOUFFLE.—Three cups of freshly-boiled potatoes put through the masher, two tablespoons of butter, one scant teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of white pepper, two well-beaten eggs, and one-fourth cup of cream. Beat hard until light and creamy, spread on a well-buttered pie tin and bake until a golden brown. Serve at once.

ONIONS COOKED IN CREAM.—Boil onions twenty minutes, drain and use the water in a vegetable stew. Place onions in a double boiler with one cup of medium cream to about one quart of onions. Add salt and pepper and cook until soft. If a cream sauce is desired, when the onions are nearly soft, add hot milk, and about two level tablespoons each of butter and flour mixed together. Stir carefully, so not to break the onions and finish cooking.

CARROTS AND PEAS.—Scrape carrots, cut into dice, cover with boiling water and cook until tender and the water is nearly boiled away. Add an equal amount of drained canned peas, pepper, salt and butter to flavor, and serve as soon as boiling hot. The canned peas will harden if given much cooking. If a cream sauce is desired, prepare same as in previous recipe.

BEAN AND HOMINY CAKES.—Combine equal parts of boiled hominy and cooked beans, either baked or stewed, and put through the potato masher. Season with salt and pepper, add one beaten egg to every two cupfuls, and enough cream to shape into cakes. Roll in flour and fry brown. Delicious with cold meats.

VEGETABLE SAUSAGE CAKES.—One cup of cold mixed vegetables, one-half cup of cold cooked meat, and one slice of onion chopped together very fine. Add a pinch of poultry seasoning, pepper and salt, and enough gravy or cream to shape into cakes. Leftovers stuffing can be utilized in these cakes. Roll in fine crumbs and fry in hot fat.

USING LEFTOVER BAKED BEANS.—Put equal amounts of fresh-boiled potatoes and baked beans through the food chopper, season with a little melted butter, salt and pepper, and add two well-beaten eggs to a rounding quart of the mixture. Put into a deep, well-greased baking dish, sprinkle with bread-crumbs and dot with butter. Bake forty minutes in a hot oven. Serve with a sauce made as follows: One cup of tomato juice, one cup of water, one tablespoon of scraped onion brought to a boil and thickened with two tablespoons of flour mixed with two of butter. Season with salt and pepper and simmer ten minutes.

CORN OYSTERS.—Grind one can of corn very fine, add two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoon of sugar, one-third teaspoon of salt, and one tablespoon of melted butter. Mix well together and add enough flour alternately with the liquid from the corn to make a soft batter. If the corn is dry, use a little milk. Drop into hot fat by the teaspoonful and fry until a golden brown.

VEGETABLE STEW.—Soak one pint of lima beans over night. In the morning slip the skins from them, add a piece of bacon or salt pork about two inches square, one pint of diced potatoes, two sliced onions, one-half cup each of sliced carrot, turnip and celery. Cover well with boiling water, and as soon as the stew begins to boil, cover closely and cook slowly for two hours. Have one-third cup of rice cooking in a separate dish, adding it to the stew when half done. Season with salt and pepper. Bacon gives the stew a delicious flavor, or a ham bone may be used instead.

Desserts and Other Dainties

CHARLOTTE RUSSE.—While one pint of milk is coming to a boil, beat three egg yolks until creamy and then beat in three tablespoons of sugar and one-fourth teaspoon of salt. Pour the hot milk over the egg mixture, beat and return to fire and while continually stirring, cook until the custard will coat the spoon. If cooked a minute too long the custard will curdle. Remove from fire and stir in one tablespoon of gelatine which has been soaked twenty minutes in three tablespoons of cold milk. When the custard begins to stiffen, beat in one teaspoon of vanilla and one-third teaspoon of almond extract, then beat in the whites of three eggs which have been beaten stiff and dry. Arrange around the sides of a deep glass dish thin slices of plain white or sponge cake, and pour in the mixture. Serve with a cold sauce made as follows: One cup of canned berries, with juice, two tablespoons of lemon juice, one-half cup of cold water, and sugar to taste. Bring to a boil, and stir in one rounding teaspoon of corn-starch wet with a little cold water. Cook three minutes.

HOT PUDDING SAUCE.—One-half cup of fruit jam or marmalade and one and a half cup of boiling water simmered together until well mixed. Add a little lemon juice to give character if the fruit is too sweet, or a little sugar if too acid. Slowly pour this hot mixture over the white of one egg which has been beaten to a stiff froth, beating constantly.

INDIAN AND SQUASH PUDDING.—Bring one pint of milk to a scald and stir in four tablespoons of fine corn-meal previously wet with cold water. Cook five minutes and take from fire. Beat in two cups of cooked and sifted squash, one-half cup of molasses, one-half cup of sugar, one teaspoon of salt, grated rind of half a lemon, one fourth teaspoon each of cinnamon and ginger, two tablespoons of butter, or three of finely-chopped suet, one-half cup of seedless raisins, two well-beaten eggs, and three and one-half cups of cold milk. Stir well and bake from three to four hours in a very slow oven.

CARROT AND APPLE BUTTER.—Measure one quart of tart apples after they are cut into small pieces without peel or cores being removed. Add water enough for them to cook in, and when soft put through a wire strainer. Add to the strained apple, one pint of grated raw carrot, three cups of sugar and the grated rind and juice of one lemon. Slowly cook until thick and clear.

MOUSSES.—This is a dish that can be made in winter without ice and salt, provided the temperature is freezing. Mousse is frozen without stirring, and about six hours should be allowed for freezing. The cream must be whipped and after standing a short time spooned into another dish from the top, as any liquid that may settle out will make the mousse imperfect.

Maple Mousse is one of the best. Heat one-half cup of maple syrup and slowly pour it over the well-beaten yolk of one egg. Beat one cup of heavy cream, and if there is any chance of liquid settling out, skim off as above described; also beat stiff and dry the white of one egg, then combine cream and egg and add to the maple mixture. When blended, pack in salt and ice, or set in the snow outside to freeze. Strong coffee may be substituted for the syrup, and should be sweetened while hot.

A Free Book

We have prepared a very beautiful book describing scores of ways to make up

JELL-O

"America's Most Famous Dessert"

IN particular we want everybody to know the many delicious dishes that may be made up by whipping Jell-O—for Jell-O can be whipped just as cream is whipped. Write to-day for a free copy of the book.

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD COMPANY, Le Roy, N. Y.

Saffron Rose

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3.)

"Three thousand five hundred awaits me in the hand of Hop Keen."

"Wait here. I will find the money. But it is too much. The girl is younger than I expected."

The fluttering heart of Li Lu. The hungry look of Hung Lung, as if he would take, if he dared, the first tastes of the wares he was on the point of delivering to Peek Noe. In the old Street of Many Small Houses, at Lily Hill kitchens also, Li Lu had heard dark whisperings of the older gossips concerning the fate that sometimes came to Chinese girls like her. So she knew without knowing. She dreaded, trembled; but stood with downcast eyes, awaiting, outwardly untroubled. Inwardly she was white hot with angry rebellion against her father, against Hung Lung, against this terrifying Peek Noe, whose pinching burned her cheek, and most particularly against the lying gods.

The prospective buyer's fat figure came sidewise through the shack door. In her hands were two bags and a small flat package. Li Lu saw. By the dim light of the shut-out late afternoon sun dirty yellowbacks and greenbacks, bright gold, worn silver pieces were counted and recounted and counted again. Hung Lung left, grinning, and with a covetous backward glance at the newly-acquired property of Peek Noe. And now, with accurate intuition, the slave girl guessed at the meaning of this last business transaction over her youthful body.

TO BE CONTINUED IN FEBRUARY NUMBER.

Cubby Bear's Birthday

By Lena B. Ellingwood

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"OH, what is this pretty thing, here in your work-basket, Grandma Bear?" asked Cubby, his eyes wide with interest. "It looks like a necktie for a little bear."

"Yes, Cubby Bear," sighed Grandma, but she smiled, too. "Yes, it is a necktie I made for you. I meant to keep it a secret for your birthday, but since you have found it, you may as well have it now. Let me tie it on you, and see how it looks."

"Oh, thank you, Grandma Bear. It is beautiful!" cried Cubby, and stood smiling proudly while it was tied around his neck. A beautiful necktie it was indeed, of a bright green color, with yellow stripes and black dots.

"Keep it on until dinner-time, so your mother can see how fine you are," Grandma Bear told him, for Mamma Bruin was out looking for elecampane, a plant which she needed for medicine, and would not be home before noon.

When she came, she praised the new tie as much as Cubby could wish, and they all sat down to eat dinner.

"Oh, look!" said Grandma Bear, when they had finished, "there is a spot of grease on your tie."

"Oh, oh!" mourned Cubby. "Have I spoiled it, Grandma Bear?"

"No, it is not spoiled," Mamma Bruin told him. "I can wash it, and it will be as good as ever."

The tie was washed and hung out on the line to dry, but when Cubby went to bring it in, at night, it had disappeared.

He looked all around, on the ground and among the bushes near by, but no trace of it could he find.

"It is lost, lost!" he cried, running into the house, and threw himself on the floor and wept.

Mamma Bruin went out and searched, too, but not a single yellow stripe or black dot of that birthday necktie was to be seen.

In vain they tried to comfort him. He lay on the floor, sobbing. It was not until Mamma Bruin promised that he might have a party on his birthday that his tears were dried.

"That will be three days from now," said Cubby. "I shall be glad to have a party, but I shall have to wear my old red necktie!"

Next day he was out walking, planning, all by himself, about the party, and to whom he would send invitations. A little way off, in the woods, he saw Wollie Woodchuck, Racky Coon and Minnie Mink, standing close together. Wollie seemed to be showing something to the others. Cubby started toward them, when Wollie Woodchuck looked up, saw him, and turned to run away.

As Wollie turned, Cubby saw, with a gasp of horror, that Wollie was wearing a new necktie; a green necktie, with stripes of yellow, and dots of black!

"My own birthday necktie!" thought Cubby Bear. "Oh, yes, it must be. Surely no other tie was ever like that one, so bright and beautiful!"

He had no heart to talk with Racky Coon and Minnie Mink, though they called to him. He walked sadly on by himself, thinking.

"Oh, oh, I never thought that Wollie would do a thing like that. My necktie was out on the line—Wollie must have seen it, and liked it; liked it so much he—no, no, Wollie would not steal!"

But why did he run away? As he thought about the matter, Cubby grew angry.

"Ye-es!" he said to himself. "Wollie ran off because he did not want me to see him wearing my necktie! I know what I will do. I will leave him out of my birthday party. How can I ever be friendly with him again?"

He said nothing to anyone about it, but worried over the matter until next day. Then, meeting Racky Coon, he asked,

"Why did Wollie Woodchuck run off so quickly yesterday when he saw me coming? And what was he showing you?"

"Why, why," stammered Racky, looking down at the ground instead of at Cubby, "I—I am afraid I cannot tell you, Cubby Bear."

Cubby went home, and began making out his list for the party guests. Wollie's name was not on the list, and Cubby hesitated before deciding to ask Racky Coon and Minnie Mink.

The birthday morning dawned, and Cubby rose early from his little bed.

"The sun is shining, and it will be a fine day," said Mamma Bruin.

Strange to say, Cubby Bear did not feel happy. He had invited everyone he could think of to his birthday party, even Foxy Reynard and Woozie Weasel, everyone but Wollie Woodchuck, who had been his friend so long!

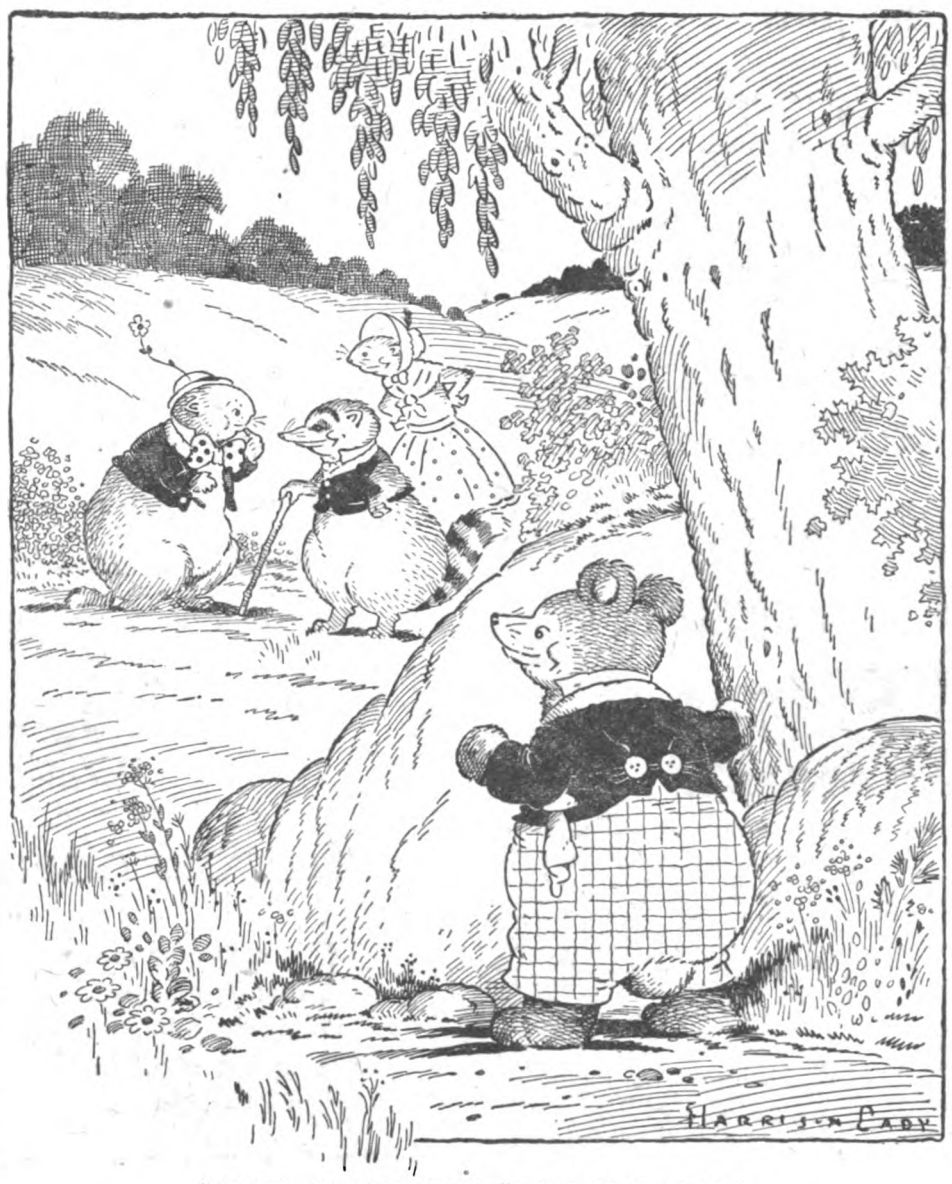
With paws in his pockets, he strolled along the forest path.

He began to think of possible excuses for Wollie.

"Perhaps the wind blew the necktie off the line. If Wollie found it lying somewhere on the ground, how could he know whose it was? But then, I remember there was no wind that night. Dear, dear, dear! how I wish I could know all about it!"

Shinyblack Crow came hopping along the path, the sun bringing out shining purple shades on his black wings.

"Good morning, and a happy birthday to you, Cubby Bear," he cawed. "Why do you look so sober? One would think you would be all smiles today."



"Oh, Shinyblack Crow," begged Cubby, "will you please try to find Wollie Woodchuck for me, and tell him I want him to come to my party?"

"You told me yesterday you had invited everyone," said Shinyblack Crow. "How did you happen to leave Wollie Woodchuck out?"

"I will tell you," said Cubby. "But—but—I don't know," he added dismally. "If Wollie should come to my party wearing my necktie, then Mamma Bruin and Grandma Bear would think he stole it, and I don't want them to think so badly of him. I have always liked Wollie, though some of the animals and birds laugh at him and call him slow and stupid."

"Whatever can you mean?" asked Shinyblack Crow. "Why in the world should Wollie Woodchuck wear your necktie?"

"Oh, I forgot I had not told you," said Cubby.

"MY OWN BIRTHDAY NECKTIE!" THOUGHT CUBBY BEAR.

"You see, it was like this." And he told the whole story of the necktie Grandma Bear had made, how Mamma Bruin washed it to get out a spot of grease, how it had disappeared from the line, and how Wollie Woodchuck had worn the tie and run away when he saw Cubby Bear. He ended by asking, "Now, what do you think about it?"

Shinyblack Crow rubbed his sharp beak thoughtfully with his claw before answering.

"I think," he said, "that it looks bad for Wollie, but I did not think he would steal. I will find him and tell him you want him to come to the party. Then, if he is guilty, I think he will want to stay away. At any rate, you will feel better to ask him."

So saying, he flew away. Cubby Bear did feel better, as his wise friend had said, and went home to help Mamma Bruin get ready for the afternoon.

When he dressed for the party, he got out his old red necktie, and looked at it sadly.

"I hate to wear it," he sighed. "It is old and worn, and does not look like party clothes a bit."

Grandma Bear tied it round his neck, being careful to fold it so the worst worn places were out of sight.

"It will do very well," she said, patting his head kindly. "Forget all about it, and have a good time this afternoon."

Wollie Woodchuck came to the party, smiling and happy, with the other woods people. Foxy Reynard was the only one invited who did not come. There were so many, Mamma Bruin's house could not hold them all, but, as it was a fine day, they were quite as happy out of doors.

"I have a birthday present for you, Cubby Bear," said Wollie, who had been carefully holding something behind him. "Here it is." And he held it out, in both paws, smiling.

Wollie's present was a lovely little basket, oval in shape, and with a long handle, woven of rushes which grew in Blue Bittern's swamp, and ornamented with red rose-haws from the wild-briar rose.

Cubby took the basket, and examined it with delight.

"Oh, thank you," he said. "How could you ever make it so beautifully?"

"I could not have done it alone," answered Wollie. "My paws are too awkward, but Racky Coon helped me with it."

"And what is this inside it, wrapped in a grape leaf?" was Cubby's next question.

"Unwrap it and see," Wollie told him.

Cubby unfolded the grape leaf, and there, inside it, was his birthday necktie, every yellow stripe shining against the green, every black dot round and clear.

"Oh!" he faltered, quite at a loss for words. "Oh, I——" and he really blushed, under his fur, for Wollie—poor, bad Wollie, who must feel so ashamed, returning what he had stolen. Cubby would forgive him, oh, yes, indeed, since he was sorry, and of course he must be sorry, or he would not have brought the necktie back.

However, Wollie did not look guilty.

"I must tell you all about the necktie," said Wollie. "I did not know until Shinyblack Crow told me this morning, that the tie belonged to you, Cubby Bear. Foxy Reynard gave it to me——"

"Foxy Reynard? Then he was the one who took it from the line! I never thought of him! But why did he give it to you, I wonder? Why did he not wear it himself?"

"He would not dare," said Wollie. "He was up to his old, bad tricks, of course, giving me the tie so you would think I stole it. He wanted to make trouble between us. He told me a friend of his, whose life he once saved, gave it to him a long time ago, and he put it away in his den, because the bright colors did not look well with his red fur. But he told me I looked very handsome in it, and I—why, I was foolish enough to believe he meant what he said."

"Oh, that bad, bad Foxy!" sighed Cubby. "I wish he would be good. Now I see why he did not come to my party today. But," he added, his face clouding over, "why did you run away that day when you were talking with Racky and Minnie, and saw me coming?"

"Why," explained Wollie, "Racky and I were showing Minnie your birthday basket, which we had just finished, and of course I did not want you to see it."

"Yes," said Racky, who, with Shinyblack Crow, was listening, "we were all planning to give you a surprise party, Cubby Bear, before you invited us to come, and we were talking about it then."

"Now put the necktie on, and let us see how fine you look in it."

"Oh, I am so glad, so glad," cried Cubby, "that I invited you to my party, Wollie Woodchuck, before I knew that Foxy was the one to blame!"

CONTENTS

	Page
Editorial	2
The New Year Resolution	3
Saffron Rose—A Slave Girl (concluded in February)	3
Stella Rosevelt (continued)	4
Comfort Sisters' Corner and Recipes	5
Love Will Find the Way (continued)	6
Food from Farm Cellar and Storeroom	7
Cubby Bear's Birthday	8
Crumbs of Comfort	8
Comfort's League of Cousins	9
The Pretty Girls' Club	11
Something New for the Church Fair	12
A New Year Interlude	14
Mother and Baby	16
Old and New Designs for Patchwork Quilts and Attractive Modern Applique	18 & 19
Prize Awards in Comfort's Applique and Patchwork Contest	20
Talks with Girls	22
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps	23
Poultry Farming for Women	24
The Modern Farmer	25
Making Good Health a Habit	26
Home Lawyer	27
Family Doctor	28
Veterinary Information	29
Information Bureau	31
Manners and Looks	33
The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities	35
Four Wheel Chairs in December	35

All Subscriptions Cut Off At Expiration

All subscriptions will be cut short off on date of expiration, unless the subscriptions are renewed and paid for. Not even one copy will be sent, after expiration, until the subscription is renewed. If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 399, it means that this is the last copy of COMFORT you will receive until you renew your subscription. DO IT TODAY.

FEBRUARY COMFORT

Our big mid-winter Peace Number will be packed full of interesting, entertaining and instructive matter, including an account of what is being done in the interest of world peace and prosperity by the greatest history-making conference ever assembled. The following are some of the Special Features for February

"The Conference for Limitation of Armaments" The Conference now in session at Washington, composed of representatives of nine nations that control the destinies of the world, is working wonders for peace and good will among all peoples.

"St. Valentine's Afterglow" A cute valentine romance in which a pert little flapper handles the situation in a masterful fashion.

"The Spellbinders" An amusing and inspiring account of how Abraham Lincoln, as a young lawyer, protected the great actor, Joe Jefferson, from persecution by a ranting clergyman.

"The Boy Who Had Never Seen an Indian" Thrilling story of youthful George Washington's first encounter with hostile Indians.

"A Cobweb Party for St. Valentine's Day" Full details of a pretty and unique entertainment.

"Fish as a Winter Food" How to prepare, cook and serve various kinds of fish—their food values.

"St. Valentine's Day" Strange facts and fiction concerning St. Valentine and the celebration of his birthday.

"Cubby Bear's Pride" Cubby Bear finds some wonderful treasures that make him foolishly proud and "stuck up."

If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 399 it means that your subscription expires with this present issue and that you will not receive February COMFORT unless you renew your subscription at once—we can not send you a single copy, after expiration, until you have renewed. Don't miss February COMFORT.

Save money by renewing and extending your subscription two or three years. Use coupon below and do it today.

Please send bills or silver carefully wrapped in paper and securely sealed, or post-office money order. If obliged to send postage-stamps, send two-cent stamps.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: 50 cents a year, $1.00 for three years, 75 cents for a TWO-YEAR renewal, in U. S. and Cuba. (In Canada 65 cents a year.)

SUBSCRIPTION COUPON FOR RENEWAL OR EXTENSION

Publisher of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

I enclose ..... cents for renewal and extension of my subscription ..... full years from date of expiration.

Date..... Name.....

Post Office..... Street and No......

R. F. D. No...... Box No...... State.....

January, 1922.

Crumbs of Comfort

Time is the greatest asset.

Haste is a confession of neglect.

Gratitude is the heart's memory.

A good leader is a good follower.

Every evening we are poorer by a day.

Good deeds erect a lasting monument.

Our heart has the age of what it loves.

Mistakes are opportunities for learning.

Courtesy costs little, but is worth much.

The man that makes character makes foes as well.

Success is only the climax of intelligent effort.

A pessimist is the critic of everybody save himself.

The remedy for failure or despair is always within us.

The great empires of the past were founded on force and perished.

Be generous in feeding your mind; nourish it and care for it well.

Place a high value on yourself, and then prove that you are worth it.

The only genuine superiority is that of the mind or character.

Men who believe that they have found God feel little need of culture.

The block of granite which is an obstacle to the weak may become a stepping-stone in the progress of the strong.

The difference between rising at five and seven in the morning for forty years is equivalent to adding ten years to life.

There will alway be crooked paths for us to follow if we are content to walk in the footprints of others and do not make our own trail.

Genuine happiness and enduring prosperity can come to the world only as men and women learn to love and labor and sacrifice together.

Advice should be gently given, for hearts are like flowers, which open to the softly falling dew, but are closed to a violent downpour of rain.

Youth is not like a new garment which we can keep fresh by wearing sparingly. While we have youth we must wear it daily and so it cannot last long.

Every man has a little ability of some kind. The difference between success and failure in life is just the way in which varying abilities are put to work.

The books from which we draw culture are not alone the product of the scholar and the thinker, but of rude unlettered men in forest and at forge who have helped to make the pages by their toil.

We can lay up in our minds a store of thoughts which can be a living treasure of knowledge always with us, and from which, amid the shifting of time and circumstances we can be sure of drawing comfort, guidance and sympathy.

LEAGUE RULES: To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged. To be kind to dumb animals. To love our country and protect its flag.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE LISHA

COMFORT for one year and admittance to the League of Cousins for only 55 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome. ADDRESS all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. See Instructions at the close of this Department.

I WILL have to say "Happy New Year" very loud if all of you are to hear me—from cousin Fred Goetz in Cornelius, Oregon, for instance, down to cousin Gladys Kellenes at Fort Pierce, Florida. It will be a long way between greetings, but with the strongest of shouts I wish you all the happiest possible 1922. Now all listen! Well, I hope my wishes will find your hearts even if they have to fail to reach your far-off ears.

There seem to be always plenty of years in stock, and they come marching on so regularly that we are apt to take their entrances and exits as a matter of course—simply throwing away our old calendar and hanging up another. Yet the coming of a new year should mean a great deal to all of us. I like to think of it as a big volume of 365 shining blank pages laid before me. No matter what blots and erasures we have had to make in the soiled volume of 1921 finished and ready to put on the shelf, here we have plenty of room and a new chance given us to do better and to write again—I hope with a steadier hand and a cleaner heart. In practicing with the capital letters, you might try writing Love, Truth and Humility on the first white page of 1922's Album of Days. It is a pretty safe conclusion that if you learn to write these words correctly spelled, without flourishes, and at least twenty-four times in each day, you will have a much more perfect volume to file away when the time comes to put this new 1922 up alongside of the old 1921 in Time's Public Library. We must be careful to remember that the New Year Book is a blank one. It is not a volume coming to us already filled with happy pages or sorry ones waiting to be read; with songs of prosperity of grievous tales of want. The book of 1922 is going to be just what we ourselves make it. It is for us to take the pen of our life in hand and write as best we may. And because God is a kind teacher and honest tears the best of erasers, we need not fear if we find we are making more blots and errors than we bravely planned when we started the first clean page. I'll think of each of you on New Year's Day as taking up your pen and writing the first word with a smile.

UNCLE LISHA.

It is certain that if you keep your 1922 Day Book with as much care as Billy assumes toward his photograph album of the cousins, there will be few mistakes for which you will have to reproach yourself at the end of the year. I thought of this as I just saw Bill neatly and methodically pasting into place a charming photograph of Cousin Lorena Thrush of Olivia, Minnesota. Lorena sent in this picture begging me to give the message that she had been almost buried by letters and must ask the cousins to forgive her for not being able to answer all those who wrote to her after her letter appeared in the August number of COMFORT.

As Bill carefully closed his album and licked a drop of photo paste from the end of his nose, he said: "How about your picture being in COMFORT, Uncle Lisha? The cousins are all asking about it, you know. I think you ought to satisfy their curiosity,"—and he added with a sly grin—"even though they may be disappointed."

I did not think this dig of Bill's deserved a reply and kept my back turned as I banged away at my typewriter. But Bill has been talking a lot of late about having my picture come out in COMFORT. In fact, he has not hesitated to hint rather broadly that he himself would not object to making a public appearance before the cousins. I know for certain that he has asked the price of "sittings" at several downtown studios. It is because I knew of his secret hankering to exhibit his intelligent profile that I have kept it a deep secret that I had been "shot" by a friendly photographer and was to make my bow to the Family with the New Year. I knew that Billy would have put in a plea for a group portrait if he had learned of any definite plans on my part. Now the real truth is that I would not dare print Bill's picture at present. Living in the same household with him, it has taken me the whole of twelve months to realize how true a heart lies back of his gray whiskers, and how kindly a light really shines in his eyes under his shaggy brows. But these redeeming qualities would not show in a photograph, particularly one with the sort of pose Bill would be sure to adopt for the occasion. And to speak mildly, his everyday "toot enscramble" (as the French call it) is rather ferociously forbidding. It is certain that he does not look like "Happy New Year." So I'm leaving him out and will have to endure some sarcastic reproaches arising from his disappointment at being left unreproduced and unrepresented. Perhaps his expression may grow more gentle and "photographable" as the years go by. I certainly hope so.

Many of the cousins have written kind letters suggesting that my picture appear at the head of the League's department in COMFORT. To these I want to say that just as Uncle Charlie's life and spirit can never be separated from the League he founded, so I believe that his picture should not disappear from the place it has filled so long. It is enough that our hearts should be empty. I am sure that all the cousins will appreciate exactly how I feel regarding this, especially now that I have satisfied what was a part of their wish—that they might have a chance to see a picture of their new Uncle. At my dead friend's last request, I became the head of the work he began many years ago and cherished for so long, but to me, despite my new honors, it still remains (as I used to think of it during his lifetime) "Uncle Charlie's big and happy Family." I want his likeness still to remain with us as founder of our League. But in not making this change, I want you to know that you have made Uncle Lisha very happy by your loyal acceptance of his new leadership during the past year. When you look at my picture this month, imagine me as thinking of this and wishing you all love and happiness as we begin 1922 together.

And now for the letters:

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

Although I have for years been a reader of COMFORT, this is the first time I venture to write to your department. Before I go any further, let me describe myself: I have gray eyes and auburn hair, a healthy complexion and weigh 80 pounds. I was twelve years old in June. Say, Unky, why don't you describe yourself? You needn't be afraid; I should like you, no matter what you look like. Yes, Unky, I would like—no, love you, even if your hair hung to your shoulders, and you had a beard and eyebrows like bottles of blackest ink. If you ever come out this way, won't you come and spend a few hours with me? There would be for lunch a big plate of doughnuts, a big brown square of uncut gingerbread, and a pitcher of ice-cold buttermilk. When you had been refreshed we would go for a walk in the woods and stop at the Birch Pool and throw stones at the frogs just to see them splash. Then when we got back to "the place called home" we would get us a cool fresh glass of clear water. Uncle, won't you come and see me? I'm not like most girls; I'd rather take a dip in the Birch Pool or the Glimmerglass (both are brooks) than to go to a movie that's all the "rage," whatever that may mean. I'm not ashamed to acquire a coat of tan, to go barefoot, or to walk the pigpen fence or—anything that most girls would scorn. And, Unky, let me tell you this I do NOT use the powder puff. Well, I've written long enough. Love to you and all the cousins.

Your niece, JUDY.

I am a deeply disappointed Uncle, Judy, and you are the cause. As soon as I read your letter and heard about the gingerbread, the buttermilk, and the chance to walk with you to such charmingly named spots as the Birch Pool and Glimmerglass, I hustled at once to accept your invitation for a visit. I hastily told Billy to get out my suitcase and while I was packing he might go down and get our tickets at the Consolidated Ticket offices. "Where to, Uncle?" said Billy calmly and, as I remember now, with a bit of a malicious grin.

"Why, to get the gingerbread—I mean to see Judy, of course. Her letter will tell you where she lives."

"Well, if it does, Uncle, it hasn't revealed anything of the sort yet," replied Billy cheerfully—for he doesn't like gingerbread, anyway.

And there, Judy, was the sad fact! I looked all over, up and down and inside and out of your letter. I could not find a thing to tell me where between Portland, Maine, and Portland, Oregon, you might be dwelling, nibbling doughnuts, dipping your ten pink barefoot toes in rippling Glimmerglass, and in between times walking on the pigpen fence. You'll never know what a disappointment this was to me, Judy. I tried to conceal it from Billy and pretend I didn't much care; but all the afternoon I kept hitting two keys instead of one on my typewriter—for I was seeing in between me and the machine dark sugary hunks of gingerbread, the gleam of Glimmerglass, and the shadows of green trees in the Birch Pool. Even now I feel so badly about it that I cannot write you the description of myself you want. And of course having no address I cannot even send you my large 12 by 14 photograph showing my inkbottle beard and eyebrows which you seem to somehow have found out about. How could you disappoint me so, Judy? How could you? To dangle all the joys which you did before my eyes—and stomach—and then leave me lonely and gingerbreadless in a city whose nearest Glimmerglass is the Gowanus Canal!

BAKER, MONTANA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

Here comes a letter from the wild and woolly West. We have taken COMFORT for some time and like it very much. I live on a ranch of 1,640 acres, seven miles from Baker, the Golden Gate to the Treasure State. My chief sports are breaking bronchos and hunting.

Say, Uncle, you ought to be out here in the summer and I'm sure we could have a grand time. I killed twelve rattlesnakes this summer. I would like to send you one of the rattles, Uncle, but I am afraid Billy would see it and it would spoil his appetite for Western letters. So I will send it sometime when I write again and then he will be a little more prepared for it.

There is an oil boom in this part of the state and several companies are getting ready to start in the spring.

I suppose you would like to know what I look like: I am five feet, four inches tall, weigh 130 pounds, have auburn hair and blue eyes, and am twenty-two years old. I am very lonesome and would like to hear from some of the cousins—so do not let Billy get this letter.

Your nephew, JOHN FLO.

I'm sorry for you, John, out there all alone on a ranch two or three miles square with nothing but rattlers for neighbors. No wonder you get sore and go out and bust a few bronchos once in a while, or take your gun and shoot a new oil well. There wasn't a bit of need for you to worry about any set of number twelve rattles scaring Billy. He went rattlesnake hunting with me this summer to an old deserted stone quarry on a mountain top. We didn't find any snakes lying around loose in the sun, but Bill told me that it was his intention of capturing them by catching their tails in his mouth and snapping their heads against a handy rock. I was much annoyed that the snakes kept out of sight, for I was very anxious to see Bill perform this trick.

John, you have a most advantageous position—being only seven miles from the golden gate. I know lots of folks who seem to me to be about seven thousand miles from this happy entrance. I suppose being so near by, if you get too lonesome, you can watch your chance and just slip in when the Gate is opened extra wide to let some portly Montana copper capitalist through.

I have given you a special registry number, John, which makes you Number 16789 in the Red-Haired Division of our League. Yes, I know you called it auburn, but the distinction is a difficult one. In our Red-Haired Division, John, 16746 were originally described as having auburn head covering. Auburn-red hair is a dangerous thing to own and I must warn you to be careful. Cousin Augustus Trick had auburn-red hair—and see what happened to him!

I'm pretty certain there will be a lot of letters coming your way, John, and having to be toted the seven miles from Baker out to your Rattlesnake Ranch. It's a sure thing your lonesome days are over, and that you will have to take a little rest from slamming bronchos and rattlers, and start in licking stamps for a change.

ROCKY FORD, COLORADO.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

I live on a ranch of eighty acres near Rocky Ford where all the big watermelons grow. Each year there is a fair and one day is called "Watermelon Day." On that day over forty or fifty thousand big melons are given away. People come for the occasion from all the Western States. This is sure a fine country; none like it, in my opinion.

Now I suppose some of the cousins are wondering what I look like. I am eighteen years old; five feet, four inches tall, and weigh 125 pounds. I have dark brown hair, brown eyes, rosy cheeks and lots of tan. You have plenty of this last if you stay here long. I keep house for my father, grandfather, two brothers and one sister. I am the oldest. I have kept house for them since I was fourteen. I can bake fine bread, cakes and pies, and can cook anything. I do all our sewing and canning in addition to the other housework, and I can help out in the field also if necessary. I crated honey-dews all this fall. I do lots of crocheting when I have time. I wish you could drop in for a chat, Uncle, and I would give you all the melons you wanted to eat, also some of my baking. I will promise Billy a melon if he will let this letter go by. I would like to hear from some of the cousins, boys and girls both. As I am only eighteen, I haven't been engaged yet, but neither have I been broken-hearted—so you see I'm lucky for a girl nowadays! Well, Uncle Lisha, I must quit for this time, and perhaps I will write more of Western life another time, if Billy lets this go past his nose.

So by by, with love to all,

Your niece, BESSIE HATTON.

Great Scott, Bessie, write again quick and tell me what date "Watermelon Day" comes out in Rocky Ford! I suppose it will be just my luck to find out it took place six months ago. You say "people come from all the Western States," but I imagine a hungry Easterner (leading a refined-appearing Goat) could get mixed in with the crowd and not be ruled out by the judges when the fifty thousand melons started to roll. Bessie, you say, in your opinion, you have a fine country; well, my opinion joins with yours perfectly. Why, I never heard of quite so fine a place to live. About how big are the biggest watermelons they give away, Bessie? And can you eat 'em right off on the grounds, or do you have to lug 'em home to do the carving?

You certainly get through a lot of work in your home, Bessie, which shows how strengthening is a watermelon diet. You are an example, too, of the old rule which says that "responsibility ages." I am almost sure you are the only girl I ever heard of who was older than her father and grandfather. Billy says that this is "a manifest impossibility"—I quote his exact statement!—but I told him you said right out plain in your letter: "I am the oldest," and that if it wasn't true you would not dare invite us both out where we would be able to find out for ourselves about the outstanding fact. Of course, you didn't say how much older you were than your father and grandfather, but even if you were only half a day older it seems to me that your case would be a remarkable one. You must not keep on working so hard, Bessie, or the first thing you know you will be older than your great-grandfather. This would not be right nor respectful in a girl of eighteen.

(CONTINTED ON PAGE 26.)

Try This Way

See how your teeth look then

Here is a new way of teeth cleaning—a modern, scientific way. Authorities approve it. Leading dentists everywhere advise it.

Ask for this ten-day test. Watch the results of it. See for yourself what it means to your teeth—what it means in your home.

The film problem

Film has been the great tooth problem. A viscous film clings to your teeth, enters crevices and stays. Old ways of brushing do not effectively combat it. So millions of teeth are dimmed and ruined by it.

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film.

Combat it daily

Dental science has now found ways to daily combat that film. Careful tests have amply proved them. They are now embodied, with other most important factors, in a dentifrice called Pepsodent.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

The scientific film combatant, whose every application brings five desired effects. Approved by highest authorities, and now advised by leading dentists everywhere. All druggists supply the large tubes.

Millions of people now use this tooth paste, largely by dental advice. A 10-Day Tube is now sent free to everyone who asks.

Its five effects

Pepsodent combats the film in two effective ways. It highly polishes the teeth, so film less easily adheres.

It stimulates the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest starch deposits that cling. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay.

Modern authorities deem these effects essential. Every use of Pepsodent brings them all.

See the results

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects.

This test, we believe, will bring to your home a new era in teeth cleaning. And benefits you never had before. Mail coupon now.

739

10-Day Tube Free

THE PEPSODENT COMPANY,
Dept. 546, 1104 S. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Mail 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

.....

.....

Only one tube to a family.

Stars of Popular Music Play the Conn

TED LEWIS

PAUL WHITEMAN

JOSEPH SMITH

PAUL BIESE

ISHAM JONES

What greater proof of superiority than the fact that these artists and their orchestras all use Conn instruments? Yet these are only a few of those who, personally and through phonograph records, are thrilling millions with the brilliant beauty of their music.

You, too, can win popularity, double your income, playing whole or part time in band or orchestra. Take a tip from the world's greatest artists; play a Conn. Exclusive processes make them easiest of all to master.

Free Trial; Easy Payments

All exclusive Conn features at no greater cost. Highest honors at world expositions. Used in great concert and symphony organizations.

FREE BOOK "Success in Music and How to Win It" by Sousa and nine others. Send coupon for your copy and details of free trial offer.

An Ideal Christmas Gift

C. G. Conn Ltd.
110 Conn Bldg. Elkhart Ind.
Agencies in all large cities
New York Conn Co. 233-5-7 W. 47th St.

C. G. Conn Ltd., 110 Conn Bldg., Elkhart, Ind.
Gentlemen: Please send my copy of "Success in Music" and details of your free trial plan. (Mention Instrument.)
Name.....
St. or Rural Route.....
City, State.....
County.....
Instrument.....

WE TEACH COMMERCIAL ART

Properly Trained Artists Earn $100 a week and up. Meyer Both College—conducted by the Meyer Both Company—offers you a different and practical training. If you like to draw, develop your talent. Study this practical course—taught by the largest and most widely known Commercial Art Organization in the field with 20 years' success. Who else could give you so wide an experience? Commercial Art is a business necessity—the demand for commercial Artists is greater every year. It's a highly paid intensely interesting profession, equally open to both men and women. Home study instruction. Get facts before you enroll in any school. Get our special booklet, "Your Opportunity"—for half the cost of mailing—four cents in stamps.

MEYER BOTH COLLEGE of COMMERCIAL ART
Michigan Ave. at 20th St.
Dept. 36 CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW WAY TO GET A PIANO

Save 25 to 50 per cent by buying DIRECT FROM FACTORY. We pay freight. 38 styles to select from. 40 year guarantee on the famous WING Piano or Player. 53-year-old reputation for high quality and fair dealing. Send for names of owners near you.

The Book of Complete Information About Pianos—FREE

Play a Wing Piano or Player in your OWN home on 4 weeks FREE Trial. Send for valuable NEW BOOK of Complete Information about Pianos—FREE. Learn how to judge quality, tone, finish of any piano. See why the WING stands every quality test. Easy terms. No deposit. Write today for Book. The N. Y. World says, "Everyone should have this Book."

4 Weeks Trial

WING & SON (Est. 1868)
Dept. 31 9th Avenue & 13th Street New York

Standard Underwoods
5-Year Guarantee

$3.00 DOWN

Yes, this genuine Standard Visible Writing Underwood newly rebuilt, at much less than factory price, yours for $3.00 down and then easy monthly payments.

10 Days FREE Trial
Try it for 10 days at our risk. Money back guarantee. Send now for free book. Big bargain offer.

Standard Keyboard

TYPEWRITER EMPORIUM 1011 Shipman Building
SHIPMAN-WARD MFG. CO. Chicago, Illinois

BE A JAZZ MUSIC MASTER
PLAY BY EAR

Play popular song hits perfectly by ear. Hum the tune, play it by ear. No tedious ding-dong daily practice—just twenty brief, entertaining lessons which you can master in no time. Send for the Free Book. It tells how to start if you want musical ability at which friends will marvel.

Niagara School of Music
Dept. 412 A, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Send for this Free Book

Every Quilter
Should have our book of 450 prettiest and scarcest patterns from old log cabin to star and puzzle designs. We will mail you this wonderful 25c book, also catalogue of beads and needlework materials, for 20c. No stamps. Our latest book of applique designs containing over 25 beautiful patterns for quilts, spreads, etc., and above, 25c.
LADIES' ART CO., Block 18, St. Louis, Mo.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

luck. We went until we found a spring of water where the bees water all the time, then watched closely until a bee got enough water. He then rose, circling two or three times, and we watched closely to see which way he would go. Usually they go in a "bee line" straight to the home, which is usually in a hollow oak tree, in this country. Then we went in that direction, looking carefully at the likely looking trees, but with no success. Sometimes you can see the bees coming and going out of the tree. One doesn't always find the tree quickly. Sometimes it is necessary to go back to the spring again to see if you have the right direction. After the tree is found another day has to be taken to cut it and get the store of honey, as one must be prepared. Even then most likely the one who robs the tree gets stung once or twice but the good pure honey in the comb is the reward for that. I enjoyed my trip bee hunting in spite of sore feet and no luck, for the walk was for something. I found several places to gather holly berries for Christmas and gathered some bear weed. We have lots of wild holly berries here to be had for the trouble of gathering. In November and December they are beautiful with their bright scarlet berries. Old and young gather them for Christmas decorations and to send to city friends who are not so fortunate. We have lots of spruce and cut our own Christmas trees. I gathered some bear weed to chew, bringing home both apron pockets full. It grows wild here and when chewed gives one an appetite and acts as a tonic. It is said to make one fat but I couldn't vouch for the truth of that. However, it leaves a pleasant taste in the mouth. I do not know the botanical name for it.

I don't think the wild flowers are appreciated half enough. We have beautiful flowers here, including the tiger lily, mariposa lily and pinks. My favorite, the California poppy, is plentiful and considered a sort of pest too, as it usually grows where it isn't wanted—and that from a Native Daughter, too!

I like to do fancy work. Have crocheted thirty-five yokes in the past two or three years, besides doing all my housework and other crocheting. I would like to have letters from the sisters who do fancy work. I always write long letters myself so like to receive those of equal length. There is not much to go to here so we stay home unless we take a trip to the hills. Maybe that's why I love it so.

I am tall, have black hair, black eyes and everyone says I'm still a girl, though twenty-five.

MRS. EDNA J. DAHLBERG.

Mrs. Dahlberg.—Your children are worthy of space in COMFORT, without a doubt, but the cut that would be made from the snapshot you sent would not be worthy of them. If I could I would describe the look of pleased responsibility on brother's face as he holds baby sister, and her smile—but I can't do it. She has even kicked her little socks down at the heels just like a regular baby.

Goodness, woman, why should I waste good space telling about myself when there are dozens and dozens of letters that I want to find room for?—Ed.

MILACA, R. R. 1, BOX 110, MINN.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I am a new subscriber, have received two copies of COMFORT and like it very much. Sorry I didn't subscribe long ago. I'm sure I would have liked Uncle Charlie's ideas for they were mine and what he preached I've felt I'd like to go out and preach over all the land.

Dear "Discouraged Mother," I feel for you and I'd give a good deal if I could help you. I've been there myself and know so well how you feel. I have not gained perfection, yet so far as results go I feel satisfied I am on the right road.

No one, no matter how wise, can give you a panacea for making over your children. It can't be done. But what you can do—though let me warn you, you have a big job on your hands—is to change yourself. And I can assure you that in time you will see wonderful results in your girls as well.

In the first place, you have taken their quarreling too much to heart; you dwell on it continuously till it is magnified out of proportions. No one is suffering from it only in the mind. Learn to let go, say to yourself every time you are feeling worked up, that's "It's going to be well, I will not let this ruin my life." You see by your mixing in it you are building up a quarreling nature in yourself and you have no right to expect them to free themselves from that which you cannot free yourself from. All true education must commence with self, and no one should try to control others who cannot control themselves. One thing we mothers must remember is not to let our children think that we consider ourselves perfect. Were I in your place I would talk it over with my girls, and tell them that I had made a mistake in taking this trouble to heart, almost ruining my life by so doing and after this I meant to think of more pleasant things than their quarreling. What you think of you build into your heart and mind so you become gradually what you think. And I want to tell you too, not to get discouraged if it goes slowly. All progress is slow. Be cheerful about it even if you fail many times a day and know that for every step gained the next will be so much easier. Perhaps you'll know then how hard it is for your girls to make themselves over and you'll learn how to sympathize more with them. My oldest daughter has a little girl that cried so much it almost drove her mother to distraction. She was visiting with me some time ago and when we saw she was getting one of her crying spells I picked her up, laid her head close to mine and said, "Dear, here at Nanny's house you can cry all you want to. We love children that cry." Up went the little head, the greatest surprise was pictured on her face and bless you, she forgot to cry nor did she during the three weeks they stayed with me cry any more than an ordinary baby of her age.

I hope you derive some benefit from this and shall be very glad to hear from you.

Yours truly, MRS. MARY NORLANDER.

MISSISSIPPI.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

If I could write like Nelle Fischer or Pearl Vesey I would have no fears as to my letter being printed.

I am a farmer's wife and we haven't any too much of this world's goods but we manage to get along. We belong to the great army of share croppers. That is, the landlord furnishes land, seed, stock and implements as well as money to make a crop. We do all the work of making and gathering and give him half and pay back the money. To my thinking it is a poor way of living but we are going to buy our own stock and rent our land and maybe after a few years we can buy a home. I have been the mother of eight children, only four are living. Their ages range from fourteen years to twenty months so I have all I can do to care for them properly and do my housework. I love them and no sacrifice is too great to make for them. I have been told that I make a slave of myself for my children. I never go anywhere and never buy anything but what I'm actually obliged to have. I want the children to have a good time and to be dressed so that others cannot make fun of them. I never knew what it was to have pretty, dainty clothes when I was a child, although my clothes were good enough. My stepmother was a good, old-fashioned woman and my clothes were always out of style; therefore I was always laughed at. She used to tell me not to mind for I was as good as they even if my clothes were not made like theirs but what child doesn't mind being laughed at by her schoolmates? The fear of it made me keep to myself and I missed all the pleasures of mixing with children of my own age. It was the same as I grew older so I married at fourteen, the first chance I had, and went into married life entirely ignorant of everything I should have known. Do you wonder that at sixteen my husband and I separated and I was left with a little six-weeks'-old son to care for? My father died soon after that and I had to live with step-relatives with whom I could not get along and did not feel welcome. I could not work out for I had no place to leave my baby. I had several offers of marriage and accepted one. I cannot say I repent for I have a home where I can feel welcome and there is no one to criticize my every word and action. My husband loves me and is good to me, although he has no education and cannot write his name even. I respect and honor him for he is clean, upright and honorable and he does the best he can. I try to be all that a wife should be although I get out of patience with him sometimes for he is more like a child than any child he has. I don't mean that he isn't all right mentally or anything like that, only he loves to romp and play with the children. They are always getting off some joke on each other. Of course the children think Daddy is all right, and they love me too and hardly ever fail to obey. I want them to have all the fun and pleasure that I missed and I never refuse to let them go whenever possible and I always see that they look neat and clean and are dressed properly for the occasion.

I have never yet found a way to get rid of the neighbors' children without sending them home and offending their mothers.

I can't give any hints or helps for nearly everything I know I learned from COMFORT. I read a great deal as reading is about the only recreation I have. I, too, leave my supper dishes so I can read and talk with my husband and children. We read COMFORT from cover to cover, advertisements and all, and enjoy it more than any magazine we take.

I'd like to get the books "East Lynne" and the sequel "Lady Isabel's Daughter." Mrs. Wilkinson has my address. I hope you will let me be

ONE OF YOU, No. 2.

One of You, No. 2.—If you could visit some of the Hush-here-comes-father homes I know you'd be forever grateful for that husband of yours and glad to join in the fun instead of regarding it as childish of him. Such comradeship seems rather a beautiful thing to me and it would be even more beautiful if you would join in their pranks. Children remember a good time longer than they do clothes, and you surely want them to think of you in the years to come as being as good a sport as father.—Ed.

ROCK SPRING, GA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I am and have been a reader of COMFORT some thirty years and we all think we could not do without it.

I live in the country where we own a small farm and like farm life the best. We lived in town for a while but did not like so came back to the farm.

ROLAM C. AND ROY C. WHALEY.

I am the mother of ten children, seven living. I am forty-five years old and my husband is forty-nine. My maiden name was Emma Bird.

Am sending a picture of my twins, Rolam C. and Roy C., taken when they were twenty-six months old. They are six now.

With best wishes to all the sisters,

MRS. W. L. WHALEY.

Mrs. Whaley.—If Rolam and Roy had known how glad we were going to be to see them they'd never have clung to each other for protecton or looked so uncertain about meeting us. It makes them look little and lovable, doesn't it?—Ed.

OHIO.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

Squeak goes the hinges on the door. I knew they would for this is the fifth time I have tried to open it and it always squeaks. This time it seems as though it opened a wee bit further. I was never peeved at dear Mrs. Wilkinson for I knew she found better and more interesting letters than mine, especially Pearl V's. Pearl, where have you been keeping your dear self? And Nelle Fischer, have you come across Bachelor Bill and has he kept you out of our interesting corner?

I want to tell the sisters of something I thought out which helped me and am sure will help others like myself that can't afford any better. I had some peach basket covers around the house. I knocked off the thin boards from the hoop part, leaving the hoop which I sawed in four parts, all same length, and covered them with some old satin I had. I drove a small staple into the center of each and made a hanger for little daughter's coats and dresses when before they were hung up by the neck or arm which spoiled the looks of them. The hoops can be cut larger for grown-up clothes.

Mrs. Jessie Heffner asked to hear from someone living where the wild red haw grew. We have two red haw trees across the road from our house and they were lovely this season. I made several glasses of jelly from some of the berries. It is delicious as is the butter of the haw.

Another request was how to have blooming geraniums in winter. I had beautiful ones last winter that were the envy of all who saw them. I always slip my flowers around the first of July, that is, put the slips in a glass jar filled with rain water and let them get well rooted before putting them in the soil. By the first of August I take my flower pots into the field along some sodded fence, fill my cans with the loose soil under the sods, then I put my well-rooted slips in the pots and keep them in the shade for a while, watering them as they need it.

Mrs. George B. Jackson, I have thought of writing you a personal letter. Yours is a life worth living, helping by the light of the great tower to save so many lives.

I enjoy our wonderful COMFORT, especially the Sisters' Corner, but the greatest of my books is the Holy Bible. It is the best and most loved of all.

YOUR OLD PAL.

EVERETT, R. R. 1, BOX 63, WASH.

DEAR COMFORT FOLKS:

I saw a letter in the Sisters' Corner from Sooky telling of her troubles in getting into the Magic Circle so I think I'll follow suit and not get discouraged. I notice pictures and descriptions of the sisters' children but I think my Raymond could take a prize anywhere. At birth he weighed 10 pounds, at one month 13 pounds, at two months 16 pounds, at three months 18 pounds, at six months 20 pounds, and at eight months 25 pounds. Some boy, isn't he? and I give all the praise to our little Jersey heifer.

Do you know, mothers, that a drink of milk, after giving castor oil to the little ones, will keep the oil down? My little two-year-old boy Tommy is a delicate boy and when I gave him castor oil he would throw it up. I gave him a drink of milk after a dose one time and it stayed down. The water and oil will not mix but separates so the result is that the child throws castor oil and water up. On the other hand, the fat in milk and the oil mix and stay down.

I have described myself so many times to Mrs. Wilkinson that I think she can imagine how I look. I am 22 years old and am five feet two inches tall. I weigh 110 pounds and have dark brown hair and blue eyes. I am part French and part Italian but was born in this state. I am as busy as I can be every day but sometimes I get time to make rag dolls for my two children. A neighbor made a rag doll for my children and she gave me a pattern for the doll. I laid the pattern on a double piece of white flannel and cut it out and sewed it up, leaving a place to turn the doll inside out. Then I stuffed it with cotton and sewed the rest up by hand. I made eyes and nose and mouth with a needle and some black thread. Then I made rompers of gingham or percale and dresses, underskirt and bloomers for a girl. I made a girl doll dressed in pink for Tommy and he takes it everywhere he goes. He calls it a "Kewpie." I would like to hear from the sisters if any of them care to write.

Best wishes to all of you.

MRS. LILLIE NELSEN.

FALMOUTH, MICH.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I have kept still just as long as I can.

Happy Mother, I have been married five years, have two babies, one three and one a year old. I have always had a system in doing my work and I never wavered one way or the other. My work simply had to be done. If hubby said, "Come, go with me today," it was always, "I must wash today," or iron or whatever came in order. I was so afraid a neighbor would come in and see a little dust or a dirty dish. In just five years I was a thin, rundown, senemic woman, at twenty-six.

If I had that time to live over again I would do as you are doing and if any neighbor came in and criticized my system I would tell her to mind her own business. I hope you will keep right on making hubby and baby happy.

Best wishes to all.

ANNIE.

SUNNY TENNESSEE.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

Every time I receive a copy of COMFORT I think that I will write but keep putting it off. I enjoy the letters so much.

How many of the COMFORT mothers make candy for their children? It is much cheaper and better for them than that we buy, for we know just what is put in it and that everything is clean. I make fondant by mixing a small quantity of sweet milk to a pound of powdered sugar. First sift the sugar until light, then add milk, a little at a time, until creamy. Work this with a spoon until well mixed, form into any desired shape and put onto a plate to harden. Dip into bitter chocolate that has been melted over hot water. A few shavings of paraffin added to the chocolate will give it a gloss. Add nut meats, cocoanut, candied cherries or pineapple and you will have the best candy imaginable.

I have been married four years and have two babies, a girl almost three years, and a boy fifteen months old. A home is not complete without children. We lived in town until last spring when we moved to the country. I like country life better, especially for the children. I play with them out under the big shade trees and hot afternoons we go to the creek close by and there, with nothing on but their little overalls, they wade, throw rocks and have a good time. I think we mothers should take time to play with the children for soon they will be grown men and women and they will remember their childhood as a happy one.

For pin money I make and sell tatting in town. I belong to the Woman's Exchange. Membership costs $1.00 a year. They sell all kinds of home-made things, also home-cooked foods. I found a sale there for some of my candy, etc.

ROSELYN.

PENNSYLVANIA.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

As I like the letters wherein the writers describe themselves I will do that also for there may be others like me.

I am twenty-three years old, married to one of the best of Johns, only that isn't his name, and have three children, two girls and a boy, all under five years. I have brown hair and eyes.

One sister asked how we arranged our work. I would like to hear that subject discussed. For my part, I clean my house all over only twice a week. Of course the kitchen and bedrooms must have care every day. I haven't very good health and the babies take up so much of my time that I can't clean the rooms oftener. But I try to keep my kitchen shining for if I were a man I would not live a minute with a woman whose kitchen was in disorder. I do not believe in keeping the front of the house spotless for callers to see and the place where the family food is prepared almost filthy. I had a neighbor once whom I regarded

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 16.)

Films Developed and Printed 25¢ Per Roll Any Size

Send 25c per roll of six which we will develop, print and return same day received. 3 cents rebated on all blank, imperfect or non-printable films. Highest grade professional workmanship guaranteed. Perfect system insures against any possible loss of films.

8 x 10 Enlargement Free

Enclose any favorite old negative with your order and we will make you a handsome 8 x 10 enlargement free. If you send us name and address of another Kodaker.

20% Saved on All Photo Supplies

Your first 25c order brings coupons and membership privilege in our co-operative buying service, giving you 20% cash saving on cameras, films and all standard photo supplies. Money back guarantee.

Mail Order Film Service Box 379-A, Milwaukee, Wis.

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

YOU can earn from $1 to $2 an hour in your spare time writing show cards. Quickly and easily learned by our new simple method. No canvassing or soliciting, we teach you how, guarantee you steady work at home and pay you cash each week. Full particulars and booklet free.

AMERICAN SHOW CARD SCHOOL
238 Ryrie Building Toronto, Canada

High School Course in 2 Years

You can complete this simplified High School Course at home in two years. Meets all requirements for entrance to college and the leading professions. This and thirty-six other practical courses are described in our Free Bulletin. Send for it TODAY.

AMERICAN SCHOOL
Dept. H 117 Drexel Ave. & 58th St. CHICAGO

Big Band Catalog Sent FREE

Anything you need for the band—single instrument or complete equipment. Used by Army and Navy. Send for big catalog, liberally illustrated, fully descriptive. Mention what instrument interests you. Sold by leading music dealers everywhere.

FREE TRIAL—EASY PAYMENTS

LYON & HEALY
68-77 Jackson Boulevard CHICAGO

FREE DIAMOND RING OFFER

Just to advertise our famous Hawaiian lm. diamonds—the greatest discovery the world has ever known. We will send absolutely free this 14k gold f. ring, set with a 1-2k Hawaiian lm. diamond—in beautiful ring box postage paid. Pay postmaster $1.48 C.O.D. charges to cover postage, boxing, advertising, handling, etc. If you can tell it from a real diamond return and money refunded. Only 10,000 given away. Send no money. Answer quick. Send size of finger.

KRAUTH & REED, Dept. 130
MASONIC TEMPLE CHICAGO

MUSIC TAUGHT In Your Home FREE

Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, Etc. Beginner or advanced players. One lesson weekly. Illustrations make everything plain. Only expense about 2c per day to cover cost of postage and music used. Write for FREE booklet which explains everything in full.

AMERICAN SCHOOL OF MUSIC, 18 Lakeside Building, CHICAGO

Big Money

Made by agents selling our wonderful Facial Soap, Perfumes, Toilet Articles, Spices, Extracts, etc. Free sale of soap & agents terms mailed to any address.

Lacassian Co., Dept. 402, St. Louis, Mo.

The Pretty Girls' Club

Conducted by Katherine Booth

Adding and Subtracting Eyebrows

I KNOW a lovely lady, to whose arched brows a poet might have indited a sonnet or two. Yet, what do you suppose? The other day I met her and her lovely brows were things of the past. Instead, one observed merely a faint line like the trail of an indelible pencil above her eyes. It was impossible to keep politely silent, so I quite boldly inquired the fate of those brows I had erstwhile admired. And what do you suppose had happened to them? They had passed away via the tweezer route! In other words, she had deliberately shut herself up in her room and proceeded to pluck her eyebrows to what she intended to be fashionable daintiness. And she plucked and she plucked and she plucked, always deciding to take out just a hair or two more, before laying down her tweezers. The result was before me! I was charitable and said naught of what was passing through my mind, but before any of my girls can go and do likewise I want to utter a loud word of warning.

My dears, a delicate brow is a thing of beauty, but most of the brows manufactured by tweezers are nothing of the kind. There is no objection at all to shaping the brow by the aid of tweezers. Indeed, I recommend the method. But this means to use the tweezers only to pluck out hairs that have straggled over the line of a well-shaped brow, or hairs that persist in growing across the bridge of the nose, or too far over on the temple. But not at all to pluck out the hairs wholesale until all there is by way of a brow is a thin pencil-line of hair. This is really unbecoming to most people, giving them a sort of "baldheaded" appearance, if you understand what I mean. Besides, remember that the brows have a function. They catch the dust and flying particles which might otherwise fall upon the eyelids. Removed, the eyes are much more likely to gather cinders, to become irritated by flying dust.

So, use your tweezers with care and discretion. Use them, to be sure, for I do not want any uneven brows or straggling hairs among my girls, but use them merely as a corrective not as a creator of perfectly new and startling brows.

Girls who complain of having little if any eyebrows should consider how the rest of the world is painstakingly removing all that they have. However, if like me and many other people who have some regard for old-fashioned canons of beauty, they think their brows are too light in color, they can, if they choose, without being too very worldly, use a tiny brush and a box of mascarra to add to their definiteness. Don't use too much mascarra, for nothing is more unlovely than smudged eyebrows or lashes. Be sparing, and when you think you have been almost stingy in the application of mascarra then next time be even a little more stingy. Put it on very carefully, in front of a mirror, in a good strong light.

By the way, be sure to keep your eyebrows clean. So many girls powder over their eyebrows along with the rest of their faces, daily, then wipe them off, and consider that all the attention they need. Use a small brush like a baby's toothbrush—not your mascarra brush, however—and brush the eyebrows against the grain—that is, toward the nose, until all dust, powder, etc., is removed. Then brush them back again the way they should lie, following the arch to its very end, and do not be stingy of your applications of the brush, for this will make the brows satiny and lovely to look upon. Only use a brush on the eyelashes most gently to remove any specks of dust or eye secretions.

And, girls, don't forget to steer clear of the absurdities of pencil-line plucked eyebrows!

Answers to Questions

DOROTHY.—The milk diet again? Well, my dear, once more I will tell you just how to take it, for if you want to add pounds to your weight, we will have to help you out, won't we? The first thing to do is to go without food, except for a glass or two of orange juice, for one entire day, drinking plenty of water. Plenty means eight or ten glasses a day. At night put to soak six prunes in a tumbler of warm water. In the morning on rising drink two glasses of warm water. Wait a little, then eat your prunes, chewing them until almost liquid, and drink the juice. Fifteen minutes later, take a glass and a half of milk, "chewing" each mouthful, and being sure the milk is not too cold. It should not be lukewarm, for that is not a pleasant temperature at which to take milk, but should have the chill off. In an hour drink another glass and a half, and keep this up until about three or three-thirty, assuming that you have begun your milk at eight o'clock. Eat a light supper and drink two glasses of water between that meal and going to bed. Continue this plan for a week, taking your prunes and hot water every morning. At the end of the week drop your evening meal, and take only milk, two glasses every hour from seven-thirty in the morning until and including six-thirty at night. Keep up prunes and water in the morning, and water between your last glass of milk and bedtime. Weigh on starting the treatment and again on the afternoon of the last day of each week. You should gain from one to six pounds a week, depending upon how faithful you are and on what your activities demand of you. See that the bowels move daily. The prunes will aid in caring for this. Good luck to you!

SHAPING THE EYEBROWS WITH TWEEZERS.

L. M.—You would not find the electric needle so tremendously expensive, though five dollars an hour sounds so, for a great many hairs can be removed in even fifteen minutes. Peroxide, as you say, bleaches the hair, and is useful in rendering it inconspicuous. It also aids in drying the hair, but that is the function of the ammonia. Use any kind of ammonia, but be careful not to get it near your eyes. Use the peroxide one day to dampen the hairy spots, letting it dry on; then next day use the ammonia in the same way. If the skin becomes irritated from the ammonia, use a little cold cream and discontinue for a couple of days, then resume. The length of time required varies with the strength of the hair, etc. It requires a lot of patience to remove hair this way, as it is a slow process, but it is not injurious.

CHESTER, S. C.—You can't get rid of blackheads by taking anything internally. There must be an outward application. Be careful of your diet, and see that your bowels move daily, and that you drink quantities of water. Then take a body bath every day, and rub the skin briskly with a soft towel afterward. Blackheads are nothing but body secretions which the pores have been too lazy to throw off, and on which has lodged flying dust. Give your face a careful washing every night before retiring. Press out the blackheads very gently, after such a bathing, with a soft towel around the forefinger of each hand. Use one towel, and put one end around one finger, and the other around the forefinger of the other hand. After removing a blackhead, touch the spot with peroxide or boric acid, as an antiseptic. Bathe the face again after removing the blackheads, then rinse in cool water, and finally dash on cold water to close the pores. Use only tepid water on the face in the morning. A good cold cream is all right to use on the face. Any of the brands which you find largely advertised in all the magazines is sure to be all right. But never use cold cream on the face unless it is perfectly clean, and always wash off any remaining cold cream at night when you take your retiring face-bath. There is no objection to your applying another coating of cold cream immediately after, if you desire, though I believe you will find it better to use your cold cream just before applying face powder in the daytime, rubbing it well into the skin. Massaging the face twice daily will help to stimulate the little pores to do their work.

JENNY.—See my reply to "Chester." Take your hot face bath at night, but rinse very thoroughly and be sure to use cold water to close the pores. It sounds as if you had been enlarging the pores by hot applications, without taking the trouble to close them as soon as clean. Then you have been using the hot water in the morning, opening the pores just when they will have to meet flying dust and soil. Use the hot water at night, and only tepid water in the morning or the daytime. You may use tincture of benzoin in the water in which you bathe your face in the morning. It will help both to cleanse and contract the pores.

MARY LOU S.—Your skin chaps because you use too much soap and hot water on it, I imagine, and perhaps are not careful about drying it thoroughly. Use a soft wash-cloth and no soap in the water except at night. Notice I say "in the water". You must never rub soap on the face or the cloth. Rinse thoroughly in many waters. Before you apply powder rub cold cream liberally into the skin. Wipe off any surplus with a soft cloth. Then powder, using a soft pad or cloth. Certainly, powder is injurious to the eyes. Any foreign substance is. You must apply both powder and cold cream more carefully. There is no occasion for getting anything in the eyes. I am sorry it is against the rules of the magazine to recommend any one specific article. You can see this would not be fair to other perfectly good advertised articles. Try to get a good rice powder, no matter who puts it up. Always rub cold cream into your skin before going outdoors, washing the face first, and drying carefully. And you would better rub cold cream in at night before retiring, if you are having trouble with chapped skin. Swollen veins in the hands mean defective circulation. You may be wearing too tight sleeves, corsets, collars, waistbands, shoes. If not, you need, I should say, some outdoor exercise daily to stimulate the circulation. Or you can practice any simple physical exercise in your own room, including deep breathing exercises. For the wrinkles between the eyes, use cold cream on the finger tips and massage across the wrinkle—not the same way as the wrinkle but the opposite way in order to "iron out" the crease. These wrinkles may be caused from some defect in your eyes, causing you to draw them together in an effort to see properly. Have you had your eyes examined to see if you need glasses?

EMMA,—Use a little borax in the water in which you shampoo your hair—a teaspoonful. Do not rub soap on the hair or scalp but dissolve it in the water in which you are to wash your hair. Pour this liquid on the hair and rub until a lather is produced. Be sure your hair is thoroughly rinsed, as soap left on the scalp irritates the little oil cells and makes them function unduly. Air the hair daily and never sleep with it "done up," but let it hang loose. Try not brushing your hair at night for a time and not massaging the scalp, and see if the little oil glands will calm down. For the dark complexion, probably you are the type for a dark complexion, in which case it is more becoming to leave it as it is. Eat plenty of fruit, and drink quantities of water and see if you cannot clear up the skin in this way. If it is not natural, it will lighten up if you are careful of your diet, eating fruits, green vegetables and simple foods. Don't eat between meals, and see that the bowels are kept open. There is nothing to do for the large knuckles, except to get more flesh on the rest of the hands. You can, however, form a habit of gently massaging the knuckles, one at a time, with the thumb and first two fingers of the other hand. This will prevent them from increasing in size.

MOTHER OF TWO BOYS.—I know just how you feel. The matter with your hands is that they are in hot water so much that the natural oil is taken away and they dry up and wrinkle and chap. You must wear rubber gloves for your dishes and the scrubbing of tables, etc. It sounds like a nuisance, and the temptation is not to do it, as I know from personal experience, but believe me, dear, there is no way to avoid the devastating effect of too much hot and soapy water on the hands except by way of rubber gloves and a dishmop. You really need two dishmops—a string one for dishes, and a wiry string one for kettles, etc. Put your rubber gloves on every time your hands must go into the water, and have also a pair of canvas gloves for sweeping and dusting, handling wood for the kitchen stove, etc., etc. You can keep your hands soft and white if you will learn to use these aids, and you can't possibly achieve this result any other way. Keep a good hand cream on your dresser and when you can rub it into your hands. Almond creams are good for this purpose. Dry your hands thoroughly every time it is necessary to wet them. Remember, gloves will save the day and nothing else will. You will soon get used to them and will thank your stars you have made them part of your kitchen equipment. Don't do anything about your house without gloves—even if you use old cotton or silk gloves in place of the regular household gloves. But for dishwashing, nothing but the rubber glove will do.

DANDRUFF.—Yes, dandruff will cause the hair to fall out. Perhaps your whole bodily condition is at fault, for you must keep the body up to high health standards if the hair is to be healthy. Do you air the hair, and let it hang at night? Here is a formula for a hair tonic. Always be careful in using a tonic not to get it into the eyes, and not to let hair with tonic on it hang over the eyes.

For Falling Hair

Tincture of cantharides, one ounce; olive oil, one ounce; bay rum, six ounces; oil of rosemary, one ounce. To this add an ounce of rock sulphur broken up (it need not be powdered). This lotion should be rubbed into the scalp nightly, and the scalp massaged with a circular motion.

M. G.—The first remedy for the creases in the throat is to hold the chin up a little more. It is possible you have formed the habit of unconsciously dropping the head as you walk or sit. Then the next things to do is to massage it nightly with plenty of cold cream on the fingers. Raise the chin slightly, then alternating the hands rub down from the chin toward the breast, first one hand then the next immediately following; after this massage from the point of the chin back toward the ears, the thumb of each hand under the chin, palms up, and the fingers extending backward. The thumbs should be pressed down, as the fingers go back toward the ears, and thus massage downward along the throat where the creases are.

DARKENING THE BROWS WITH MASCARRA.

BROWN-EYED BETTY.—I agree with you that a loss of some pounds would be a good thing for you. You will have to lose them through diet, my dear. You say you "eat vegetables" but do not tell me which ones. Cut out potatoes and rice, and don't eat much butter or sugar or milk or cream, or any cake, candy, pie, preserves. I don't think you eat enough for breakfast or lunch, my dear. It isn't how much you eat but what you eat that gives you flesh. I suggest you eat fruit for breakfast and a couple of soft-boiled eggs. For lunch, an apple, or even two, and some fruit salad, such as you could put in a little jar, or a slice of lean meat, but no white bread. For dinner, lean meats, green vegetables, fruit. Drink between meals but not at meals. Cut out milk and cream.

Address all letters containing questions to
KATHERINE BOOTH, care COMFORT,
AUGUSTA, MAINE.

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Advertisement.

"Danderine"

Grows Thick, Heavy Hair

35-cent Bottle Ends all Dandruff, Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant. One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.

For the Housekeeper who dreads putting the hands in water during this cold windy weather —here is your soothing and best friend SANA-BALM, the new, great antiseptic balm that will sooth, heal and protect tender irritated skin. It is not for Colds, Catarrh or Headaches. It is not a "Cure-all!" But it is an excellent antiseptic, scientifically compounded and should be used on burns, cuts, bruises and chapped skin. Try SANA-BALM at our expense, then buy it at your druggist's. Send for FREE sample today—a card will do. Address

FREE SANA-CUTIS CHEMICAL CO., Box 691, SEDALIA, MO.

Alkali in Soap Bad For the Hair

ANITA STEWART

"Mulsified Cocoanut Oil adds Life and Lustre to the hair and is very refreshing as a shampoo"—Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

RUBS OUT WRINKLES

Don't let wrinkles and hideous crow feet destroy your beauty. They make you look years older than you really are. Under the magic urge of wrinkles disappear. Absorbed by the dry skin and shrunken tissues beneath, it fills hollows and replaces that aged, tired look with one of youthful freshness. You're a new woman and can see it! Send name, address and ten cents for Sample Box and Beauty Book. Agents Wanted.

PARISIAN FLESH FOOD

Mme. M. FOULAIRE, 82 ParisianBldg., CLEVELAND, O.

DESTROY HAIR ROOTS

NU-ART positively destroys superfluous hair and roots. Unlike depilatories which leave the roots to thrive. No electricity nor irrating chemicals. Absolutely harmless and painless. A marvelous discovery. GUARANTEED.
SEND NO MONEY
Don't send a penny in advance. Just write for a package and when you actually receive it, pay the postman the low price of $1.00 and postage. You will be delighted in seeing that you can absolutely free yourself of superfluous hair with the roots.
Nu-Art Laboratories, Dept. 22 F, So. Orange, N.J.

HUMAN HAIR NETS 75c Doz.
Direct From Importers Full Size.
Don't pay big prices for hair nets when we guarantee to satisfy you or return your money. Most durable nets made, but still invisible Mail sample of hair or specify color, also cap or fringe. Send order now.
L. H. CONNOR & CO., Dept. A, 16 California St. SAN FRANCISCO

Kill The Hair Root

My method is the only way to prevent the hair from growing again. Easy, painless, harmless. No scars. Booklet free. Write today enclosing 3 stamps. We teach beauty culture.
D. J. MAHLER, 348-X, Mahler Park, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

GRAY HAIR RESTORED

Quickly and naturally to its original color and beauty, by a simple, harmless, inexpensive home method. Complete secret sent sealed for a 2c. stamp. Guaranteed.
R. V. Sefton Co., Prectorius Sta., Dept. 61, St. Louis, Mo.

Girls! Girls!! Save Your Hair With Cuticura

Soap and Ointment to clear dandruff and itching, 25c. each Samples free of Cuticura, Dept D, Malden, Mass.

Age Is Judged By Gray Hair

Gray streaks suggest middle age and start your friends asking how old you really are. Keep your hair its original youthful color by using Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer.

This dainty, colorless liquid, clean and clear as water, brings back the original color safely and surely. No danger of freakish streaks or discoloration. The restored color is even and perfectly natural in all lights. Nothing to wash or rub off.

Send coupon for free trial bottle and test as directed on a single lock. State carefully the color of your hair. Better, enclose a lock in your letter. Then, when thoroughly convinced, get full-sized bottle from your druggist or direct.

Mary T. Goldman,
1164 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.
Please send me your FREE trial bottle of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer. The natural color of my hair is black..... jet black..... dark brown..... medium brown..... light brown.....
Name .....
Address .....

SALE

GET THIS STYLISH
BLUE SERGE Jumper Dress

Was $2.98

$1.79 Now Only — WHILE THEY LAST

Just think! This stylish blue serge dress for only $1.79. Buy direct from the factory and see what you save. We defy any house in the entire U. S. to equal this value.

Serge wears well and is always stylish

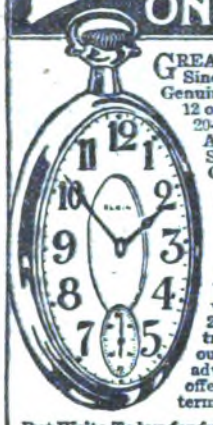
ACT NOW

DIRECT FROM FACTORY

SPECIAL 2 Dress-es for $3.49

Most Popular Style in Years

The entire country has gone wild about this sleeveless slip-over dress—and why not—besides being stylish and good looking it is comfortable, fits well, simple to slip on or off, and best of all, is very inexpensive. Neat and becoming to every age. Looks well with every waist or coat. Material is NORMANDY SERGE, famous for its long wear. Has two rows of floss stitching around neck, armholes and pockets. Finished with sash.



2 DRESSES $3.49 FOR
Not more than 2 dresses to 1 customer

SEND NO MONEY

See this wonderful bargain. YOU TAKE NO RISK. When goods arrive pay postman only $1.79 and few cents postage (or send cash with order and we will pay postage.) If not more than pleased, your money back at once. You can't lose a penny. Sizes 14 to 18 years and 34 to 44 inches bust measure. COLOR: Navy Blue.

NORMAN ROBERTS & CO.
Dept. 22 A 22. 200 N. Jefferson St., CHICAGO

ELGINS ON CREDIT

GREATEST Watch Value Since The War! A New, Genuine Elgin; Thin Model, 12 or 16 size; complete in 20-year gold-filled case. A beautiful $20 Elgin, SPECIAL This Month, ONLY

$14.95

We Have Trusted Wage Earners Everywhere for more than 20 years, and we will trust you; and that all our friends may have advantage of this new offer, we have made the terms Only $2 a Month.

But Write Today for full details and Big Free Catalog of hundreds of Bargains at new prices. SEND NO MONEY — just your name and address.

HARRIS-GOAR CO.
Dept. 194, KANSAS CITY, MO.

We Give 'em Away

To Credit Mail-Order Buyers

We will mail you, postpaid and absolutely free, a sugar-shell such as you would pay fifty to seventy-five cents for. Our object is to get acquainted and show you how you can save real money by getting your home-furnishings direct from the factory on monthly payments. Enclose this advt. and give the name of a mail-order house you have been dealing with,—this is important. To married women only. The sugar-shell will be either the Oneida Community Par Plate or nickel silver. A gift you'll be proud of all your life.

No 408-1 — This advt. must be enclosed

Quaker Valley Mfg. Co.
Silverware Dept. Aurora, Ill.

Enjoy Your Phonograph More!

The Phono-Toner takes a lot of the harshness out of the reproduction; gives a delightful rendition of records; reduces surface noise; makes needle-changing easier and quicker, and serves as a lifter for the soundbox. Nickel finish, corrugated, 35c; gold filled, 50c. Sent postpaid, subject to exchange or return.

The Phono-Toner

is simply attached to any phonograph operated with the usual needle set-screws, such as Victors, Columbias, etc. Cut shows Phono-Toner applied to a soundbox (forming the handle).

The Phonotone Co., 310 Lincoln Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

$2.50 Silk Velvet Tam

Silk lined; Black, Blue, Brown, Red. Fits any head size. Same style in all wool felt, any color, $1.50. Money refunded if not satisfied. C. O. D. orders filled. We pay postage.

E. CRITERION CAP CO., 157 W. 21st St., NEW YORK.

WHITE FLAME

BURNERS make your old kerosene lamps and lanterns give a brilliant white light better than electricity or gas. Doubles your light. Saves oil. No Mantle to Break. Guaranteed Safe and Reliable. Delights every user. Send now for complete sample postpaid 50 cts., stamps or coin. 3 for $1.25. Money back if Not Satisfactory. Live Representatives Wanted. Exclusive Territory.

WHITE FLAME LIGHT CO. 76 Clark Bldg. Grand Rapids, Mich.

SOMETHING NEW FOR THE Church Fair

By Mary A. Roberts

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SEVERAL qualities go to make up the successful plan for earning money for the church. The scheme should involve as little preliminary preparation as need be, it should include the cooperation of as many people as possible and there should be offered for sale-articles which are sensible and to be desired.

The following fairs and socials have that spice of novelty which will make them desirable from a financial standpoint, and they are also adaptable to local requirements, talents and financial resources.

An Alphabetical Donation Party

Send out invitations to all interested in this way.:

"To Miss Mary Blake:

"You are cordially invited to attend and contribute toward an Alphabetical Donation Fair to be held in the Parish House, on the afternoon and evening of October fourth. Please send, the day before, four articles beginning with the four letters of your Christian name."

At a similar party Mary brought a table mat, an apron, some raisins and some yarn. It was very ingenious to see the manner in which those who contributed contrived to have at least one article of value, while their other donations were small, causing, therefore, no undue tax on any one individual's purse. A man named "James" brought a jar of jam, an apple, money, a china egg for darning stockings and a cake of fancy soap. Bob, his brother, brought a Japanese bowl, orris root and bulbs. One girl named Elizabeth declared the plan a conspiracy on the part of the committee to ruin her financially but she solved the problem by bringing little pin cushions in animal, fruit and vegetable shapes. They included an elephant, lizard, zebra, apple, banana, egg, turnip and horse. As she was on the refreshment committee she contributed icing for small cakes for the omitted letter "i".

The variety of articles made the fair of exceptional interest and as great care was exercised on the part of the donors there were few articles which were not salable.

The rooms were decorated with autumn flowers and branches of effective leaves, and wire netting stretched over the ceiling held artificial blossoms and quantities of Japanese lanterns, each of which held a small electric light bulb lighted in the evening.

Twenty-six booths were arranged around the room, each bearing over its entrance a large red letter. Here were the twenty-six letters of the alphabet and the articles donated were all arranged under the letter with which they began. Certain exceptions were made for convenience; for instance, all fruit was grouped under the booth F and all cakes and candies under C. The inconvenient letters X, Y and Z hung over the dining-room door because supper came "at the end".

The girls who waited on the booths wore red or yellow dresses with dainty wreaths of artificial autumn leaves upon their heads. They also wore little white aprons on which were embroidered the letter of the booth each served. When it was necessary to have more than one person waiting on a booth there were duplicate letters as, of course, in the dining-room with X, Y, Z.

Donations not easily classified were grouped under the letter M on a small table marked Miscellaneous. The refreshment committee had, of course, made their plans independent of the letter scheme to have arrangements complete.

A Shirt-Waist Sale

Invitations for a shirt-waist party for the benefit of a church were sent out on little shirt-waists cut from thin writing paper, the neck and the sleeves being trimmed with paper lace.

Everything that could be used with a shirt-waist was for sale, as well as pretty shirt-waists of all sorts of material and patterns and material for the making of the garments for those who wished to make them themselves. There were also belts, collar and cuff sets, etc. The walls were decorated with poster pictures of "Shirt-waist" girls and men, copies of pictures by the most popular American artists.

The hostesses wore shirt-waists, as did most of the guests.

The informality of this sale was its chief charm, for it really partook more of the old-time "social" than most sales.

The guests were asked to bring their workbags and one hour of the afternoon was spent over the needles while one of the hostesses read a few pretty old-time stories and some of those present sang and played.

During the afternoon a Traveling Minstrel wandered in. She read fortunes, played her guitar and sang and asked ten cents each for small cards which she sold. These were also cut in shirt-waist form and were headed with the following verse:

I ask you maids and matrons
Who all know how to sew,
What to make the garments of
For folk like these below?

The artist?	The hunter?
The dairymaid?	The prisoner?
The bird lover?	The miser?
The fisherman?	The jilted lover?
The writer?	The jeweler?
The photographer?	The bankrupt?
The nun?	The mountain climber?
The widow?	The banker?
The man on a vacation?	The editor?
The butcher?	The musician?

The answers are as follows:

The artist should dress in canvas.
The dairymaid in cheese-cloth.
The bird lover in albatross.
The fisherman in fish-net.
The writer in paper muslin.
The photographer in blue print.
The nun in nuns'-veiling.
The widow in crepe.
The vacationist in outing cloth.
The butcher in butcher's linen.
The hunter in duck.
The prisoner in crossbar muslin.
The miser in cashmere.
The jilted lover in pique.
The jeweler in cotton.
The bankrupt in crash.
The mountain climber in Swiss.
The banker in checks.
The editor in print.
The musician in organdy.

The ones who were fortunate enough to guess them all were allowed to choose a pattern for a shirt-waist dress or costume and the men were each given a cuff-link set.

A picnic supper was served which was also unique. The refreshment room was lined with small refrigerators loaned for the purpose. Each person entering the room dropped a quarter into a beanpot at the door and went "foraging". Bread and butter, hot coffee and cocoa were on a side table with plates, cups and saucers and necessary utensils. The refrigerator held salads, cold meats, pies, cakes, fruit, jams and all sorts of odds and ends that would tempt the forager. Everyone carried their spoils to some good-sized tables where kindred appetites naturally grouped together. Everyone enjoyed the fun and novelty of such informality and all voted the "Shirt-waist Sale" a grand success.

A Date Party

A Date Party makes a novel change for a church fair. In anticipation of the New Year the numeral "twelve" to represent the twelve months of the year, can be the "theme" of the "scheme". Twelve cents can be charged for admission, there can be twelve taking part in a concert, twelve waitresses dressed to represent the twelve months in the year can wait on tables, etc.

The twelve booths can also be suggestive of the twelve months of the year in decorations and supplies, though there can be modifications of the idea if desired. It is perhaps more in keeping with originality to keep as closely to the suggestive idea of "dates" as possible, which, of course, is another way of saying calendars. Everything pertaining to engagements can also be for sale, diaries, calendars of all sorts for home and office use, and other desk appointments. At the refreshment table there can be a few substantials and the sweets should be a variety of "stuffed dates," puddings and goodies of like nature.

A small boy dressed as the "New Year" can act as page and guide throughout the evening and in one of the booths "Father Time" can hold court and tell fortunes to advantage. The idea can be developed into a variety of ways according to local talent or the needs of the community and is sure to make a pleasant event on Entertainment's Calendar!

A Brown Study Sale

This makes a pleasant little church entertainment for literary-minded folk of a community. Magazines and books can be for sale but this can make more of a Fair than would be at first supposed. The room in which the fair is held can be suggestive of a library. At one of the booths packages can be sold for a certain price, made to represent books with brown-paper covers—the only clue to the contents being a description or punning title. For instance, a looking-glass could be termed "Vanity Fair," a box of paper dolls could bear the title, "Little Women," etc.

The furnishings of the room should be in brown and the decorations can be of golden rod and cattails. In the dining-room adjoining, strings of pine-cones will add to the effect, candlesticks in small logs left in the rough will provide for pretty illumination and golden rod can touch to beauty a table cover of brown lining material of cheap texture. The refreshments can consist of brown-bread, beans and turkey or beef with browned gravy, potatoes browned in the pan, brown Betty, chocolate ice cream and plum pudding. Cocoa and coffee both have the desired hue and many other dainties can be added if desired to the menu.

Out of a brown bag the children can draw "grabs" in brown paper bags; at another booth called "The Chocolate Pot" candies and chocolate cakes can be sold.

The flea, louse, mosquito and fly have all been convicted of transmitting disease; and the bedbug has been accused. The U. S. Public Health Service, however, finds that he is probably innocent. If he ever does transmit disease he does so by carrying the germs on his mouth and not in his blood; and he can do this effectively only under especially filthy conditions, which would call for drastic methods to exterminate all vermin.

Dress Designing Lessons FREE

Women—Girls—15 or over, can easily learn Dress and Costume Designing during their spare moments

IN TEN WEEKS

Dress and Costume Designers Frequently Earn

$45 to $100 a week

STREET DRESS
Shop Price $65.00
Cost to make 27.25
Course saves 37.75

MANY START PARLORS IN THEIR OWN HOMES
Every woman who now does plain sewing should take up designing

Hundreds of Women are Learning Millinery by Mail

Cut and Mail to Franklin Institute
Dept. W 645
Rochester, N. Y.
Send me AT ONCE, free of any charge whatever, sample lessons from the Home Study Course here checked.
☐ DRESS DESIGNING
☐ MILLINERY
Name.....
Address.....

Let Us Send You

2 lovely winter weight knitted Princess Slips for only 95c. A smashing offer. The season's greatest sensation. Order today sure. Don't send one penny now. We will ship them by return mail prepaid.

On Approval

Every woman should have at least two of these extra warm Princess Slips knit in soft elastic rib from carefully selected double threads of combed cotton yarn. Lovely crocheted beading at neck and shaped waist. Color: Oxford gray with contrasting stripes. Bust: 34 to 40 inches.

2 Knitted Princess Slips 95c Prepaid

Worth $1.00 Each

This smashing reduced price good only while our present supply lasts. Wonderful opportunity. Hurry or you may be too late. Send your order in this very minute to avoid disappointment.

SEND NO MONEY

No, ma'am, just your name, address and size is all we want. You pay only our slashed price of 95c for two slips on arrival. Rush your order in. Your money back if you are not delighted. You risk nothing.

POSTAGE PAID

We pay delivery charges. Another big saving. You pay only our slashed price of 95c on arrival of goods. The greatest value giving offer ever known. Order today at our risk. State size.

Big Catalogue Mailed Free

BERNARD-HEWITT & CO.
Dept. N531, CHICAGO, ILL.

$2.98 We Pay POSTAGE

To introduce to the readers of this magazine our Special Money-Saving Footwear Catalog we are offering these women's smart new walking shoes way below their actual value and to make the offer still more attractive we will send them to you Postpaid, without one cent in advance. Just write for them.

Send No Money

But give size and color wanted, also your name and address. When the parcel arrives pay your postman and you will receive these lovely shoes made of selected veal calf with Goodyear stitched leather soles and stylish Cuban heels. Rubber heels attached. Sizes 2½ to 8. Widths D. & E.

Order Brown No. 6C218
Order Black No. 6C219

Brown or Black

Your money cheerfully refunded if you are not entirely satisfied.

Boston Store Chicago Ill.
STATE MADISON DEARBORN STREETS

5 Good Magazines — $1

Woman's World,	(Monthly)	Our Price
Good Stories,	(Monthly)
American Woman,	(Monthly)	$1.00
Mother's Magazine,	(Monthly)	ALL FIVE FOR 1 YEAR
The Farm Journal,	(Monthly)

ORDER BY CLUB NUMBER 212

A Dollar Bill will do—We take the risk

Send all orders to

Whitlock & Summerhays
25 North Dearborn Street, CHICAGO

We Pay $8 a Day

taking orders for Jennings Guaranteed Hosiery. Written guarantee with each pair to wear and give satisfaction or new hose free.

Year round Position

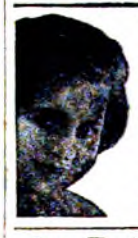
No Lay offs

Regular customers and repeat orders make you steady income. Hose for men, women and children, all styles, colors and finest line silk hose, all guaranteed. Low priced. No experience necessary. Write for samples.

JENNINGS MFG. CO.
Hose-336 Dayton, Ohio

10 Buys 100 Millions Billions

Engel "Art Corners"



NO PASTE NEEDED

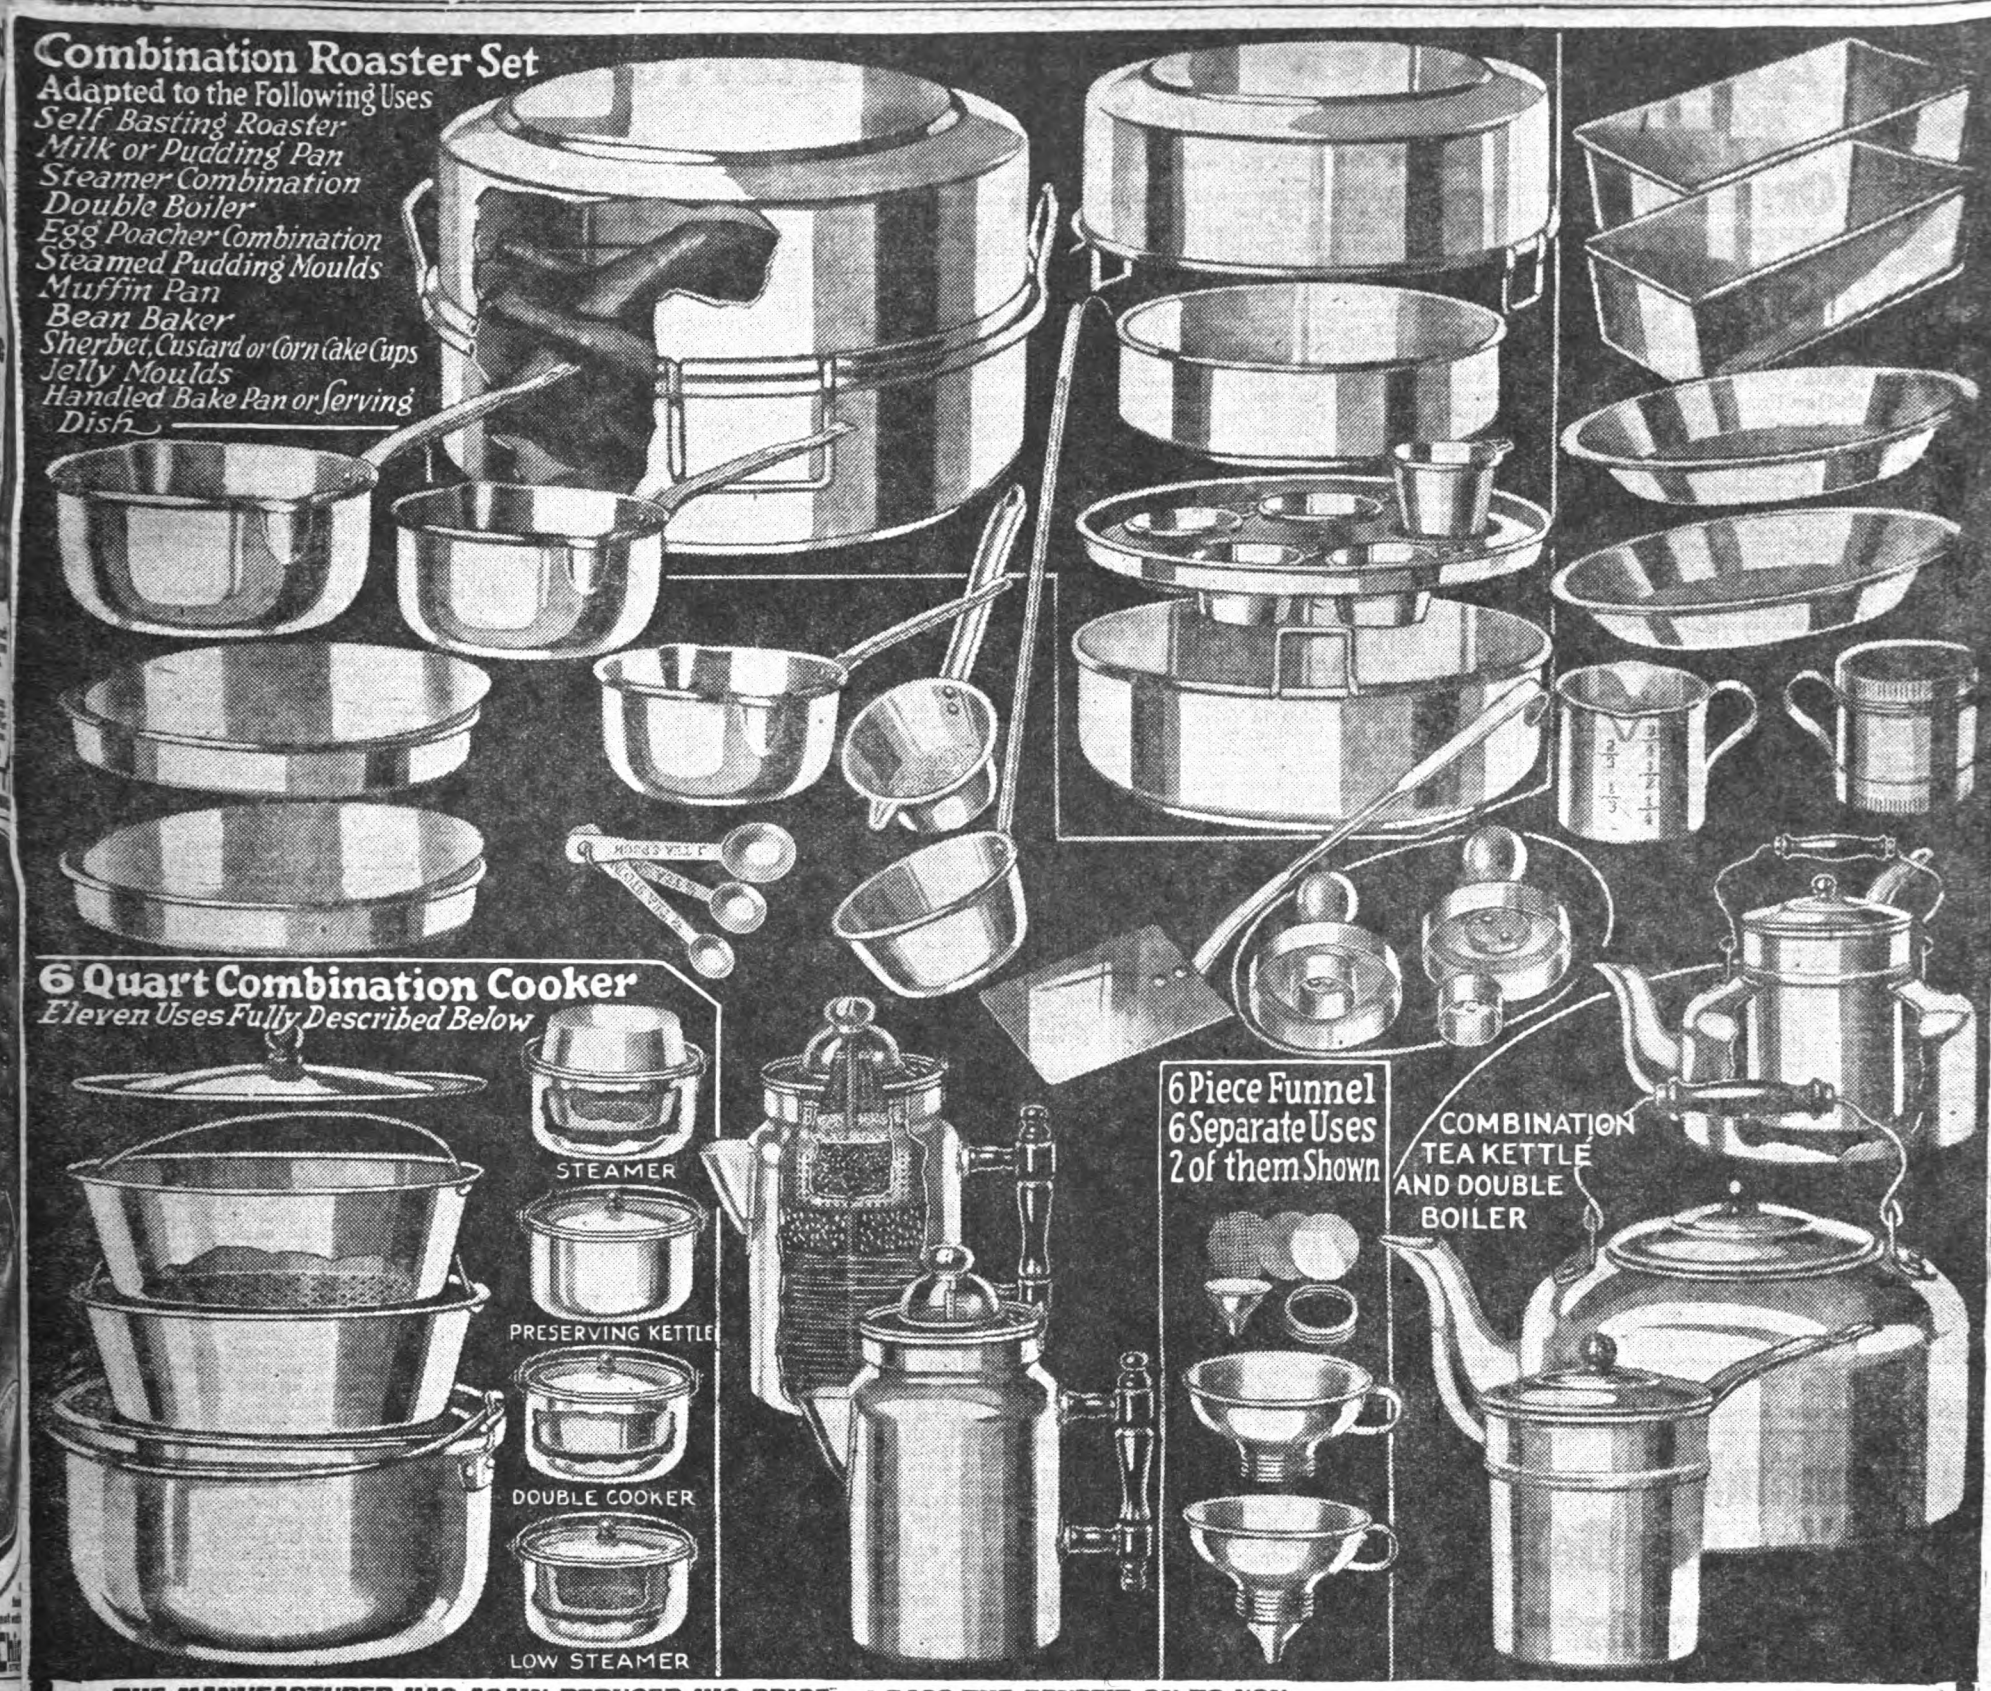
Use them to mount all kodak pictures, post cards, clippings in albums

Made in Square, Round, Oval, Fancy and Heart of black, gray, sepia, and red gummed paper. Slip them on corners of pictures, then wet and stick.

QUICK-EASY-ARTISTIC. No muss, no fuss. At photo supply, drug and stat'y stores. Accept no substitutes; there is nothing so good. 10c brings full pkg., and samples.

Engel Mfg. Co. Dept 100 A, 4711 N. Clark St., Chicago

FRECKLES



Risk a dime to get rid of them. Send your name and 10c, stamps or coin, to pay postage, and we'll mail you an extra large jar of Harwood's Freckle Cream: price, $1.25. If the freckles disappear within a month remit the price; otherwise return the unused portion of the jar.

Harwood Laboratories 408 Fox St., Aurora, Ill.

10 YEAR GUARANTEE

Watch, Ring & Chain Given—We positively give a genuine American Stem Wind & Set Watch, beautifully designed case, warranted time-keeper, 10-year guarantee; Sparkling Set or Plain Ring all for selling 25 large Beautifully Colored Art and Religious Pictures at 10c each. When sold send us $2.50 & we'll send Watch and Ring. HOME ART CO., 426-28 West 59th Street, Dept. 307, Chicago

THE MANUFACTURER HAS AGAIN REDUCED HIS PRICE—I PASS THE BENEFIT ON TO YOU

Use As Your Own 30 Days Free!

The former price of this Strictly High Grade Aluminum Set was $22.50. Lower manufacturing costs permitted me to cut the price to $13.95. Thousands of people took advantage of this Remarkable Bargain. These thousands are perfectly satisfied. Another reduction in factory costs, effective January 1st, now enables me to again slash the price to $10.95. My offer now challenges all competition.

Reduced from $22.50 to $10.95 — Easy Monthly Payments

Every Piece Guaranteed To Wear 20 Years

45 Useful Pieces High Grade Aluminum

ONLY $1 WITH ORDER

The 45 Pieces

- 9-Piece roaster of large capacity—diameter 10½ inches—6 inches high. Inside milk pan 2½ inches high, 8¼ inches in diameter.
- 1 Six qt. tea kettle with double boiler inset (two qts.) and cover; 3 pieces.
- 1 Six qt. combination cooker. 11 uses. (pudding pan) strainer or colander, kettle cover, casserole, or bake dish, convex kettle, preserving kettle, self basting roaster, combination cooker, corn popper or corn flake toaster, cereal cooker or double boiler, steamer set (4 pieces).
- 1 One qt. Lipped sauce pan
- 1 1½ qt. Lipped sauce pan
- 1 Two qt. Lipped sauce pan
- 2 Pie plates—diam. 10 in.
- 2 Jelly or layer cake pans with loose bottoms (4 pieces) diam. 10 inches.
- 1 Percolator with inset, Capacity 7 cups (2 pieces)
- 2 Bread pans, 9¾ x 5½
- 1 Ladle
- 1 Pancake turner
- 1 Coffee or Tea strainer
- 1 Combination biscuit and doughnut cutter (2 pieces)
- 1 Measuring cup
- 1 Combination funnel (6 pieces) 6 Separate Uses
- 3 Measuring spoons
- 1 Sugar or salt shaker

Here is one of the finest offers I have ever been able to make. Here is your chance to try for a whole month, right in your own kitchen, a Handsome, Useful, and High-Grade Aluminum Set at my invitation and at my risk. Send the coupon and first payment today. The complete set will be sent you immediately. Begin at once to use it as your own. Learn the big difference between percolator coffee and coffee-pot coffee; enjoy the richer aroma, the finer flavor and the clearer color. Know the many uses of the Big Combination Roaster (see picture above). See for yourself how it saves fuel, time and labor. Experience, by daily use, the pleasure in handling and the profit in using all the pieces. Enjoy the bright, clean, spic-and-span appearance the 45 pieces give your kitchen.

This Beautiful Aluminum Set must be its own salesman, as You Don't Buy From Pictures When You Deal With Spear. You must be entirely satisfied with its High Quality, its Low Price, and its Easy Terms. You must be delighted with its Shining Beauty and its High Efficiency. If your satisfaction is not thorough from every viewpoint, no matter how much you have used the set during the 30 days, you can return it. Your first payment and all transportation costs will be refunded. The Trial will not cost you a penny. Important! Every piece in this set is genuine high-grade, pure aluminum, mirror-like in finish, with a polish that cannot wear away, seamless, sanitary, and easy to clean. Will not flake, crack, chip, peel or corrode. EACH AND EVERY PIECE IS GUARANTEED TO WEAR FOR 20 YEARS. Heats rapidly and evenly, and so saves fuel Heavier and better than ordinary grades. These pieces are made of extra-heavy, extra hard high-grade Aluminum, and will give years of Hard, Honest, Faithful Service. All the articles are of a large serviceable size. Every article is of the kind that you will need and use often. This set must not be confused with ordinary sets that include many useless thin pieces. You must judge this set by its big value, rather than its little price. And this you can do during your 30 Days Free Trial. Former price $22.50, which we have slashed to rock bottom. Order No. MA2500. Terms $1 with order, $1 monthly. Total price, $10.95. Will be shipped by express unless otherwise requested.

ONLY $1 MONTHLY

30 to 50 % Reductions on

Furniture	Baby Carriages
Bedding	Glassware, Stoves
Springs	Ranges, Enamel
Mattresses	Cooking Sets
Bed Spreads	Aluminum Ware
Rugs, Carpets	Refrigerators, Lamps
Linoleum	Washing Machines
Lace Curtains	Sewing Machines, Guns
Portieres	Silverware, Clocks, Cameras, Victrolas, Paints, etc.
Dishes

Astounding Bargains in my New, FREE Book

All my prices are Away Down! I have slashed them to the Bone! Not for years has anyone seen such Bargains! My Big, Free Catalog shows Thousands of Price Cuts—Everything is reduced from 30 to 50 per cent! If you have been waiting for the chance to BUY RIGHT, Now is your time. I say this with all the Emphasis at my command. Don't buy a single thing for the home until you get my Big Bargain Catalog. I want you to compare my prices with those of your home stores and elsewhere. And remember this, you never feel the outlay when you deal with Spear. My Monthly payments are the Easiest. Everything I sell is sent on 30 Days' Free Trial in your Own home. No matter where you live you can have the benefit of my terms and conditions.

Many a family dates its change to a brighter, a happier, a friendlier, a cosier home from the day it received My Big, Free Catalog.

This Big Book of Home Furnishing Ideas pictures and describes a wonderful and beautiful choice of all the things you need to make your dream-home become a reality. Sending for it does not obligate you to buy anything.

Write for my catalog today

Nathaniel Spear
President

→Spear & Co.←

Dept. E-1 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Home Furnishers for the People of America

SPEAR & CO., Dept. E-1, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Send me at once the 45-piece aluminum set as described above. Enclosed is $1.00 first payment. It is understood that if at the end of 30 day's trial I decide to keep it, I will send you $1.00 monthly. Order No. MA2500. Total price, $10.95. Be sure to write or print your name and address plainly. Send me your Big Free Catalog also.

Name.....

R. F. D., Box No. or Street & No.....

Post Office.....State.....

If your shipping point is different from your post office fill in this line

Send shipment to.....

FREE CATALOG } If you want the Free Catalog Only, Send No Money, put an X here and write your name and address plainly on the above lines. ☐

ADLER
NO MONEY IN ADVANCE
Organ Offer

Saves You 48.75

Your Own Time to Pay

My 30-Day Free Trial—No Money Down Offer—Breaking All Records.

Greatest Offer Ever Made

The value of an Adler Organ in your own home can never be measured in dollars and cents. Because I want every family to know the elevating power and the delights of sweet organ music, I have originated the wonderful Adler plan of selling organs which has made the "Adler" a household word—more than 100,000 of these famous organs are in the homes of the people. Send today for big, handsomely illustrated Free Organ Catalog. Learn how you can have the World's Best Organ—winners of highest prize at St. Louis World's Fair, also winners of first Medals at National Conservation Exposition, Knoxville, Tenn., 1913, and at the Jamestown Exposition—sent to your home without paying a cent for a

FREE 30-Day Trial

Have it a month free—if it does not prove all I claim—just ship it back to me—and your trial doesn't cost you a single penny.

Easy Small Payments
No Burden
No Interest
No Collectors

Send no money until you decide to buy. Then pay me at your convenience, in small amounts. If, at the end of a year, the "Adler" fails to make good on every claim, I will refund every dollar you have paid me. The Adler is the World's Best Organ at the very lowest price ever made before.

50-Year Guarantee

I can and will save you $48.75 because I sell direct from the $1,000,000 Adler Organ Factory (greatest in existence) at lowest wholesale factory prices. The Adler Plan thoroughly wrecks all retail organ prices, absolutely sponging out all "in-between" profits.

Mail Coupon Today!

Send No Money

C. L. Adler, Pres.
Adler Mfg. Co.,
2353 W. Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.
Send me—FREE—your wonderful Organ Book.

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

Be Beautiful, You Can Be!

Stuart's Calcium Wafers Have a Knack of Making the Complexion the Kind You Rave Over

If after each meal you will take a Stuart's Calcium Wafer there will soon be discovered the coming of a complexion that will make you proud of yourself. You can wear your best gowns and hats and feel at ease.

All you need to do to clear the skin of pimples, blotches, liver spots, blackheads, muddy complexion and skin eruptions is to use Stuart's Calcium Wafers. These troubles seek the skin as one of the natural outlets of the body. And if you supply it with the proper materials the skin will pass off impurities through the pores of the skin instead of retaining them in the form of ugly accumulations. Get a box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers in any drug store at 60 cents. You will then realize how easy it is to be beautiful.

Try This on Your Hair 15 Days

Then let your mirror prove the results —Write today for the trial.

Now that dermatologists and skin specialists are agreed that the beginning of baldness is the gradual thinning out of the hair and that that is due to a microbe in the scalp, it was not difficult for science to overcome it. So it is now possible to stop thinning out of the hair, falling hair, baldness, gray hair, bald patches, itchy, scaly dandruff and other such afflictions of the hair and scalp. The new method strengthens the hair roots and follicles, makes the scalp healthy and sanitary and puts life, gloss and lustre into the old and growing hair. Tests show it will do this in 15 days in your own home—perhaps less in your case. Send your address today for the 15 days home trial to the

AYMES CO. H-360 44 East 23rd St. New York

A New Year Eve Interlude

By Joseph F. Novak

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

RICHARD Naughton had opened his country house for the Christmas holidays. A bachelor of many years' standing, this was his custom of squaring his social debts, and as he was a host without peer, an invitation to his Christmas house-party meant a week of unalloyed pleasure. Then, too he always thoughtfully terminated the affair the day before New Year's Eve, and this was nice since his guests could then return to the city and usher in the New Year as they saw fit.

Naughton, however, always remained a day longer to see that the house was closed up and properly left in charge of the caretaker.

His house-party this year had gone off in the customarily satisfactory way, and now Naughton was alone, debating as to whether he should have his caretaker drive him to the railroad depot, or whether he should motor to the city.

Personally, he preferred the machine, for it was well equipped to withstand the most freezing weather, but the lowering sky portended snow and even his staunch "Jane" (thus he spoke of his automobile) could not always conquer snow-drifts.

For some moments he sat, dressed in his heavy overcoat with its great fur collar, in the midst of the ghost-like furniture swathed in its dust-coverings, undecided. He had a handsome figure to look at, a man of clean health, a clear eye and a reputation without a blemish.

At length he decided in favor of the automobile, and with the decision, he arose, went to the garage and was soon spinning down the clean concrete road, for though the landscape was snow-bound, still there had been some sunshiny days after Christmas and the sun had eaten the snow from the concrete road and left it clear.

For many miles all went well, though the wind howled through the naked trees of the woods through which he passed, as if defying the machine and seeming to say: "You may be fleet, good sir, but I'll beat you in the race, yet."

The storm made good its threat, and announced its victory with little flurries of snow, dry as dust and stinging as needles, and after a few of these, it settled down into an old-fashioned blizzard. But even though it fell fast, it scurried across the concrete road, and the great brooms of the wind kept the road clear, as if it enjoyed the race with human-made speed, and was bound to take no unfair advantage.

Naughton, too, enjoyed the race. His sporting blood was up and he scudded along, and tens of miles he tore from the sum total he had to cover.

But after a time the storm gained, and Naughton felt his hands growing numb. This would not do, so he determined to stop at the first farmhouse he came to and ask permission to warm himself. A cup of hot coffee, too, would not come amiss. To stop would delay him, of course, but his program was to spend the New Year Eve at his club and as there would be something doing until well into the morning, it made little difference how late it would be before he arrived.

Accordingly, when the next farmhouse loomed up, he turned off the main road and up the little lane that led to the house, then parking his car, he sprang from the machine, hurried to the door and knocked.

The door was opened, after a short wait, by a woman, clad in an expensive storm coat. Over her head she had a wrap of some light material and her hair showed signs of much dressing.

Her eyes fastened themselves upon Naughton with something like annoyance in them.

"You are going out?" he queried after a courteous bow. "I wondered if I could get something to eat and whether I could warm my hands. They are almost numb from driving."

"Poke up the fire, if you wish, it is dying down. As for the eating, that is up to you. There are eggs in the pantry, likewise fresh bread. If you want coffee, make it. I'm going."

"It is storming dreadfully outside. Are you going to walk?"

"Yes, a little way. Through the field and down to the river. I cross the ice and get the interurban car on the other side."

"What will the rest of the family say when they come and find me here—alone?" he questioned.

"There's no family, except my husband, and he won't be home until late. I know that," she responded bitterly. "No one will bother you—unless a tramp might, or another motorist in distress."

"If you are going, I'd better be going, too——" Naughton began, but she suddenly interrupted him with:

"Never mind! A few minutes more or less will make no difference to me. Take off your wraps and sit up to the fire and I'll prepare some food for you," and with the words she threw the lacy wrap from her head and divested herself of her coat.

Magical change!

She was gowned in a dress of wondrous beauty, a thing of chiffon and sparkling beaded stuff that, to Naughton, was beyond description.

Then she kicked off the heavy storm boots she wore, exhibiting silk-slippered feet.

He stared at her in amazement, but said nothing for a while. He sat up to the stove and warmed his hands, watching her silently as she prepared a light meal for him, bitterness in her eyes.

At length he spoke.

"Going to celebrate the New Year's advent?"

"Yes!" she snapped.

"Without your husband?".

"A lot he cares," she returned. Then evidently brimming with her wrongs, she burst out:

"This is the last time he will disappoint me. We were to go to a New Year dance in town. But tonight he got a call from Chester, a town about ten miles from here, with reference to some business, and of course it was more important than pleasing me. I had planned so much on this affair and even made my dress so that it wouldn't cost too much, and here I am. I wanted to please him, but when he got around me in such a nice way and showed me that the affair meant quite a profit to us, I couldn't insist that he let the opportunity go. Yet not once has he ever gone out of his way to please me, and I'm sick and tired of it, do you hear? Sick and tired?" Her voice rose to an almost hysterical shriek. "Now I've determined to go to the city tonight and enjoy myself."

"It's almost eight o'clock now," he reminded.

"I don't care!" she flared. "I'm tired of sticking on this stupid farm without a bit of pleasure to lighten the monotony. I like the farm, but I'm only a girl, after all, and I want some recreation. It would do Frank good, too, to dress up occasionally and let me see in him the handsome young fellow that I loved and married. He's not a bad sort, but so thoughtless, and thoughtlessness hurts sometimes as much as downright beatings do. Oh, God, couldn't he have taken me this once, and made me happy? But no, he thinks our getting ahead is more important and when we're rich and can enjoy ourselves, we'll be so old that we won't care about life. I'm sick of it all—and—and—I'm through!"

"You are leaving your husband? Or are you simply going to the city and return again?"

"I said I'm through," she returned in a voice that left no doubt as to her intention.

"You are going to friends, I presume?"

"No. I don't know where I'm going except that I'm going to get away from here, happen what will. I'm ready to take the consequences!"

Naughton's eyes widened.

"So?" he leered just a trifle. "Well, I'm bound for the city, so why not come with me? I have a table engaged at the Le Vanitie Restaurant. They have a swell cabaret there and splendid food. If you feel like enjoying yourself, come with me. There won't be any harm in it, and I think you need not be ashamed of me," and he drew himself up, knowing that the girl was comparing his fine lines with the often uncouth figure of her husband. "I'd certainly be proud to escort you. Will you come?"

She looked at him a moment or two, without speaking, and he urged:

"I don't blame you in the least. It must be pretty tough for a pretty girl like you to stick around this dull place all by yourself. Your husband doesn't appreciate you, so why waste your good looks on him? What do you say? Do you want to see the Old Year out and the New Year in? Come on, be a sport! Tomorrow make a resolution to be a butterfly—leave your chrysalis! You can always get a job, and there is always room on the stage for a beauty like you! And I could help you get there!"

For some time she said not a word, but silently went on with the little meal. She brought the steaming things from the stove, then, as she slammed down the coffee-pot, she said crisply:

"All right!"

"Good!" he returned. "As soon as I'm finished, we'll go."

He hardly ate of the food she had prepared, however, as he held forth on the glamours of the city's night life. Did she dance? He did and greatly enjoyed a good dancing partner. Did she enjoy the theater? He had two tickets for one of the big revues that was current at one of the show-houses and though they would be late, that made no difference as those things were really great vaudeville shows and one could come in at most any time.

He saw that all his glowing pictures did not make any especial impression upon the girl, yet at the same time she showed no indication of retreating from the position she had taken, and when he had finished, and had picked up his hat, coat and gauntlets, she did likewise and said:

"I am ready."

Silently he took her by the arm and opened the door and they passed out into the night, while the wind let out a sudden shriek as if it wailed over a lost soul.

They went to the automobile and he helped her in; then, after kicking away the snow that had piled up about the wheels, he got in and they were off. Over the rough road of the little lane they crunched and on to the concrete, stretching like a long black thread through a world of spotless white to perdition.

"Some night, but a regular old-fashioned New Year's Eve," Naughton commented as they spun along. "I enjoy a night like this and as my 'Jane' here isn't afraid of anything, I feel quite at ease. Comfortable riding machine, isn't it?"

"Yes," the girl answered lifelessly, but she seemed anything but comfortable.

He smiled at her, indulgently.

"I suppose it seems a bit queer to be out of your husband's protection, doesn't it? But after all, what's a husband? Merely a meal ticket. And yours apparently was one who provided the roast beef and potatoes—and no dessert, and pleasure is the dessert of the banquet of life. Rather neat that, don't you think?" and as she nodded, he laughed: "There, there, old girl, chirk up, and enjoy this fine ride. We're actually making forty-five miles an hour in spite of the storm."

The more he spoke, however, the more uncomfortable the girl appeared, until at last terror, unadulterated terror showed in her eyes.

He noted this.

"Look!" and he shut off the little trouble light on the dash-board and they were in darkness "Doesn't it look as if we were at the end of the world—just we two?"

How horribly desolate it looked! It chilled Naughton. How, then, did it affect his shrinking companion?

"Too depressing," he commented, switching on the trouble light again. "There," that makes it more cozy. Why," and he peered into her face, "surely you are not afraid? By the way, what's your name? Never mind, I'll call you 'Cutie', may I?"

"You may—call—me—anything—oh, my God! I want to go home!"

"What?" He put on the brakes suddenly. "What? Go back to that thoughtless boob to whom fifty cents is more than his wife's happiness? Go back to a lout who leaves you at home alone on New Year's Eve when other men are taking their wives to dances and watch-night parties and the like? Oh, pshaw, girl, don't weaken."

They came to a cross road, he swung into it and into trackless snow.

"Don't call him names, please," she begged piteously. "I always loved Frank, and perhaps if I had told him how lonely I sometimes got, he might have been less thoughtless. He's always been generous and never cruel. Only I got so tired of never going anywhere and tonight I was so disappointed and angry and desperate, that it seemed as if I had no reason left. Oh, please please, take me back to him!"

Naughton's tone changed from bantering to sneering.

"Oh, you want to go back to him, do you? You'd like to go back to his protection now that you've left it, wouldn't you? Well, you won't, my fine girl, I'll tell you. You're coming with me! When a woman says she's going out for a good time and doesn't care about the consequences, she usually gets what's coming to her. You haven't got into the hands of a tender fool like your husband. You're in the hands of a man of the world!"

"Oh—oh—Mister! (and her lack of his name made her appeal the more pitiful) take me back! Oh, please, take me back!"

"I will—in due time," he mocked.

"Help!" she screamed.

For answer, he threw open the car door. A whirl of snow blew in upon them. Outside, nothing but white, chilling, unbounded trackless white.

"Scream if you like! What good will it do you? Who will hear you? When you get tired, you'll shut up," he returned, as he slammed the door.

And again the machine turned into an unbroken road.

The girl did not make any further outcry.

"Have you no mercy?" she cried. "Have you no pity?"

"You had no pity on your husband, did you?"

"I bore it a long time," she said weakly, "but after all his neglect was meant for my good. I see it now and see that had I showed him just how I felt about it, he would have listened to me. Please take me back."

"You'd better come with me," he said grimly, and his voice held out no hope.

"I'll cry out when we get to town," she threatened weakly.

"Lot of good that will do you. Anyone who hears you will think you've had too much hooch. Quit that sniveling and shut up. It makes me sore. I'm master now."

For a third time the machine turned into an unbroken road but valiantly chugged on.

"I thought you were a man of honor and decency——"

"Bah! A man of honor! He'd invite a married woman to celebrate the incoming New Year with him, wouldn't he?"

She wilted, and for some time not a word passed between them.

For a fourth time the machine careened wildly around a corner. But the girl gave no thought to the outside. There was but one thought in her mind. Each turn of the wheels was bringing nearer and nearer to the brink and now the machine seemed to dash on with the rapidity of thought.

Then came a rough bit, the machine skidded, hurtled and bumped and came to a sudden stop.

Naughton jumped out of the machine, and went to her side of the machine. For the first time he placed a hand upon her.

"We'll stop here," he said.

She looked up, dazed, but made no move.

"Come," he said, and almost dragged her from the machine.

And now she looked—wildly, unbelievingly.

For before her, snowbound but distinguishable, rose her own doorway!

The yellow light streamed from the kitchen and fell in a yellow bar upon the snow, in which the fleecy snow danced. It fell, too, upon Naughton.

The girl searched his face. A rather sad smile rested there.

"What—what does it mean?" she gasped.

"It was a rather tough lesson, wasn't it, little girl?" he said. "We only had a little joy-ride, that's all."

"Lesson? Joy-ride?" she repeated, bewildered.

"I knew you didn't want to leave your husband, and I knew there wasn't a streak of yellow in you. I saw that you were only disappointed and I knew that you would regret the step you contemplated. And I thought that if I would let you do just what you wanted to do, you would the more quickly find out that it was just what you didn't want to do. So I pretended to be a man of the caliber you undoubtedly would have picked up on the city streets or in a New Year cabaret. I know your roads hereabouts and if you hadn't been so frightened and had counted the turns you would have noted that we had made a complete square. Now, forgive my little preachment and make a New Year resolution to straighten out the little misunderstanding that might have wrecked two otherwise happy lives. Will you do that?"

"Yes, oh, yes," she replied, and catching his hands in hers, she kissed them.

"Don't," he remonstrated, "that isn't necessary."

"I am so thankful to you," she murmured.

"That's all right," he said, a bit diffidently. "I think I had better go now, it is getting late."

"Stop in a bit until Frank comes. I want him to meet you. Perhaps you will now enjoy a bite to eat more than you did a short while back."

The bitter cold of the night, and the prospect of his drive decided Naughton.

"All right, I will," he agreed, and they went in.

She put her heavy wrap out of sight, and while she did this, he poked up the fire, and then she went to preparing the meal.

In a little while there came a faint halloo from outside.

"It's Frank!" the girl exclaimed, and she ran to the door to meet him, and when he entered she threw herself into his arms, stroked his cheeks and then let her hands wander over his big broad shoulders to rest upon his heart.

"Whose machine is that——" he began, but stopped when he caught sight of Naughton.

"A motorist stopped in and asked to warm himself and get a cup of coffee. I let him in. You are not angry?"

"No. I should say not, only don't make it a practice when I'm not around, dear heart," he said.

Then he engaged Naughton in conversation until the girl prepared the little meal.

"You make our home so pleasant, Alice, that I hate to leave it. But I'll never play you such a trick again. The money in the deal tonight didn't compensate me for the shame I felt when I came to town and found everybody going to the New Year dance. Would you like to go? There is still time," he said, "and you are all dressed."

"I know, but somehow now I don't want to, although I was so anxious, I dressed up. Let us spend the New Year watches together, Frank."

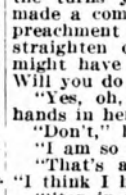
"All right, but tomorrow I make a resolution that we go somewhere as often as possible, and if I'm tempted to break it, you break my head, Alice. I heard some of the folks saying how I was neglecting you—and I guess I was. I don't deserve such a girl as Alice, do I, sir?" and he smiled at Naughton.

"Well, make yourself worthy of her, brother," Naughton laughed, and then as the meal finished, he rose. "I must be on my way," he said.

They invited him to remain, but he said he couldn't and off he went. But not before Alice had a chance to whisper to him:

"God bless you, and if there is any unsatisfied desire in your heart, may the New Year bring it to you."

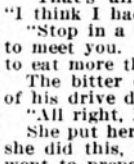
"Amen to that," he said.



He got into the machine and hurtled through the drifts and out upon the highway, to finish his interrupted journey.

He reached the city and his club just as the bells were chiming in the New Year.

"Where in Sam Hill have you been?" one of his club-fellows asked.



He smiled mysteriously.

"I don't tell tales out of school, dear William," he said. "I may have been in church, for all you know."

Hair Dyeing COMB

produces any shade by simply combing without staining the scalp, perfectly harmless, durable, undetectable. Saves time and money and is the only practical way of coloring hair. Write for particulars. H. BIENEUM, Dept. B, 1836 Mulford Ave., New York.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

LET EJECTHAIR destroy yours. No PAIN, NO HARM, cannot fail. Cheapest and only GUARANTEED Treatment of its kind. Different from others, which only remove the hair over night. Send 25c for a sample to J. E. M. Co., 487 University Av., ST. PAUL, MINN.

FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

GRAY HAIR RESTORED TO ITS NATURAL COLOR

Not an experiment but an absolute success. Rhodes' Hair Rejuvenator will positively restore gray and faded hair to its original color, youthful beauty and rich lustre. It is a scalp and hair food that relieves dandruff, and all scalp humors. Nourishes the roots of the hair and makes it grow luxuriantly. Harmless and undetectable. It is not a dye and will not stain the skin or linen. It relieves itching and sore scalps.

MAKES HAIR GROW

Let us convince you. Send 5 cents postage for free trial bottle, book on the Care of the Hair, etc. Large bottle by parcel post $1.15 (includes postage). Address the hair and scalp specialists,

A. T. RHODES & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

"How Could You Ever Afford So Many New Things?"

Let Us Tell You How—

—You Can Get These Six Smart Garments Without Cost
—How You Can Make $25 to $50 a Week at Home
—and How You Can Always Be Well-Dressed at One-Half to One-Third Store Prices

YOU can put these six pretty and useful articles of dress into your closet—and they won't cost you a cent.

They can all be yours free for the making; a smart collar and cuff set; a dainty chemise of sheer material; a useful "over all" apron; a charming blouse; a trim little housedress; and a handsome stylish afternoon dress.

Think of wearing the six splendid garments pictured above, absolutely without cost! And think too of finding a way to have all the pretty clothes you want—at half to a third of what the shops charge. Three dresses for what you now spend for one.

And then, too, you can learn a new, quick, sure way to turn your spare hours into dollars—to become self-supporting and independent if you wish—to have an income of your own—as much as $25 to $50 a week—to do with as you please.

This "New Way" Helps Women to Make and Save Money

The "New Way" Course in Fashionable Clothes Making brings a whole outfit of better and more stylish clothes within the easy reach of every woman—and at the same time qualifies her to design and finish modish garments which bring high prices. This simple Course is the result of months of study and co-operation by expert designers, modistes and tailors. After much experiment they have reduced the most important principles of professional tailoring and dressmaking to their simplest possible form, and have arranged them in easy-to-follow lessons. Through this simplified, progressive method even the woman who has never sewed before can learn how to make pretty, stylish clothes for herself and others.

Every woman knows what a hard problem dressing herself on a small income is! You know yourself; you go down town, expecting to find a certain garment at a certain price. But, nine times in ten, it costs much more—and if you pay the difference, it means economizing on shoes, or lingerie, or something else. What a relief the "New Way" Course has proved for women who had always thought they couldn't make clothes that would have "the right look"—and who consequently had to pay the prices the stores charge.

Now they not only have clothes made of better materials than when they had to buy "ready-made"—but they can afford more and better shoes, underthings, hats, and all the other things that must be purchased ready to wear.

Short-Cut Methods Take Out Hard Parts

Let us tell you about the remarkable new sewing methods that now enable you to accomplish in minutes what used to require hours. A charming distinctive gown can be made simply by following a series of easy-to-follow steps, and the exclusive teachings of the "New Way" Course make it possible for you to duplicate the effects produced by famous New York and Paris dressmakers. Let us tell you about "the secret of the silhouette"—the new principles of design—the remarkable idea behind "adaptive dressmaking."

Let us also tell you how you can get without cost, all the materials and trimmings necessary to make the six charming garments pictured above. Patterns and full directions accompany the material, and you learn quickly and easily the simple steps needed to make not only these garments, but all the others you need and want.

Dress Form Included Without Charge

Learn how you ean secure a splendid "professional model" dress form without expense. Also how we present you with a handsome Oriental sewing basket and complete modiste's outfit—in appreciation of your co-operation. The Simplified Dressmaking Chart, the Diploma and the Life Scholarship of this "New Way" Course are also exclusive features which you want to find out all about.

Get Valuable Free Information

It costs you nothing to find out about this wonderful new way to make clothes—and to save and make money.

Do not hesitate. Mail the coupon below, or write a letter, for the free information about all the exclusive features of the "New Way" Course in Fashionable Clothes Making, the free Modiste's Outfit and the Six Free Garments. Learn how you will be able to have three dresses instead of one—dresses that are prettier, finer, better-fitting than those you could buy ready-made at two or three times what they cost you.

There is no obligation. You want to read this information and see for yourself what these new short-cut methods will mean to you. Clip the coupon now, fill it in and mail it at once to—

SCHOOL OF MODERN DRESS
Dept. 71, 821 Jefferson Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

SCHOOL OF MODERN DRESS
Dept. 71, 821 Jefferson Street,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Without cost or obligation on my part, you may send me complete information regarding the "New Way" Course, how I can make $25 to $50 a week at home, and how I can get the six garments FREE.

Name .....

Address.....

City..... State.....

Comfort 1-22

Vapo Cresolene

The Vapor Treatment for Coughs and Colds

The time for Vapo-Cresolene is at the first indication of a cold or sore throat, which are so often the warnings of dangerous complications.

Simple to use; you just light the little lamp that vaporizes the Cresolene and place it near the bed at night.

The soothing antiseptic vapor is breathed all night, making breathing easy, relieving the cough and easing the sore throat and congested chest.

Cresolene is recommended for Whooping Cough, Spasmodic Croup, Influenza, Bronchitis, Coughs and Nasal Catarrh. Its germicidal qualities make it a protection when these diseases are epidemic. It gives great relief in Asthma.

Cresolene has been recommended and used for the past 42 years. The benefit derived from it is unquestionable.

Sold by druggists. Send for descriptive booklet 24. THE VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt St., New York or Leeming-Miles Bldg., Montreal, Canada.

YARN 100% VIRGIN WOOL

Beautiful sweaters, scarfs, shawls, jackets, hoods, gloves, stockings—dozens of lasting garments—for grown-ups and children cost ⅓ less when you make them from Homewool 100% Virgin Wool Yarns. Direct from mill to you at big savings. Big skeins. Easy to make up. Attractive colors. Send today for free sample cards and Homewool Catalog.

Home Woolen Mills, Estab. 1876
248 Main Street, Eaton Rapids, Mich.
Send for Catalog—it is FREE

"HOMEWOOL"

Women! Corset Comfort Guaranteed!

This Corset Sent on Trial

Have better health—perfect corset comfort—an ideal figure without tight lacing by wearing the wonderful

M & K Uplift Corset

Its patented, scientifically constructed Uplift belt gently lifts and supports the abdomen in its natural position. Stops backaches, headaches, bearing down pains and tired-out feeling. Reduces stout figures—supports the slender. Thousands of women would wear no other. Doctors prescribe it. Dressmakers like it. Write for Trial Offer, illustrated description and expert confidential advice. Address

KATHERINE KELLOGG
M & K CORSET CO.
281 Kellogg Bldg., Jackson, Mich.

Knitting Wools

14c an Ounce

Silky Wool, 2 ozs.—44c

100 Samples Upon Request
Daily Parcel Post Service

COLONIAL YARN HOUSE
1231-C Cherry St., Philadelphia, Pa.

RESINOL

Soothing and Healing
Gives Speedy Relief to Babies
Tortured by Skin Trouble
Will not irritate the tender skin

"Mizpah" Baby Nipples

DO NOT COLLAPSE—PREVENT MUCH COLIC
FREE TO MOTHERS AND DOCTORS!

Valve (A-B) prevents vacuum. Inside ribs prevent collapsing when child bites nipple. Rim is made so nipple cannot be pulled off bottle. Guard your baby's health. Send no money! We send you a sample nipple free, postpaid, on request. Write now, to

THE WALTER F. WARE CO., Dept. A, Philadelphia, Pa.

This Beautiful Sleeping Doll FREE

You can have this Beautiful, Doll. She has closing eyes, movable arms and legs, turning head, real hair. Dressed as you see her in this picture. Dress can be taken off and put on. She also wears socks and baby bonnet. We will send her free, all charges paid, for selling 12 packs of Post Cards at 10c per pack.

Jones Manufacturing Co.,
Dept. 7, Attleboro, Mass.

Will Not Wash Out

A mark made with Payson's Indelible Ink is there to stay—it will not fade and lasts as long as the fabric itself. Applied with a common pen to linens, cottons, or woolens. Be sure to get the genuine Payson's in the red and yellow wrapper. At stores everywhere or sent postpaid, 30c.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK CO., 326 Henshaw Ave., Northampton, Mass.

Through the columns of this department our Doctor's advice regarding maternity and child welfare will be given free in answer to questions by our subscribers. Address Mother and Baby Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and be sure to give your full name and address. Names will not be published.

Coughs and Colds of Children

THIS seems an appropriate subject for this month's talk, for it is during the cold winter months we see the largest number of people—adults and babies—suffering with colds and coughs. We do not intend this talk to enable a mother to get along without medical attention if the child needs it, but do hope by a few simple suggestions to aid her in treating simple colds and also to call her attention to a few danger signals which she ought to know.

I know of nothing more distressing for the parents to bear than the helpless, silent suffering of a sick baby, but this seems doubly worse when the organs of breathing are affected and they cannot help but note the extreme effort and distress for the baby to gets its breath. One of the hardest tasks a mother, or even a physician, has to do is to be able to tell just when a simple cold becomes bronchitis or pneumonia. A baby is taken with what seems to be a simple cold, and within a few hours this may prove to be a serious case of pneumonia, and only the most clever medical men can tell just when this apparent cold becomes pneumonia, but the watchful mother can be guided by this rule: if the baby's apparent cold seems to be growing worse all the time instead of growing better, get a physician and have him make a thorough examination. Another condition that is sometimes confusing is to decide whether the baby has simple croup, a disease not dangerous to life, or the much-dreaded membranous croup or diptheria, which is dangerous to life. The same rules apply here, bearing in mind this: the simple cold or simple croup should and always does respond to simple home treatment; and in your baby's case, if you do not get the expected relief, do not take a chance but call in the doctor and find out positively the cause of the child's illness. In some countries over one-third of the children who die before they are five years old, die of some disease of the organs of respiration, pneumonia or bronchitis, but in the United States a larger proportion die of digestive disturbances.

We shall first take up coryza or cold in the head, snuffles. This is an inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the nose or nasal passages, and may be mild or severe, acute or chronic. The cause is not always clearly evident, but is usually caused by chilling the body, exposure of neck and head to cold air or feet and ankles to cold and dampness, also irritating gases or vapors, tobacco smoke.

Children whose circulation is not normal seem most susceptible to colds. The symptoms of coryza or snuffles are sneezing, first dryness of nose and throat, then a slight discharge, which becomes profuse. In very young children this is often a distressing condition as it makes nursing difficult, the breathing while sleeping may be nasal or snoring. Treatment: castor oil in teaspoonful doses to be sure the bowels are properly regulated, and lubricating the nasal passages every few hours with a few drops of sweet oil, or hen's oil. You might rub a little outside of nose, also put on flannel nightcap for a few days. If the cold seems severe, in addition to these things would suggest that you give baby two drops each of syrup of ipecac and sweet spirits of niter every two, three or four hours, frequency of dosage depending on severity of the case. If the baby seems to have some evolvement of the lungs or bronchi, would suggest that you apply hot camphorated oil on upper chest. To do this in the proper way you should heat some camphorated oil in a saucer, then soak in this a thin piece of gauze or cheese-cloth, apply on upper chest, and cover with a larger piece of flannel.

CROUP is a congestion of mucous membrane of larynx, slight swelling, slight dryness with spasmodic contraction of the glottis, coughing, or crowing, difficult breathing, attacks of threatened suffocation. One never forgets the symptoms of croup, and if it is a member of your own family, this croupy cough or crowing will never be mistaken. I think I can safely say that the symptoms in simple croup really seem worse than they are for in simple croup the child always gets well. The symptoms usually occur at night, the child going to bed as well as usual, or with a cold so slight that it is not noticed. After a few hours the child awakens with a feeling of suffocation and a dry, harsh cough or crow, tries to cry out, and in most every case is very badly frightened. In an hour or so the breathing becomes easier, the skin becomes moist and the child falls asleep. The next day the child may get up and be perfectly well with the exception of a slight cough, then that night go through the same experience of the night before with a slight change in symptoms; in fact, untreated, the child may go through this procedure several nights in succession. The treatment, if the symptoms are severe, is to put the child into a hot bath at once, hot or cold compresses on and around throat and upper chest. You may put on hot compresses of camphorated oil.

Subject for next month is Coughs and Colds Continued.

Questions and Answers

BABY'S STOOLS.—What causes my 14-months-old baby to have such an odor to his stools, ever since he was three months old? What can I do for it?
MRS. J. F., Hanover, Ill.

A.—The cause is probably indigestion, the food not being properly digested. Keep bowels regular and give baby only simple foods.

MORNING SICKNESS.—I am two months pregnant and am sick at my stomach continually, also have bad taste in my mouth. What can I do for it?
MRS. J. B., South Norfolk, Va.

A.—Keep bowels regular, avoid all excitement, sexual and otherwise. A binder giving slight upward and inward pressure relieves. Cautiously take simple, easily-digested foods.

LEUCORRHEA AND SORE NIPPLES.—I am an expectant mother and am badly troubled with leucorrhea, also sore nipples that discharge a watery substance. Will these things affect child? MRS. M. T., Minn.

A. Bathing frequently is about all you can do for leucorrhea, as douches are not safe in your condition. (b) For breasts, should wash them every day with saturated solution of boracic acid, then apply cocoa butter.

MALNUTRITION.—I have a little girl three years old, who weighs but 25 pounds, no appetite, and cries a great deal. Her body is rough and scales come off.
MRS. E. M. C., Wellington, Kans.

A.—I should say that your little girl had malnutrition and I should try and build up her general health with milk, eggs, meat juices and broths. Should give her cod liver oil and iron. Tincture of chloride of iron, eight drops in simple syrup, three times a day, after meals.

SALIVATION.—I have a baby boy two years old who slobbers so badly his clothing is wet most of the time. He has all his teeth, but has lumps on side of neck. Please give me cause and remedy.
MRS. J. B. W., Bessemer, Ala.

A.—This dribbling of saliva is a sympathetic affection, caused by some condition—this symptom, considered with enlarged glands of neck, would suggest rundown condition. Should keep him out of doors as much as possible, give cod liver oil, also tincture of chloride of iron in five-drop doses, three times a day, after meals.

ECZEMA.—My baby is twenty months old and has had eczema since she was three months old. We have tried so much, but it does not heal. We have her on a diet and she seems very healthy otherwise. Does teething have anything to do with it?
MRS. A. G., Newald, Wisc.

A.—There are so many different kinds of eczema it would not be advisable to give any suggestions about treatment without examination, but the diet is excellent. For local treatment, should bathe with Dakin's solution, then apply a little 20 per cent. sulphur ointment.

FEEDING BABY.—(a) My eight-months-old baby is nursing and seems to be doing well, but seems to crave other food, cries when she sees others eating. Would you feed her, and are soda crackers harmful? (b) My boy, nearly three years old, is troubled with his front teeth decaying. What is the cause, and what can be done?
MRS. L. P., Andover, Mo.

A.—(a) If baby seems to be doing well, I should not advise feeding her, considering her age; later you may give her gruels, custards and other easily-digested food. Soda crackers are hard to digest, unless toasted, and they are not an ideal food. (b) Cleaning the teeth often will prevent decay, also give your boy three tablespoonfuls of lime-water a day in his milk or water.

WEAK HEART.—Can you tell me what is the trouble with my five-months-old girl who, for three months, has had spells of turning blue, gasping for breath, then goes to sleep? Have noticed that when she vomits she does not have an attack.
MRS. L. S. T., Mena, Ark.

A.—I think from your letter that your baby girl has a weak heart, either congenital or an acquired muscular weakness, and when she has any indigestion with gas, this causes the spells. Should keep her digestion in good condition, bowels regular, and not allow her to eat or nurse too fast, and think these attacks will not occur.

CHEWING TONGUE.—What causes my two and one-half months old baby to chew her tongue?
MRS. F. E. L., Little Rock, Ark.

A.—I do not know unless it is tongue-tied. Have her tongue examined and relieved if this condition exists, as it is a very simple operation.

MATERNITY CORSETS.—I am an expectant mother and have a severe abdominal pain if I get up suddenly. Would maternity corsets help this, and what can I do for large veins of leg? MRS. P. O., Pa.

A.—The maternity corset will be helpful and I should advise slow movements when getting up. (b) Bandage limbs from foot up above enlarged veins with flannel bandages.

HOLDING BREATH.—I have a baby 19 months old that holds her breath if she falls or cannot have everything she wishes. The physicians here think she will outgrow it, but she does not seem to improve and I am afraid she will die in every attack. What can I do for her? MRS. G. E. B., Hailes, N. Y.
Also MRS. C. B., New Jersey.

A.—This is a spasmodic affection of the muscles of respiration, breathing, and is never fatal. During the attack, raise to sitting position, fan her, and, if not too cold, take her to open window or door; dash cold water in her face. We believe this condition has a cause in each case and is not temper, as some seem to believe. The causes are teething, improper diet, some stomach or intestinal disease, or may be connected with rickets. In your baby's case, find out the cause and remove it, lance gums freely if teething, get digestion normal, and if she seems pale give her iron in some form.

LIVER OR BROWN SPOTS.—Would it be safe to use the lotion suggested for brown spots if they are not caused by pregnancy, and will the lotion cause skin to peel? MRS. A. S., Deadwood, Colo.

A.—Yes, this is a safe treatment, and will get results if you persist in the use of it, and I never knew it to cause skin to peel.

BABY'S SCALY HEAD.—My two-months-old baby has a lot of hair, and his head is covered with scales. Have tried washing it and putting on vaseline, but get no relief. MRS. R. S., Cobden, Ill.

A.—Apply sweet oil freely, then gently comb out scales, then wash with Castile soap and water. Do this several times and I am certain you will get relief.

WEANING BABY.—At what age should I wean baby from the bottle and how often should I feed him?
MRS. C. M. S.

A.—A baby nursing breast should be weaned at the 11th month; if nursing bottle, should give it to him for two years, with the idea in mind to get him to take milk in this way. (b) A baby nine to 12 months old should be fed every three and one-half hours during day.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 10.)

as a model housekeeper, her front rooms were always shining, but one day I had cause to enter her kitchen and then I changed my mind. Such a kitchen, everything dirty, dirty dishes even under the kitchen table, and she—was she sick? Oh no, playing the piano in the front room!

I have lived in the city and in the country village and next year we expect to be in our own home in the country. I like country life so much better.

I use flour sacks for the children's underwear, sheets for baby's bed, clothes pin aprons, laundry bags, and with a stenciled design make short curtains for my kitchen.

Next time I will send some of my choice recipes for I flatter myself on being a good cook. We all take pride in some special thing and I cannot in my good looks or good letters.

Sincerely, HUBBY'S PAL.

ON THE COLUMBIA RIVER, WASHINGTON.

HELLO EVERYBODY:

May I come in for a little while? I like to read the letters from the different sisters. Wouldn't it be a grand and jolly meeting if we could all meet and have a family reunion?

Helen, I had a good laugh when I read about the lady and her nets. I never heard of putting them on their legs before. You see, I used to live in Alaska a good many years ago, but not so far north as Circle City. We were at Fort Wrangekk. Long before a steamer was hardly visible, someone would call out "S-t-e-a-m-e-r," and then it would be repeated and in less than five minutes the echo of "Steamer" would be sounding all over the bay and people would be running down to the dock. I lived near the edge of the water and looking south I could see a white spot and a long black streak of smoke—the steamer coming around Elephant's Nose. And the tourists! I've heard people speak of "country greenhorns," well, they'd have to go some to beat those tourists, for greenness. It didn't seem possible that people knew so little of Alaska. My baby was very fair with long yellow curls and blue eyes. A crowd was passing by and a girl, about twelve years old, said, "Mamma, isn't that an awful white half breed?" Her mother gasped out in a most horrified tone, "Merciful Heavens, yes. I wonder if her mother is a white woman or a squaw." Helen, I'd like to visit you and Circle City, although my daughter is nearer your age.

Mrs. George Bacher, I wonder if you would answer one more letter? I know what you received in the line of mail. Once we didn't have a mail boat for about six weeks and I received 190 postcards and thirty letters.

Mrs. Lillian Austin, I think that your suggestion is really the best for a COMFORT pin. We are all familiar with the COMFORT emblem, so why not have it in enamel colors?

I think it is all right for anyone to write of their troubles as well as their joys. Then we who think we are so badly abused and have so many misfortunes can see that we are not the only ones for there are others worse off than we are. Then, too, we can see that we are not the only ones to have the best husband, children or the most perfect of homes. I haven't the best husband living but I am convinced that he is a long ways from being the worst. Another thing, I don't think that one needs sign their name.

Mrs. George B. Jackson, I surely would like to visit you in your lighthouse home.

I gain much help from the letters and as soon as COMFORT comes I drop everything and read it.

Wishing Mrs. Wilkinson and every one of you the best of luck,
WHITE CARNATION.

OKLAHOMA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

Will you allow a Southern girl to enter your circle? I live in a pretty place near the Arkansas River in eastern Oklahoma, on a farm of 120 acres.

I am still in high school and occasionally act as substitute teacher. I like that very much. I have a plan that works very well against whispering in school. Take the names of the children who whisper and stand them in a row before the school, or alone might be better, and make them talk on some given subject for a certain length of time. This will prevent the others from studying for a while but it will do a lot toward making the offenders think twice before they whisper again.

With love to all, LILY.

CHURCH, KY.

DEAR SISTERS:

I have long been a reader of COMFORT and now that the photos of COMFORT babies are published I am sending a picture of our boy, sixteen months old but only seven months when the picture was taken. His name is Elwood and he is the joy and pride of our home. I don't think a home is complete without children

ELWOOD RAMSEY.

I have one of the best of husbands and I always read the sisters' letters to him and he enjoys them as well as I do. We have been married four years and are still sweethearts. He always uses me kind and I try to treat him the same way. We live on a farm of one hundred and seventy acres and are just as happy as can be and the desire of our hearts is to bring up our little boy in the fear of the Lord.

With love to Mrs. Wilkinson and the sisters,
MRS. VENA RAMSEY.

Mrs. Ramsey.—We like your son, even if he will persist in sticking his tongue out at us.—Ed.

HARRISVILLE, N. Y.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

After reading Roy Smith's letter I felt like saying that it is not altogether the movies that have such a demoralizing effect on the minds of young people. My opinion is that if the mothers of today were as strict in the dressing of their daughters as they were in my day—about 55 years ago—we would not see so many young girls going about nearly nude. We do not have to go to the motion-picture houses to see girls (and married women as well) immodest in dress. Nothing seems to be improper to them. To look at the present style of dress answers the questions of why there is so much vice today. Why do they wear rolled stockings, knee length skirts, very low necks and thin waists? Ask them and they will say that it is the style but what are such styles for? To attract attention, of course, and they certainly do, to the everlasting discredit of the wearers. I believe in reasonably short skirts but rolled stockings make me feel I would like to thrash the wearer. One girl replied that "legs were legs," but I think modesty is more to the credit of a girl than showing her knees. Low necks are all right but there ought to be a limit. We are not living in the garden of Eden and men are not blind. Eve, when she saw her nakedness, made a covering of fig leaves. Another girl admitted that boys liked girls better if they didn't wear corsets to dances. Some of the dances are all right but others should be prohibited. We do not have to go to the movies to see these things. I am a believer in movies and have never been to one that I considered unfit for young people of either sex to see. I don't think there is any excuse for the average girl traveling the downward path. I mean the girl reared in good surroundings. Neither do I mean to shield the young men for they should have more respect for womanhood. All through the ages woman has stood for purity and she ought to set a good example for others to follow. If man suggests that which is wrong she has the right to protect her honor. The language heard among young people is appalling. I know for a certainty that the ordinary young man soon finds out who the good girls are and acts the part of a gentleman when with them but is not so careful when with immodest girls.

Is it not high time for parents and guardians of our children to take a firmer stand and endeavor to place before the younger generation a purer, cleaner mode of living? I do not mean that all girls and boys are bad but an alarming percentage are. Marriage will soon be but a mockery.

Mothers, fathers, guardians, let us try to wipe out this shadow that is hovering over the flowers of the world, reaching out to enfold them in its awful embrace from which there is no escape but a merciful death. But after death there will be a reckoning and will we be able to show a good record of what we have done to better the world?

Very sincerely, MRS. MILO MULLIN.

Best Ways of Doing Things Around the Home

To bake sweet potatoes, wash thoroughly, grease well and bake in covered pan.

To clean frying pan, rub with a hard crust of bread and wash with hot water and washing soda.

Put a pail of cold water in a newly painted room, change every two hours. This absorbs the paint smell.

Soak a new broom in boiling salt water before using. It toughens the bristles and makes the broom last longer.

A low stand such as used for irons or for placing tea and coffee pots on, kept near the oven will be found useful to place under a cake or pudding that is baking too quickly on bottom.

A root of horseradish, washed and scraped and put in the vinegar jar will add a pleasant flavor to vinegar as well as helping to keep its strength.—MRS. MARGUERITE P. SCHLEGAL, Lenhartsville, Pa.

A teaspoon of gelatine added to boiled frosting makes it as nice as the marshmallow cream which is so expensive.

I use fine wool yarn for darning toes and heels of everyday hose. It fills in faster and does not harden with frequent washing as cotton does.

In making buttonholes, first machine stitch around the place buttonhole is to be made, cut and work with No. 50 or 60 crochet thread. This makes a buttonhole that will outlast the material.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 33.)

Sears, Roebuck and Co's New Lowest Prices!

Just Out! Write!

This new January Sale Catalog is being sent to our 8,000,000 customers. If you haven't it, borrow your neighbors' copy or write at once! Don't miss these wonderful bargains—every one at our new low prices. You can make amazing savings by ordering now! Write!

Greatest January Sale!

Thousands of Bargains Like These!

This Book Shows Our Very Latest Reductions!

Read Every Page!

$3.48 The Pair

Brown Russia Leather and Black Gunmetal Leather

Less than today's wholesale cost. Compare them with any $5 shoes and decide for yourself.

Men's 15A014186—Dark Brown Russia Leather.

Men's 15A014187—Black Gunmetal Leather. Sale price, per pair $3.48

GENUINE GOODYEAR WELT SHOE—Latest English last. Live rubber heels; medium weight sole. Sizes 5 to 11, wide widths only. Shp. wt. 2½ lbs.

$3.69 The Pair

Women's 15A011234—Dark Brown Russia Leather.

Women's 15A011235—Black Genuine Kid Leather.

Sale price, per pair.....$3.69

GENUINE GOODYEAR WELT SHOE—Made same high quality as men's shoes described above. Sizes 2½ to 8. Wide widths only. Be sure to state size. Shipping weight, 1¼ lbs.

9/4 Bleached Durable Wide Sheeting 96A08205

47c a yard

Sold only in 5-yard bolts. Price.....$2.35

A wonderful value—bought before the big cotton advance

Percale

Think of being able to buy select standard quality percale at only 14c a yard.

14¢ a Yard

Width about 36 inches.

69A08306—Sold only in 10-yard bolts. Shipping weight about 2 lbs. Price.....$1.40

Standard Quality Gingham only 98¢ Each

Buy At Least One of Each

31A0395 31A0397

Made of standard quality gingham; full roomy patterns. In women's regular sizes, 34 to 46 inches bust measure. State bust measure wanted. Shipping weight 1½ lbs.

31A0395—Blue plaid
31A0396—Pink plaid
31A0397—Medium Blue } Each, 98c

Our Famous Satisfaction Guarantee

You must be satisfied with any purchase you make from us, large or small. If not we will gladly exchange goods or refund your money.

Tell Your Friends About This Big Sale!

We want every one of our old customers to share in these great values. Tell your friends to write for the January Sales Catalog, too. Bargains in

Silks	Men's Furnishings
Linens	Tires
Blankets	Auto Supplies
Laces	Roofing
Notions	Engines
Waists	Farm Implements
Coats	Washing Machines
Corsets	Sewing Machines
Underwear	Carpets; Rugs
Furniture	Dress Goods
Curtains	Muslin Wear

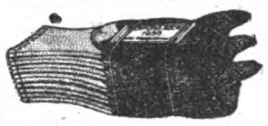
And Hundreds of Other Articles for the Farm and Home.

Order Direct From This Advertisement If You Wish—

BUT GET THE BOOK!

Mail Coupon Now!

Middy Blouse 89¢



"Regatta" Middy

Made of Lonsdale jean cloth. Braid trimmed sailor collar and two-button, non-rip placket cuff. Colors: White with blue collar and cuffs; white with red collar and cuffs; or all white. Sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. State size and color preferred. Shipping weight 12 ounces.

27A05082—Sale price, each.....89c

Rockford Socks

Six pairs for..... 57c

One Full Size Only

Medium weight, coarse knit cotton. Elastic ribbed tops. Fully seamless. Shipping weight 6 pairs, 14 oz.

86A01958—Blue mixed
86A01959—Brown mixed

Children's DOUBLE KNEE Stockings

3 Pairs For 48c

Black, medium weight. Double knees, reinforced heels and toes. Elastic knit legs, fully seamless. Sizes 6 to 9½. State size. Shpg. wt. 3 pairs, 12 oz.

86A084902

Three For 95c

Aluminum Sauce Pans

Three cooking utensils used every day. Worth double. 1½, 2 and 3 qts. Shpg. weight 3 lbs.

Order Now!

99A0337—Sale price, set of three.....95c

Sears, Roebuck and Co.

SEARS, ROEBUCK and CO.
Chicago Philadelphia Dallas Seattle
(Address city nearest you)

Send me January Sales Catalog No. 91C60

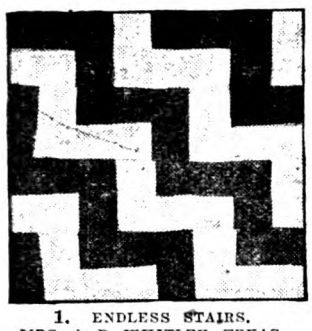
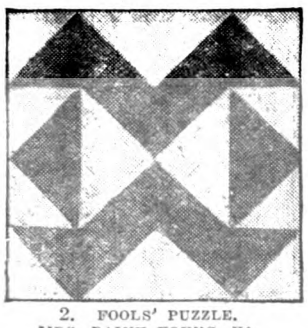
Name.....



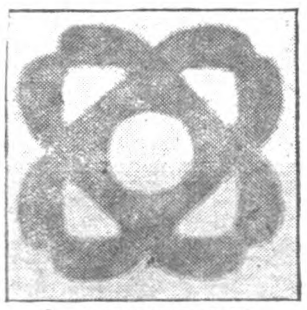
Postoffice.....

R. F. D. No.....Box No.....

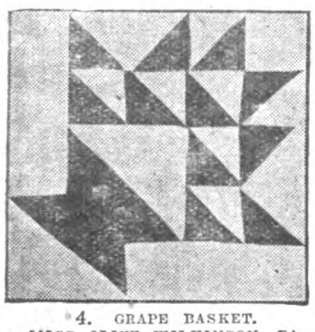


State.....

Street and No.....



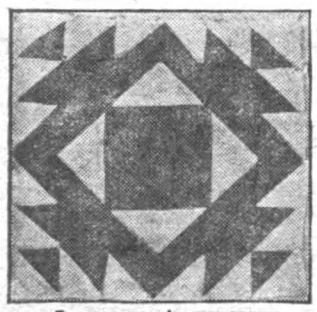
Old and New Designs for Patchwork



1. ENDLESS STAIRS.
MRS. A. B. WHITLEY, TEXAS.

2. FOOLS' PUZZLE.
MRS. RAINY YOUNG, VA.

3. FRIENDSHIP BAND.
MRS. HATTIE B. WOODS, TEXAS.



4. GRAPE BASKET.
MISS OLIVE WILKINSON, PA.

5. MOON AND STAR.
MRS. E. C. ROBINSON, VT.

6. OLD HOME.
MRS. FAYE EVANS, MO.

7. MOTHER'S FAVORITE.
SOPHIA MOULTON, IND.

Revival of Patchwork

PATCHWORK is an old, old art and one that played such an important part in the life of the early colonists in this country, that it is not quite fair to conside it simply the mere cutting up of material into bits for the sake of sewing them together; but rather an ingenious way of using odds and ends at hand, to meet a need.

The wonderful development of patchwork quilts in this new country was due largely to the climate and the native thrift of the pioneer women.

The early settlements were made along or near the coast, and the bleak winters in the northern states, together with the rude poorly heated log cabins, made more bedding necessary, than had been brought over the seas. This need, as well as all other household supplies, was met by the ability and untiring energy of the mothers of this nation.

Practically every article of clothing or household comfort in those early days was the work of their busy hands. Th hum of the spinning wheel clack of the loom or click of the knitting needles was always to be heard.

Their busy useful lives made them practical and economical, hence every scrap of material left from the family wardrobe was treasured and pieced into quilts in their hard-won leisure moments.

Fortunately the English and Dutch who settled in these northern and New England states were already skilled needle women as well as excellent housekeepers. From the piecing of coverlets they processed to quilting, then followed heavy quilted curtains for the drafty windows, and later quilted skirts of silk and satin, and quaint quilted bonnets were the style and were most treasured possessions.

Little girls were taught to sew as soon as they could hold a needle, because every girl when she was ready to marry prided herself upon the number of fine quilts she had ready. Thus the useful art of patchwork quilting grew very rapidly in those early days, because of the need of quilts and because it brought into the lives of these busy pioneer women an interesting occupation which gave them a channel or vent for their imagination.

It also unconsciously, perhaps, taught beauty of form and color combination and lead to social intercourse which was enjoyable.

Whenever women met, patchwork blocks were used as pick-up work. Patterns were exchanged and friendly rivalry created much pleasant excitement. Women's quilts became their joy and they took great pride in their skill as needleworkers and also in working out intricate and difficult patterns.

So this art grew in importance, as Eliza Calvert Hall clearly shows when she makes "Aunt Jane of Kentucky" say: "But when it comes to culling out, why, you're free to choose your own pattern. You can give the same kind o' pieces to two persons, and one'll make a 'nine-patch' and one'll make a 'wild goose chase' and there'll be two quilts made out of the same kind o' pieces and just as different as they can be. And that is jest the way with livin'. The Lord sends us the pieces, but we can cut 'em out and put 'em together pretty much to suit ourselves, and there's a heap more in the cuttin' out and the sewin' than there is in the caliker." How true this is!

So, as 'tis said that necessity is the mother of invention, I have tried to show how it was that these busy women who helped so courageously to build up the first homes in this big new country, left behind them the beginnings of what developed into a distinctly American branch of needlecraft.

The first simple patterns, planned solely that no bit of material might be wasted, began to be more complicated and attractive as soon as resources for obtaining cotton increased.

Then rivalry and the making of exhibition quilts, quilting bees and the exchange and collection of patterns, brought much pleasurable excitement into many lives which were otherwise filled with much care and drudgery.

All women enjoyed and found recreation in this work, and as the years passed elderly women loved their patchwork still more for the memories which each bright bit recalled. Each had her box of sample patterns which had gradually been collected and treasured, and one can imagine that many a pleasant evening was spent before the great fireplaces, looking them over and recalling the names of friendly givers.

Thus patchwork, due to the need which it filled, and the intense interest and keen competition which it awakened, rapidly advanced, as living conditions became easier, from simply a conglomerate mass of pieces of every hue into carefully planned designs of striking beauty.

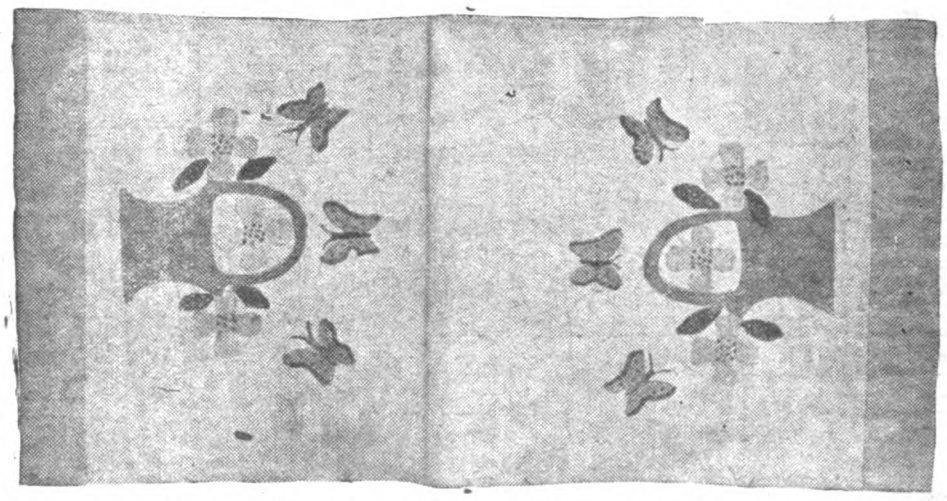
To further follow the interesting history and growth of this branch of needlecraft we shall have to trace its journey westward with the descendants of those who first came to these shores.

As time passed, shortly after the Revolution, adventurous souls in the northern states began to follow the Ohio toward the great central West, and from the southern states the movement was also westward into the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee.

Each and all of these families took with them their most cherished and valued possessions although the journeys were long and anything but easy.

As quilts had come to fill such an important place in the life and comfort of the family it is hardly necessary to say that any such articles were omitted from their household goods.

In this new wilderness, trials and privations were met aud overcome, and homes founded. Here the descendants of these pioneers still live under conditions very similar to those which prevailed a hundred years ago.



In the seclusion of these mountains, away from the progress of the past century, the primitive household arts and crafts have flourished. The simple needs of the entire family are met as before the advent of machinery, by the women exactly the same as in colonial days. Year in and year out they spin, weave and knit and for recreation turn as their grandmothers and great-grandmothers did, to the making of quilts from which they never seem to tire.

In their mountain homes, from the cradle to the grave, these isolated women sit at their quilting-frames, patiently creating work of wonderful beauty with their needles.

No bride of any country takes more pride in her dowry chest than the mountain bride in her pile of hand-made quilts.

By far the finest quilts, the most beautiful in design and of rarely fine workmanship are very frequently found in such out-of-the-way hamlets, that no influencing idea could have reached their makers.

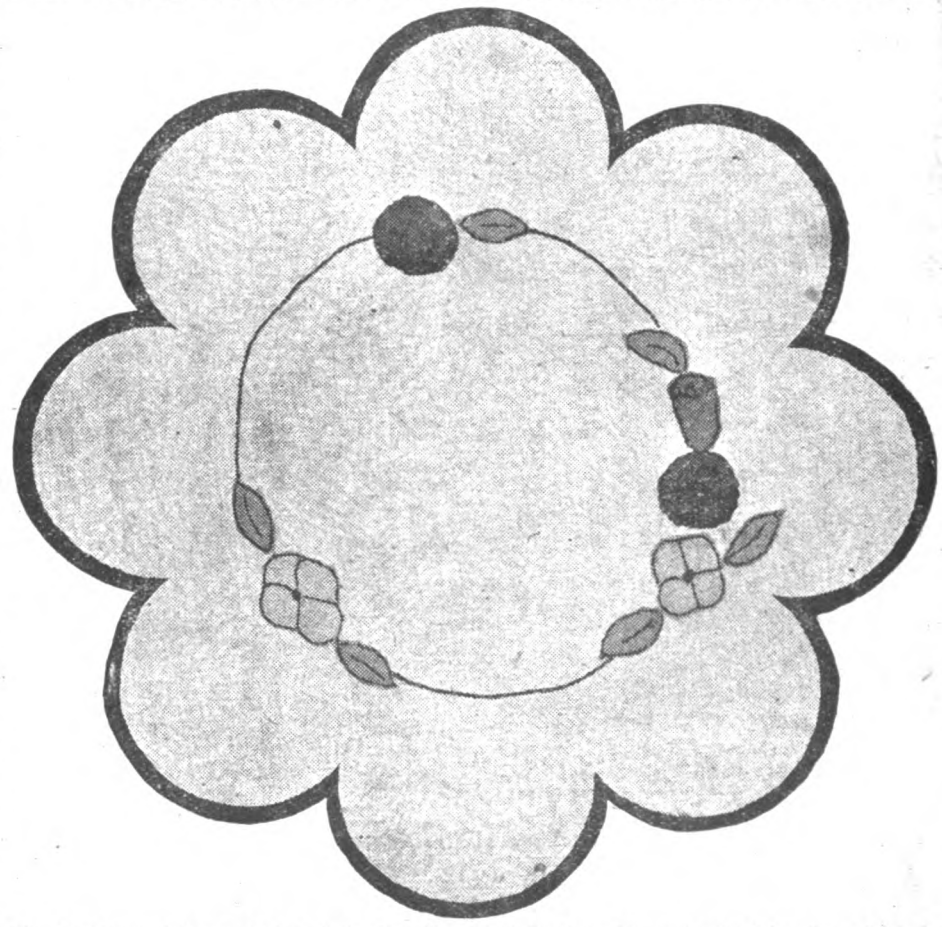
It is especially the women of such regions who have fostered this thoroughly American needlecraft and here and throughout much of the great middle West are found the best examples, which show the same substantial and serviceable qualities that were characteristic of the budding art.

The scarf illustrated above, by Lucile Briston, Ky., is a lovely study in color. The wild roses, blue baskets and butterflies make a most delicate combination.

An Applique Scarf

The scarf submitted by Lucile Briston is a lovely example of applique and has the embroidery stitches needed to emphasize the motifs used. On a background of unbleached cotton is placed a delicate blue basket above a three-inch border. The roses, which are of two shades of a soft pink, are finished with coarse yellow French knots of a mercerized cotton.

There are many beautiful threads now on the market which are so lustrous they add greatly to similar designs worked in this way.



The leaves are of a quiet green, and butterflies of a pale yellow, deeper shades of the same color and black being used for French knots on the wings, the bodies and for the edges in satin-stitch.

Centerpiece in Applique

The design which was submited by Mrs. Beardon is a thoughtful combination of form and color, which results in a most pleasing effect.

The illustration, which has a twenty-inch center, gives one a very good idea of how a little outlining may be used to connect bits of applique and form a design covering considerable space but involving little work.

In this particular instance a Blue Bell, an American Beauty and a simple wild rose are the motifs, combined with a few green leaves and the outlining which is of black. A neatly bound scallop forms a most suitable edge.

The chief charm of this centerpiece designed by Mrs. Hugh Bearden, Ark., is its simplicity. It can be easily copied on either a white or cream background with soft colors which would harmonize with any room.

Quilts and Their Making

Old times can be recalled but they belong to the past as do the real calico quilts. In comparatively recent times the spinning, weaving, baking and brewing have been taken out of the home, leaving the housewife to occupy herself with tasks of her own choice and liking in her spare time.

Each of the different sorts of hand work which have survived as spare time occupations, tatting, crocheting and knitting seem to have enjoyed waves of popularity and now patchwork of a certain form, known as modern applique, is becoming the fad. This work is simply a new version of the old hemmed-on patchwork. It is interesting and is naturally leading women to turn their attention back to its source of inspiration, the hand-made quilts of earlier generations.

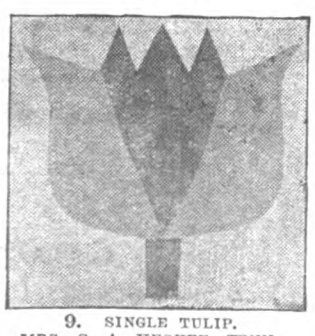
With so many serviceable substitutes it is not now really necessary for women to make quilts, but the strange fascination which the work has for those who do become interested has appealed so strongly that at the present time more quilts and spreads are being made, and over a wider area of country than ever before.

A hand-made quilt consists of two or more thicknesses of material held together with many stitches. So every quilt has at least a top and a bottom, and it may or may not have an interlining.

As any old experienced quilt-maker knows, patchwork, meaning quilt making, is divided into two general classes, known as pieced quilts and patched quilts.

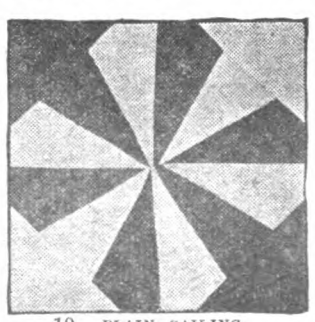
Pieced Quilts

The pieced quilts are made by joining together separate pieces of material into blocks of like design, which in turn are set together to form the top. The patched quilts are not pieced at all, but rather have patterns appliqued of one material or "laid on" to white muslin, as this method used to be spoken of as "hemmed-on" quilts.

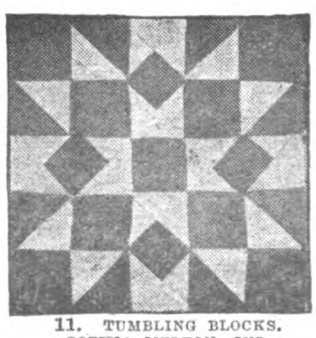


A pieced quilt of course is made up of scraps, its beauty depending wholly upon the skill which is used in sorting and arranging materials at hand, while for the patched quilt one must have certain material to work out a chosen design, hence these were the aristocrats of the old-time quilt family, while the pieced quilts came under the head of poor relations.

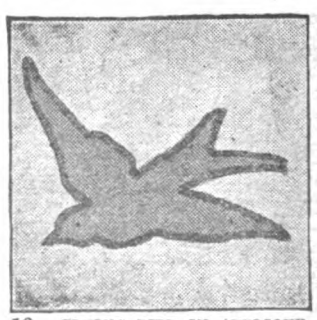
Pieced quilts, however, have always had their place, and make a special appeal to women who delight in the precise and accurate work necessary for their perfect construction. For convenience in making, a top composed of blocks of regular size and shape is the easier. Each of these blocks may be a complete design in itself or it may be only a part of a large pattern which covers the entire top of the quilt.



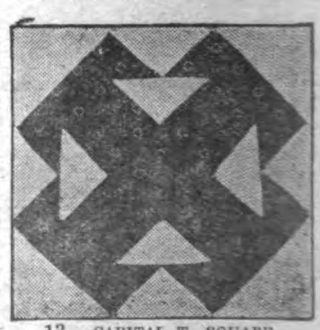
Beautiful old quilts of small pieces, carefully ar-



8. MISSISSIPPI DAISY.
LOUISA J. HOBGOOD, MISS.



9. SINGLE TULIP.
MRS. S. A. HUSKEY, TENN.



10. PLAIN SAILING.
MRS. MYRA V. PEET, N. Y.

11. TUMBLING BLOCKS.
SOPHIA MELTON, IND.

12. FLYING BIRD IN APPLIQUE.
LILLIAN BLAYLOCK, TENN.

13. CAPITAL T. SQUARE.
SOPHIA MELTON, IND.

Quilts and Attractive Modern Applique ranged as to light and dark colors were often ingeniously worked up into a continuous pattern of most striking effect.

Very good examples of such work reached us in blocks No. 1, "Endless Stairs," and No. 26, "Shifting Cubes." Such patterns as No. 4, No. 5, No. 10, No 11, No. 15, No. 17, No. 24, shown on these pages, are equally good for either a combination of two or three colors or odds and ends if arranged contrastingly.

After the selection of a pattern considerable time will be required to cut out and arrange one's work. If using scraps an eye for harmonious color combinations is of great advantage.

As exactness in the first process, that of cutting out, is very necessary, if good work is to result, pieces of cardboard or stiff paper should be first fashioned correctly and kept for a pattern of each part. Each piece should then be cut with the greatest care. Old workers often used tin patterns, and by these each piece of patchwork was cut exactly true to it with the sharpest of corners.

After all the pieces are cut, seams of exactly the same size are very necessary if the pattern is to work out correctly.

For patchwork, a knowledge of only the simplest form of hand-sewing is necessary, the running stitch which is used for all seaming, although on some old quilts many examples of elaborate bits of needlework are often found, which gave individuality to a woman's work and in which she justly took great pride.

Patched Quilts

Many of the finest specimens of patchwork quilts which have been handed down from generation to generation are splendid examples of "hemmed-on," or applique patterns.

This more ambitious branch of patchwork has at times been considered a sort of inferior kind of embroidery, although it is not.

The art of applique is rather a distinct kind of needlework in which more is made of the manner of using and combining materials than stitchery. The effects secured in this way are simple, bold, dignified and conventional rather than merely dainty or pretty.

Many of these old quilts are really of historical value as they were made to commemorate great events in the life of our nation, just as old tapestries reflect events of their day.

By their quilt patterns women showed their sympathies and their interest in national events. For example, the "Whig Rose" and the "Democrat Rose" are both patterns which came into existence during the Harrison-Tyler campaign, when the Democrats won, amidst the greatest excitement, for the first time in forty years.

Other names of political significance which plainly show that women took a keen interest in public affairs in earlier days are "Old Tippecanoe," "Lincoln's Platform," "Harrison Rose," "Radical Rose," which has a black center to represent the negroes of the South, "Confederate Rose," "Star Spangled Banner" and "Yankee Puzzle."

From this it is evident that the rose has always been and still is a great favorite in this "hemmed-on" work.

The "Confederate Rose" and the "Rose of Dixie" recall that sorry time when brother was against brother. Some years later in the far West originated the beautiful "Harvest Rose" and "Prairie Rose." Many of these patterns and others which have been received from our readers will appear in these columns in the next few months Almost as popular as the rose is the rosebud, the poppy, the lily and the tulip.

A true appreciation of nature was shown by many quilt makers in their efforts to copy as faithfully as possible the various forms of leaf and flower.

Many of the conventionalized floral patterns on these old quilts give evidence of much ability and originality.

When a worker evidently tired of an oft repeated pattern a slight change turned it into a square different enough to require a new name, hence we have the "Pine Tree," "Temperance Tree" and "Tree of Paradise," a very good example of such minor alterations

Imagination surely was not lacking when it came to aptly applying names to these simple designs. For to call rows of small triangles running diagonally across a quilt the "Wild Goose Chase" the maker must have known something of the habits of wild geese, and have observed them traveling from the North to the South and back again the following spring. In most cases the relation between the name and the design is practically so evident that the correct name at once suggests itself.

The hardships which were constantly in the minds of the early American quilters seemed to have inspired such names as "Bear's Paw," "Pilgrim's Pride," "Texas Tears," etc.

Letters also came in for some attention and some of these were quite artistic. Among the best known are the "Double Z," "Letter H," "Letter X" and "T Square" shown in No. 13 on the preceding page.

Careful consideration of the large number of quilt patterns submitted to us in our late Prize Contest reveals but few that have been named at random or in a haphazard way, for in nearly every instance there is a reason or at least a strong suggestion for the name.

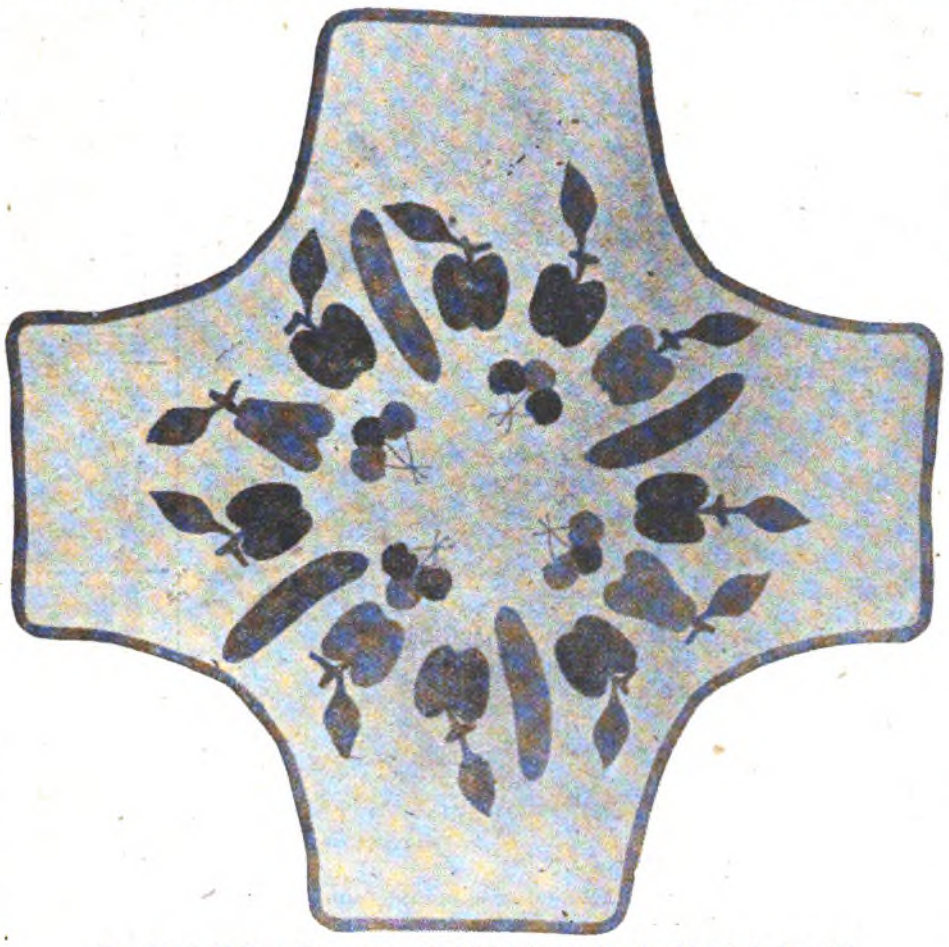
This patched or appliqued type of quilt may be called distinctly American. It was most substantial in character as only the best quality of cotton cloth entered into its construction. The careful work put into it was intended to stand the test of time, thus it became an article of use and service, as well as beauty.

The colored materials used were always of as nearly permanent dyes as it was possible to secure. In many cases the quiltmaker used her own vegetable dyes to secure fast colors and with pleasing results.

Some of the artistic possibilities in color and design was often subordinated to the desire to produce work which would be as enduring as possible.

In the oldest quilts finely figured calico in red, green, a rather violent yellow and indigo blue are found frequently appliqued on a white background. Then as the calico became inferior in quality we find the home-dyed greens, reds, yellows and pinks used in its place.

Had not such worthy material served as a basis for the beautiful work of the experienced quilter few examples would have survived to these days to have inspired our interest and create the branch of fine needlework now known as modern applique.



Modern Applique

Fundamentally this and the old-time patchwork is exactly the same, and the same characteristics which made for excellency in the old quilts, accuracy and painstaking care, are still necessary to produce good results.

Appliqued decorations can be classed under the head of good art, because the applied colored designs are so simple and straightforward in outline.

Nothing could be more fresh, crisp and full of spirit than some of the conventional and geometrical designs which are worked out in vivid color combinations. As formerly, nature suggests endless flowerlike forms and graceful vines which are absolutely lovely when copied in their natural colors combined with deep soft greens and quiet tones of brown.

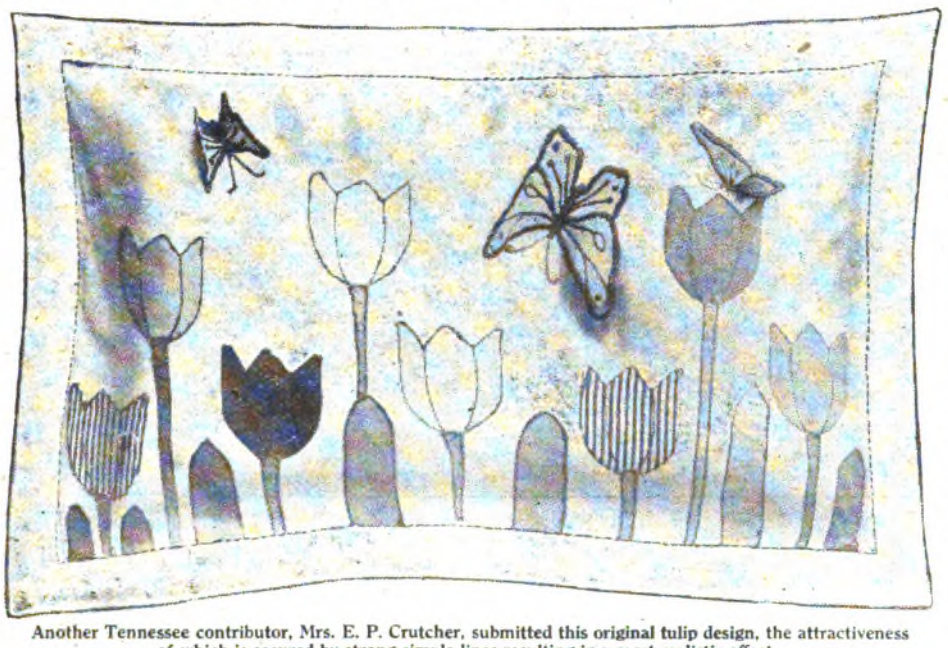
When seeking this source of inspiration the only rule is to select flowers and leaves which have a clear, distinct and easily traced outline.

From Mrs. J. W. Yates, Tenn., comes this delightfully refreshing breakfast cloth, decorated most suitably with fruit forms in applique.

An Inviting Breakfast Cloth

This table-cover is a lovely study in color and simple forms. It is a hemmed-on design, having the edge finished quite firmly with a perfectly plain narrow yellow bias bind. The color scheme throughout is most cheery and refreshing, and the outlines very true.

The innermost groups of decorations are cherries. Two of these consist of two yellow and one red cherry, and the remaining two groups are just the opposite in color arrangement.



The apples are of two shades of red and a light green, the pears a yellow, while the two bananas are green and two a rich ripe yellow. All of the leaves and stems are a deep green.

Our illustration gives one but a scant idea of the beauty of the original which was submitted by Mrs. J. W. Yates.

The great popularity of modern applique makes it at present play a leading part in the handwork of the hour.

It is seen in our homes in very attractive and interesting decorations on bedspreads, table-covers, bureau scarfs, curtains, couch-covers and sofa pillows and also on wearing apparel, such as house dresses, aprons, blouses, sport hats, scarfs and little folks dresses and rompers.

Many beautiful examples of applique chosen from among the thousands of patterns recently submitted to us in COMFORT'S contest will be published in these columns in the next few months, proving beyond a doubt that our women are still as original and apt in utilizing materials at hand as were the earnest women of previous years whose devotion and love for home and family did so much towards strengthening this great and glorious nation for what it has stood through all these troublous years.

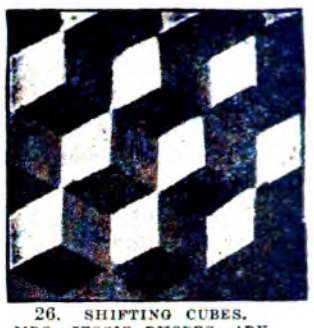
Another Tennessee contributor, Mrs. E. P. Crutcher, submitted this original tulip design, the attractiveness of which is secured by strong simple lines resulting in a most realistic effect.

Tulip Sofa Pillow

This original piece of work, designed by Mrs. E. P. Crutcher, also illustrates the chief difference between the old and the new applique work, that which is made by the addition of various embroidery stitches, which the modern worker has taken the liberty of adding.

For many purposes these extra stitches often help greatly in producing a pleasing effect in combination with the applique designs which, as in the old patchwork quilts, are cut from whole cloth.

In this piece of work, for a foundation unbleached cotton was selected. The tulip blossoms are a combination of the natural shades of the flowers, with stems and leaves of green. All of the applique pieces are brought out more distinctly by being outlined with black, as is the pillow proper also, outside of which is a flat two-inch hem.



The lifelike butterflies are of yellow embroidered in black, and are entirely separate, only the slight bodies being attached to the pillow.

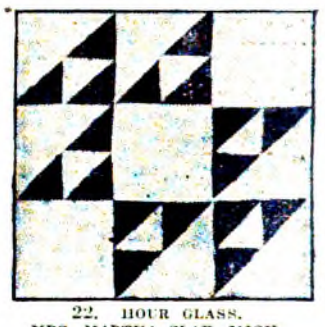
This work is not difficult, but as has been said before requires care to produce good results, therefore it still deserves the best of materials as in our grandmother's time.

For good workmanship uniformity of design is also important; so to insure exactness in size and shape it is of first importance that one should have an accurate, tough, strong paper pattern of each part.

Secondly, to properly cut an applique it is absolutely necessary to have a pair of very sharp, medium-sized scissors.

We also call attention to a Tulip Pattern sofa pillow illustrated on the page containing the list of prize winners in COMFORT'S Contest for Patchwork Designs.

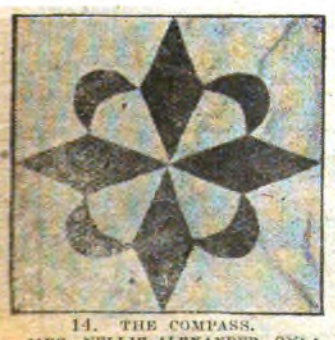
26. SHIFTING CUBES.
MRS. JESSIE RHODES, ARK.



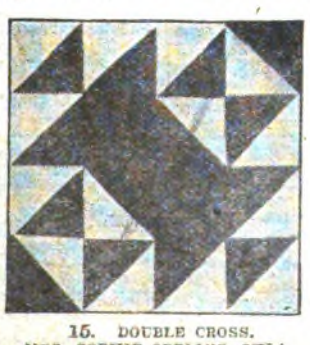
25. SOUTHERN SUNFLOWER.
MRS. S. A. HAWKINS, N. C.

24. GOOSE TRACKS.
MISS OLIVE WILKINSON, PA.

23. TULIPS IN APPLIQUE.
MISS MAYME OCONNOR, MO.



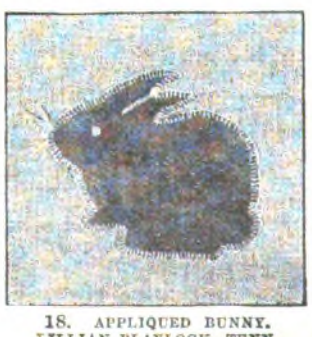
22. HOUR GLASS.
MRS. MARTHA CLAY, MICH.



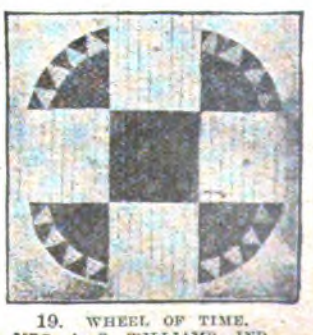
21. FORTUNE'S WHEEL.
MRS. JESSIE WARD, TEXAS.

20. BROKEN DISH.
MRS. WM. A. DOYLE, ME.

14. THE COMPASS.
MRS. NELLIE ALEXANDER, OKLA.



15. DOUBLE CROSS.
MRS. SOPHIE OBELING, OKLA.



16. A STRIKING PATTERN.
ELIZABETH A. BLANCETT.

17. OLD MAIDS' PUZZLE.
MRS. S. A. HUSKEY, PENN.

18. APPLIQUED BUNNY.
LILLIAN BLAYLOCK, TENN.

19. WHEEL OF TIME.
MRS. A. C. WILLIAMS, IND.

NEW TYPEWRITERS FOR LESS THAN HALF

Unusual Offer Made by Oliver Typewriter Company

You can now buy direct from the factory, saving the cost of selling. A brand new Oliver is now sold for half the usual price. It even costs less than a rebuilt typewriter! You'll be amazed at the details of this astounding offer. Get the facts at once by mailing the coupon.

This is the identical Oliver which has won such world-wide fame. Over 950,000 have been sold. Now comes our most liberal offer of all.

FREE TRIAL—EASY TERMS

Learn how to save, learn about our self-selling plan. Mail the coupon at once for complete information, which does not obligate you in the slightest. This is your greatest opportunity to buy a brand new typewriter at a tremendous saving. Send the coupon below.

NOW The Oliver Typewriter Company, 1601 Oliver Typewriter Building, Chicago.

Please send details of your Special Price Reduction Offer.

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

for selling only 40 packs vegetable seeds at 10c per large pack. Or this handsomely decorated

31 pc. Blue Bird Dinner Set given according to plan in our catalog. Similar to sets retailing at $10. Send today. Easily sold. Earn Big Money or Premiums. Send no money. We trust you with seeds until sold.

AMERICAN SEED CO., Box E-32, Lancaster, Pa.

LEARN PIANO

This Interesting Free Book

shows how you can become a skilled player of piano or organ at quarter usual cost. It shows why one lesson with an expert is worth a dozen other lessons. Dr. Quinn's famous Written Method includes all of the many important modern improvements in teaching music. Brings right to your home the great advantages of conservatory study. For the beginner or experienced players. Endorsed by great artists. Successful graduates everywhere. Scientific yet easy to understand. Fully illustrated. All music free. Diploma granted. Write today for free book. Quinn Conservatory, Studio CF41, 598 Columbia Road, Boston, 25, Mass.

SILK REMNANTS, LARGEST Packages yet offered. Square of Stamped Satin free with every package. MFRS. AGENCY, X, Portland, Maine 20c

Love Will Find the Way

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

I realize that you have been carried beyond yourself. You do not mean what you have said, and——"

"But I do, indeed I do!" he cried eagerly. "You are the most beautiful woman I have ever met!"

Granting that to be true, a man does not love a woman exclusively for her beauty. I should be very sorry if that were true."

"Ah, why should we not love beauty? Is not the promise of heaven alluring because it is beautiful? What is the good of anything that is not beautiful? Do the deformities in nature appeal to us? No! It is the flowers that we love. It is the song-bird that we prize. It is the exquisite in architecture that we admire. It is the grandly picturesque and beautiful ocean that we revere. From the moment that we are born into the world, our intuitions teach us to love that which is beautiful, and it is one of the characteristics that last us through life. I am frank with you, Miss Reade. I love your beauty, and through it I love you."

She put up her hand with a little deprecating gesture.

"You would soon find it pall upon you," she answered, with the trace of ice growing in her tone. "I shall not always remain as I am now."

"And I shall not always live."

There was something pathetic in the words as she looked into the old face, and her voice was a little kinder as she replied:

"Longer, much longer than I shall retain my youth, I hope, Mr. Dwight."

"But——"

"Please don't let us talk of it further," she interrupted wearily. "It is quite impossible for me to give my love to any one, for it is a thing which I do not possess. Will you excuse me if I leave you now, Mr. Dwight? My father said you would find him in the billiard-room."

"Not yet. Don't go yet!" he cried pleadingly, catching her hands as she would have risen, and forcing her gently back into her chair.

"Mr. Dwight!"

"There, don't be offended. Listen to me. I am not quite a fool, Miss Reade, though I am frank enough to confess that I often act like one. I am perfectly aware that I am no longer young. I have not the 'Hyperion curls,' not the 'front of Jove,' that made Hamlet's father 'a thing of beauty.' To come down to twentieth-century slang, my day for mashing is done. I am not ashamed to consult my mirror occasionally, and it often tells me unpleasant truths. In plain English, Miss Reade, I'm old and I'm ugly."

Marian laughed with genuine mirth.

"Upon my word," she exclaimed, "your frankness is refreshing!"

"I am telling you this to show you why it is that I am not asking for your love. You are beautiful. I am rich. Your position here, you must realize, is a most precarious one. You may have affluence today, poverty tomorrow. By your own account, poverty is not a condition that appeals to you. You are essentially a butterfly. What would or could you do if you were forced to earn your daily bread? And yet, as you are situated, it may come to you at any moment. What I offer you is travel, elegance, jewelry, every luxury that money can purchase. I am willing, even, to make a handsome settlement on you, which will insure the same luxury for you all the days of your life. You may name the amount that you desire yourself, and I promise you that you shall never be interfered with in any way, neither annoyed, nor insulted, nor distressed by my wife!"

A stiffness like the rigidity of death came over Marian. The color receded from her face, leaving it cold and white as marble. Her eyes were opened so wide that a white rim above the irises was distinctly visible. She arose slowly, as if the effort to move were almost impossible of accomplishment. Her gaze was never once removed from the man's startled countenance.

She stood there for a moment, white and cold, and silent, and then a little wave of life seemed to flutter through her veins. Her eyes closed for the briefest instant. She staggered slightly, and caught at the back of a chair; and then the terrible indignation of the insulted, outraged woman burst over her. Her whole countenance seemed to be ablaze with wrath.

"You—coward!" she exclaimed, in a tone that sent a thrill to the very soul of the man. "You—craven! How dare you! I can find no words to express my scorn, my contempt, my loathing! Now go!"

She pointed dramatically toward the door, unconscious of the picture of bewildering grace which she presented.

But Elliott Dwight was blind to it also. He had arisen, and was standing with his hand upon the back of his chair, leaning slightly toward her. He was as pale as she herself. The eagerness had died from his countenance, but the earnestness was all there. He was silent for just a moment after she had ceased speaking, and then his voice came to him, low, and trembling, but distinctly audible.

"I cannot go," he said slowly, "until I have made some explanation to you. In justice to myself, I must ask you to listen to me. I don't pretend to be a good man, nor a wise one, but I am not worse than many others, and I tell you, upon an honor that has never been questioned by the world, that if I had known half an hour ago what I know now, I would have bitten out my tongue before speaking to you as I have done. I apologize to you most humbly. I don't wish to wound your feelings in addition to having grossly insulted you, but I feel that I must offer some extenuation for myself in justice to my manhood. Is there no exuse for me, Miss Reade? Is the fact of your living here publicly, in a house like this, no extenuation?"

A startled expression crossed her face.

"I don't understand—you," she stammered.

"You will pardon me if I speak clearly?"

"Go on."

She said it swiftly, breathlessly, and he hesitated a moment before replying.

"I am placed in a most mortifying and embarrassing position," he said slowly; "but there seems nothing for me but to either speak candidly or to be taken for a most utter scoundrel. Miss Reade, it can't be possible that you do not know you are living in a gambling-house that is the talk of all New York? It can't be possible that you are not aware that you are put here for the purpose of attracting men in order that they may be fleeced later in the—billiard-room, where I have been invited to join your father when our interview shall be at an end?"

She flung up her head with a little cry like that of a wounded animal.

He was startled, alarmed. He sprang toward her to offer assistance to her; but she stepped aside, the wildest fury she had ever known blazing from her eyes.

"You have but added to your infamy, your crime," she cried hoarsely, "by this effort to screen your dastardly conduct behind a lie!"

"I swear that every word that I have spoken is the truth!" he cried hastily.

"And I would not believe it if an angel spoke the words."

"Then the fault would be your own. You are here as a decoy for gamblers! You are here to attract to your father's tables the men whose weakness for beauty is greater than their love of play. I believe that I am committing an act of generosity when I tell you this. The whole town is talking of you. There is scarcely a rich profligate in it who is not familiar with your name. La Belle Marian, of New York, is becoming as famous as La Belle Corinne, of Paris, and your father knows it!"

He was standing in front of her, but she sprang by him with the swiftness of a tigress. With one bound she reached the door and flung it open; then her voice, clarion-throated, sounded through halls and corridors:

"Ho!" she cried. "Father! Father! FATHER!"

There was that in the tone which brought instant response. As if by magic, the doors were flung open, and men issued from them, some with billiard-cues in their hands, some flushed, some pale. Leading the number was Paul Reade, with fright in his dastardly eyes, and near him, half-concealed by the crowd, was—Fred Underwood.

"What is it?" demanded Reade, in tones of alarm.

"Look there!" exclaimed Marian, pointing with dramatic finger toward Elliott Dwight, who stood more like a statue than a living man. "That man has dared to insult your daughter, and in extenuation he tells me that I am here, the inmate of a gambling-house, a decoy, and by your will. Father, I command you to tell him that he lies!"

CHAPTER XX.

FRED UNDERWOOD SAVES MARIAN.

A silence that was painful even to the members of that hardened group fell upon the men gathered about Marian and Paul Reade. She stood there with arm outstretched in the direction of Elliott Dwight, and her blazing eyes turned full upon her father's ghastly face; but it fell gradually as she saw Paul Reade's head sink forward on his bosom, and realized that not a word had fallen from his white lips in response to her command.

The terrible excitement slowly faded from her face, like a light that is gradually extinguished for want of sustenance, and in its place came a lingering horror that no words could describe. Her arm fell, and into her face there came an expression which no witness of it ever forgot.

She did not speak; she could not; and Paul Reade stood there with bowed head, like the criminal that he was, silent through fear in presence of that righteous wrath.

In face of it all Elliott Dwight stepped forward. There were few men among the number who did not feel more respect for him than they had ever done before as he spoke to them, his voice low but distinctly clear as he said:

"Your father's silence must convince you, Miss Reade, that I have not lied. Since you have made public the insult which I offered you, the apology must be public as well. It was the result of ignorance, and not intention. It was the result of misconception, and not maliciousness. I do not regret that I have told you of a disgraceful truth of which you were in ignorance. Painful as it is and has been, I do not regret that this scene has taken place, since it clears you, in the eyes of all these people, of a shame that never should have attached to you. I feel that I have saved your reputation against your own father; and if it has cost me a humiliation, and has struck a blow at my vanity, the price is small indeed. There are others here, Miss Reade, who will bear witness that I have not lied."

She had never glanced in his direction; her eyes were still fixed upon her father; but every word that he had spoken was distinctly audible to her. As his voice ceased she took a step forward and put out her hand pleadingly.

"Father," she whispered hoarsely, "speak! say something! Say anything that will but convince me there is some awful mistake. Say something to prove to me that it is not so bad as he has said!"

Still only that deathly silence answered her, and then hope died. Her hand dropped again. She stood there for a moment with the most immortal despair pictured on her countenance, and then she turned and staggered through the hall and up the stairs. The men stood back with bowed heads and allowed her to pass between the human walls.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 34.)

Prize Awards in COMFORT'S Applique and Patchwork Contest

In response to our Prize offer for Applique and other pieces of Patchwork there were thousands of pieces of work submitted, many in original design, some of which are shown on the regular Fancy Work pages in this month's COMFORT. We of course could accept only a small part of the thousands of samples submitted but several hundred patterns were found to be suitable for reproducing in COMFORT and we are now having cuts made so our readers will be able from month to month to get an idea of the great variety of artistic work that is being done in this form of needlecraft.

JARDINIERE OF TULIPS BY MRS. A. J. CREECH.

This sofa pillow cover is one of six original and beautiful designs which were submitted by Mrs. Creech, one of our special prize winners.

This design is very attractive, being well balanced, without being stiff. It is an excellent example of ample applique decoration, so placed as not to suggest an overcrowding of the space, of simple, natural outlines and practically perfect workmanship.

The background is white, jardiniere deeper shade of lavendar, leaves and stems a soft sage green.

The tulips are of two shades of lavendar, the two outer leaves being of the darker shade, and the center petal light, overlaid with a smaller piece of dark as is indicated in our illustration.

The ruffle is of white, finished with a hem stitched edge.

FIRST PRIZE—Mrs. L. A. Vernon, Conn., Luncheon Set, $3.00

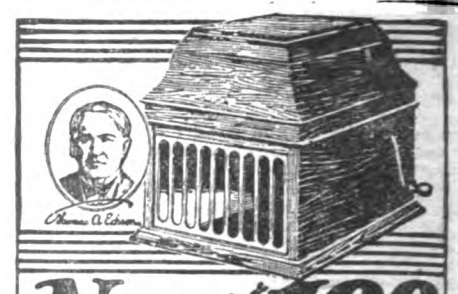
SECOND PRIZE—Mrs. M. E. Brown, Tenn, Dress, $2.50

ORIGINALITY—1st Prize: Irene Harpham, Mo., $2.50. Special: Mrs. E. P. Cruteher, Tenn., (Tulip Pillow), $2.00; Mrs. J. W. Yates, Tenn., (Fruit Centerpiece), $2.00; Mrs. Hugh Bearden, Ark., (Centerpiece), $1.50; Lucile Briston, Ky., (Scarf), $1.50; Miss Missouri B. Moore, Ky., $1.00; Mrs. Emma West, Tenn., (2 Pcs.), $2.00; Janie Becker, Mich., (3 Pcs.), $3.00; Mrs. Cornelia Shappell, Iowa, (Design and Border), $1.50.

SPECIAL PRIZES—Mrs. Mamie Barnes, Tenn., (Scarf and 2 Pcs.), $5.00; Mrs. A. J. Creech, Ky., (6 Pcs. Pillow Covers), $6.00; Mrs. Flossie Wahler, Okla,, (Design for Curtain) $2.00.

The Following Ten Received Prize of $1.00 Each

Mrs. Nettie Vining, Ga. Mrs. Annie Allen, Okla. Mrs. R. V. Grant, Ky. Annie Sue Manning, Ala. Elva A. McCoy, Ky. Mrs. W. B. McHughes, Tenn. Mrs. Rebecca McCray, Ohio. Mrs. T. J. Leonard, Ohio. Mrs. M. P. Williams, Tex. Miss Tillie Krause, Tex.



Special Prizes $1.00 Each

Mrs. A. J. Diggins, Nebr. Mrs. N. M. Mitchell, Tenn. Mrs. Ben Allen, Mo. Mrs. Rosa McGie, Calif. Mrs. Elizabeth Brooke, Ill. Mrs. Amanda A. Harmer, Ga. Mrs. Dora Jenkins, Ga. Marie H. Carey, Pa. Miss Callie Brown, Krause, Tex. Mrs. A. J. Diggins, Nebr. Mrs. N. M. Mitchell, Tenn. Mrs. Ben Allen, Mo. Mrs. Rosa McGie, Calif. Mrs. Elizabeth Brooke, Ill. Mrs. Amanda A. Harmer, Ga. Mrs. Dora Jenkins, Ga. Marie H. Carey, Pa. Miss Callie Brown, Miss. Mrs. Jacob D. Maury, Ohio. Mabel Acree, Fla. Mrs. Elmer E. Gates, Colo. Mrs. Edna Morgan, Kans. Mrs. G. W. Kendall, Tenn. Mrs. Wm. Sowers, Okla. Mrs. Ida Smith, N. C. Mrs. R. B. Walton, Va. Mrs. M. E. Brown, Ind. Delila Gibson, Tenn. Mrs. B. F. Brent, Ky.

The Following Received 50c Each for One or More Samples

Mrs. David Resh, Ohio. Mrs. Charity Windham, Miss. Mrs. Haddock, Okla. Mrs. Geo. W. Wright, Mo. Mrs. E. V. Chavis, N. C. Cora B. Evans, Ky. Mrs. Vane Henness, Oregon. Miss Daisy E. Thayer, Mich. Mrs. Hannah Todd, Mo. Mrs. Emmie Smith, Ark. Mrs. Gertie Miller, W. Va. Mrs. Rose McVey, Iowa. Mrs. Phil Prinz, Tex. Mrs. Clara Johnson, Mo. Miss Helen Uulshafer, Pa. Mrs. Loretta Reece, Ala. Florence Otto, Ill. Louise Bond, Ind. Mrs. Chas. Davidson, W. Va. Miss Nellie Giffons, Ill. Mrs. Elmer Livergood, Kans. Mrs. Bera Berry, Ark. Mrs. Vernon R. Bradbury, Pa. Mrs. J. D. McBryde, N. C. Lou E. Evans, Ky. Mrs. R. J. Hill, Mo. Mrs. Lillie Fleming, Miss. Mrs. Geo. V. Sikes, Va. Mrs. Hannah Todd, Mo. Mrs. T. J. McLain, Idaho. Mrs. Ida C. Keller, Ohio. Mrs. L. A. Wirmer, Kans. Mrs. John J. McCoy, Va. Mrs. W. T. Crabtree, Va. Miss Mayme Oconnor, Mo. Mrs. Martha Clay, Mich. Mrs. Jessie Wosd, Tex. Mrs. A. C. Williams, Ind. Elizabeth A. Blancett, W. Va. Mrs. Sophie Obeling, Okla. Mrs. Nellie Alexander, Okla. Mrs. Faye Evans, Mo. Mrs. Olive Forinash, Ind. Mrs. Grace Reed, Mich. Mrs. W. E. Campbell, Tex. Mrs. May McKibben, Ga. Mrs. A. E. Strickland, Miss. Miss Ella Richcreek, Va. Mrs. Mat Looney, Ark. Mrs. Myra V. Peet, N. Y. Mrs. Hattie B. Woods, Tex. Mrs. C. E. Robinson, Vt. Mrs. Rainy Young, Va. Mrs. A. B. Whitley, Tex. Mrs. Josie Rhodes, Ark. Mrs. Lizzie Vandegrift, Mo. Louisa J. Hobgood, Miss. Lillian Blaylock, Tenn. Miss Olive Wilkinson, Pa. Mrs. Macom Paulk, Ga. Mrs. Wm. A. Doyle, Maine. Mrs. S. A. Hawkins, N. C. Sophia Melton, Ind. Mrs. Minerva Hahn, Ohio. Gertrude Fryett, Ohio. Mrs. John Hare, Pa. Mrs. Inez Burt Geiger, Calif. Mrs. Eleanor Spriggs, Ohio. M. A. Triggs, Nebr. Mrs. J. E. Miller, Ohio. Mrs. Margaret Turney, Md. Mrs. Mary Bryan, Va. Mary Gilbert, Iowa.

The additional list of Prize Winners will be published in the February issue.

Now $1.00 Down

KEEP the New Edison Amberola—Edison's great phonograph, with the diamond stylus reproducer—and your choice of records, for only $1.00. Pay balance at rate of only a few cents a day. Hear it in your own home before you decide. Only $1.00 down. Seize this opportunity.

Write for Book

Get our New Edison catalog. Your name and address on a post card or letter is enough. Find out about this offer—while this offer lasts.

F. K. BABSON, Edison Phonograph Distr.
19th St. and Marshall Blvd., Dept. 3701, Chicago, Ill.

ALL THIS FREE

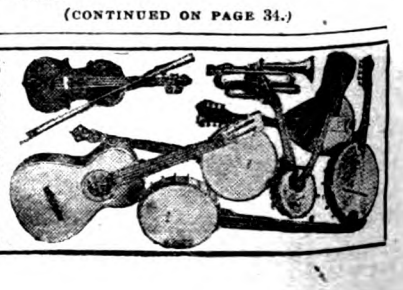
Gold-plated Lavalliere and Chain, pair Earbobs, Gold-plated Expansion Bracelet with Im. Watch, guaranteed quality and 3 Gold-plated Rings. ALL FREE for selling only 15 pieces Jewelry at 10 cents each.

EAGLE WATCH CO., Dept. 15, East Boston, Mass.

WATCH OUTFIT GIVEN

Genuine gold plated watch, Waldemar chain and pocketknife. Free for selling 40 packets of Garden Seed at 10c. We trust you with seed. Write for seed today, stating varieties wanted. Many other premiums. DuVernet Seed Co., Dept. 42, Albany, Ga.

THIS AIR RIFLE FREE



for selling 10 pckgs. Bluine at 15c a pckg. Rifle first-class in every way. When sold return our $1.50 and we will send rifle, all postage prepaid.

BLUINE MFG. CO., 561 Mill St., Concord Jct., Mass.

FREE PROFESSIONAL TONE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

and lessons sent on free trial. Violin, Tenor Banjo, Hawaiian Guitar, Ukulele, Mandolin, Cornet, Banjo Mandolin, Banjo Ukulele, Guitar, Banjo Guitar or Banjo. Wonderful new copyrighted system of teaching note music by mail. Four lessons will teach you several pieces. Over 100,000 successful players. Do not miss this free trial offer. Write for booklet. No obligations.

SLINGERLAND SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Inc.,
1815 Orchard Street, Dept. 121, Chicago, Illinois

Stella Rosevelt

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4.)

vacation lasted, always taking him something in the way of fruit or flowers, and cheering him with her lively chatting, until he began to look for her coming as the chief event of the day.

He continued to remain at the lodge, in spite of the fact that the company had all departed, and there was now plenty of room in the mansion.

Mr. Richards had gone West on a prolonged business trip, and, of course, could not use his influence as to any change; while Mrs. Richards appeared to ignore his presence entirely, unless she came upon him unexpectedly, when she would treat him with indifferent politeness.

Josephine's attitude toward him was one of proud disdain, although once she professed great friendship for him.

In September Mrs. Richards and her daughter went to Long Branch for a change, leaving the household in charge of Mrs. Blunt.

Star began school again, going back and forth by rail, as the town house would not be opened again until October.

During the absence of the family, Mr. Rosevelt frequented the house, as he was glad to avail himself of the privilege of the well-stocked library to while away the long hours of Star's absence.

In the evening she would entertain him with her music, while on Saturday they both felt like children out of school; and thus, day by day, they grew to feel a deep affection for each other.

He had long ago learned just how Star was regarded by the family, and how they had attempted to degrade her to the level of a common servant, and this did not tend to make him entertain any deeper respect for them.

His information on this point he had gathered chiefly from Mrs. Blunt. Star would not talk about it, always evading or changing the subject in a dexterous way that amused him in no small degree.

Meanwhile, Josephine and her mother were flourishing among the fashionable at Long Branch.

The season proved to be a very gay one; every hotel was crowded, and many noted people from various countries were sojourning there.

Among others, the Richards heard upon their arrival, there was a young English lord of great reputed wealth, having, it was said, the largest rent roll in Derbyshire, England.

"They say he is the handsomest man in the place, as well as the richest," Josephine said to her mother, the night after their arrival at the gay watering place.

"How old is he?" asked Mrs. Richards, pricking up her maternal ears at once over this wonderful information.

"About twenty-one or two. He has been traveling in this country for a year, just to see a little of the world before settling upon his own estate. It is whispered," the eager damsel went on, with flushing cheeks and sparkling eyes, "that he has heard of the beauty of American ladies, and is on the lookout for a handsome wife," and Josephine tossed her head with a conscious smile, as her eyes wandered to the reflection of her own fine face and figure in an opposite mirror.

"That is somewhat doubtful, I think, since the English nobility are very jealous regarding marriages outside the pale of their own rank. However, such things are happening every year now, and this young lord may be captivated by some of our American beauties, after all," and Mrs. Richards bestowed a glance of pride upon her handsome daughter, and thought how delightful it would be to figure as mother-in-law to an English lord, and to be able to say, "my daughter, Lady So-and-So."

That evening Josephine Richards, the most brilliant girl in the ballroom of the Howard House—the hotel where they were stopping—was made supremely happy by receiving an introduction to Lord Carrol, of Carrolton, Derbyshire, England.

One look into the frank, handsome eyes of the manly stranger, one touch of his hand, one tone of his rich, musical voice, as it vibrated in her ears, and she knew that she had met the man whom she should love with the one great passion of her life.

He was tall, with a well-developed form, straight, strong and lithe; a splendidly shaped head, with masses of waving brown hair; clear, truthful, brown eyes, full of fire and intelligence; a full, rather low, brow, a straight nose, and a smiling but decided mouth, with brilliant, even teeth.

"It was not much wonder that the "girls were wild" over such a man as this, and he a lord, with a rent roll of sixty thousand a year.

Josephine herself, at nineteen, was a magnificent-looking girl, at least when she was good-natured and animated.

My Lord of Carrolton seemed no less pleased with her than she with him, and spent a goodly portion of the evening by her side, after making her acquaintance, much to the chagrin and indignation of other anxious, blooming maidens and fond, managing mammas.

"Have you ever visited Europe?" the young peer asked his companion, as he led her to a seat at the conclusion of a quadrille.

"Never, my lord, but I think we shall persuade papa to take us upon a European trip by another year. Mamma has some distant relatives, I believe, somewhere in England," Josephine replied.

"I trust you will be as well pleased with my country and countrymen as I am with America and Americans," Lord Carrol remarked, gallantly, with an inclination of his grand head, and bestowing a look of admiration upon his companion.

Josephine's dark eyes dropped shyly beneath his glance, while the blood went rippling to her heart with a thrill such as she had never before experienced.

"I shall remain two or three months longer," he continued; "and I think when I do return, notwithstanding I love old England very dearly, I shall go with something of regret."

Josephine's heart leaped exultantly; she would meet him often, perhaps, this noble young peer; and what might not happen in two or three months?

"Do you remain long at Long Branch?" she asked.

"Three or four weeks, perhaps. I find it very pleasant here," he said; and again that thrill leaped through her veins. "I shall then go to New York," he added, "where I shall make my headquarters until I return to England."

"Perhaps we can help make your stay in New York pleasant," Josephine said, with her most brilliant smile. "Mamma and I are to remain here until the first of October, when we shall go home, and can, perhaps, help to show you more of our great city than you would otherwise see."

"Thanks; I shall be very happy to avail myself of your kindness. But there is the signal for supper; may I take you in?"

It is needless to say that the fascinated girl accepted his invitation, and spent the hour feasting more upon the young lord's handsome looks and charming conversation than upon the choice viands which he placed before her.

It was evident that he also experienced pleasure in her society, for, when he took her to Mrs. Richards, he asked and obtained permission to call upon them on the morrow.

CHAPTER XII.

THE CAMEO RING.

A fortnight passed, and the Brooklyn beauty, as Miss Richards was designated, together with the attention she was receiving from the handsome English lord, formed the principal theme of conversation at the fashionable watering place.

Mrs. Richards was in her element, and conducted herself remarkably well.

His lordship considered her a woman of very fine appearance and of wonderful tact; and it was noticeable that when he was in her presence he paid her full as much homage as he did her daughter; but people, of course, said this was all for a particular purpose.

"By the way," she said to him, one day, when they were comparing the merits of their respective countries, "I am more than half English myself. The late Lady Thornton, of Hallowell Park, Devonshire, was an aunt of mine—at least, my mother was her half-sister—and I have other distant relatives living in the same county."

"Indeed!" said Lord Carrol, his face lighting at this intelligence. "I had no idea that you had any English blood in your veins; I thought you were purely American. I have often heard my father speak of Sir William Thornton, of Devonshire, and his son, Sir Charles, was at Oxford with me. I was only slightly acquainted with him, however, as he took his degree a year before I took mine. I am very happy to learn of this fact," and, as if by some fascination, the young nobleman's glance sought Josephine as he spoke.

"I once visited at Hallowell Park when I was a young girl," Mrs. Richards continued, although a flush arose to her cheek as she remembered all that had transpired during that visit, for it was then that Star's mother had saved her from drowning. "It is a lovely place, and a very large estate, I believe."

"So I have been told. Sir William was quite an active statesman before his death, which occurred only a year after his wife's. They had only one child, Sir Charles, I believe."

"Has he a family?" Mrs. Richards asked quickly.

"I think not—at least, I have never heard of his marriage. If he should die without issue, I suppose the estate would pass into other hands."

Mrs. Richards started, and gave the young man a quick glance at this.

"Whose, I wonder?" she said, reflectively, and suddenly seemed to lose all interest in the conversation, and the young lord turned his attention to the more appreciative Josephine.

The month which the Richards spent at Long Branch was an eventful one; it was the most brilliant season that Josephine had ever known.

The last evening of their sojourn at Long Branch, Miss Richards descended to the veranda of the hotel, dressed with the utmost care and taste.

She was brilliantly, dazzingly beautiful.

The men watched her every movement with admiring glances; the women could but acknowledge her superior charms, yet with something of a feeling of envy on account of the prize they believed she was about to bear away with her.

Lord Carrol seemed drawn to her as the needle to the pole. He had been sitting at one end of the veranda when she came down, but he almost immediately arose and went to her side, while he would not have been human not to have betrayed his appreciation of the exquisite toilet, which seemed to enhance her beauty more than ever.

"What will the devotees at beauty's shrine do tomorrow, Miss Richards?" the young lord asked, with a smile and a glance which told her what she knew already—that she was particularly attractive tonight.

"The Howard House possesses a galaxy of beauties, and I do not think there will be any occasion for the 'devotees,' as you call them, to neglect their duty tomorrow," she answered, smiling, too, but with heightened color.

"Ah! but it is plainly to be seen where they have bent the knee most devoutly," he replied, with a gesture which called her attention to the many admiring eyes fixed upon her.

She shrugged her graceful shoulders with an air of impatience, as if annoyed to find herself so conspicuous, while her darkly fringed lids drooped over her glorious eyes, hiding the wistful look which had suddenly crept into them.

"The night is lovely, and the band is playing delightfully; let us go out and wander about the grounds for a little while," Lord Carrol said, after a moment of silence, during which sweet, enticing strains came floating toward them on the evening air.

She took the arm he offered her, her heart throbbing so wildly that she feared he would detect it, and they passed down the steps and away from the crowd on the veranda, some of whom smiled to hide their envy, others indulgently, as if upon a pair of lovers.

"I suppose this will be our last night in this charming place," the young man said, as they slowly wended their way along a sheltered avenue.

She looked up with a slight start at the word "our." He noticed it and smiled.

"I said 'our', because I, too, shall leave on the afternoon express tomorrow. I have business in New York which will occupy me for a week or more."

Josephine flushed with pleasure at this, for she felt sure that the "business" was only a pretext.

"Oh!" she thought, "if he would but speak a single word to commit himself that night, she could go away in the morning with a light and happy heart."

But he had never hinted of love for her; he had accompanied her and her mother almost everywhere they had been, often showing Mrs. Richards more attention than herself. He had danced with her, rode with her, walked with her, and no word beyond the most commonplace expressions of friendship had ever fallen from his lips.

They wandered on and on, the moonlight streaming upon them through the overarching branches of the trees, and making lacelike patterns upon the smoothly graveled walk at their feet, and he talked only of yesterday's boating, yesterday's racing—of anything save what her heart was craving to hear.

The band played its softest, sweetest strains; the leaves rustled whisperingly above their heads, suggestive of lovers' vows; they were almost alone in the beautiful, moonlighted avenue, and everything was conducive to love-making, if his lordship had only been so inclined.

Soon they came out by a fountain where the lights were shining brilliantly, and he led her to a rustic seat, placed her in it, and sat down beside her.

"I shall be very sorry to go," Josephine said, with a pensive sigh, as she looked around on the lovely scene; "it has been very pleasant here this summer."

"It has, indeed, and I shall carry the memory of it with me for a long while," her companion replied. "You have some very beautiful places of resort in your country, Miss Richards. You and your mother have made my sojourn at Long Branch more than pleasant. Since learning that you have English blood in your veins, I have grown to regard you almost as my own people; and sometimes," he added, smiling, "I have felt as if I might be intruding myself too much upon you; but I trust I shall be able to return some of your kindness when you come to England."

Josephine's heart sank like lead in her bosom. These were surely very commonplace words to speak to her on the eve of her departure, if he entertained anything of affection for her.

"It would be a great delight to me to visit England," she returned; "and you have told me so much about your beautiful home—your mother and sister—that I have a great desire to see both it and them."

"You must come to Cheshire Park—my mother's and sister's home. Next year I shall hope to show it to you," he said, earnestly.

Did he mean that he hoped she would go there with him, or was it merely a wish that she would visit England, that he might be able to return some of the courtesies which she and her mother had shown him?

She could not tell, but hope seemed deserting her; her heart beat heavily, she grew pale and sad, and a slight shiver shook her.

He noticed it.

"You are taking cold, I fear; we ought not to sit here in this evening air."

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 22.)

HOW I EARN MONEY AT HOME

AND IN THIS WAY MAKE UP FOR HENRY'S SHRINKING SALARY

Every Wife or Self-Supporting Girl Can Use Extra Money for Clothes. Thousands Are Now Making It Themselves—Right at Home in This New Way.

By MARY WALDEN

"MY dear, you should have seen her at church this morning. She looked positively 'dowdy.' It's a shame! Mary used to be such a well-dressed girl—until she married that bank-clerk. I should think he'd feel like—"

"Sh-h-h! She's on this car. Over behind you. She might hear."

The street car was crowded and they hadn't noticed me before, but I had heard—and my face flushed red with resentment and shame. It was true—I did look "dowdy"—and I knew it.

"It helped us over the hard spots by turning spare hours into dollars."

I got off the street car at the next corner and walked the remaining blocks to my home—and Henry.

My husband is one of the "white-collar men" whose salaries haven't kept pace with the mounting cost of living. I had been earning a comfortable living for myself when we had married, and since the cost of everything had kept rising higher and higher I had sometimes hinted to Henry that I would be glad to take a position again, but he had always vetoed the idea strenuously—so I had gone on skimping and scraping—and wearing "made overs."

But I resolved as I walked homeward, that Henry or no Henry, I was going to find a way to make extra money for clothes, and do it, at least until things took a turn for the better.

When I got home Henry was comfortably smoking and absorbed in his Sunday paper, and his contentment somehow irritated me terribly. To make matters worse he held up the magazine-picture section of the paper as I came into the room, and remarked that he had never seen the girls wear "such good-looking duds as they do this year."

Henry is really a perfect dear and adores me, but he should have had more sense. I lost my temper, snatched the paper from him, and cried:—

"If you like to see nice clothes so much, why don't you buy your wife some of them?"

Then I rushed to my room, still carrying the Magazine Section of the paper, and threw myself across the bed for a good cry. Henry came and knocked and spoke to me, but I wouldn't let him in.

After a while I sat up and began to idly turn the pages of the paper I had taken away from Henry. All of a sudden I sat up straighter and gasped. A woman was looking out of the page at me, holding a bank check in her hand, and across the top of the page were the words, "How I Make Money—Right at Home!"

I devoured every word of the advertisement. When I had finished I felt that I had found the work I was looking for. I resolved to write for the particulars to the Auto Knitter Hosiery Company, but to keep it a secret from my husband.

To make my story short, I found their prospectus so convincing and reasonable that I sent for and received an Auto Knitter outfit, including the wonderful little machine, the Auto Knitter. I kept it in the bottom drawer of my bureau while Henry was in the house. At the end of a month I sent my first shipment of soft, warm, well-knit wool socks to the company. By return mail came my first check—and oh joy! the thrill of that first check.

Well, I kept on making socks, sending regular shipments to the Company, and before very long I presented myself before Henry in a pretty new accordion-pleated frock. His mouth opened, and he just stared at me in admiration, without a word. Finally he managed to say, "Where did you get it, Mary?"

"I earned it!" I replied brightly, not sure just how he would take the news. Henry looked for a minute as if I had said I had stolen it. Then I made him sit down and hear what I had to say.

"You know as well as I do," I said, "that it is the middle-class people who are having the struggle nowadays. Everybody knows it. Look at the married women who have taken business positions to help out their husbands! Nobody thinks the worse of them for it. Isn't my plan for making money in spare time at home, without neglecting you or little Helen, better than taking a position? Why, nobody needs to know a thing about it!"

That fetched Henry, as I was sure it would. He said:

"Well, you've been a 'contrary Mary'—but I guess you're right. Let's see how you do it."

So I took the light, portable Auto Knitter out of the bureau drawer, quickly clamped it to the table, and showed Henry how it worked. I had had enough practice by that time so that I made a pair of socks so quickly that Henry's eyes nearly popped out of his head.

"And you say the Auto Knitter Hosiery Company buys the socks from you?" he asked.

"Yes," I said, "they guarantee to always take every pair I make—at a guaranteed price. And they pay the transportation charges on ten dozen pair or over, besides sending me the yarn to replace the amount used for the socks I have sent them. So you see the yarn hasn't cost me anything since the first lot."

Henry was certainly astonished, and when he saw how fascinating the work was he said he had no objection to my continuing it.

The result was that I didn't have to go without any of the things I needed for myself or little Helen last Winter, or the following Spring and Summer. Henry is succeeding much better now, but I still use the Auto Knitter regularly—sometimes making socks to send to Buffalo, sometimes making them to sell to friends who have seen the strong, warm, long-wearing Auto Knitter Hosiery and want some of it.

Whenever I hear a woman complaining about the high cost of living and clothes, I always try to tell her how the Auto Knitter will help her to make money at home in spare time. Then I tell her, just as I am telling you, that the Auto Knitter Company will make a contract with each of their workers to pay her a liberal guaranteed wage on a piece-work basis. In this contract you are perfectly free—you can work for them as much or as little—or not at all—yet for every shipment of socks you send them you get your pay-check—promptly.

No matter where you live I feel sure that you want to know all about the machine that has meant so much to me. By all means write to the Auto Knitter Hosiery Company, Dept. 101, 630-632 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y., at once and find out about this pleasant home occupation. Find out what substantial amounts even a part of your spare time will earn for you.

Send your name and address now and find out all the good things that are in store for you.

The Auto Knitter Hosiery Company, Inc.
Dept. 101, 630-632 Genesee St.,
Buffalo, N. Y.

Send me full particulars about Making Money at Home with the Auto Knitter. I enclose 2 cents postage to cover cost of mailing, etc. It is understood that this does not obligate me in any way.

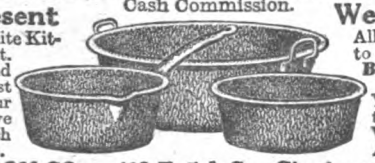
Name.....

Address.....

City .....State.....

Comfort 1-22

FREE! A 42-Pc. FULL SIZE DINNER SET.



WE TRUST YOU. NO MONEY NEEDED. WE PAY FREIGHT.

SELL ONLY 12 BOXES OF SOAP,

each box containing 7 cakes fine Toilet Soap, and with every box, give as premiums to each purchaser all of the following articles: a Pound of Baking Powder, Bottle Perfume, Box Talcum Powder, 6 Teaspoons, Pair of Shears and a Package of Needles and this artistic Blue Bird Dinner Set is Yours. Many other equally attractive offers and hundreds of useful Premiums such as Wearing Apparel, Linen Sets, Furniture, etc. We also pay large Cash Commission.

Special Extra Present

We give a High-Grade Granite Kitchen Set, consisting of a 10 qt. Dish Pan, 3 qt. Sauce Pan and 3 qt. Pudding Pan without cost or extra work if you send your order promptly. We also give Beautiful Presents and pay cash for appointing agents for us.

We Pay The Freight

Allowing plenty of time for you to examine, deliver and collect.

BIG PRICE REDUCTIONS ON ALL GOODS.

You advance no money. We trust you. You risk nothing. Write today for Big FREE Agents Outfit. Don't delay.

THE PERRY G. MASON CO., 403 E. 5th St., Cincinnati, O. Founded 1897.

NEW MONITOR SELF-HEATING IRON

AGENTS SEND FOR FREE OUTFIT OFFER

$60 to $80 a week actually being made now by men and women. The original—the best—the lowest priced. Nickel plated—looks good—makes good—sells fast—guaranteed. No experience needed. Women as well as men. Exclusive territory. Work all or spare time. Mrs. Stockman, Kansas, sold 10 in half a day. Pearman, Ky. made $150 first week. Liberal terms. Prompt service. Write today.

THE MONITOR SAD IRON CO. 406 Fay St. BIG PRAIRIE, OHIO

Don't get all tired out with lame back and frown wrinkles

WASH TUBS Made into Semi-Automatic Washing Machines

THIS

Change your wash tub into up-to-date washing machine of Dodge & Zuill Syracuse Easy Washer vacuum principle for 25c week. Wash tub of clothes in 5 to 10 min., clean, without wear with Vac cup attachment. Prepaid, 30-day free trial. Easy paym'ts. Send postcard—save work. Burlingame Mfg. Co., 123 Sunset Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

BECOMES THIS

FREE WRIST WATCH

Handsome, guaranteed time keeper, given for selling only 40 packs of vegetable seeds at 10c per large pack. Easily sold—EARN BIG MONEY OR PREMIUMS. Get sample lot today. Send no money. WE TRUST YOU till seeds are sold.

AMERICAN SEED CO. Box A-32, LANCASTER, PA.

NEW KIND OF HEAT!

Famous Oliver Burner gives 3 times the heat without coal or wood—cheaper. Fits any heating or cook stove without change. Burns 5 per cent kerosene (coal oil) 95 per cent air. Safe. Keeps home warmer. Heats instantly by turning simple valve. Sets right in fire box of stove. No fires to make, no ashes nor dirt. 30 Day Trial.

FREE BOOK: Attractive booklet "New Kind of Heat," sent postpaid. Also Special Price Offer. Write Today.

AGTS. WANTED OLIVER OIL-GAS BURNER & MACHINE CO. 2074-A, Pine Street, St Louis, Mo.

Watch & Ring REALLY GIVEN AWAY

This stem wind and set, Handsome Engraved Back, guar. timekeeper and fine ring given for selling only 16 pks. Bluette, our famous wash bluing at 15c or 24 pks. Sachet Perfume at 10c. Order choice.

10-Year Guarantee

Chicago Bluing Works 1920 Sunnyside, Dept. 201, Chicago

GIVEN

Cooking Set, Blue gray enamel ware, best grade, 7 pieces all full size, given for selling 40 packets Garden Spot Seeds at 10c a packet. Send no money. Write today for seeds and catalog.

Lancaster Co. Seed Co. Sta. 68 PARADISE, PA.

WATCH, RING AND CHAIN GIVEN

We positively give a genuine American Stem Wind and Set Watch, beautifully designed case, warranted time-keeper, 6-year guarantee; Sparkling Set or Plain Ring all for selling 25 of our easy to sell Jewelry articles at 10c each. When sold send $2.50 & we'll send Watch & Ring. Home Supply Co., 428 W. 59th Street, Dept. 105, Chicago

PHONOGRAPH and RECORD FREE

Boys! Girls! This wonderful New Model Talking Machine and popular Record is yours. A real Phonograph with high grade reproducer. Plays loud and clear all size records up to 12 inches. No motor to get out of order. Given for selling only 25 large colored pictures OR 25 pkgs. Fancy Post Cards at 10c each. Order your choice today.

Sent Charges Prepaid. GATES MFG. CO. Dept 625 CHICAGO

BIRTH STONE RING FREE

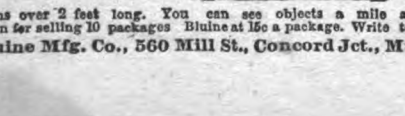
14K GOLD finished, guaranteed to give satisfaction, with stone for any month, to introduce our catalogue. Send 15c to cover cost of advertising and mailing. Send size.

SUN JEWELRY CO., Dept. 50, EAST BOSTON, MASS.

GIVEN A REAL HAMILTON

22 RIFLE

For selling only 2 lots of our Beautiful Colored Art & Religious Pictures at 10c each. Order 25 pictures at once. They sell on sight. You can easily win this 22 Sure Shot Rifle in no time. Guaranteed.



GAIR MFG. CO., 1926 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. 601, CHICAGO

FREE

Sell 24 Perfume Pkgs. at 10c. When sold send $2.40 and we'll send stem wind watch, or keep $1.00. Rex Co., C-1, Chicago

TELESCOPE FREE

Opens over 2 feet long. You can see objects a mile away Given for selling 10 packages Bluine at 15c a package. Write today.

Bluine Mfg. Co., 560 Mill St., Concord Jct., Mass.

Conducted by Cousin Marion

In writing this department always sign your true name and give your address; if not, your letter will receive no attention. Name will not be published.

LAST month something was said about New Year resolutions. Since then I've had a perfectly wonderful idea, and one that will be much easier than endeavoring to live up to a long list of New Year resolutions. It's this: Let's take twelve of our faults—maybe you haven't that many but I'm sure I have—and try every month to overcome one fault. Take another fault for the second month, still keeping up the good work of the first month. Let me see, which shall I try first? My greatest fault is—but I'm not going to tell you, now, at any rate. Tell me how you succeed.

Happy New Year.

UNDECIDED, Mich.—Candidly, I think the young man in question would be much better off if you refused to marry him. You admit that you don't like the idea of being married and that you don't care to discuss his business affairs with him. Why marry, then? Let him find a girl who will appreciate the good qualities you say he possesses and the home he has to offer. Just because he lives alone is no proof that he is marrying just for the sake of getting someone to do his work for him and if you truly loved him you would understand that, and be glad of the opportunity to make a home for him. Furthermore, if you marry him, don't discourage him when he comes to you with his business problems and worries. If you were in business you'd naturally expect your partner to take an interest in everything, wouldn't you? Marriage is a partnership and why should you shirk your share of the responsibilities? You'd expect to share in the profits, I'm sure.

PINKIE, Tenn.—Really, Pinkie, I'm not sure which is the better method, to keep a fellow guessing or tell him frankly that you love him, after he asks you, of course. I should say it would depend upon the fellow. One might object to uncertainty and quit because he thought the girl didn't care for him, while the other would lose interest as soon as he felt sure. You'll have to decide which method to use, though, as a rule, it is better not to let them feel absolutely certain of you. (2) There are various ways of making a boy give up bad company. You could associate with them yourself, just to show him what he is doing, but I would never advise that. In the first place, people would never understand, and you'd get yourself talked about, and secondly, it is dangerous. Bad people are often interesting and fascinating and they might, in time, convince you that maybe you were a little bit narrow-minded, etc., and it is said of vice:

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

The better way would be to tell him that you can't afford to be classed with such people as he associates with and leave it to him to decide which he prefers.

I. K., Missouri.—There is nothing you can do but, as you say, wait a year or two and see what happens. Chances are you will be in love with someone else by that time.

BRIGHT EYES, Newton, W. Va.—If you are in the habit of asking your fiance's permission when you wish to spend the night with a girl friend, I suppose you should do it this time, but I'd simply tell him that I was going. Time enough for this "asking permission" stuff after you are married. (2) What would I say if a boy asked me what I wanted for Christmas. What wouldn't I say? I'd start in with A and go through the alphabet. A—automobile; B—books; C—candy, even though I'm dieting; D—diamonds; E—eardrops, vampy ones; F—flowers; and so on, down to Z, though I'm not sure what I want in Z. Zebra is all I can think of just now and I haven't room for one.

MISS D., Ohio.—If ever I learn of a "forty-year-old man living on a big hill farm in West Virginia," I'll let you know, but remember, I assume no further responsibilities. This isn't a matrimonial agency. Must it be a hill farm? Wouldn't a nice valley farm do? A bachelor and a hill farm ought not to be difficult to find and so long as you didn't insist upon curly hair and a wart on his nose, it ought to be easy.

L. J., Machias.—Your mother is right.

FORSAKEN GIRL, Ga.—Treat your girl friends nicely at all times, regardless of how they use you. Because they are rude and unladylike at times is no reason why you should be like them.

KIP, Minn.—So sweet of you to think I'm a "dimpled darling of nineteen or twenty". Horrors! Do I sound like that? Dimpled? Yes. Darling? Well, some people think so, but never again can I be nineteen or twenty. What's the idea, Kip? Trying to have some fun with your poor old cousin? Your spelling is too terrible to be real and your penmanship is too good to be consistent with your spelling. As for your elopement, is that a joke, too? If it isn't it ought to be. As for your slang, Hot Dog, Kip, if you must use it be up to date. The expressions you asked about were old when I was a girl.

WALTER AND B., Texas.—Girls are forgiving creatures and I can understand how even a "nice good girl" as you specify, would make up with a fellow after he had insulted her by going with an indecent girl. Girls often think that by kindness they can reform men. Yes, Walter, I think a "nice good girl" would do just such a thing as that and still be much better than the man who presumes to doubt her. (2) Do I think a girl who allows herself to be hugged and kissed by all the boys she knows, would make a good wife? Surely not a good recommendation for the girl—but how about the boys who hugged and kissed her? Do you think there should be different standards of morality for the sexes? (3) If the mother or older sister were in the habit of preparing the meals then there is no reason why the younger sister should do it when her beau calls unexpectedly at meal time—only he shouldn't call then. Of course if it is a sort of test I suppose she could do it all with her own fair hands and invite him into the kitchen to see that she pared the potatoes properly and didn't waste anything, etc. Really, Walter and B., who are you that you should set yourselves up as judges over a girl's morals and ability? Better give your own morals and achievements the once over.

MRS. M. J., N. Dak.—Dear me, women are never satisfied. If they aren't trying to get a new man they are trying to make over the one they already have. Yes, I know, most of them need it, but don't you try too hard. Let the poor dears alone, feed 'em well and don't nag or scold and you'll get along much more comfortably. Besides, he had all these faults when you married him, didn't he? Men are much the same. I've noticed that men who admire quiet, dignified women marry giddy, frivolous girls and then spend the rest of their lives trying to make them over into quiet women. Funny, aren't we?

MARY J., Bay City, Mich.—Why does a boy ask a girl how old she is? Because he wants to know, I suppose, though it isn't a polite thing to do. (2) Could your mother get married after she is a widow and have six children? Now, Mary, that's not fair. Not even your mother knows that. Of course she might have five children, but six—well, I don't dare say that she would. Let's wait and see.

WORRIED, Ark.—It is rather selfish of your mother to object to your friendship, and possible marriage, with a man you have every reason to trust and respect. It would be different if you were a very young girl, but a woman of thirty-seven should be capable of knowing what is best and, naturally, you want a husband and a home.

PINKY, N. C.—If he doesn't show any more enthusiasm, ask him why and offer to release him from the engagement. The invitation to call should come from his mother.

JEWEL, Missouri.—When he has a steady job and gives up drinking and being wild and has five hundred dollars in the bank, will be time enough for you to love him. Your mother and brother know best.

SAMMIE AND SMILEY.—It would be better if your parents would allow you to have boy friends call at your home. Put it up to them as a plain honor proposition: they to allow you callers and certain privileges and you to promise on your honor not to do anything wrong—your parents' idea of wrong and not yours or your boy friends. I wouldn't advise this in every case but your letters were above the average.

PEGGY, Pa.—You are right, the boy is "odd" who will take you to church in his car but not to dances. Rather a nice odd, though. If that's his only fault, hang onto him.

MARGIE, Virginia!—Did you do wrong when you climbed out of your window and went to a dance? I don't know, Margie, but I hope you didn't. Anyway, don't do it again.

By, COUSIN MARION.

Stella Rosevelt

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 21.)

"No, I am not taking cold; I will tie my handkerchief around my throat, however," she answered.

It was so pleasant sitting there beside him, so pleasant to listen to his rich, deep voice and look into his clear brown eyes, that she could not bear to think of going back to the hotel just yet.

She tied her handkerchief about her white throat, and as she did so, the light struck full upon a ring which he had not seen her wear before.

It was a lovely cameo, very delicately cut. It was Star's little treasure, the gift of Archibald Sherbrooke.

"Pardon me," Lord Carrol said, with a slight start, as he observed it, "but you have a ring on your hand that I have never seen you wear before. It is very lovely. May I examine it more closely?"

Josephine unhesitatingly laid her hand on his palm, her whole body thrilling as his fingers closed over it, and he bent his proud head to examine the ring.

She had had made poor Star's pin into this ring, which she had worn a few times, and then, tiring of it, had thrown it into her jewel box, where it had lain unheeded until tonight, when a sudden whim had caused her to put it on.

"It is a very finely carved cameo," he said, after a few moments, during which he had regarded it intently. "I once saw one so nearly like it that I do not think I could distinguish it from this. It belonged to—to a friend of mine, although that was in the form of a pin."

"Was your friend a lady or gentleman?" Josephine asked, quickly, and not giving herself time to realize that she was betraying undue curiosity.

"A gentleman," he returned, briefly.

"It is a pretty trifle, which was given to me by a relative," Josephine said, without even wincing at the lie, yet feeling guilty and uncomfortable to have the stone recognized.

"It is evidently quite a valuable cameo," Lord Carrol returned, thoughtfully, "and the person of whom I spoke prized the one he had very highly, for he is something of an artist, and had it carved in Italy after a design which he made himself."

"Indeed! Is your artist an Englishman?" Miss Richards asked, with downcast eyes, and more interested in this matter than she cared to appear.

"Yes; and his name is Sherbrooke—Archibald Sherbrooke," Lord Carrol replied, while he regarded her intently.

Josephine started, and the color flamed into her face.

Archibald Sherbrooke!

The name smote her unpleasantly, for she remembered those two initials, "A. S.," which were marked on the back of the setting of the cameo, and having two tiny strawberry leaves engraved underneath.

Could it be possible that Star—the despised girl at Yonkers—knew Archibald Sherbrooke, the friend of Lord Carrol, and that he had given this elegant cameo to her?

The thought was not a pleasant one, for it told her that if such was the case, and there could be no doubt of it, that Star was known and appreciated by one whom this English lord held in high esteem.

She would have liked to question him more about this "friend" of his, but did not wish to betray too much curiosity lest he should mistrust that she had the identical stone which he referred to, and should in turn ask unpleasant questions of her.

She therefore changed the subject as quickly as possible, hoping to win him to a mood more congenial with her own feelings and desires.

But her efforts proved unavailing, for his lordship had suddenly become thoughtful and taciturn; and Miss Richards at last, berating herself soundly for having worn that unlucky ring that evening, signified her desire to return to the hotel.

Mrs. Richards had watched them saunter from the veranda in a flutter of anticipation, hoping that the all-important moment had at last arrived.

But one glance at her daughter's face when they came back told her that the much-wished-for crisis had not arrived, and she felt deeply disappointed.

"Good night and good by!" Josephine said, holding out her white hand to her companion as they entered the hotel. She could not trust herself longer in his society, lest she should betray something of her disappointment and ill-nature. "I must say my farewell now, I suppose, since we are to leave by the early train tomorrow."

"It is always hard to say farewell to our friends," Lord Carrol answered, smiling as he took her extended hand. "However, I can say it with a better grace now than if it were to be a final one. But are you going to leave us so soon? There is a gay company in the dancing-hall, and I fear many will be disappointed if you flit so early."

"Yes, I am going up to my room," she answered, wearily; and he noticed that she had grown very pale and was shivering.

"I am really afraid you have taken cold; you look ill, and I fear I kept you out too long," he said, anxiously.

"No," she returned, brightening a trifle as she saw how troubled he was on her account. "I have not taken cold, but I do not feel like dancing tonight, so I will retire. Good by for a week."

"Yes, for one week; then I shall see you in your own home at Yonkers," Lord Carrol said; and just then Mrs. Richards approached them.

"How is it that you two young people are not in the ballroom?" she said, brightly.

"I am taking leave of Miss Richards, who thinks of retiring, as she says you leave on the early train," explained his lordship.

"What is the trouble, Josie—are you not well?" the elder lady asked, with maternal solicitude.

"Yes; but I do not wish to dance tonight, so I am going upstairs."

"Then I'll go with you, for I have not quite finished packing. Well, my lord," she added, turning cheerily to him and giving him her hand, "I trust you will spend the coming week pleasantly, and then we shall expect to see you again."

"Thanks. Shall I have the pleasure of meeting Mr. Richards then? Will he have returned by that time?" the young man asked.

"Yes; he returns next week," Mrs. Richards answered, a new idea striking her.

Probably he wished to consult formally with her husband before proposing to Josephine; the English, she knew, were very punctilious regarding such matters.

Yes, she was confident, now she thought of it, that was why he had not come to the point tonight.

So, after a few more cordially spoken regrets, good wishes, and so forth, they left him and sought their rooms.

Lord Carroll turned and went out into the grounds again, his face grown very grave and thoughtful.

"I never would have believed it. I do not understand it at all," he muttered to himself.

But what he did not understand or could not believe, the future must develop.

The next morning Mrs. Richards and her daughter left for Yonkers, and the same afternoon Lord Carrol was en route for New York City.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we shall be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

130 New Transfer Patterns FREE

All The Latest Stylish Designs For Milady's Dress, Lingerie And Accessories, Children's Garments, Household Linen And Fancy Work, Also Hoops, Stiletto, Embroidery Cotton And Instruction Book.

COMFORT needleworkers will welcome this splendid new transfer outfit consisting of five large sheets of patterns, five skeins embroidery cotton, different colors: hoops, bone stiletto and book on embroidery stitches. This grand pattern assortment, which easily surpasses anything we ever offered before, includes more than one hundred thirty new stylish motifs for all kinds of wearing apparel, table linen, towels, handkerchiefs and many beautiful articles of fancy work for home decoration. They may be used singly and in innumerable combinations. There are designs for corset covers, petticoats, collars, borders and sprays for dresses, lingerie, etc., borders for braid, towels, etc., anchors, repeat scallops in five different sizes; two sizes of fancy scallops, fleur-de-lis, French knots, child's dress, Dutch figures, scarf end for Bulgarian work, rose design for pillow, corners for table covers, centerpieces, lunch cloths, handkerchiefs, etc., etc., 17-inch butterfly centerpiece, doilies, one complete 2¾-inch Old English alphabet, one complete 1¾-inch initial block alphabet, one complete ½-inch initial script alphabet, and various other designs—over one hundred thirty in all.

The patterns may be instantly transferred to any material by simply rubbing with bowl of a spoon or by pressing with a hot iron. They can be used at least six times with satisfactory results.

Remember—in addition to all these patterns, we also include free of charge, five skeins good embroidery cotton in different colors, hoops, bone stiletto and a book illustrating and describing all the principal embroidery stitches, making embroidery so simple that a child can do it.

We will make you a present of this big transfer outfit if you will accept the following

Special Offer. For a club of two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this complete transfer outfit, exactly as described, free by mail postpaid.

Reward No. 9272.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Auto Owners WANTED!

To introduce the best automobile tires in the world. Made under our new and exclusive Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process that eliminates Blow-Out—Stone-Bruise—Rim-Cut and enables us to sell our tires under a

10,000 MILE GUARANTEE

We want an agent in every community to use and introduce these wonderful tires at our astonishingly low prices to all motor car owners.

Write for booklet fully describing this new process and explaining our amazing introductory offer to owner agents.

Hydro-United Tire Co.
Dept. 187, Chicago, San Francisco, Pottstown, Pa.

AUTO & TRACTOR
Rahe TRAINING

Reduced from $150 to $100

My training was $150. Now only $100 (if you accept immediately). This is my greatest offer—your best chance. If you ACT NOW you will receive the famous Rahe Auto and Tractor Course (better now than ever before) for a price which SAVES YOU $50. This $50 will more than pay your railroad fare to my nearest school—leaves you money to apply on room and board.

7 days free

The Rahe-Way Is Guaranteed. We must be satisfied we can train you. So must you. Come now under this famous Rahe 7-day guarantee. You take no chance when you buy guaranteed clothing or food. And you take no chance here—this Course is GUARANTEED.

3 Schools—No Crowding

Plenty of room for all. Schools at Chicago, Kansas City, Cincinnati. All schools and training identical.

SAVE $50.00 No need to delay a minute—you know the price—my course in Guaranteed—so Come Now. Or write today for my fine 68-page Book, describing the training and opportunities. It's FREE TO YOU. Come or write TODAY.

HENRY J. RAHE, Dept. 2081,

Rahe Auto & Tractor Schools

Chicago, Ill. Ontario & Michigan | Kansas City, Mo. 22nd & Oak Sts. | Cincinnati, O. 9th & Walnut Sts.

FOOT BALL FREE

This ball is regulation size, like those used in all the official college games. It is made of fine grade pebble foot ball leather, strongly sewed, with leather inside flap with round lacing. It has an everlasting Hand Made, Pure Gum Bladder and is made by the best sporting goods house in America. You would pay a big price for a foot ball like this at any store. It will stand the rough and tumble fight of the field, and will give you genuine satisfaction.

SEND NO MONEY We want to give one boy in each locality one of these fine college foot balls free for just a little easy work, something you can do in an hour or two. If you want a foot ball, write me today.

G. M. BURNS, 109 Friend Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

VIOLIN FREE

Beautiful violin, with bow, book of instructions, and rosin given for selling 25 pieces of Jewelry at 10 cents each. Write today. Eagle Watch Co., Dept. 620, East Boston, Mass.

FREE  POWERFUL AIR GUN AND 500 BUCK SHOTS

The best Rifle ever offered. 31 inch, lever action, fully guaranteed. Given for selling 20 pkgs. fancy Post Cards at 15c a pkg.

Our cards sell easy. SUN MFG. CO. DEPT 725 CHICAGO

Premo Junior Camera

Reward No. 7417

Takes A Picture 2¼ x 3¼ Inches In Size

Film Pack (12 Exposures) and Instruction Book

All Given For A Club Of Seven!

OF course you have heard of the "Premo"—made by the Eastman Kodak Co.— so we feel it hardly necessary to tell you that it is a strictly high grade camera—one that you can depend upon to produce the most pleasing and satisfactory results. The Premo takes a picture 2¼x3¼ inches, is handsomely leather covered, fitted with a reliable quick action lens, automatic shutter adapted for either snap shots or time exposures and has two brilliant-view finders so that pictures may be taken either the long way or short way of the camera. The Premo also uses a film pack containing twelve films which can be put in the camera and taken out again in broad daylight, thus doing away with the necessity of going to a dark room every time you want to load it. We know that there must be thousands of COMFORT readers who have been waiting for just this opportunity to secure a real good camera without paying a big price for it. And remember, we send you not only the camera itself but also include one film pack of twelve films (enough for twelve pictures) and an instruction book, all packed together in a strong, compact box and sent to you free by parcel post, prepaid, on the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For a club of only seven one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you free by parcel post prepaid this fine Premo Junior Camera with one Film Pack containing twelve films and complete Instruction Book. Reward No. 7417.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

Questions relating to gasolene engines and automobiles, by our subscribers, addressed to COMFORT Auto Dept., Augusta, Maine, will be answered by our expert, free, in the columns of this department. Full name and address is required, but initials only will be printed. That we may intelligently diagnose your trouble please state the year in which your car was made.

Radiator Cap Lock

A METER which fits into the radiator cap and registers the operating temperature of the motor is becoming quite popular. It has likewise become a popular practice for thieves to remove the meters whenever the chance presents itself. Every owner will therefore do well to provide some means for locking the radiator cap. Special caps with locks incorporated may be obtained from almost any accessory house. However, if the owner does not wish to go to this additional expense, a simple means of providing a lock is to screw the cap on tightly then drill and tap a small hole through the cap and radiator filler tube. Place this hole at the back of the cap so that it will not be seen by anyone standing at the front of car. Use a screw without a head which requires a small screwdriver to turn it into the cap and filler tube.

RADIATOR THERMOMETER AND CAP LOCK.

This hint, if followed, will prevent small boys from removing the meter, also provide protection against the average person who would resort to such a practice.

Helpful Pointers

Tire Chains

Although this department has printed articles at different times regarding the proper installation of tire chains, we deem it proper again to warn owners against fitting chains too tightly so that they cannot creep around the tires. If the chains are prevented from creeping, the links will rapidly cut into the rubber bead of the tire. On the other hand, if the chain is allowed to creep, the wear will be distributed over the entire tire and the effect on the rubber will be negligible.

Alcohol Fumes

Owners who are using alcohol in the cooling system of the car must not lose sight of the fact that alcohol when heated releases fumes that are inflammable. When the radiator is boiling over, do not remove the radiator cap and hold a lighted match over the filler tube to determine the amount of water in the system. If you do, the alcohol fumes are very apt to ignite and singe your eyebrows, mustache, etc.

Simple Oil Test

Speeding the motor after it has been allowed to stand for a long period on a cold day is an expensive habit. Many are of the belief that to gain a proper operating temperature the motor should be raced for a few minutes when first starting out. Nothing can be more injurious in most cases. The cold thickens the oil so that it does not circulate properly until the temperature is raised. Therefore, it will be realized that the bearings and cylinders are deprived of proper lubrication and the racing motor is causing excessive wear. To gain some idea of the condition inside the motor on a cold day, pour some cylinder oil in a glass and place it outside for a few hours. Notice that it will not flow as freely as when it was warm. Instead of racing, allow the motor to run idle for a few minutes when first starting. This will allow the oil to raise in temperature and circulate freely without causing damage to the motor.

Connecting Rod Bolt

Many motors have connecting rods of the hinged type, i. e., the cap is hinged on one side and bolted on the other. This type of rod is very successfully used, but due to the strain taken by the bolt it has been the writer's experience that it is good policy to replace the bolt when overhauling the motor. Believing that many owners will undertake the overhauling of their motors during the winter months, this hint is printed as a warning against becoming convinced that the bolts are perfect. Outwardly they may appear to be perfect yet they may be very near the breaking point. When you replace the old bolt it is given a strain which you are unable to determine, and again we warn that for the consideration of the few cents involved in purchasing new bolts it is good insurance against a repair bill of one hundred or more dollars which would be incurred if one of the bolts let go while the motor was being operated. More than one owner has paid a large overhauling bill and then had the misfortune of breaking his crankcase due to a broken connecting-rod bolt. The trouble was due to the repairman removing the bolts and believing them to be perfect has not seen fit to install new bolts. If you have your repairing done outside, never object to the use of new connecting-rod bolts; it is much better to insist that new ones be used.

The Fuse

When the headlights refuse to burn or perhaps the horn does not operate, the owner will often pull at the connections, look for bare wiring or make the different adjustments possible. He has so little bother with fuses he forgets that they are in the electrical system. It will be well to look at the fuse before going to the above trouble as a blown fuse that requires replacing may be the only difficulty.

Answers to Last Month's Quiz

1. Kerosene is a heavy liquid for vaporization. As a matter of fact, unless it obtains heat and plenty of it, there will not be sufficient vaporization for this type of internal-combustion engine. Due to there having been brought forth no absolutely successful device for the heating of the fuel, kerosene has never proved popular for the automobile motor.

2. A low-tension magneto is an instrument which generates current of low voltage of pressure, i. e., it is not of sufficient power to jump the gap at the spark-plug. For this reason it is necessary to use a coil for stepping up the current to a high voltage or pressure. The armature of the magneto contains only a primary winding while the transformer coil has both primary and secondary windings. The high-tension magneto requires no separate transformer coil for the reason that the armature contains both the primary and secondary windings and is therefore capable of stepping the current up to a high pressure without outside aid.

3. Especially during the cold weather considerable gasolene is apt to enter the cylinders in the raw state and not in the form of vapor. This raw gasolene attacks the film of oil on the cylinder walls and gradually thins it to the extent that the oil seal breaks down and then the gasolene commences to work past the pistons and down into the crankcase. Here it mixes with the cylinder oil, soon robbing it of its lubricating qualities, and naturally the bearings and the working parts of the motor suffer. It is a good plan to examine the oil in the crankcase about every 500 miles during the cold weather and drain it off if it is thin or you can detect the odor of gasolene in it. Throw the old coil away and replace it with fresh lubricant. When starting a motor on a cold day you have probably noticed that it will not immediately fire on all cylinders. The cylinders that are not hitting are being subjected to a gasolene bath as above outlined, and one will do well, as before stated, to keep close watch on the condition of the oil.

4. The chances are that the water has frozen in the small tubes or passages which connect the upper and lower tanks of the radiator. Circulation is of course halted and the intense heat soon causes the water in the jackets around the cylinders to boil. The remedy is to thaw out the front of the radiator.

5. There being no breather for the crankcase, or the breather not affording sufficient ventilation, so to speak, enough gasolene has reached the crankcase to form a combustible mixture which was set off by the heat in the cylinders.

Monthly Quiz

1. If you should bridge the terminals of a storage battery with a pair of pliers there would be snapping of sparks yet you would feel no current. Why is it so?

2. A manufacturer will rate his motor at 50 H. P., yet you will pay a tax to the state for only 24 H. P. Why is it so?

3. Your motor misses when running idle and you want to determine if this condition is due to worn intake valve guides. How would you proceed?

4. Your storage tank is full of gasolene and you note the reading of the speedometer when filling the tank and after all the fuel has been exhausted. Is this the proper way to determine the mileage you are receiving to the gallon of gasolene?

5. You are in doubt as to whether or not there is ice in the cooling system of your car. What is the first precaution you would take?

Answers to Correspondents

ENGINE HARD TO START.—I notice your reply to "A. F. B.," Farmington, Minn. (November issue). You state that "it makes no difference where it (the Ford) is cranked from, if we could spin it at the same rate it would start one place as well as the other," which of course is correct. But it will start from either end easier if the clutch is in (unless it is a new car), due to the fact that when the bearings become slightly worn it allows the fields to part from the magneto, but the clutch has a tendency to push them back to their place. If "A. F. B." will have his magneto overhauled by a good man for this trouble, he should stop it, or if he is a fair mechanic and can learn the correct distance to set his field from magneto and take up worn part by using washers, etc., and so fix it that it must stay in place, his car will start as well as ever.

Respectfully, W. A. WHERRY, Newberry, S. C.

A.—It gives me great pleasure to print the foregoing letter from a COMFORT reader in South Carolina. This reader evidently has experienced the same difficulty as "A. F. B.," who wrote me regarding his being able to start his Ford much easier from the rear wheel than by the hand crank. I want to thank this reader for the suggestion and at the same time invite all others who can assist us in solving difficulties to write.

DRY BATTERY TO RUN MOTOR.—Will one-eighth horsepower electric motor run successfully on dry battery? (2) My 1914 model Ford seems to fire too soon. Running in high it jumps as if the valves did not close soon enough. I refaced the valve seats and reground the valves. Is it possible that I ground them too much and that this causes them not to time right?

C. S., Oxford, W. Va.

A. An eighth horse-power electric motor will not operate successfully for the reason that unless a very great number of cells were used you could not obtain the required voltage. (2) Regarding the jumpy action of your 1914 Ford motor, it is impossible for me to state from this distance whether the recutting of the valve seats has anything to do with your difficulty. I know of some owners who use a certain type of thimble over the valve tappets and employ shims to take up the play between the tappet and the valve stem. If you are using such a device, it will be well to determine whether the valves are now properly closing. The removal of a shim may be sufficient to obtain the proper clearance. The Ford motor has plenty of clearance between the tappet and valve and, providing you are not using special shims, I doubt whether the recutting of the valve seats would remove sufficient material to take away much of the clearance. It might be well, however, to inspect each valve when closed to determine whether it arrives at a proper seat. If a piece of newspaper can be placed between the tappet and valve stem then you can rest assured that the valve is seating. Recutting seats and refacing valves should alter the timing sufficiently to affect operation. It might be just possible that you did not do a good job of valve grinding or that your seat tool left chatter marks that did not grind out. This condition would result in loss of compression and jerky operation. I of course assume that the operation was satisfactory before recutting the seats and ignition was not affected during the period in which you were doing the work.

Life of cotton duck, used for protecting farm machinery, sacked grain, market fruits, field crops, etc., may be prolonged and the cloth made more serviceable by simple methods of waterproofing and mildew proofing worked out by the United States Department of Agriculture.

2 Tires for $11.25

FREE Tube with Each Tire

Most sensational tire offer of the year! Two tires for less than the usual cost of one—and a free tube with each tire! This is a special lot—all standard makes—selected for record-breaking sale. No doubles treads or sewed tires. Our big volume means best tire values! Thousands of steady customers everywhere are getting full mileage out of these slightly used tires and you, too, can get 8000 Miles

Size	1 Tire	2 Tires	Size	1 Tire	2 Tires
30 x 3	$ 7.00	$11.25	32 x 4½	$13.50	$22.90
30 x 3½	7.95	13.65	33 x 4½	13.95	23.45
32 x 3½	9.00	15.45	34 x 4½	14.45	23.90
31 x 4	10.00	16.90	35 x 4½	14.95	24.45
32 x 4	11.50	19.75	36 x 4½	15.45	25.45
33 x 4	12.25	20.90	35 x 5	15.90	26.15
34 x 4	13.25	22.45	37 x 5	16.45	26.55

SEND NO MONEY! Shipment C. O. D. Express or Parcel Post. Examine tires on arrival and if not fully satisfied return same at our expense and your money will be promptly refunded, including shipping charges. State whether Straight Side or Clincher. DON'T DELAY! ORDER NOW!

ALBANY TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
2721 Roosevelt Road Dept. 30A, Chicago, Illinois

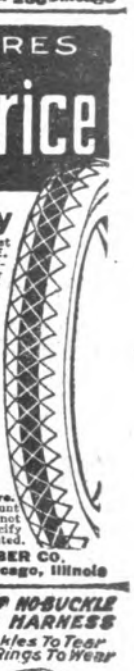
INNER TUBE FREE
6,000 Miles Guaranteed

SEND NO MONEY

Here is the greatest tire offer ever made. Never before such low prices. Brand new Inner Tube given Free with every one of our special reconstructed tires guaranteed for 6,000 miles. We ship at once on approval. Pay only when convinced.

Less Than ½ Price

28x3	$4.40	34x4	$9.95
30x2	6.75	32x4½	10.10
30x3½	6.95	34x4½	10.95
32x3½	7.25	35x4½	11.25
31x4	8.25	36x4½	11.75
32x4	8.95	35x5	12.10
33x4	9.25	37x5	12.25



Write Today No money now—just your name and number of tires wanted. Pay on arrival. Examine and judge for yourself. If not satisfied return at our expense and your money immediately refunded. Be sure to state size and whether clincher or straight side. Don't delay—send now. Immediate shipment.

Seven Ply Tire Co., 115 E. 35th St., Dept. 288 Chicago

STANDARD TIRES LESS THAN ½ Price

Send No Money

Don't miss this chance to cut your tire cost in two and get a reliner with each tire FREE. We ship at once on approval standard Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone, Mason and other adjusted tires in excellent condition and Your Money Back if you don't like them. They can readily be guaranteed for 6,000 miles. So sure are we you will like these tires that we request no deposit in advance. These are not sewed together tires known as the double tread and reconstructed tires.

SEE THESE LOW PRICES

Sizes	Tires	Tubes	Sizes	Tires	Tubes
28x3	$4.95	$1.25	34x4	$8.15	$2.35
30x3	4.75	1.35	32x4½	8.95	2.50
30x3½	5.75	1.45	34x4½	9.15	2.65
32x3½	6.45	1.60	35x4½	9.25	2.75
31x4	7.45	1.75	36x4½	9.50	2.95
32x4	7.50	2.10	35x5	9.75	3.10
33x4	7.85	2.25	37x5	9.95	3.25

Remember, a reliner Free with each tire. When cash is sent with order 5 per cent discount allowed. Examine—judge for yourself. If not satisfied, return goods at our expense. Specify straight side, clincher, non-skid or plain wanted.

CLEVELAND TIRE AND RUBBER CO.
3154 Michigan Avenue Chicago, Illinois

Walsh NO-BUCKLE HARNESS
No Buckles To Tear No Rings To Wear

1-22

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL Post Yourself

INVESTIGATE—Get facts on Walsh no-buckle harness, before buying any harness. Let me send you this wonderful harness on 30 days free trial. See for yourself this harness which outwears buckle harness because it has no buckles to tear straps, no friction rings to wear them, no holes in straps to weaken them. Highest possible quality of leather.

Try Walsh Harness on Your Team

Return if not satisfactory. Costs less, saves repairs, wears longer, fits any size horse perfectly. Made in all styles, back pads, side backers, breechingless, etc. LIBERAL TERMS, cash or note, no extra charge for credit. Write for FREE catalogue and new reduced prices.

JAMES M. WALSH, Pres.
WALSH HARNESS CO.
Dept. R-2
137 Keefe Ave.
Milwaukee, Wis.

FREE Walsh Harness Book Tells the Why and How WRITE FOR IT TODAY

We Pay $7 a Day

taking orders for Insyde Tyres—inner armor for automobile tires. Positively prevent puncture and blow-outs. Guaranteed to give double tire mileage. Use over and over again. Old worn-out casings will give three to five thousand more miles service. Enormous demand. Every auto owner a prospect. Write quick for agency.

AMERICAN ACCESSORIES CO. B-1723 CINCINNATI, OHIO

Men Wanted, White and Colored

Railway Train Service, eastern or western roads. Name your color. Experience unnecessary.

RAILWAY INSTITUTE, INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

8,000 MILE CORD TIRES

Brand new, absolutely first cord tires. Guaranteed 8000 miles and adjusted at the list price on that guarantee. A brand new United States tube free with every tire.

30x3	$ 9.50	32x4	$16.10	33x4½	$22.15
30x3½	11.25	33x4	17.00	34x4½	23.20
32x3½	13.50	34x4	18.60	35x4½	24.05
31x4	14.10	32x4½	21.10	33x5	25.25

Send no money. Just write today and tell us the size of your tires and the number you want. Tires will be shipped C. O. D. with section unwrapped for inspection.

CHARLES TIRE CORP. Dept. 306, 2824 Wabash, Chicago

P stands for Prevention, of all winter ills—
Coughs, sneezes, colds and the shivery chills.

I for Insist on Piso's by name
For the words "Just as good as" don't mean "Just the same."

S is for Safety which means you are sure
That all things in Piso's are perfectly pure.

O that it's good for the Old or the young
Three generations its praises have sung!

S is for Sure and for Safe and for Sane—
When Piso's is used, not a cough can remain.

Piso's contains no opiate. It is good for young and old. Buy it today. 35c everywhere.

Piso's Throat and Chest Salve for external application is especially prepared for use in conjunction with the syrup.

PISO'S

SAFE AND SANE
-for Coughs & Colds-

$13.95 Buys 140-Egg Champion Belle City Incubator

Hot-Water, Copper Tank, Double Walls Fibre Board, Self Regulated. $7.95 buys 140-Chick Hot-Water Brooder. Or both for only $19.95 Freight Prepaid East of Rockies and allowed on Express. Guaranteed. Order now. Share in my $1,000 in Prizes, or write for Free Book "Hatching Facts." It tells everything. Jim Rohan, Pres.

Over 911,000 Users

Belle City Incubator Co., Box 125, Racine, Wis.

NEW KIND OF INCUBATOR

Requires 5 minutes a day. Saves work, time, money. Built round, like hen's nest. No cold corners. One gallon of oil, one filling of lamp to a hatch. Wonderful built-in moisture attachment and complete circuit radiators mean even heat, moist and mild always. Many other features that save work, time and money fully described in new FREE book—write postal for your copy NOW.

Radio-Round Incubator Co., 211 Roy St., Wayne, Neb.

Baby Chicks

NEW LOW PRICES — SEASON 1922

MILLER BABY CHICKS ARE BRED FOR HEAVY EGG PRODUCTION

Customers report pullets lay all winter. 20 varieties to select from. 1,000,000 chicks via prepaid parcel post safe delivery guaranteed. Pleased customers in every state. 19th season. Catalog FREE.

MILLER POULTRY FARMS Box 608 LANCASTER, MO.

PRICES DOWN ON BIGGEST VALUE For Your MONEY

X-RAY INCUBATORS

Delivery charges paid

20 big features mean sure hatches and low operating cost. Best for 20 years—over 200,000 successful users. Write for catalog and low prices on X-Ray incubators and brooders.

X-RAY INCUBATOR CO. 102 X-Ray Sts., Des Moines, Iowa

Poultry Farming for Women

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

Getting Ready for the Hatching Season

WITH the coming of the New Year all us poultry people commence to plan for the breeding season. First comes the birds to be used. Of course, we all want to improve the egg production of our future stock, and now is the time to do it.

I have already advised you to get thoroughbred male birds from poultry plants which have made a specialty of grading up their stock for egg production, and now comes the matter of selecting hens to mate with the good cockerels. Few people, except professional breeders, use trap nests, so I am sure most farm wives will be glad of suggestions for reading the visible characteristics and signs of good layers.

One of the most noticeable marks of a heavy producer is the lack of yellow pigment at the end of the laying year. It takes a lot of color material to make egg yolks, and the pullet that starts the year with bright yellow legs and beak will, if a high producer, finish with practically no yellow color. The vent is most easily affected, and loses the yellow color after a very few eggs are produced. The earlobes are next easily affected, and may become quite pale after two or three weeks of heavy production. The earlobe test, of course, applies only to those breeds having white earlobes. The beak is affected next, usually losing its color after about three or four months of heavy production. When a bird stops laying the different parts gradually recover their color in the same order, earlobes first, beak next, and shanks last. Only strong, healthy birds should be considered, as sickness may, in some cases, cause a loss of yellow color.

High producers may be detected by the condition of the plumage at the end of the laying season. Birds do not, as a rule, lay and moult at the same time, although exceptions to this rule may sometimes be found. The birds that stop laying and moult in August or early September should be disposed of, as it appears that birds moulting late usually start laying again just as early in the winter as those that moult early. Trap-nest records show that the birds that lay late and moult last are the birds that started laying first the previous fall. The late moulting birds are the highest producers; those moulting in November or later should be the best for breeding stock.

When selecting breeding stock, the pelvic bones may be used as an indication of present production. The pelvic bones are the two little bones either side of the vent, between which the eggs must pass. If these bones are two, three, or even four fingers apart, we may know that the hen is laying, provided she is not over fat or abnormal in some way. If these bones are widespread, thin and pliable, it indicates a high producer. If these bones are hard and rigid, even though they may be spread and the bird producing at the time, it indicates a low producer.

High-producing hens must have a large capacity in order to allow for well-developed egg producing organs. They must also have a large capacity for food materials and a strong digestive system. As the pullet matures and comes into laying condition, the breastbone is forced forward and downward to make the necessary room in the body cavity. Other things being equal, the capacity may be rated by the distance from the pelvic bones to the rear end of the breastbone. Relative measurements may be obtained by comparing birds of the same breed, as different sized birds would not be comparable.

High-producing individuals invariably show what might be termed as quality, that is, soft, pliable skin over the breastbone and the abdominal cavity, and absence of hard fat. Some over-fat birds may have widespread pelvic bones and show large capacity, but they are entirely lacking in quality, and consequently should be eliminated from the high-producing class.

The activity of a bird is a very good indication of her production. The high producer must have more to eat of everything that a hen requires for production, consequently she is the first down in the morning and the last to roost at night. She will range farther and is always looking for something to eat. The best layer is the best worker every hour in the day.

From the time the breeding stock is selected in the fall, it should receive the very best of care, ever keeping in mind the fact that strong, fertile, hatchable eggs during the breeding season are essential to success. Health, vigor and vitality are necessary, and the winter should be spent in storing reserve energy which may be thrown into the hatching of eggs.

Clean, dry quarters are absolutely necessary for good health. The house should be located where good water and air drainage may be had. Where the soil is suitable, and rats are troublesome, dirt floors are probably the best. On damp land, moisture-proof cement floors, well covered with soil or sand, are most satisfactory. Small flocks in small houses usually give slightly better results than large flocks.

Fresh air and sunshine are absolutely necessary in every poultry house. They are even more important in the breeding house than in the laying house. The open front, cloth front, or combination of glass and cloth seem to give the best results. In any case, the location of the openings should be such that the sun may reach every part of the house at some time during the day, and provide an abundance of ventilation without drafts in all kinds of weather. Sunshine is the best disinfectant, and fresh air is the best tonic.

Do not crowd breeding stock; allow four square feet of floor space or over to each bird. Allow the breeding stock to run out of doors every day in the year, but make the house so much more comfortable that they will not care to go out in bad weather. Clean litter in the houses, and a sheltered run outside, will encourage exercise.

Feed of the breeding stock need not be so different from that for the laying stock except that the protein in the mash may be reduced, and a larger proportion of the whole grain fed. The ration should be bulky and rather low in beef scrap. The method of feeding is quite as important as the kind of food used. Scatter the grain in clean, dry litter, and keep the mash always before the birds. Use every possible means to encourage the birds to work.

Green food in some form is necessary every day in the year. Mangels are perhaps the most convenient and cheapest form of green feed. Hens will consume during the winter about one ton per one hundred birds. Cabbage or sprouted oats are also very satisfactory. The green food problem may be greatly simplified by using clover hay, or at least a part clover hay for litter. Where clover is home grown, it is not an expensive form of litter, as the hens recover all the food value in the leaves, and the stalks are even better than straw. A fresh grass and clover sod is, of course, the best source of summer green feed.

Sour skim-milk seems to be the most satisfactory single food that we have for poultry of all ages. When fed to breeding stock during the winter, better egg production, higher fertility, higher hatchability and stronger chicks may be expected. Results will warrant paying at least one cent and sometimes two cents per quart for the breeding stock.

The whole object in caring for the breeding stock during the winter is the production of strong, healthy chicks. Remove from the breeding pen any chicks that show signs of weakness or sickness during the winter. The campaign for the eradication of bacillary white diarrhea by means of the agglutination test has proved beyond doubt that all breeding stock should be tested and all reacting individuals removed. This is the only means by which any breeder can be sure that his stock can be free from disease. Quality in hatching eggs is more important than quantity. Quality in eggs means more and better chicks with much less expense in labor and equipment.

WATCHING THE CHICKS COME OUT OF THEIR SHELLS. THIS LITTLE GIRL ATTENDED TO THE INCUBATOR WITH ONLY A LITTLE HELP FROM HER MOTHER. THE HATCH WAS MADE IN A NORTH ROOM, AND THE INCUBATOR CARRIED OUTDOORS FOR PHOTOGRAPH.

The one desire in incubation is the production of strong, viable chicks; that is, chicks strong enough to stand outdoor life rather than weak chicks that will require constant attention. Failures in incubation are due to poor eggs more often than to poor incubators, although the incubator usually gets the blame.

Even though the breeding birds may have been carefully selected, there will be always some eggs produced that are unfit for incubation. If possible, select only eggs that weigh about twenty-six ounces to the dozen. The extra large eggs are as undesirable as the extra small ones. Select eggs with strong shells, free from ridges or uniform color and shape.

Hatching eggs should be collected at least twice each day. They may be injured by cold weather in winter or broody hens in summer. They are also apt to get soiled or broken in the nest. An ample supply of good nesting material and some kind of nesting or padding in the basket or pail used in collecting eggs is desirable.

Much better results may be expected if eggs are incubated as soon after they are laid as possible. Eggs saved for hatching may be packed in cases and held at a temperature of about fifty to fifty-five degrees. If eggs are held more than four or five days, it would be well to turn the cases over each day or two. Where eggs are held more than ten days or two weeks, poor hatches and weak chicks are usually the result.

An incubator usually gives best results when operated in a cellar or basement. This is usually due to the fact that a uniform temperature and a moist atmosphere may be more easily maintained. Where an incubator is operated in a very dry atmosphere, it is advisable to add moisture either by using a moisture pan under the egg tray, or by sprinkling the eggs. The room where an incubator is operated should be well ventilated.

After the lamp is lighted and the machine heated to 102½ degrees, the top or regulating nut on the connecting rod, immediately above the regulator arm, is screwed until the disk is raised one-fourth of an inch above the chimney—such an adjustment being considered by manufacturers

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 29.)

Prices Slashed — Wonderful Feather Bed and Pillows

Sleep on it FREE

Yours to sleep on for 30 nights—a magnificent feather bed! All new live feathers; best ticking; use it as if it were your own. If you're not amazed with the quality and the sensational price, return bed to us. No cost or obligation to you. A daring offer which we defy others to equal.

Bargains in Feather Beds

Prices Guaranteed Lowest in America. Quality finer than you ever dreamed possible. Other factories wonder how we do it. Full particulars in our free book—nothing ever like it—full of astonishing bargains. Send today for Free Book, Samples of Feathers and Ticking. Read about our free 30 night offer and our $2,500 Guarantee Bond. Mail postal now!

Lewis Feather Bed Co., Dept. 133 Nashville, Tenn.

$5.00 Buys a New Feather Bed

Don't pay more! $5.00 will put a genuine PURITY BRAND new feather bed in your home, guaranteed full weight and full size and featherproof ticking. Biggest offering in the bedding field made direct by manufacturers who undersell the world. Money back if not satisfied. Write now for details and catalog.

PURITY BEDDING FACTORIES Dept. 307 Nashville, Tenn

Feather Beds Delivered To You FREE

Write at once for Free, Big Bargain Book on New Sanitary Feather Beds and Pillows, also special low prices. All feather beds delivered to you express prepaid, for 10 Days Free Trial. Satisfaction guaranteed. Before you buy, get this free book and sample of feathers. Write us today—now.

AMERICAN FEATHER & PILLOW CO., Dept. 10, Nashville, Tenn.

FEATHER BED OUTFIT NOW ONLY $12.50

Send us $12.50 and express office and we will send you One 40-lb. New FEATHER BED, One Pair 6-Pound New FEATHER PILLOWS, and One Pair full-size RED BLANKETS or BED SPREAD. All new, clean, sanitary feathers, best 8-oz. A.C.A. feather-proof ticking. Biggest bargains you ever saw. About half store price. Money-back guarantee. Mail Money Order today. Catalogue FREE.

Southern Feather & Pillow Co., Dept. 51, Greensboro, N.C.

BABY CHICKS

We furnish Pure Bred Chicks of the finest quality from high egg-producing stock. Flocks built directly from laying contest winners. We have seventeen breeds. Write for our free illustrated catalogue and price list.

J.W. OSSEGE HATCHERY, Dept. 43 Glendorf, Ohio

Early Chicks

Half a million at new low prices. Write today for FREE copy of our complete, new, pure-bred chick catalog. Every breed illustrated. A postcard will bring it.

MURRAY McMURRAY New Low Prices Box 28 Webster City, Iowa

Free—Conkey's Poultry Book

80 pages chock full of information about the feeding and rearing of chicks, culling of hens, etc. Tells how to keep chickens healthy and how to make them pay. Whether a beginner or a professional, Conkey's Book is worth dollars to you. Sent for 6 cents in stamps to pay postage.

THE G. E. CONKEY CO. 8545 Broadway, Cleveland, Ohio

WEBER'S Best laying, best paying chickens, ducks geese & turkeys. Fine pure-bred quality. Fowls, Eggs, Incubators all at cut prices. 40 years poultry experience, and my 100 page Catalog and Breeders Guide Free.

W. A. Weber, Box 45 Mankato, Minn.

POULTRY AND PIGEONS FOR PROFIT

Foy's big book tells all about it. Contains many colored plates—an encyclopedia of poultry information, poultry houses, feeding for eggs, etc. Written by a man who knows. Sent for 5 cents. Low prices, fowls and eggs.

FRANK FOY, BOX 8, CLINTON, IOWA

57 Varieties Chickens, Ducks, Geese, Turkeys, Guineas. Stock, and Eggs for Hatching. Incubators, Brooders and Supplies. Also Holstein cattle. Catalog FREE. THEO. FRANZ, Box 50, Good Thunder, Minn.

RAISE GUINEA PIGS for us. We buy all you raise. Big profits—large demand—easily raised. Pay better than poultry or rabbits. Particulars and booklet how to raise FREE.

CAVIES DISTRIBUTING CO., 2139 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

PURE-BRED POULTRY Most profitable varieties. Also Eggs and BABY CHICKS, BELGIAN HARES, Incubators, Brooders, Grain Sprouters, Supplies. Highest quality. Low Cut prices. Illustrated Catalog mailed FREE. Address

Nichol's Poultry Farm, Box 21, Monmouth, Ill.

64 BREEDS Most Profitable chickens, ducks, turkeys and geese. Choice, pure-bred, northern raised. Fowls, eggs, incubators at reduced prices. America's great poultry farm. 29th year. Valuable new 100-page book & catalog free.

R. F. NEUBERT Co., Box 675 Mankato, Minn.

Gold Bracelet

Adjustable—Guaranteed For Ten Years

THIS style of Bracelet has always been a great favorite because it is adjustable. It can be made to fit the arm of either woman or growing child. It is made of rolled gold, absolutely guaranteed for ten years, is very light and dainty, measuring only 3-16 of an inch in width. It positively will not tarnish or change color as do the cheap Bracelets, but, being genuine rolled gold, it will always retain its bright, handsome appearance.

By purchasing these Bracelets in large quantities, direct from the factory, we are enabled to offer it for a ridiculously small club of subscriptions. Just read our free offer.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this guaranteed, rolled gold Bracelet, free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9852.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

CONDON'S PURE BRED Seeds

Have a real garden this Spring of fresh Vegetables, Fruits and Flowers. Save 50% on your food costs. Know the delight of "making things grow." Condon's 1922 Catalog contains 160 pages Seeds, Strawberries, Small Fruits, Shrubs, etc. Over 1000 illustrations; tells how to plan, plant and care for gardens.

PRICES LOWER THAN EVER

Condon's Seeds and Plants represent years of careful selection and breeding from pure-bred parent plants and always yield abundantly. 200,000 satisfied planters.

SEND FOR FREE BOOK AND SEEDS

To build new business we will send you, absolutely free, this Big Book and 125 Seeds of Condon's Giant Everbearing Tomato for trial. Send postal today.

CONDON BROS., SEEDSMEN
Rock River Valley Seed Farm
Box 47 ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

FREE 125 Seeds of Condon's Giant Everbearing Tomato and 1922 Seed Book

SAVE 50% Buy direct from grower—with 50 years' reputation—400-acre Nursery and strongest guarantee back of every sale, and where your Dollar brings real 100 cents value.

Beautiful Catalog FREE

Shows fruits, flowers, evergreens, all varieties in natural colors. Also planting plans. Free to all Prices Smashed on Evergreens, Fruit Trees, Shrubs Etc.

Now is the time to plant Evergreen windbreaks. Prices down to bedrock and quality considered, lowest in 15 years. Windbreak, shelters and protects. Adds $1000 or more value to farm. A few trees on city lots increase their value.

100 Strawberry Plants For $1

BIG BARGAINS

20 Red or Black Raspberries, $1. 10 Concord Grape Vines $1. 100 Blackberries, $1. 20 Gladiolli Bulbs, assorted, $1. 25 Asparagus, $1. Many other Dollar bargains. Also 12 Apple Trees, 4x8 ft. popular varieties, $3.95.

Earl Ferris Nursery Co.
590 Bridge St., Hampton, Iowa

OTTAWA

Fastest cutting Log Saw. 310 strokes a minute. Light weight. Most powerful. Easy to move from cut to cut and log to log. Friction clutch controls saw blade while motor runs. Saws any size logs. When not sawing use as portable engine for pumping, grinding, etc. Read this: "My Log Saw is a marvel. Neighbors hardly realize it can do the work of 10 men with cross-cut saws."—D. Kinsey, Ohio.

Now Selling at LOG SAW Now Low Prices

Tree Saw falls trees; Limb Saw cuts branches. Other Saw Rigs and farm and shop engines from 1½ to 22 H. P.

One Man Log Saw

Log Saws shipped promptly from 1 of 9 warehouses nearest you. 30-Day Trial. Cash or Easy payments. WRITE FOR FREE BOOK TODAY.

Pat. App. for.

OTTAWA MFG. CO., Ottawa, Kansas. 8198 Wood St.

FOUKE

WANTS $10,000,000.00 WORTH OF FURS

And will pay higher prices than any house in America to get them. We have such a big demand we must have more furs quick. Write for new book—Trappers' Partner, regular price lists and tags—all free. Don't sell your furs until you get Fouke's prices. Write today.

FOUKE FUR CO., 283 Fouke Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Don't sell your FURS

Have them made into Neckpieces, Muffs, Coats, etc., for Wife, Mother or Sweetheart. Also Men's Caps, Gloves, Collars. The saving is enormous. Write quick for big FREE 1922 Catalog.

Jerome Mfg. Co. Dep. R, St. Louis, Mo.

WITTE Log Saw NOW $99.50

$35 Tree Saw FREE if you buy Now. Latest model. Fast Cutting Outfit. Engine, Saw, etc., all complete. From Pittsburgh, add $6.00. Catalog FREE. Write for particulars.

WITTE ENGINE WORKS
3641 Oakland Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.
3641 Empire Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.
f. o. b. Kansas City

Tire Agents Wanted

An auto owner in each locality to use and introduce Mellinger Extra-Ply and Cord Tires. Make big money part or full time. No capital or experience needed. Sample Sections Furnished. GUARANTEED 8,000 & 10,000 Miles (No Seconds). Hand made. Finest materials. Shipped prepaid on approval.

FREE TIRES FOR YOUR CAR to one user in each locality. Be first to write quick for special Agents Offer and Low Wholesale Prices.

MELLINGER TIRE & RUBBER CO.
923 North Oak St., Kansas City, Mo.

MONEY for You in TIRES Write for Booklet

9 CORDS IN 10 HOURS

RUNS EASY No Backache. Weighs only 45 lbs. Easily Carried. SAWS DOWN TREES

BY ONE MAN. It's KING OF THE WOODS. Saves money and Backache. Send for FREE catalog No. 88 showing low price and latest improvements. First order gets agency.

Folding Sawing Machine Co., 161 West Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

THIS KNIFE FREE for selling 5 boxes ROSEBUD Salve at 25c each and remit $2.00. Knife has best steel blades, we put your name on. Order salve at once.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Box 232, Woodsboro, Md.

FREE Beautiful Book About Taxidermy. Learn at home by mail to mount birds, animals, tan skins. Be a taxidermist. Delightful art easily learned by men and women. Decorate home and den. Make big profits. Wonderful new art. Write Today for this wonderful Free Book and our amazing offer.

N.W. Sch. of Taxidermy 3041 Elwood Bldg., Omaha, Neb.

Gardening Hints for January

JANUARY is a quiet season for the gardener, but it is a fine time to think over the mistakes of the past year and start anew with some good New Year's resolutions. If we make up our mind to "Do it now," a great many of the trials and tribulations of gardening, the mistakes, little errors, delays and dismays may be forestalled or minimized. Here's how to begin the New Year right.

Overhaul the small garden tools and implements during the idle hours that are sure to offer a good opportunity in January. We know that there are chores to do and snow to shovel or scrape off the roads with a snow-plow, but these things do not take up all the time. Check over the garden tools and set to one side all those that need repairs. Perhaps the hoe needs a new handle; at any rate, it must be well sharpened. The same applies to the spades and shovels and the spading fork. Dull or damaged tools make work out of pleasure for the farmer who does not put them in shape when he has the chance. The hand cultivator and the planter should be oiled and any missing or badly-worn parts replaced to assure good work when needed.

Take half a day for putting the machine shed in order, and while you are in the mood do the same in other buildings. It is surprising how much trash accumulates. Better celebrate with a big bonfire than leave it around to get under foot for another year. Unless roofs and windows have been repaired earlier in the winter, now is a fine time to see where patching is necessary. Light, fine snow will sift in through cracks in roof or walls to slowly melt on costly machinery. The hammer and saw and a few boards will keep it out—with your help.

Remember how the hens pestered you last summer by doing a lot of volunteer digging and damaging the garden stuff? Neither the wife nor the children were able to keep them out—but a high and tight fence would do it. No doubt the posts are there now. Why not nail a piece of two-by-four at the side of each sound post to give you a height of about six feet, then tack on woven wire? It will not cost much as compared to the cash value of garden truck and it will assure you of all the greens and beans and "sass" you like so much. Incidentally, it will save you replanting where the chickens have scratched out seed. Make a good gate wide enough to admit horses and small garden machinery; beside it make another small gate of about ordinary door width. Make both as high as the fence, and see that they will close and stay shut. A good plan is to rig up the small gate with a weight that pulls it shut, and it is a lot safer than depending on the memory.

Speaking of chickens, it may be well for the farmer—or more likely for the farmer's wife, who usually "tends the hens"—to look over the brooders and incubator, if either he or she is fortunate enough to own such necessary equipment. If not, there may be new nest boxes and "nurseries" to make, and before spring comes is the time to do it. More than once we have seen mother or the girls busy with a hammer or saw playing carpenter while the men folks are away in the fields trying to catch up with the early plowing. But is it fair to expect them to take time from the cooking and baking and housework to play carpenter—even if they do make a darned good job of it? We think not, when the same work could be done by the men in the idle moments while there is snow on the ground.

If the young fruit trees in the new orchard are not protected from mice and rabbits, take a roll of tarred paper and make some plain black winter "cuffs." It will not take long to wrap the paper around each small trunk, but it will take a lot of time and work to bridge graft and heal the damage done to the same trees by mice or rabbits if the trees are not protected. Remember that mice usually work out of sight under the deep snow and that the damage they do to the sweet tender bark may not be revealed until spring when the snow melts. That is why this work should be done before the snow is too deep in the orchard.

Last month we spoke of the garden plan drawn in ink on good stiff, durable paper. This plan lists the crops you intend to grow. But have you thought about the seed supply? Here is another place where our "do it now" resolution must be remembered. Perhaps you have sent for the latest seed catalogues; if not, do it now. Avoid the new and untried and stick to the things that you really know will do well in your soil and climate. Incidentally, we call attention to the fact that not all seed houses may be depended upon fully; therefore we direct readers of Modern Farmer to those advertised in COMFORT as having our full endorsement. Good seed of guaranteed high germination and pure strain is far cheaper in the long run than any low-germinating, dried-out old stock, even if it does come in a fancy package at a so-called bargain price. It pays to buy the best from seed companies that sell the best only. Don't wait until spring before placing your order. Don't buy poor seed and start under a handicap.

Weeds and Concrete Fence Posts

Concrete fence posts have gained considerable popularity, but not a bit more than they highly deserve. In spite of their relatively high first cost, which by the way is not so high when we compare them to cedar posts at war-time prices prevailing for the last two years, their long-wearing, almost everlasting qualities recommend them to the farmer who looks to the future.

Whether a farmer has had experience with concrete posts or not, he has a good general idea of their usefulness. Still, new things do come to our attention from time to time. Here is one of them.

We were particularly struck by the neat and clean appearance of the roadsides and fence corners on a certain Middle Western farm. It was a welcome contrast to the weedy, neglected fences bordering the same road not far distant. We spoke to the farm owner and here is his explanation:

"For years I tried my best to keep down the weeds along my fences but in spite of all that I could do in the time I could spare, the weeds got ahead of me. Then I put in forty rods of new fence, using concrete posts. Yes, I made the posts myself, my boy and I. The first summer I went at the weeds as usual, cutting those that I could reach with the mower, and using a scythe in the worst spots in the corners. One day a fire somehow got started in the dry weeds lying beside the fence. I watched it for a while to see that it did not get out of hand, but everything but the cut weeds was too green to burn so I left it alone. Golly, it did a clean job. Took everything on both sides of the fence, too.

"That gave me an idea. You see, the fire could not hurt the concrete posts, so I just cut the weeds when they are in bloom and let them lie until they are thoroughly dry, then I touch them off and let 'em burn. It is surprising how little is left after the fire goes along a fence. You can see for yourself. Right here was one of the worst spots on the whole farm three years ago. Now it is in grass from the edge of the plowing right up to the roadside. A couple of years usually does the work, and the grass comes in as soon as the weeds are gone. Sometimes I scatter a bit of blue grass or clover, but for the most part the grass is self-seeded.

"You know, I think that concrete posts would do more to clean up the roadsides than all the weed laws in creation. If weeds are cut before they go to seed and burned, a man can get the upper hand in a hurry, and with very little trouble. There is another point, too. When I had the old fence and the weeds along it I had big snowdrifts every winter. Now, with the ground clean and bare, there is nothing to hold the snow so I have no drifts. That is worth considering. No drifts, no mud holes in the spring. That's my way of looking at it. Now I never put in anything but concrete posts. In time I hope to see them over the whole farm."

This is what one farmer has to say. Have any other readers of Modern Farmer had experience? If so, we would like to hear from them.

Select Young Shade Trees Now

Shade trees do not live forever, though it is true that they do outlive the ordinary span of human life by many years. We all enjoy the fine big trees in the front yard and would be lost without their friendly shade in the hot summer time. Therefore we should be constantly on the lookout for signs of approaching old age, and when these symptoms are noted plans should be made for the future.

The farmer who has a woodlot of his own or who has easy access to one in his neighborhood should find little difficulty in getting fine young trees to replace the old ones. When this is possible there is a considerable saving in the cost of trees, as compared to their price if purchased from a nursery. Often the only expense is in the form of time and labor connected with their digging and replanting. Locally-grown young trees also have another advantage in that they are almost certain to be adapted to the soil and climate where they are found, whereas nursery trees may take some time to become "acquainted" with their new home or may die in the attempt.

While trees are free from foliage in the winter time is the best time to pick out those to be used for replacements later on. First look over the grounds in the yard or elsewhere to get a good idea of what is required in the tree line, varieties, size, etc. Then go to the woods or woodlot and pick out good sturdy youngsters. Choose trees having straight trunks, clean limbs and a symmetrical crown. Avoid one-sided trees. Pruning and trimming can do a lot to correct such deformities, but why not begin right with trees that need little or no trimming? It is here that the freedom from foliage is a distinct advantage. With no leaves to block the view, it is not difficult, as it would be in the summer, to make good selections. Diseased or deformed limbs and other objectionable features may be seen and avoided.

If trees are to be planted in a comparatively open or sunny spot, do not make your selections in dense timber where they have grown in heavy shade. Try to find trees growing under conditions as nearly like those they will find in their new location after transplanting. Avoid the soft-wooded, short-lived, quick-growing trees except for windbreaks where rapid growth is essential. The oaks, elms, maples, and some of the nut trees such as hickory, chestnut or walnut, make ideal shade trees under a wide variety of conditions of soil and climate throughout the entire country.

Mark the trees you have selected plainly so that they can be found later without trouble or delay. If this is not done you will find that in the early spring when you go out to dig them up they will be difficult to locate. Ordinarily the best marker, and the one most commonly used, is a wide piece of old white cloth. This is about all that can be done at this season of the year, though trees are sometimes moved in mid-winter by those who do not object to the "chore" of digging in frozen ground. For our own part, we are quite content to wait until the ground thaws in the spring. At that time we will give briefly the most essential details of digging and transplanting young trees.

Suggestions for Wool Growers

Wool growing is one branch of farming in which the producer continues to turn out a product without having more than a general idea as to the market outlets and demands. Formerly this was due to the lack of adequate and re-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 27.)

A NEW OIL LAMP FREE

Burns 94% Air

M. A. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., the inventor of a wonderful new oil lamp that burns 94% air and beats gas or electricity, is offering to give one free to the first user in each locality who will help introduce it. Write him for particulars. Agents wanted.—Advertisement.

SEEDS

Reliable and Full of Life

SPECIAL OFFER

Made to build New Business. A trial will make you our permanent customer.

PRIZE COLLECTION Radish, 17 Varieties, worth 15c; Lettuce, 12 kinds, worth 15c; Tomatoes, 11 the finest, worth 20c; Turnip, 7 splendid, worth 10c; Onion, 8 best varieties, worth 15c; 10 Spring Flowering Bulbs, worth 25c—65 varieties in all; worth $1.00.

GUARANTEED TO PLEASE

Write today; mention this paper

SEND 10 CENTS

to cover postage and packing and receive this valuable collection of seeds postpaid, together with my big instructive, beautiful Seed and Plant Book, tells all about Buckbee's "Full of Life" Seeds, Plants, etc.

H. W. BUCKBEE
Rockford Seed Farms
Farm 2 Rockford, Ill.

LIVINGSTON'S FAMOUS Tomatoes

are favorably known. Many of the best sorts were introduced by us. We grow more high-grade tomato seed than any other seedsman in the world.

TWO BEST VARIETIES

Livingston's Globe, finest pink, for slicing and shipping, pkt. 5c.
Livingston's Stone, bright red, for canning and catsup; very solid with few seed cells, pkt. 5c. Both immense yielders. Try them.

New 112-Page Catalog FREE

Fully describes the best varieties of vegetables and flowers. Gives 300 true-to-nature illustrations and quotes honest prices for quality seeds. Tells when to plant and how to grow big crops. Write for your FREE copy To-Day.

Livingston Seed Co., 314 High St., Columbus, Ohio

5 Pkts. FLOWER SEEDS

Extra Special Value Mailed Postpaid for 10c

The following collection blooms from early summer to late fall: Aster, Petunia, Pansy, Phlox and Salvia. Generous packets.

Complete Catalog FREE

I will mail 5 packets of Daisy Seed (five colors) for 15c, or 3 Everblooming Roses (three colors) for 25c—the 3 collections for 40c. Try them.

Miss Jessie M. Good
Box 524 Springfield, Ohio

SEEDS

Fresh, Reliable, Pure Guaranteed to Please

Every Gardener and Planter should test Our Northern-Grown Seeds.

SPECIAL OFFER

FOR 10c we will mail postpaid our FAMOUS COLLECTION

1 pkg. 60-Day Tomato 20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish 10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery 20c
1 pkg. Early Arrow-head Cabbage . . 15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce . . 10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds 25c
$1.00

Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection" and our New Instructive Garden Guide.

Great Northern Seed Co.
211 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois

SEEDS Grown by a Woman

Everybody is delighted with my New Early June Asters. Largest, earliest and best. Continuous bloomers.

For 10c I will send 5 liberal packages, white, pink, lavender, crimson and purple. No better seeds grown.

Guaranteed to Please

Order today, send 10c to help pay postage and packing and receive the 5 new varieties of asters and my bargain Seed Book.

Charlotte M. Haines
Dept. 3 , Rockford, Illinois.

STRAWBERRY PLANTS

$3.50 Per Thousand. Our strong, healthy, tremendous bearing plants guarantee big crops of luscious berries. Best varieties for all kinds of soils. Full line of Raspberries, Blackberries, Currants and Asparagus. Large stock of extra fine Grape plants. GREATLY REDUCED PRICES. Our customers are making up to $1200 per acre from small fruits. New color catalog free. Write today.

BRIGDMAN NURSERY CO., Box 17, BRIDGMAN, MICH.

The Earliest Tomato is John Baer. Way ahead of all others in earliness.

To introduce our hardy Northern Grown Seeds, will send the following 10 pkts. for 10c: John Baer Tomato, 1200 to 1 Beans, Beet, Carrot, Cucumber, Lettuce, Onion, Parsnip, Radish and Superb Asters. Due Bill for 10c with every order. Money back if not satisfied. Big catalog of Seed Bargains free. Send today. J. W. JUNG SEED CO., Station K, RANDOLPH, WIS.

STRAWBERRY PLANTS THAT GROW

Our 32 years' experience assures you the strong, healthy, heavy-rooted plants that produce biggest, surest crops. Profits $3500 to $11500 per acre. Raspberries, blackberries, etc., of same high quality. Send for beautiful colored catalog free. Write today!

C. E. WHITTEN & SON, Box 26, Bridgman, Mich.

32 Years' Experience

Glass Cloth A transparent waterproof fabric as efficient as glass for hotbeds. Sample 3 x 9 feet prepaid $1. Catalog free. TURNER BROS., Bladen, Neb.

2247 BEANS FROM 1

This is what C. H. Fuller, 30 Loomis St., Montpelier, Vt., grew from 1 of my 1200 to 1 Beans. One plant produced 358 pods. See his report in my Seed Book. It is a great Bean.

My Improved Stock is better than ever—grows strong and erect, branching freely, producing handsome well-filled pods up from the ground, which literally load the plant. Beans being pure white of the finest quality.

Plant after danger of frost only one Bean in a hill and they will mature a crop in from 70 to 80 days. The yield will surprise you. Packet 60 Beans 10c, 3 pkts. 25c.

Fancy Prolific Pickles—One of the choicest strains Cucumbers for pickles, also good for slicing. Very early, producing great quantities of fruit, bear all summer. Packet (over 100 seeds) Six Cents.

27 Varieties Flower Seeds—Special Mixture for outdoor culture prepared specially for a gorgeous Flower Bed, of 20 square feet, wonderful colors. Packet naming the 27 kinds (over 3,000 seeds) Eight Cents.

Special Offer—I will mail one packet each, 1200 to 1 Bean, Giant Tomato, Fancy Prolific Pickles, 27 Varieties Flower Seeds, all 4 packets for 10c, or 3 packets of each for 25c.

1922 Seed Book free, 17 Novelties in colors, hundreds Best Vegetables and Flowers. Lowest Prices. Write today.

Giant Tomato—One of largest grown, vines very strong, will carry enormous weight of fruit, specimens often weighing 2 and 3 lbs. each, very solid, few seeds, crimson color. Pkt. (100 seeds) 5 cents.

F. B. MILLS, Seed Grower, Box 30, Rose Hill, N. Y.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflammed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

AGENTS: $10 a Day
NEW-KANT-KLOG COAL OIL BURNER

Nothing else like it. New-patented. Not sold in stores. Big seller. 100% profit. Most perfect burner ever invented. Absolutely safe. Can't clog up. Turns any coal or wood stove into a gas stove. Cheaper than coal. Popular price. Write quick for agency and territory.
PARKER MFG. CO., 117 COAL ST., DAYTON, OHIO

What 15 Cts Will bring YOU From the Nation's Capital

The little matter of 15 cts. (coin or stamps) will bring you the Pathfinder 13 weeks on trial. The Pathfinder is a cheerful illustrated weekly, published at the Nation's center for people everywhere; an independent home paper that tells the story of the world's news in an interesting, understandable way. Now in its 29th year. This splendid National weekly supplies a long-felt want: it costs but $1 a year. If you want to know what is going on in the world, this is your best means. If you want a paper in your home which is reliable and wholesome; if you would appreciate a paper which puts everything clearly, strongly, entertainingly, briefly—here it is. Splendid serial and short stories and miscellany. The Question Box Answers YOUR questions and is a mine of information. Send 15 cts. to show that you might like such a paper and we will send the Pathfinder on probation 13 weeks. The 15c does not repay us, but we are glad to invest in new friends. Address:
The Pathfinder, 821 Langdon Sta., Washington, D. C.

QUICK HAIR GROWTH
Box Free To You!

Would You Like Such a Result as This?

Do you want, free, a trial box of Koskott, that has proved successful in so many cases? If so, you need only to answer this adv. by postcard or letter, asking for FREE BOX. This famous preparation is for dandruff, thinning hair and several forms of BALDNESS. In many cases, a new hair growth has been reported when all else had failed. So why not see for yourself? Koskott is used by men and women; it is perfectly harmless and often starts hair growth in a few days. Address:
FREE
Koskott Laboratory, East 32d St., KB-124, New York, N. Y.

BOYS—RIFLE FREE!

This is no play gun, pop gun or air rifle. It is a regular target or hunting rifle that shoots 22 long or short standard cartridges. Just what every boy wants. We have 5000 of these guaranteed rifles to give away to wide awake, hustling boys who will do a little easy work for us among their friends. We pay all the express charges so it don't cost you a penny. Write us at once for our big free offer.
THE RIFLE CO., 708 Friend Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

All These FREE
10 YEAR GUARANTEED WATCH, Watch Chain, Ring and Scarf Pin
American Watch—fancy back and fine chain. Lover's Knot Pin and Ring, both set with fine stones. All 4 pieces positively given for selling only 25 large colored Pictures OR 25 pkgs. Fancy Post Cards at 10c each. Order choice TODAY. All sent postpaid.
GATES MFG. CO. DEPT. 225 CHICAGO

POCKET BEN WATCH, OR RING GIVEN for little easy work.

Everybody buys our fine handkerchiefs in glassine envelopes, 10c each. This valuable watch or sterling silver evening ring is yours for selling only 40. After selling, send us the $4 and get watch or ring. We trust you; order quick.
Sanitary Handkerchief Co., Claremont, N. H.

FREE TRIAL

Let us send this fine Razor for 30 days free trial. When satisfied after using, send $1.85 or return razor. Order Today.
JONES MFG. CO. 160 N. Wells St. Dept. 648 Chicago

Making Good Health a Habit

By Frances L. Garside

Copyright, 1921, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

MISS Marshmallow Nose usually has cheeks that are unnaturally red. Her teeth are bad, she stoops when she walks, and folds up like a jackknife when she sits. She eats what isn't good for her, she finds her recreation in a badly-ventilated moving-picture theater, and she doesn't get enough sleep.

All this explains why her cheeks are not naturally red. She bought that coloring of a druggist at the same time that she had him put up a prescription to cure her of headache, palpitation of the heart, indigestion, constipation, cramps—and, oh, goodness, one doesn't know where to end.

The prescription is in Latin and it is a dead secret between her doctor and the druggist. She, with her aches, and drawls that she is all right, is typical of thousands of young girls today.

When it was found that forty per cent. of the young men of America were physically unfit, some one asked, "How about the women?" Well, it was found that they "were more unfitter," and to remedy this—to make the girlhood of America a healthy, life-loving thing—the Young Women's Christian Association has opened a Health Center in New York City where girls are examined free, and given treatment that is not beyond their power of commanding.

They are not told, "You must go to Florida," or, "You must go to a specialist whose charges are a dollar and a half a minute." They are sent to a gymnasium, and the director puts them through a course of sprouts, so to speak. If they have started to grow crooked, the corrective exercise makes them grow straight.

The Health Centers are primarily for the working girl, but all are welcome and all is free. The physical examination is unique because it is so all-embracing. It deals not only with the body of the subject, but goes into her environment, her habits and her dress. She describes the conditions in her home, place of work and what is her form of recreation; she tells all she knows about the habits and health of her parents; she shows her shoes, and if they are high-heeled and the sole is not flexible, she gets her first prescription right there. How many glasses of water does she drink during the day? There must be at least ten. How long does she sleep? How much fresh air does she have at night? Does she wear corsets? Does she walk any, and how much? Show how you sit when at work. Give an example of how you carry yourself when you walk.

There is nothing left untold when the doctor is through, and the remedies are so simple they are within the reach of the girl in the remotest country hamlet. There must be long walks every day; there must be loose-fitting clothes, and in time the girl will have developed such muscles she will not need the support of a corset. There are gymnasiums in every home, if one will look for them. The girl denied use of a gymnasium in a city can improvise one in her father's barn, and all the expensive equipment in a gymnasium offers no greater advantages than skinning the cat on a tree at home.

That is what the Health Center is for; to make good health a habit; to make it a fad; to start it in New York, and watch it spread all over the map. It is a better fad than the one of sitting over a beaded purse by the hour, straining one's eyes. The results are more splendid than if one spent a month embroidering a blue rose and a pink forget-me-not on a bath-towel. A girl hasn't learned how to live unless she has learned how to keep well.

The girls are asked to return in six months for the second examination; in the meantime, they are taking the treatment which consists of the corrective exercises, a change to a simple diet, more walks, more water, hot baths at night and cold in the morning, windows open at night, and all recreation taken in the open air. To insure this latter "prescription" being taken, a recreation leader gets up long hikes for the girls, with a weiner roast or a nutting party or a clam bake as an objective.

But—to do all this, there must be suitable clothing, so that the prescription goes right into the patient's wardrobe. Everything must be sensible, comfortable and light weight. There must be no ostentatious display of finery and style, "comfort" being regarded as higher than both.

The American man who has succeeded makes his wife and daughters the shop windows in which to display his success. He loads them with laces and furs and jewelry; they ride, and are never known to walk, and eat rich food that is not good for them. The result is that the rich have as hard a time in keeping well as the poor. This was proven in recent statistics compiled in Washington which showed that the children of the wealthier classes were under all health standards, making a poorer showing than the children of the poor.

Of course if a girl seeks health, she can't hunt up a comfortable cushion to sit on while she seeks it. She must put on thick-soled shoes and give it a chase. But that she will overtake it, and come back glowing with the exercise and with a color in her cheeks that did not come from the druggist, has been proven by the good results attained by the Health Center in the very short period of its existence.

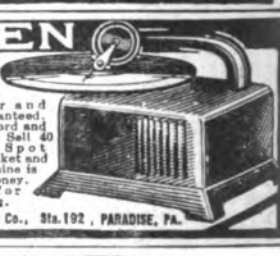
The prescriptions are not written in Latin. They are in plain English, and they are as well known to every woman and girl in the nation as if they appeared on the billboards.

Go to it, girls! Straighten your shoulders, lift up your chin, and march out with the army of young women all over the world who are engaged in the laudable and pleasing task of making themselves 100 per cent. physically fit.

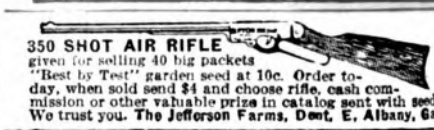
How About Your Stomach?

If Acid, Sour, Gassy, and You Bloat or Feel Stuffed Up After Eating Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

The stomach may be rather sluggish in digesting the fried eggs you eat for breakfast and the delicious croquette and salad for lunch. On top of this a soda confection is apt to add to the indigestion. It is a good rule to follow each meal with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet to avoid dyspeptic results due to eating and drinking. Should the stomach sour, with water-brash, biliousness, and the peculiar gassiness due to indigestion these tablets bring relief because they supply the alkaline effect to the stomach and thus offset the acidity of such dyspeptic conditions.



You Radiate Happiness When a Good Meal Sits Well in the Stomach



It is well to know this and not deny yourself the pleasures of the good things to eat and drink through fear of indigestion. You will find Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on sale in all drug stores at 60 cents a box.

ALWAYS keep C. B. Q. Tablets in the medicine cabinet. They cure Colds in 24 hours and relieve La Grippe in 3 days.
At All Druggists—30 Cents
W. H. HILL COMPANY, DETROIT

GIVEN

Real Talking Machine. Plays all disc records, singing, band, instrumental. Clear and distinct. Guaranteed. Lots of fun. Record and needles included. Sell 40 packets Garden Spot Seeds at 10c a packet and the talking machine is yours. Send no money. Write today for seeds and catalog.
Lancaster Co. Seed Co., Sta. 192, PARADISE, PA.

350 SHOT AIR RIFLE
given for selling 40 big packets "Best by Test" garden seed at 10c. Order today, when sold send $4 and choose rifle, cash commission or other valuable prize in catalog sent with seed. We trust you. The Jefferson Farms, Dept. E, Albany, Ga.

WRIST WATCH GIVEN
Dandy Wrist Watch guaranteed 5 years given for selling two lots of 20 pictures at 10 cts. each. Order 20, when sold send the $2.00 and choose wrist watch or other valuable prize according to big list sent with pictures. RAYART CO. Dept. 18, Chicago

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

Billy always scorns all bribes, Bessie, and he gets many and various offers from the cousins. So it was not your promise of a melon that got your letter past his "scentsorship." The fact is, he got so excited arguing with me that he dropped the letter and I hid it under the blotting paper on my desk. What started him scrapping was the question of honey-dew melons. "I like them, Uncle Lisha," he said, "but I insist that the naming of this modern melon is an example of our tendency toward exaggeration in nomenclature." These were his very words—or something worse!

But I stood up for you, Bessie, and told Bill that the trouble was he had never sampled a real ripe specimen of the Rocky Ford, 1921 model, self-eating honey-dew. "Bill," I said, "there's no exaggeration about the sort of melons Bessie crates up in her old age. Why, they are so full of honey that one of 'em can keep a hive of Colorado bees a whole winter, and they are so crammed with dew that you can't eat 'em without putting on rubber boots." And then Billy flared up and said he could never discuss anything seriously with me—which he knows isn't so. So you see your cheery letter had a meloncolly effect on poor Billy, Bessie. But don't let that scare you from writing again at once and telling me the date in 1922 for Rocky Ford's watermelon distribution.

DUNDAS, MINNESOTA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

For many, many years we have been subscribers to COMFORT, so many that I am ashamed to tell, as it would reveal how old I am; but I know that intermittently for the past twenty-five years we have had it make its monthly visit to the Harris home. All of these years I have been a silent listener to all of your conversations, having many a merry laugh over the mishaps of Billy the Goat and the rest of Uncle Charlie's family. But this is the first time I have talked, and surely after so many years of silence I ought to have a respectful hearing!

Now, Uncle Lisha, I am neither slim nor fat, a farm Daisy nor a giant for work, but I am just a plain, everyday girl, one who has seen much of life in the thirty-six years in which I have been learning "What is life?" Sometimes Life seemed a place where it was all sunshine (for somebody else—not me), but most of the time I have had many problems and perplexities confronting me which have had to be solved. I have never shirked my responsibilities in solving them as they came, and I have discovered that in solving our problems, in seeing them through, do we find that the sunshine is in us; that it is our outlook on Life which makes it a place of glorious, happy, blissful hours, or one of despairing, black, gloomy days. I wish I could make the cousins see how good, how glorious, how wonderful is Life when we discover that it is not the things which are around us, but the thoughts which are in us, that make or mar our happiness. Do I see only sunshine for others and not for me? No; now I see that Life is what we make it. And I know that even Billy the Goat will agree with me that Life is, after all, a happy experience in which thoughts and deeds of goodness, happiness and unselfishness bring their reward.

Now, cousins, Uncle Lisha and the Goat will say that I am preaching and they do not want such letters, and so I am going to quit. But I would love to hear from some of the older cousins. I said I was neither slim nor fat; I am the general average; tall, five feet, eight inches; a decided blonde with big blue eyes, a bright outlook on Life and determination to never expect something for nothing.

But here comes Billy!

A niece and cousin, MARTHA HARRIS ANDERSON.

After being "careful and troubled about many things," Martha, your letter shows that you have won at last the freedom of the knowledge that all the light and happiness we seek for in life must come to us from within. In your problems and perplexities, in "seeing them through," you have been able to learn how to "see through them." Much of experience has become transparent to you and can never again confuse you or hold you back. Fifteen or twenty years ago you probably thought of life as ready to bring to you all sorts of wonders, joys and happy experiences. And now, after a considerable wandering and stumbling in darkness, you get on a lighted path and find that it is we ourselves who must bring the wonder, joy and happiness into life if we are ever to find it there. When you have once thoroughly understood this, you have a grip on the greatest truth in the world. You have built a foundation upon which you can safely swing the rest of your life—knowing it is strong enough to bear any load. Youth is beautiful in its clear-eyed and often harsh judgment regarding right and wrong. It is only the touch of Life as a teacher that can give the knowledge of just why these rights and wrongs exist as they do and why we must learn to say, "Neither do I condemn." You have been to school, Martha, and you have found out something very wonderful. You can well be proud and happy concerning your discovery and need not be "ashamed to tell" of your thirty-six years. You know, I am sure, that what you have gained from the toil of Time you have paid is well worth the price. I am going to consider you as just grown up, and as having lately taken your Diploma of Happiness in the University of Life.

Billy liked your letter, although I must say that even with all his gray hairs he still retains plenty of youthful snap judgments and intolerances—which sometimes make him lovable and sometimes the opposite! I must tell you the joke he cracked after reading your last paragraph.

"Uncle Lisha," he said, "I see Martha says she is 'a decided blonde.' Did I ever tell you of the man I knew who was corresponding with a widow who described herself as 'a decided blonde' and whom he married after a short acquaintance? Well, he said afterwards that there was no doubt about her blondeness, but that he was never able to agree with any of her decisions." And Bill chuckled so that he almost swallowed a wad of Wisconsin letters he had just got nicely bunched on the port side of his jaw.

But, Martha, I think that Billy liked the "decision" your letter told about just as well as I did—and as all the wisest of our cousins will, too.

RETRIEVE, TEXAS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

I am a little girl ten years old and I weigh sixty-one pounds. I have dark brown eyes and hair and fair complexion. I am in the fifth grade and learn fast. My teacher is Mr. B. D. Jones. I am at school now. Well, I will get to work.

Your loving niece, OLIVETTE BAIRD.

Olivette, your letter did great credit to Mr. B. D. Jones. I looked very hard for misspelled words, but everything was as perfect as Prof. Noah Webster—who wrote a big dictionary and was awfully fussy about spelling—could demand. Everything, Olivette, but one word. Yes, I must break the sad news: you put an "s" in "complexion"! Yet that is better than spelling it "complection," which is the way some wicked eighth-grade pupils often do—and they make Billy frown and raise his eyebrows most tremendously.

I'm glad you "learn fast," Olivette, and I hope you keep right on moving upgrade aboard the School Express of the B. D. Jones Railroad. Sometimes it seems that no matter how fast we learn, wisdom keeps about two jack-rabbit jumps in front of us; but if we didn't hustle along, chugging in lively fashion, just see how far we would be left behind! Why, we might remain sidetracked at Stupidity Junction all our days!

There was never a better sentence, written, Olivette, than the one with which you end your letter. Someone has sounded the slogan of "Down with the gospel of folded hands!" When we all "get to work," my dear, we will all "learn faster," and the slow, stupid old world move forward accordingly. For we're only in the fifth grade now!

CARRIZOZO, BOX 146, NEW MEXICO.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I have just received the last number of COMFORT and thought I would write you a line. Now, Uncle Lisha, I feel sure Billy the Goat is asleep under the table, so please be very quiet about this and maybe we can get it by without his knowing anything about it. I don't see how any goat could treat some of the letters as he does, but perhaps some of them deserve even worse treatment and I'll bet maybe my letter gets it.

Well, Uncle and cousins, I am a cowboy when I can be anything, but just at present I can't do much. I was in France for two years and that German gas got me. It is surely fierce stuff. I am getting O. K. now, but it has been one fight. Shall I tell you folks how I look? Well, I am six feet tall, have black hair and eyes and dark complexion, and am twenty-three years of age. Some of the fellows call me "Curly" and others call me "Romeo." Gee! that "Romeo" makes me mad as fighting cats. I guess that's one reason they do it. What can a fellow do about it, Uncle? I sure don't like it.

Come out to my ranch here, Uncle Lisha, and we can have some fine sport hunting. We have plenty of doves, quail and rabbits down here in the valley, and deer and other game in the mountains.

Boys and girls, please write to a lonesome cowboy. I will answer all who write—or bust a hame!

Sincerely your nephew, THEO CARMICHAEL.

Teddy, I'm glad you're getting the best of the Hun gas by dosing your sore lungs with Carrizozo sun and air. I didn't have to scrap with Bill about your letter. He gave it up at once and said: "Perhaps he'll write again and send me his photo for my album, Uncle Lisha. If he is a curly-haired Romeo he must surely be one of our handsomest cousins, and I should have him for my collection." So if you want to keep on the right side—which is the outside—of Billy, Teddy, you'll ride at once into Carrizozo and have your picture taken showing as many of your curls as can be put on a six-by-ten plate. If you want to have your fellow cow-chasers stop calling you Romeo, I think the surest remedy is to use a shears or safety-razor blade on those curls—but have your picture taken before you perform the amputation, or Billy will be sadly disappointed.

Teddy, I'd like to come down and hunt deer with you among the Jicarilla Mountains and chase a big buck over the Capitan Pass, but unfortunately I am detained in Brooklyn just now looking over a heavy mail from New Mexico and other places around the globe. I'm sorry about this for Lincoln County would just suit me, Teddy, old man, as I am strong for mountains, and you seem to have the peaks and high spots bunched pretty thick in your vicinity.

You say you'll answer all the letters you get "or bust a hame," Teddy. You should have said "strip a gear" or "puncture a tire." In these horseless days it is only old farmers like myself or young cowpunchers like you that know what a "hame" is. The rest of the cousins will have to ask their dads. Don't forget to send the picture for Bill's album, Ted, or I'll think you are saving all your photos to send to Cousin Juliet.

ALLSTON, BOX 22, MASSACHUSETTS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

I am about to make a statement for which I may be mobbed if some of the conceited girl readers of COMFORT ever lay hands on me, but if you, Uncle, will back me up in what I am about to state, I am surely safe. Here is the statement: If you want to see real genuine and purely unadulterated feminine beauty you should go to France. Most of it is not false, made-up beauty; most of the French girls are as fresh and

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 34.)

ALL THIS JEWELRY FREE

This "Lucky Tige" CHARM with 36-inch silk Cord, this Im. WRIST WATCH with adjustable leather strap and buckle, this pair of sparkling pierceless EAR RINGS, 3 Gold plated RINGS and this handsome 36-inch Oriental Rice Bead NECKLACE with Tassel Beaded Drop. We give ALL these 7 articles FREE for selling only 12 Jewelry Novelties at 10 cents each. Send today. We trust you and treat you square.
A. W. MEAD MFG. CO., Providence, R. I.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from our eminent legal adviser on all questions of law except divorce matters.

Address Home Lawyer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

M. E., Connecticut.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the man from whom you purchased your property could not thereafter convey good title to any part of the land he sold you, and that the title of the subsequent purchasers of property from the same tract could only hold title to such portion of the land as had not been previously conveyed by the man who formerly owned the whole tract.

Mrs. E. O. H., Arkansas.—Under the laws of Indiana, we think that it is necessary for a mortgage to be recorded, in order to make it a valid lien upon the mortgaged premises as against the claim of an innocent purchaser of the property who has no notice of the existence of such mortgage. (2) We do not think it is necessary to commence foreclosure of a mortgage upon its due date, but we do think the mortgagee has a legal right, if he so elects, to commence foreclosure as soon as there is a default in the payments under the same. (3) We think it will be necessary for you to have the deed you mention examined in order to determine your rights thereunder.

F. A. S., Arkansas.—If the will contest you mention was not settled out of court, we think you should be able to determine the disposition of the matter from the court records in the county of the state where the case was tried.

L. C. L., Oklahoma.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving a surviving widow and two children as the only heirs-at-law and next of kin, his widow would receive one-third of both the real and personal estate, the balance going in equal shares to his two children. (2) Under the laws of Pennsylvania, we do not think a married man has any legal right to beat or abuse his wife.

Miss L. L., North Dakota.—We do not think marriages between second cousins are prohibited by the laws of any of the states of the United States.

Mrs. E. M., Ohio.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a widow or widower is endowed of an estate for life in one-third of all the real property of which the deceased consort was seized as an estate of inheritance at any time during the marriage, unless the same be released; and this right of dower cannot be defeated by will. (2) We think it important that wills be legally drawn and executed, and we think it safer to have the same drawn by some one who has knowledge of the law relating to wills.

Sam, Georgia.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that only your mother's share of your father's estate can be disposed of by your mother; we think she can dispose of her own property in any manner she may see fit, but that she cannot transfer the property belonging to the other parties interested in your father's estate.

Mrs. J. E. H., Pennsylvania.—We do not think the validity of your daughter's marriage is affected by reason of being married in another state, nor by reason of her false statement of her age at the time of procuring the marriage license.

G. L. DeC., Florida.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that your recording officer is entitled to make a charge for furnishing you with a certified copy of the records.

Mrs. H. E. W., Kansas.—We do not think you could succeed in an action brought to set aside a deed upon the grounds that you executed the same during minority, if you have allowed nineteen years to elapse since you came of age.

L. E. M., Pennsylvania.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the statute of limitations runs against an action for damages for slanderous words spoken, written or printed within one year; we think the statute of limitations runs against action on proceedings based upon the other cause you mention, depending upon the nature of the action or proceeding brought against the guilty party.

Miss A. J., New Jersey.—We think the laws of both New Jersey and Pennsylvania provide for the payment of so-called inheritance taxes on the transfer of estate property in cases where the amount involved exceeds the exemptions.

Mrs. T. J. B., North Carolina.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that illegitimate children legally bear their mother's name.

H. H. S., Missouri.—We do not think the same property could be legally assessed as belonging to two different owners at the same time; we think you should appeal from the assessment.

J. S., Texas.—We think that if your land is properly posted against trespassers, any person who trespasses thereon would be liable to prosecution for doing so.

E. M., Florida.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving a surviving widow and children, such widow would be entitled to receive dower of a one-third interest for life in his real estate and one-third of the personal estate absolutely; we think the dower claim is a preferred one, and superior to that of a creditor, provided such widow has not released her dower right in the property; we think that instead of the dower the widow can elect to take a child's part in the estate, in which event she takes a fee-simple estate in the realty; we think such an election must be made within twelve months from the probate of the will or granting of letters of administration; we think acceptance by the widow of the terms of a will would bar her from such intestacy rights in the estate, except as to such rights in real estate not disposed of by the will. (2) We think that children born to parents who are never married are illegitimate, and legally take the mother's name.

Mrs. A. G., Michigan.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the landlord you mention is not entitled to possession of his real estate during the term of the existing lease of the same, unless the tenant makes default in the terms or conditions of such lease.

Mrs. M. J. S., Florida.—We do not think you can now recover any portion of the property, formerly belonging to your mother, sold through a court proceeding forty years ago.

E. P., Kentucky.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving a surviving widow and one child, his widow would receive an exemption of $750 from the personal estate, and in addition thereto one-half of the surplus of the personal estate, and dower of a one-third interest for life in the real estate.

T. J. H., Arkansas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving a surviving widow and children, his widow would be entitled to receive dower of a one-third interest for life in the real estate and one-third of the personal estate absolutely, the balance going in equal shares to the children; we think that such property as had been advanced to any of the children during the lifetime of the decedent should be charged against such child's share in the estate, provided it can be shown by the proper evidence that such property was turned over to such child or children by the decedent as an advancement from his estate.

M. C. O., Tennessee.—We do not think your husband could contract a valid marriage with another woman, during your lifetime, unless he was divorced from you; we think such a marriage was a bigamous and criminal marriage, and would not invalidate your rights to a pension under the Federal law providing pensions for soldiers' widows in case of his death.

Mrs. A. E., Illinois.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a husband or wife may renounce any devise under the will of the other, and take, if there be children, dower in the real estate and one-third of the personal estate, or, if no children, one-half of both real and personal estate absolutely.

Mrs. P. G., Illinois.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a husband cannot be held liable for the payment of his wife's debts contracted before marriage.

The Modern Farmer

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 25.)

liable information regarding commercial supplies, movements, prices, and general market conditions. Now that reports are issued regularly to cover these points by the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates, and with all signs pointing toward the universal adoption of uniform grades for wool, losses due to errors in judgment or lack of information on the part of the growers may more easily be avoided.

The following suggestions are offered by the department as a guide to sheepmen, covering the correct preparation of fleece for market. Preserve them carefully for use at shearing time.

1. Shear sheep when the wool is absolutely dry; never shear when it is moist or damp.
2. Shear sheep only on a smooth, dry surface, preferably a smooth board floor. Never shear on a dirt floor or outside where dust blows.
3. Keep fleece intact; avoid second cuts, which reduce average length of staple.
4. Clip all tags from fleece and pack them separately. Never leave them attached to fleece; they reduce grade.
5. Roll or pack fleece with flesh side out; never with weather side exposed.
6. Fold, roll, or use fleece box for preparing fleece.
7. Tie each fleece separately. Never tie two fleeces together, nor pack and market untied wool.
8. Use only enough twine to tie fleece securely.
9. Use paper twine or twine with a hard glazed surface. Avoid sisal or binder twine, which fray off and damage wool.
10. Protect fleece from chaff, hay, dust, twigs, or other foreign matter.
11. Place fleeces in regulation wool sacks or cover them with canvas or new burlap. Comply with your local market requirements in this important detail.
12. Store wool in a clean, dry place until sold. Never permit wool bags to lie upon the ground. Do not store them in the cellar.
13. Pack white and black wool separately; never mix the two.
14. Separate the burry, seedy, cotted, dead, black, and gray fleeces from the clean, white, well-grown wool and pack separately. To pack them all together lowers value of the mixed lot.

Beef from Velvet Beans

A steer fattening experiment recently completed in Mississippi by the U. S. Department of Agriculture shows that velvet beans are well adapted for use in making beef. With this crop becoming more and more popular in the South each year because of the high yields produced, the results of this experiment will be well received.

Feeding mixtures of velvet beans dry with silage and cottonseed were compared with combinations of silage and dry velvet beans, and silage and soaked velvet beans. The mixture of silage and soaked velvet beans resulted in the most economical and profitable production of beef, while the mixture of silage, dry velvet beans and cottonseed meal proved to be more satisfactory than the mixture of silage and dry velvet beans.

Feeding experts who have analyzed the results of the experiment believe that with velvet beans becoming more common annually in the Southern States, and with the soaked beans easily available to combine with the silage as a beef feed, we may look for a considerable increase in the finished beef output from these regions.

Telling Age of Sheep

The age of sheep is highly important from the buyer's standpoint, and unless he can tell the age by looking at the teeth there is great chance of a mistake. Here is a brief statement of the condition of sheep's teeth at different ages which will serve as a handy reference.

Lambs have a full set of baby or "milk" teeth very soon after birth, consisting of four pairs of incisors all in the lower jaw. At from 12 to 14 months two permanent teeth appear in the center; at from 22 to 24 months another tooth appears on either side of the center pair; a third pair appears at 34 to 36 months; the final or last pair comes in at 46 to 48 months. When the fourth pair has come in a sheep is said to have a "full mouth".

From this point on it is more difficult to judge the age of sheep. An experienced sheep judge or buyer can make a close guess by examining the extent to which the incisors have spread and worn, for as a sheep grows older the teeth gradually wear shorter and shorter and seem to spread. Still later, teeth are lost; in this condition a sheep is said to have a "broken mouth", and is known to have passed its prime. Since grazing is hampered by the absence of a full set of front teeth, such sheep should be avoided. This is especially important for the farmer who buys Western ewes in early spring in the stockyards. Western sheepmen turn off ewes having broken mouths because they cannot graze well and profitably. Therefore any shipment of Western ewes will be likely to contain several broken-mouthed ewes. Unless the feeder is aware of the danger he is quite likely to find that his purchases will not perform well on account of lost teeth. An old and successful sheep feeder who has devoted most of his life to the business says, "Always buy your sheep with their mouths open". It is good advice.

New Things in Agriculture

"Kanred," a New Wheat

"Kanred winter wheat is a new bearded variety especially adapted to large sections of Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming and South Dakota, where it should replace Turkey Red, Kharkof and other winter varieties now popular," says Circular 194 just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

